INTERESTING FILM REVIEWS

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Goddess." (Vitagraph. Chapter Eleven. Two reels.)—This is one of the most thrilling and powerful numbers of "The Goddess" that has yet been released. A series of vivid battles between the strikers at the coal mine and the non-strikers consume a large portion of the two reels.

Instead of growing tiresome as they go on, they gather in interest until at last the strikers are victorious. The plot continues interesting, and all things considered, "The Goddess" is keeping up the fine pace it measured at the start.

"A Letter to Daddy." (Biograph. Monday, July 26.)—The little girl abstracts an envelope from her father's desk and mails it, addressing it "To my daddy." The envelope contained a large sum of money which the father believed his son had stolen to finance his marriage. But when the letter came back stamped "return to sender" everything was straightened out. Zoe Bech is the little girl. Irma Dawkins and Jack Mulhall are the sweethearts and Gus Pixley is the father. Edward Morrissey directed.

"The Wanderer's Pledge." (Biograph. Thursday, July 29.)—A backwoods story. A wanderer, in his attempt to protect the trapper's daughter from the attentions of a half-breed, draws the father's anger The wanderer comes back after killing the trapper. The father is about to shoot when he daughter explains matters happily. Frank Newberg is the wanderer; Hector V. Sarno, the half-breed, and Isabel Rea, the daughter.

"More Than Friends." (Biograph. Saturday, July 31.)—Two secret service men are rivals for the chief's daughter. The favored suitor's life is saved by the other in a melee which is part of a raid. The unfavored suitor dies, giving his life for his friend. Charles Perley and Charles Fuller are the rivals. Augusta Anderson is the daughter and W. J. Butler the chief. George E. Rheems directed.

"The Call of Yesterday." (Essanay. Mon., July 26.)—A well-educated young man rather down-and-out is mistaken for another and welcomed into a family. The mistake and subsequent events act so upon the man that he braces up and makes a new start in life. This is a very good drama novelty developed with Bryant Washburn and Ruth Stonehouse playing the leading parts. A. M. Burrage prepared the script.

"Boys Will Be Boys." (Essanay. Three reels. Tuesday, July 27.)—This story by Joseph Byron Totten makes a nice comedy-drama, interesting practically all the time. The old man refuses to help his nephew because he persists in writing for a living, when he can't sell anything he writes.

The uncle bribes a friend to rid his persevering nephew of the habit, but instead the young man fools his uncle by becoming quite prosperous through his writings. The love story is clever. The author, June Keith, and Alfred Gronel are the principals.

"Dreamy Dud Goes Bear Hunting." (Essanay. Wed., July 28.—Another of the animated cartoon series by Wallace A. Carlson in which Dud has all manner of weird and funny experiences while hunting. A very good comedy of its kind.

"Snakeville's Twins." (Essanay. Thurs., July 29.)—A lively comedy which has to do with hair tonic being replaced by turpentine. Great is the commotion that follows when the tupentine makes one bald and another very hairy. This should please, as the cast is popular. Vic Potel, Harry Todd, Margaret Joselin and Ben Turpin head the cast.

"A Man Afraid." (Essanay. Sat., July 31.)—A blow on the head causes Ted to grow to manhood a coward. Learning of this his fiancee breaks the engagement.

When struck by a baseball Ted regains his lost mental faculties. To prove that he is no longer a coward he enters an automobile race. The mechanic being bribed, by Ted's rival in love, refuses to race and so the girl, who once more loves him, takes his place

While driving the car Ted is struck in the head by a stone. He becomes a coward again, but he refuses to give up the race, overcoming his weakness and proving himself a hero. In this interesting drama Richard Travers, Renee Noel and Herbert Heyes are featured.

"The Earl's Adventure." (Lubin. Mon., July 26.)—The good looks as well as the good acting of Ethel Clayton and Thurston Hall, one of the new leading men at the Lubin studio, will increase the popularity of this film, produced by Joseph Kaufman and written by Adrian Gil-Spear.

The Earl of Carnavon, in search of his ideal, journeys to America His adventures lead him to become a burglar, temporarily, in order to win the favor of an unknown girl whom he meets on the train, and who demands a certain pearl necklace as the price of her friendship. 'Tis not hard to imagine that the girl herself was the owner of the necklace in question, so it all turns out as the most romantic would wish.

"An African Hunt." (Lubin. Split reel. Tues., July 27.)—The weekly cartoon by Vincent Whitman shows this time the adventures of an African explorer who must needs travel around in a balloon. Arrived at his destination, he gets tangled up with the pyramids, the Sphinx, and all sorts of jungle beasts, thus keeping the audience highly amused and interested.

"Susie's Suitors." (Lubin. Split reel. Mon., July 27.—On the same reel with "An African Hunt." Of the usual variety yclept slapstick, the usual audience demanding this form of entertainment will be pleased by this comedy written by Epes W. Sargent and produced by J. A. Murphy, Eva Bell, Eloise Willard, Will Hopkins, C. W. Ritchie form the cast.

The stoy tells how Sue and her mother, falling heir to a fortune, frown on Jed and welcome a lot of worthless suitors, mistaking them for men in society.

Jed invokes the aid of Sue's uncle, a prison warden, who soon proves the true character of the suitor's by blowing a whistle, at which they all fall into lock step. Jed then gets the girl.

"The Call of Motherhood." (Lubin. Fri., July 30.)—Sweetly touching plays, such as this, well acted by artists like Crane Wilbur, and Mary Charleson, are always sure of a wide appeal. In this instance the appeal is made stronger by the presence in the cast of two charming little girl stars, each only four years old, Lewis and Dorothy DeWolff, both of whom do their parts well.

The story is of a young widow who, losing her own madly loved little one, while insane from grief, steals the child of a neighboring physician, a widower. The doctor not only cures Nan, but falls in love with her, so she satisfies her longing for love, while the designing society woman (Rosetta Brice) gets left.

"Billie's Heiress." (Lubin. Sat., July 31.—Billy Reeves tries a few new stunts in this latest of Epes Sargent comedies produced by Arthur Hotaling. He mistakes the maid of Miss Millions for the heiress herself. His comical pursuit of the supposed heiress leads him a merry dance. Before the episode is over, Bill has troubles galore.

Even a trip in an airship does not end them, for the maid catches him in the end, and unlucky Bill has to marry her to avoid a term in prison. The usual cast of Billie Reeves, Mae Hotely, and Patsy DeForest are seen in this fun maker.

"The Unfinished Portrait." (Selig. Two Reels. Mon., July 26.)—A tragic number written by Joseph Alden. It introduces some novel situations which, together with the usual Selig casting, should make the picture one of great power.

The wife resolves to have her portrait painted as a surprise to her husband. Her refusal to reveal the identity of the unknown man leads to estrangement. The wife is thought to have died. The artist shows the husband the unfinished portrait and is ordered to find the double of his wife, that he may finish it. He finds the wife herself, and she is posing for him when the husband comes in. He rushes to her side, but, to his horror, she has died from weakness.

"The Child, the Dog and the Villain." (Selig. Tues., July 27.)—A western drama produced by Tom Mix from a scenario by Campbell MacCulloch. The story is full of action and should provide ample entertainment for the admirers of Westerns.

"Jimmy." (Selig. Wed, July 28.)—A clever drama, portraying the method in which a little messenger patched up a quarrel between two estranged yet loving lovers. It was produced by Guy Oliver from a scenario by Dave Martin.

"The Quest." (Selig. Sat., July 31.)—This comes from the Selig jungle-zoo, the scene of action being East India. The story is good, chiefly concerning a romance between an Indian boy and an American girl. The wild animals are, as usual, responsible for quite a bit of excitement. Emma Bell is the author.

"The Isle of Content." (Selig. Three reels. Thurs., July 29.)—This drama concerns persons of different generations and so easily consumes the three reels. The scenes, which are laid on the desolate island, are very realistic.

His wife proving faithless, an old seaman takes his daughter and lives alone with her on an otherwise uninhabited island. On his death she is left alone. A ship is wrecked and a man, formerly rich, is cast on the island. He discovers a bag of diamonds that the girl had been saving.

Finally, the two signal a ship and are taken back to civilization. Married, their life is unhappy, because the man cares more for bachelor life than a married existence. Finally she has him drugged and takes him back to the island, where they resolve to remain for the rest of their lives.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"The Diamond from the Sky." (North American. Chapter Twelve. Two reels.)—Stanlet hall being placed on auction, Arthur commissions his lawyer to buy it for him. Blair also wants it but loses out. Arthur has become immensely rich through his oil wells, and at a dinner he gives to his associates meets Vivian again. The atmosphere continues on as realistic as ever. Esther has been attempting to locate Arthur but has met with no success in her mission as yet.

"Dirty Work in a Laundry." (Keystone. Two reels. Mon., July 19.)—Ford Sterling again, going as strong as ever. Ford loves the laundryman's daughter, but loves money more. His vile schemes are utterly frustrated, and finally he is thrown into the boiler and boiled.

New devices for creating laughter are introduced in the laundry, where the actors often get tangled up in the washing and drying machines. It is a very good subject, full of laughs with nothing risque. Harry McCoy and Minta Durfee also appear.

"The College Wife." (Beauty. Tues., July 20.)—An enjoyable comedy produced by Archer MacMackin and featuring Webster Campbell and Neva Gerber. The son is married secretly and then discovers that his father has picked another woman for his wife. Father is a flirt besides and great is the commotion, until finally the son keeps his own wife, while father resolves not to flirt again.

"Wait and See." (American. Wed., July 21.)—Just a plain romance that is very pleasing and well acted. Ed Coxen and Winnifred Greenwood are cast in the principal roles. The scenes and photography are very good. The picture should succeed in any class of house.

"The Play of the Season." (Kay-Bee. Two reels. Fri., July 23.)—Mary, a farmer's daughter, elopes with an actor, leaving behind Jack Gordon whom her parents wished her to marry to protect them against the foreclosure of the mortgage. David Aubrey, the actor, writes a play on Mary's life. The play is a hit. The old folks are reconciled and the play makes enough money to pay the doggone old mortgage. Estelle Allen is Mary and Howard Hickman is the actor. Walter Whitman and Gertrude Claire are the parents and George Fisher is Jack Gordon.

"The Pretender." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., July 24.)—This is a complicated love story. Henry, after a trip to the South Seas and many adventures, finally marries Winnifred. This marriage was requested in the father's will, so it makes them both rich. Felix Modjeska is Henry and Elsie DeWolf is Winnifred. George Walsh and Vesper Perry are adventurers.

"Making Over Grandpa" (Royal. Sat., July 24.)—Harry and his sweetheart win the old gentleman over to their marriage. An average comedy.

"A Message Through Flames." (Thanhouser. Sun., July 25.)—The blind girl telegrapher smells smoke. The station is on fire. But she fights her way to the key and averts a terrible collision. Mignon Anderson in the lead.

"Safety First." (Komic. Sun., July 25.)—A Fay Tincher-Max Davidson comedy, the two funmakers exposing a bogus duke who is about to dynamite a safe.

"His Two Patients." (Thanhouser. Sun., July 25.)—A pretty romance concerning a specialist and a lame girl. The sub-plot, demonstrating how the specialist proved the society woman a hypocrite is rather strained. The scenes and photography in this are very good, while the principal story will highly entertain. Harry Benham is the doctor.

"Her Fairy Prince." (Reliance. Mon., July 26.)—An escaped convict is the fairy prince and saves the life of the little girl when a crooked lawyer theatens to kill the girl to swing the judge, her father, his way. Violet Wilkey is the little girl and Maxfield Stanley the convict.

"The Newer Way." (American. Two reels. Mon., July 26.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"Outcasts of Society." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., July 27.)—Meg, in prison, meets a woman crook who is proud of the fact that she has raised her daughter, Marianna, as a lady, innocent. So Marianna arrives in the prison, having been convicted of shoplifting. The three stand together, on their release, and win their way back to reputable society. Mignon Anderson is Meg, M. Dupont is the mother and Ethel Jewett is Marianna.

"The Phantom Extra." (Broncho. Two reels. Tues., July 27.)—The editor's daughter gets out a fake extra edition of the newspaper and thereby brings to his senses her sweetheart, a young politician who was near becoming a grafter. The fake extra said the bill which he was aiding would result in the loss of many lives. Rhea Mitchell is the girl and Richard Stanton her sweetheart.

"Billie's Rescue." (Reliance. Wed., July 28.)—A pre-arranged rescue by Billie, the young son, re-unites two brothers, who have become estranged. Chandler House is Billie. Bert Hadley and Joseph Henaberry are the brothers. Irene Hunt is the wife, Billie's mother.

"Betty's First Sponge Cake." (Beauty. Tues., July 27.)—An amusing comedy, showing the effect of a sponge cake made of sponges upon a country parson. The farmer's young wife knows nothing of cooking, but infers that if a nut cake is made of nuts, which information she obtained from cooking school, a sponge cake should be made of sponges. Webster Campbell and Beva Gerber play the leads.

"The Deception." (American. Wed., July 28.)—The beauty of the mountain scenery is accentuated by attractive tinting. A girl and a man, each staying in the mountains for their health, meet and fall in love.

Both pose as being mountain bred and born. Thei mutual doctor arrives, sees the humor of their common deception and agrees to keep the secret. Winifred Greenwood, Ed Coxen and George Steppling take the principal parts.

"When Love Leads." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., July 29.)—The elder sister tries to save her younger sister who had married the employer when the younger sister had stolen enough money from her husband to elope with a new suitor. The husband realizes the elder sister's worth and his love turns to her, when he gets his wife's note explaining her flight. Clara Williams is the elder sister and Margaret Gibson the younger. Harry Keenan is the husband.

"The Straw Man." (Majestic. Thurs., July 29.)—One of the Majestic kid pictures with George Stone, Violet Radcliffe and Carmen De-Rue. The older players are Augustus Carney, Carl Formes, Jack Hull and Charles Gorman.

"Getting the Gardener's Goat." (Falstaff. Fri., July 30.)—The gardener is the Cupid who brings together Eulalie and Joe Rawson, cutting out Tom Bridge. Riley Chamberlain is the gardener. Lorraine Huling is the girl. Bert Delaney is the successful suitor and Leo Post is the other.

"When the Tide Comes in." (Kay-Bee. Two reels. Fri., July 30.)—The fisher girl, the city girl and the fisher lad. The city girl spurns the fisher lad, after taking him away from his sweetheart. The fisher lad comes to his senses just as the sea washes up the body of the former sweetheart, the fisher girl. Thomas Chatterton, Estella Allen and Louise Glaum are the principals.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"Pathe News," No. 54.—Scenes around the departure of the Liberty Bell from Philadelphia for San Francisco and around the capture of Frank Holt, who tried to assassinate J. P. Morgan, lead off this issue. Then there are the fashion views, scenes at the New York police athletic carnival, feats by the mounted police and the damage done by an earthquake near El Centro, Cal. The eye-witness at the front sees the entrance of the Allies' fleet into the Dardanelles.

"Pathe News," No. 55.—A view of the Sayville, N. Y., wireless station; a picture of the liner "Minnehaha," recently ablaze after an explosion; a mermaid automobile parade at Los Angeles, Cal., exhibiting some striking costumes; and the old Liberty Bell being shipped from Philadelphia to California are the main events of this number. Only one item pertaining to the war is shown. The animated cartoon by C. W. Morris, of the Bray studios, is clever.

Pathe News No. 57. (Pathe.)—Water sports form the most prominent part of this number. There is yacht racing, very pretty scenes, and swimming. Harry K. Thaw is shown in three scenes, a good topical subject.

"The Romance of Elaine." (Pathe. Number Five. Two reels.)—The action of this chapter is as exciting as ever, and although Elaine is still ignorant of the true character of the villainous Marcus Del Mar, this gentleman continues to plot against her. Pearl White takes a very nice dive from a ship, while another thrilling scene is the bombardment of the boat by United States soldiers.

Marcus Del Mar plans to cut the Atlantic cable. Elaine prying about the shore in the early morning is captured by his hirelings and made prisoner on the ship, which then puts out to sea. The soldiers prevent the cutting of the cable and after Elaine's dive into the water she is rescued by one of her admirers who has followed her in an aeroplane.

"Romance of Elaine." (Pathe.)—This sixth episode is subtitled "The Wireless Detective." A professor runs down the special wireless apparatus by which Marcus Del Mar has been communicating with a foreign power. The pursuit is as exciting as all the "Elaine" series have been Pearl White does some fine character work as a tough, a man. Creighton Hale as Jameson and Maurice Barrymore as Del Mar.

"Police Dog Gets Piffles in Bad." (Pathe.)—A good one of these animated cartoons. The police dog gets in trouble with the colored owner of a meat market and involves his owner, the policeman. On the same reel with "An Intimate Study of Birds No. 3."

"In the Mesh of the Net." (Pathe-Balboa. Three reels.)—Gordon Sackville plays an officer who is a member of a band of law-breakers. Joyce Moore is the wife who is entangled in the meshes of the net woven by her husband's crime. This is a very exciting drama produced with many beautiful sea cliff locations and several unusually thrilling deeds of daring.

"Bold, Bad Boys." (Pathe-Starlight. One reel.)—A Heine and Louie comedy. The comedians get into a chase which takes them through mud and water several times; finally they climb a tree, one of them clad only in a nightgown, and so get away.

"Whiffles at the Front." (Pathe. Two reels.)—An imported comedy but one which coincides very well with the American conception of humor. Whiffles is the comic lover who goes to the front. The girl follows him there to marry him only to find that he has fallen in love with one of the nurses. So the girl marries the man who was really her first choice. The scenes are laid in war times. One very good stunt is Whiffles bringing down an aeroplane with a rifle shot. Whiffles is an excellent comedian.

"Col. Heeza Liar at the Bat." (Pathe.)—Another of the "Heeza Liar" animated cartoons, always funny. On the same reel with "Intimate Study of Birds No. 4."

"Kangaroo." (Pathe.)—A good educational. On the same reel with "In Pekalongon," which is part of the "In Java" travel series.

"Ima Simp on the Job." (One reel).—There is much roughhouse in this comedy but very few laughs. The slavey inherits a fortune and great is the scramble for her hand, but her old lover wins out.

"How Eggs Are Tested." (Pathe. Split reel.)—An unusual educational, offered in a concise manner. On the same reel with "The Mongoose" and "The Spider Monkey."

"The Spider Monkey." (Pathe. Split reel.)—Another instructive piece of film in color showing the habits of this queer South American monkey. On the same reel with "How Eggs Are Tested" and "The Mongoose."

"The Mongoose" was reviewed in the issue of July 17 and was credited as being on the same reel with "Moorish Granada" and "On the Banks of the Creuse." It now divides the reel with the two subjects above.

"Spitball Sadie." (Pathe-Rolin.)—This isn't very funny and some of its scenes are slightly repelling. A man dresses up as a woman and pitches for the female nine. His disguise is penetrated and he is forced to run. The actions of the leading man, although not original, are somewhat humorous.

"The House Divided." (Pathe-Balboa. Two reels.)—A society drama produced in this country and colored in France. A divorced couple are reunited through their little children, who, ignorant of their relationship with one another, become great friends. A fairly good story. Perhaps it contains a few original situations, although we were not able to grasp these due to the lack of substitles when viewed.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Animated Weekly," No. 176. (Wed., July 21.)—Of special interest are the pictures concerning Harry K. Thaw; the results of a heavy cyclone in St. Charles, Mo.; an active gas geyser at McKeesport, Pa., and the destruction of two engines for the amusement of the crowds at Oakland, Cal. The war news is interesting.

"The Broken Coin" (Universal Special. Two reels. Week of July 26.)—This, the sixth chapter of the serial, contains two big thrills in addition to the usual exciting assortment of fights. A horse and its rider plunge through a bridge into a stream below and soon after an automobile follows the same course.

At the end of the second reel Kitty is in possession of both halves of the broken coin, but she is menaced the next moment by a pistol which is poked under her nose by an unknown hand.

"The Earl of Pawtucket." (Broadway Universal Feature. Five reels. Mon., July 26.)—Reviewed at length in issue of July 24.

"The Tale of His Pants." (Nestor. Mon., July 26.)—While laughable in places this Christie comedy written by Homer Croy is not up to the producer's standard. Lee Moran experiences in a one-horse town, and disastrously for him, for he sits on taffy, loses the seat of his pants, and is obliged to marry the old maid who sews them up. Laura Oakley and the usual Nestor cast lends support.

"The Flight of the Night Bird." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., July 27.)—The young millionaire bored by his humdrum existence, enters the employ of an iron smelting establishment as a common workman Associating with the struggling people he finds much that interests him. He becomes acquainted with a stenographer in the concern and the romance comes to a happy end

A light but very engaging and well worked out production featuring Cleo Madison and Hobart Henley. The factory scenes are decidedly realistic as they were photographed in an actual establishment.

"One on Mother." (Rex, Tues., July 27.)—While the society woman is attending a "mother's" meeting and telling a lot of poor women how to care for their children, her own little girl is running amuck, so to speak, among the ill-bred children. At the end of the lecture she is brought in with other hoydens as an example of motherly neglect. The shock that this causes the lecturer is stunning This is a humorous offering that will without a doubt register in any theatre.

"The New Jitney in Town" (Imp. Tues, July 27.)—King Baggot, Jane Gail and Ned Reardon in a jitney mix-up, released as a comedy. The amount of humor in the picture is not great, the story is hardly coherent enough to create any interest and there are no scenes that stand out as funny by themselves.

"Life and Moving Pictures." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., July 28.)—After marriage the wife meets an old sweetheart and calls him her cousin to quell the jealousy of her better half. He will not be quelled, however, and repairs to a picture show where he sees a wife working the same stunt on her hubby He reprimands his wife, threatens to leave her, but she weeps bitterly and his heart is touched.

This contains more laughs than the average

ouput of this concern. Alice Howell as the boarding house slavey, is good for a laugh every time she appears, while others in the cast are Billie Ritchie, Henry Lehreman, Gertude Selby, May Emory and Harry Gribbon, quite an aggregation of good comedians.

"The Double Standard." (Victor. Wed., July 28.)—From the title it may be gleaned that this picture deals with very familiar situations. The husband adheres to his double code of morals until his wife adopts the same tactics. William Dowlan and Violet McMillan are the principals. Dowlan renders a finished and pleasing performance as the husband.

"Heritage." (Laemmle. Four reels. Thurs., July 29.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Hunchback's Romance" (Imp. Two reels Fri., July 30)—A story of the Ghetto, enacted by a cast comprised mainly of Hebrews. The acting is sincere in every case, yet some of the principals overdo their parts.

The makeups on some of the extras are bad. The factory fire intended to constitute a thrill in the story is handled poorly, except for the scenes of the employees escaping via the fire escape. Those scenes laid in Russia are the most interesting.

The story deals with the great love of a hunchback for a girl who was given into his care at her parents' death. He explains his love for her, yet she prefers to marry her previously accepted lover. No familiar faces appear.

"The Rise and Fall of Officer 13." (Nestor. Fri., July 30.—A very fine mirth-provoking offering, witten by Smith Addison and produced with a cast including Lee Moran, Laura Oakley, Billie Rhodes and Jack Dillon. Lee becomes a cop and while visiting his sweetheart he leaves his coat on the back porch railing Twice it is stolen and returned, once a deed of heroism is performed in it and once, alas, an act of robbery, so Lee takes the consequences in each case.

"A Daughter of the Jungle" (Bison. Two reels. Sat., July 31.)—Reviewed at length in issue of July 17.

"Mein Freindt Sneider." (Big U. Sat., July 31.)—A money lender is thought to be harsh and exacting on the poor and consequently the business man will not allow his son to marry the other's daughter. However, it develops that the money lender is kind hearted and all ends well. Murdock MacQuarrie is the money lender, while Anne Lehr and Mark Fenton complete the cast. The picture is fair.

"The Village Smithy." (Joker. Sat., July 31.)—This is slightly too full of literal dirt to amuse, although a number of scenes in the blacksmith shop are laughable. To excite the blacksmith's jealousy the old maid dresses a hobo up in evening clothes and passes him off as an earl. The ruse has the desired effect, as the blacksmith half kills his bogus rival. A Badger-Curtis release with Max Asher, Gale Henry, William Franey and the usual supporting cast appearing.

"Jealousy—What Art Thou?" (Rex. Two reels. Sun., Aug. 1.)—In this the trials and tribulations that a loving but jealous pair go through are made interestingly funny by the pleasing acting of Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips. The situations throughout are well handled and capably interpreted and the laughs are many.

The masquerade ball scenes set forth a gorgeous array of costumes and it is only to be regretted that the dancing and general carriage of the people present conforms not with the good standard of the rest of the production.

"Paternal Love." (Laemmle. Sun., Aug. 1.)—The wife of the convict divorces him and marries a rich man more to benefit her child than for love. On the convict's release he enters his former wife's house with intent to rob. He meets his own daughter and discovers her identity through the picture of her mother.

He is about to leave when the married pair enter. He leaves never to return after seeing his wife for the last time. This is good up to the climax, which is rather weak and indistinctly conveyed to the spectator. William Wolbert and Frank Lloyd prepared the scenario, Frank Lloyd produced it with a cast including Gretchen Lederer, Millard Wilson and Marc Robbins.

EVERY WOMAN IN AMERICA

Is interested in

Twilight Sleep

Twenty-Seven Hundred women showed their interest by paying admissions of 50c., 75c. and $1.00 at San Antonio, Texas, in two days, and Nine Hundred and Fifty women paid similar prices at the first public showing of the Twilight Sleep motion pictures and lecture in Washington, D.C.

You Can Turn This Interest Into Gold, Mr. State Rights Buyer

THERE IS STILL SOME TERRITORY UNSOLD ARE YOU INTERESTED?

Read These Facts

There are two reels of motion pictures, illustrating a copyrighted lecture on Twilight Sleep, by Doctor Kurt E. Schlossingk, the Great Authority, from Freiburg, Germany. The show and lecture take about an hour and a half.

The pictures and lecture are absolutely free from any objectionable feature, and have been highly indorsed by Mayors and other Public Officials, Ministers, members of various Civic Organizations and individuals of high standing in the several communities where they have been shown.

As soon as the subject is announced for public presentation anywhere, the press is flooded with discussions on Twilight Sleep, every word of which means dollars in the pocket of the exhibitor.

There were twenty-seven columns of free publicity in the New York daily papers on the subject of Twilight Sleep in one week.

OF GREAT IMPORTANCE to exhibitors is the arrangement, just perfected, whereby the Mutual Film Corporation will offer through its branches the entire output of

to include a one-reel comedy release each Friday, beginning the middle of August; a two-reel animal picture to be released each Saturday, beginning early in September; and a series of Mutual Masterpictures. In these productions will be used the wonderful new capable of accomplishing photographic illusions of the most startling and mystifying nature. In the animal pictures, which are absolutely new in conception, will appear the incomparable famed as the largest and most magnificent collection of performing animals extant, together with the original Bostock trainers, including Capt. Jack Bonavita. These productions will be made at the remarkably equipped new Horsley studio in Los Angeles, and the Centaur Studio in Bayonne, N. J.

The brand names under which the Horsley productions are to be released will be announced shortly.

AN ADVERTISEMENT WRITTEN FOR

States' Rights Buyers Independent Exchanges

AND WRITTEN BY THE TRADE PRESS REVIEWERS

"'JUST OUT OF COLLEGE' is a real comedy. You are not obliged to look at the producer's announcement to discover the fact. Naturally one might suppose that a George Ade comedy could not help being a laugh-maker, but even his farcical efforts would be lost without skillful picturization."

"Nothing important was overlooked in this screen version of a well known stage hit. The cast is good, the settings are splendid, the photography leaves nothing to be desired. Altogether the feature is a creditable piece of work."

"There is a certain indescribable charm about a George Ade comedy, with its fresh, clean humor, that is particularly delightful, and the screen version of this justly popular offering is as replete with this elusive quality as the play was. There can be little doubt but what it will meet with as much success as the play."

"A good five-reel comedy is a hard thing to put over, and this film has been so well handled that it does go over. Nobody but a cigar store Indian or a professional lecturer on the psycological aspects of laughter could sit through the picture without smiling in complete enjoyment of its uproarious fun."

A 4-Reel Lee Arthur Drama On the Regular Program

Gertrude McCoy

In a Dramatic Dual Role—in the

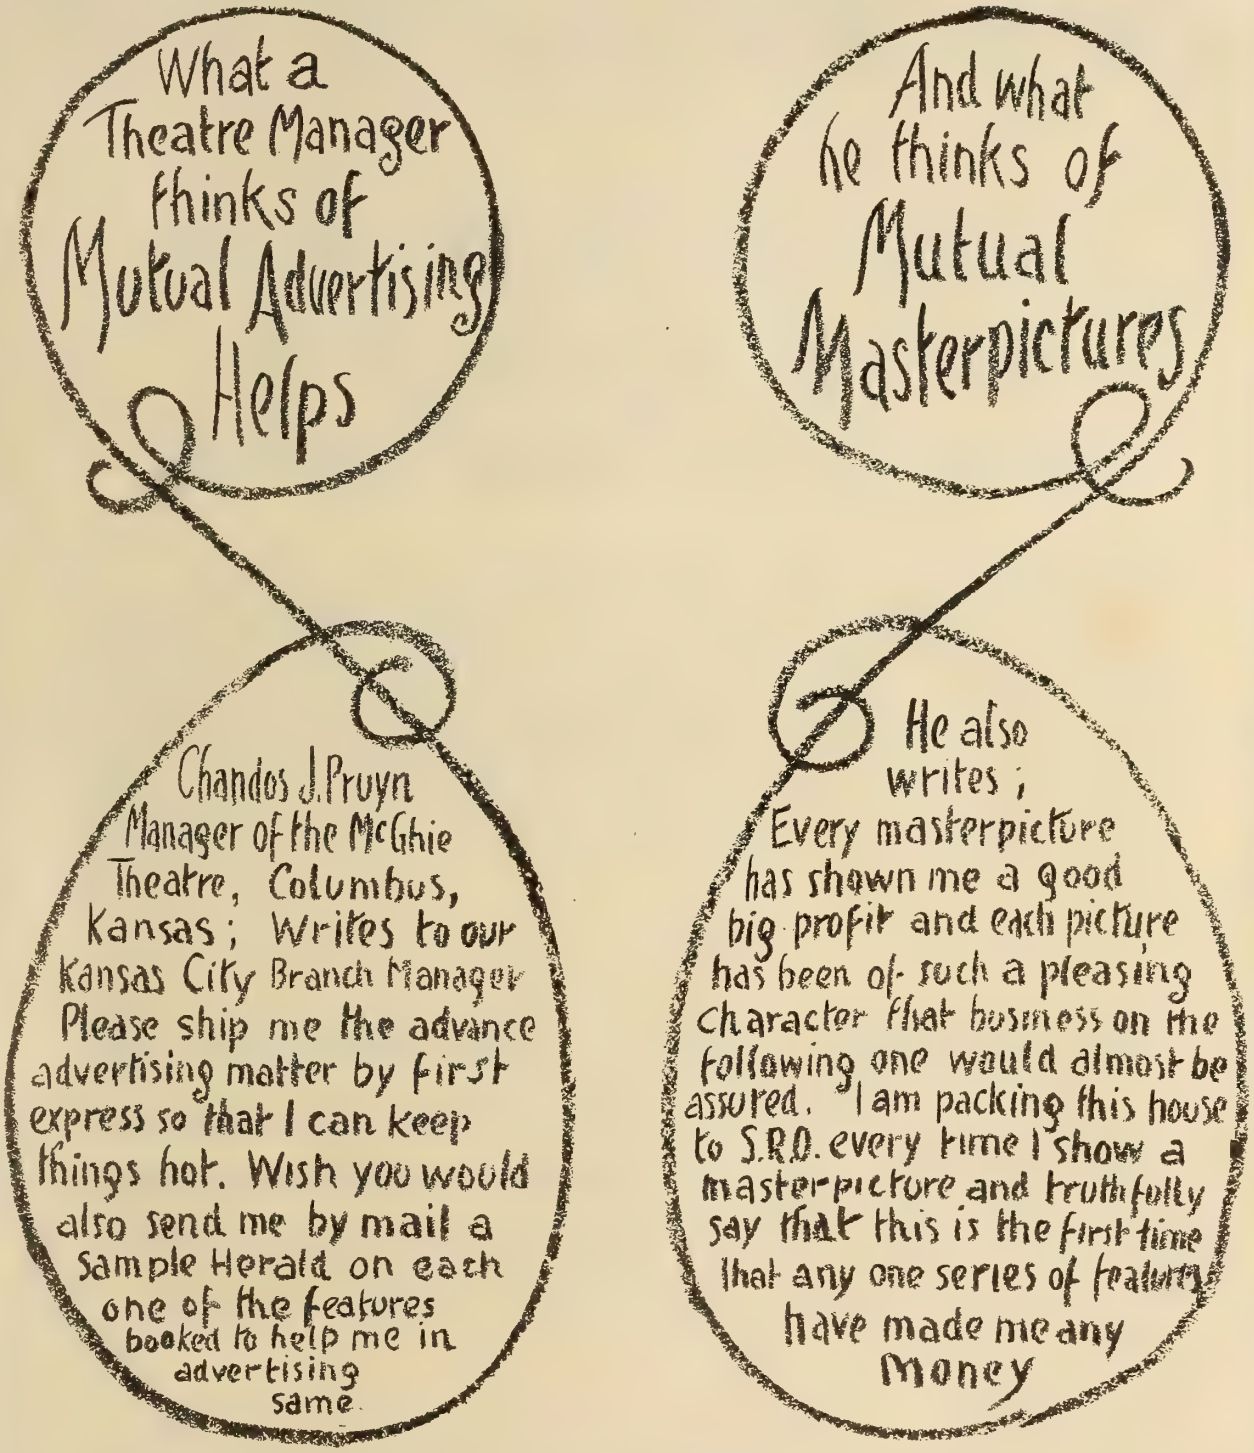
4-Act Photoplay Feature

"JUNE FRIDAY"



To the great feature photodramas which Lee Arthur, the noted dramatist, has been writing for Edison exclusively comes "June Friday," easily the best he has done. Masterfully has he contrived, with the genius of the writer of "David Warfield," to range over every shade of emotion, and Gertrude McCoy fulfills with sympathetic, convincing power the dramatic demands of this play, powerful because hewn so close to drab life itself. As wife of the drug fiend, who drowns herself, girl of the country pitifully enmeshed, with the painful past bedraggling her happy wifehood, on to the murder, Miss McCoy picturizes all the screen is capable of. Duncan McRae as the drug fiend, Robert Conness as the husband, Augustus Phillips as the villain. Friday, August 6th. Direction Duncan McRae.

Raymond McKee and Julian Reed in the one-act farce comedy, "Not Much Force." Direction Will Louis. Wednesday, August 4th.

Sally Crute and Herbert Prior in the one-act drama—a child story—"Not Wanted." Direction Langdon West. Saturday, August 7th.

Announcing The Release Of All David Horsley Productions On The Mutual Program

THIS announces the completion of an arrangement that brings into the Mutual Program a new brand of Mutual Movies—the productions of David Horsley. These productions will be controlled exclusively by the Mutual Film Corporation and will consist of a two reel animal feature and a one reel comedy release each week as well as Mutual Masterpictures.

Mr. Horsley is one of the best known producers in filmdom. He is the first independent film manufacturer and the inventor of numerous patented photographic devices that have marked the advancement of motion picture manufacture. With the largest and most complete studios in the East, at Bayonne, N. J., and a large, new studio at Los Angeles, the Horsley producing facilities are probably the best in America.

Recently Mr. Horsley acquired the Frank C. Bostock collection of animals—the largest collection of trained animals in the world, consisting of 130 specimens of boxing kangaroos, trained ostriches, elephants, lions, tigers, leopards, pumas, dancing, skating and plunging bears, monkeys, startlingly intelligent chimpanzees, parrots and many birds of gaudy plumage, etc., etc. These animals have been trained for years by a staff of expert trainers—men and women. The entire Bostock organization has been held intact and is now owned by David Horsley.

Mutual Movies Make Time Fly

It is planned to release a two reel animal feature every week. The releases will show feats of daring never before attempted—jungle scenes that will be entirely new to the film world. Many scenes will be made by trick photography through the use of David Horsley inventions and these will be found only on the Mutual Program. The Horsley comedy productions will include many famous comedians and will undoubtedly prove most popular.

To exhibitors this announcement indicates the sincere endeavor of the Mutual Film Corporation to provide in the Mutual Program only the best film productions—an endeavor to furnish a program so diversified and so well balanced as to assure biggest box office receipts. Announcement of release dates of the David Horsley Productions on the Mutual Program will appear soon. If you are not now using Mutual Service see your nearest Mutual Exchange at once.

PRESENTS

An Epochal Drama in Four Acts, Entitled

"Milestones of Life"

A Tale of the Seasons

With MIGNON ANDERSON and a Star Cast including LOUISE RUTTER, the celebrated emotional actress of the speaking stage

¶ No more enthralling story has ever been told than this; of the sunshine and shadow that now enraptures, now saddens the heart of man! Of the SUMMER of life, when each bird-song is of gladsome years to come, and tomorrow is but a ripple of laughter. Of the WINTER of life, when the bird-song is hushed and the pall of the grave descends silently on the fading panorama of bitter years. ¶ Together with its symbolic beauty, this picture carries a dramatic force that fairly stuns the senses in its over-whelming truth and realism. ¶ A consistently competent cast contributes to an offering of distinctive quality.

EFFICIENCY AND ECONOMY

Four Years of Use

"Just as good condition as when newly bought."
"Never had any occasion to spend any money for repairs, parts, or otherwise."

Chicago, May 19th, 1915.

The Precision Machine Co., Inc., New York, N. Y.
Dear Sirs:

It is a great pleasure for me to tender my idea on the machine in question as the magnificent services which I have procured from same absolutely demand it. It is, without doubt, the most durable moving picture machine I have ever operated in my 13 years of experience in this line of business. The machines are now completing their fourth year of professional services and up to the present date they are in just as good condition as when newly bought, and, furthermore, the writer, as well as the management, has never had an occasion to spend any money for repairs, repair parts, or otherwise. Not only can I, without default, pronounce the Simplex as being the strongest machine on the market, but it is also regarded by brother operators as carrying a very sharp, accurate and steady picture, and, therefore, is considered a machine of superior quality and will surely meet with the approval of the most particular demands.

I am ready at any time to confirm the foregoing statements as I deem it a just duty to make assertions of this nature on features of objects as are found in the Simplex Projector.

Yours very truly,
PARKWAY THEATRE,
(Signed) MONTE A. GLOSS, Operator.

Everything for the Modern Picture Theatre

18 F—What is the advantage, if any, in using a light interrupting shutter with one or more perforated blades?

Ans.—Flicker is the result of light interruption on the screen. The flicker is greatest when just one-half of the shutter constitutes one blade and the other half is wide open. Fortunately the movement of the film is sufficiently rapid to allow a shutter blade having only about one-quarter of the width with the balance three-quarters wide open.

In order to minimize the flicker, however, two additional blades are generally used with D. C. or one extra blade with A. C. at the arc to introduce two or one additional light interruptions for each revolution which softens the effect of the shutter but at the same time reduces the illumination on the screen.

If the blades of the shutter are perforated like a sieve the screen will never be entirely dark. You understand that the further you go in this direction the less flicker there will be on the screen, but the perforated shutter is not recommended because it introduces a disturbing effect on the screen, which manifests itself in haziness or lack of definition.

With the perforated shutter carried too far you lose the snap in the picture. With some of the older type machines having inside shutters the perforated shutter-blades work very well, but with the new external shutters, this type of blade has not been used.

18 G—What is the effect of a light interrupting shutter having blades which instead of being opaque are made of transparent or translucent mediums?

Ans.—Under certain conditions it may be allowable to use a shutter having one blade made of dark blue transparent material and the other blade made of light red transparent material. The effect of this shutter is to minimize the flicker and it also lends a soft tone to the picture.

The blue blade is to be set to cover the light ray while the film is in motion. On short throws the blue blade ought not to be entirely transparent. It should be frosted, or, in other words, translucent, which means that light will pass through the blade, but you cannot see the image of the picture or any outline of it while the translucent blade covers the lens.

If a light interrupting shutter having transparent color blades is used for very long throws the effect is better than on very short throws. I have made experiments and tested almost all color combinations, and find that blue to cover the film while in motion with red interrupter blade is the best combination.

18 H—Have you ever operated a projector without a shutter, if so under what condition.

Ans.—With very great distances I have seen projection without a light interrupting shutter, but the picture is not so distinct, and while it may give a longer exposure of the picture on the screen, it is not satisfactory.

The only condition under which I have found it practical to operate without a light interrupting shutter is where the illuminant is of very low candle power or intensity, as is the case with Calcium Light and Mazda Incandescent lamp. I made a number of tests with calcium gas illumination on an ordinary projector using a regular stock film.

With the shutter of the two wing type, the illumination on the screen was comparatively poor. Three wing shutter was impossible for good results. Without the shutter at all remarkably good results were obtained. One would think that the downward movement of the film would show on the screen, but the effect is surprisingly good, and the brilliancy is improved 100 per cent, giving more detail to the picture while it is standing still and I must say that the haze which appears when the film moves without a shutter did not seriously interfere with the projection, which as a whole, was much improved.

18 I—Would it be possible to design a machine to operate without a light interrupting shutter, that is, using the standard type of machine and film?

Ans.—Yes, if you could imagine the film being moved downward at from 2 to 3 times the present speed. The present normal speed of a film is practically one picture for each 1/16 of a second. If you could imagine three pictures move in this length of time, the motion of the film would be so quick that one would not notice it on the screen. The result would be a wonderful improvement because the picture would dwell longer on the screen under full illumination, and there would be absolutely no light interruption, therefore all flicker would be absent.

18 J—If it is possible to project a picture without a light interrupting shutter, why isn't it done?

Ans.—The strain on the film at the normal speed is great. With the Kinemacolor system of projection the speed of the film was double the normal speed for black and white film.

As a matter of fact the speed of the Kinemacolor picture was 1/32 of a second from beginning of motion to stop for each picture. The wear and tear on a film with machines as designed at present would, in my opinion, be excessive. I doubt if entirely satisfactory results could be obtained unless we moved at least three pictures to 1/16 of a second, or three times normal speed.

The only way in which I could imagine this condition would be by a complete change in the design of the intermittent movement and a considerably greater number of teeth engaging the perforations in the film on the intermittent sprocket.

Even if a machine like that could be constructed there would be many other difficulties to overcome in the way of reaction due to the momentum and sudden stoppage of the film at such high speeds.

During the past few years we have, however, seen such wonderful development that it would seem a possibility to realize an improvement along these lines within a reasonable length of time.

$200,000 BOSTON THEATRE SHOWS WHAT A NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE CAN DO

THERE is no theatre in Boston which is more popular with its patrons than the Franklin Park, on Blue Hill avenue, just around the corner from Columbia road and opposite the entrance to Boston's Franklin Park, one of the largest public recreation and zoological parks in the world.

This theatre is not yet a year old; it was opened on December 8, 1914, but already it has made a place for itself. Until the construction of the Franklin Park house by the Franklin Park Theatre Company at a cost of about $200,000, the neighborhood motion picture theatre was almost a stranger to Boston. There were plenty of big houses in the heart of the city, and several second and third class places in districts farther out.

It remained for the Franklin Park to show the city's amusement seekers what a neighborhood film house could be. And the verdict of crowded houses nightly through this hot season is that the architects, Funk and Willcox, and the decorators, Peter Holdensen Company, have succeeded admirably.

The entrance is most attractive, with its glass doors, its hundreds of arching electric lights, all surmounted by a tower from which the name of the theatre can be seen to flash miles away. The exterior lobby is finished in imitation marble and is featured by the red-curtained octagonal ticket booth in its center, with windows for the ticket sellers on two sides.

Entrance to the inner lobby is gained through a second set of swinging glass doors. This lobby is finished in pale blue, and its floor, like that of the outer lobby, is of tile.

The main auditorium is finished in red and silver gray, the lights here during the showing of the pictures being a subdued red, and indirect; the indirect system rules throughout the theatre.

This main floor is fitted with 850 most comfortable seats, upholstered in leather. On each side of the stage are two boxes.

The stairway to the balcony leads up from the right of the inner lobby. Before reaching the balcony by a second flight of stairs the visitor passes a lounging room, fitted in blue with upholstered wicker furniture. The big windows of the archway which looks out over the outer lobby open onto this room. At the right is the ladies' room, also with wicker furniture.

From the mezzanine foyer one of the most distinctive features of the theatre can be seen. This is called the overlook. One can stand at a railing and look down upon the entire orchestra through a large archway, which adds to ventilation facilities as well as forming a novelty.

The balcony itself contains seats for 650 patrons, making the total seating capacity of the house 1,500. These 1,500 have access to fourteen exits. A Power's camera is used.

Manager George A. Haley presents a Paramount and a Metro feature and two vaudeville acts the last half of the week; the first half the program includes one Paramount and four vaudeville acts. The supplementary service is the Mutual. Prices run up to twenty-five cents.

Before coming to the Franklin Park, Manager Haley was with Keith for six years, filling responsible positions in Fall River, Lawrence, Lowell, Hazleton, Pa., Woonsocket and Pawtucket, R. I., and other cities.

CLARK AND ROWLAND PLAN STRING OF THEATRES IN PITTSBURGH

THE Clark and Rowland interests in Pittsburgh are now establishing a chain of houses that will be all of the first class type and later will make additions to the chain.

Already the Clark and Rowland interests have on their list the Regent theatre in East Liberty, the Belmar in Homewood, the Schenley Photoplay theatre in Oakland, the Oakland in Oakland, the Arsenal in Lawrenceville and the Cameraphone theatre in Bellevue. These are all first class theatres in suburbs of Pittsburgh.

The Cameraphone theatre in Bellevue has just been added to the list and what policy will be used in the theatre has not been announced. W. E. Kirsch is to be resident manager of the theatre. He was manager of the Arsenal up to several days ago.

Mr. Kirsch is a resident of Bellevue and will be in a position to know what class of photoplays will pay the best there and will also be able to give the house his constant attention. The Clark and Rowland interests pride themselves on the fact that they keep their theatres right up to the minute and they will not make any exception of the Cameraphone.

OPERATOR SAVES AUDIENCE FROM PANIC WHEN FIRE BREAKS OUT IN MILWAUKEE THEATRE

THANKS to the heroism of Fred Fischer, operator at the Murray theatre, 464 Murray avenue, Milwaukee, a panic among the five hundred people that were in the house at the time was prevented and the theatre probably saved from damage.

While Fischer was operating his machine, a reel of film caught fire. With great presence of mind Fischer grasped the five reels that were within the booth at the time and threw them out of danger. Then he grasped the flaming mass of celluloid and hurled that out of the window. He received severe burns on his face and arms, but fortunately escaped serious injury.

IRONS, BACK WITH KUNSKY, WILL MANAGE LIBERTY THEATRE IN DETROIT

H. W. IRONS is back again with John H. Kunsky, Inc., Detroit, Mich., this time as manager of the Liberty theatre.

John H. Kunsky announces that Arthur C. Hoganson, former manager of the Garden theatre, will manage the new Strand theatre, Grand River and Fourteenth streets, when that playhouse opens about September 1. It will seat 1,500 people and will be exclusively for feature pictures.

KEMPNER FINDS BUSINESS FOR RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN GOOD IN CHICAGO

J. L. KEMPNER, treasurer of the Radium Gold Fibre Screen, Inc., has been in Chicago for the past two weeks, where he is very busy taking orders.

The Colonial theatre has just installed one, and the results are so satisfying that it has been necessary for Mr. Kempner to prolong his stay another week in order to take care of the business taht has developed.

Hoboken Operators Hold Successful Banquet

AN entertainment and reception was held by the moving picture machine operators' protective union of Hudson county, N. J., Local 384 I. A. T. S. E. of the United States and Canada, in Hoboken, N. J., on Wednesday, July 14.

On March 15, 1915, under the leadership of Ira G. Sherman, of Hoboken, N. J., the above mentioned organization was formed with fifteen charter members and the following staff of officers: Ira G. Sherman, president; W. A. Bemis, vice-president; Edward W. Boardman, financial secretary; Dion J. De Titta, treasurer; Conrad Daubener, recording secretary; John Giles, conductor, and Wm. Steiner, sergeant at arms.

In the early part of July, about three months after its formation, this organization had a membership of more than 80. On Wednesday evening, July 14, at 12 o'clock midnight, there was given at the Hammonia Hotel, 112 Hudson street, Hoboken, N. J., a banquet and entertainment at which more than 150 members and guests were present.

The dinner was a great success. During the serving of the various courses an elaborate musical entertainment with other special features was rendered under the direction of the good and welfare committee, which consisted of W. A. Bemis, Frank Kirschgessner, Budd La Rue Bailey, George Miller and George Hoffman.

These gentlemen, together with President Sherman, certainly gave evidence of their great ability to provide a good dinner with a most enjoyable entertainment.

Address by President Sherman

After everybody had enjoyed the dinner and entertainment, President Sherman called for order. He made a splendid address, setting forth the phenomenal success of his union and calling the attention of those invited guests who were not members to the advantages which were enjoyed by those who had become members of Local 384.

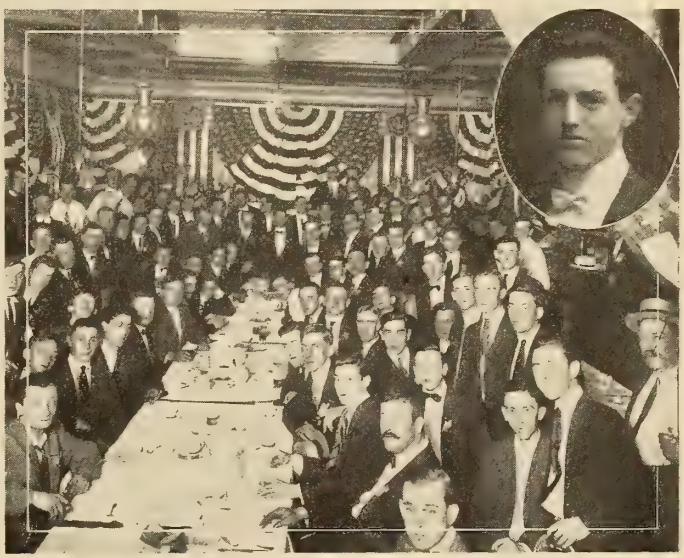
Many interesting stories of the early days when any old thing was accepted and passed off as O. K. were told.

President Sherman in the course of his address made mention of the fact that two honorary members had been elected at the charter meeting on March 15. The holders of these honorary memberships are Nicholas Power, the manufacturer of the well-known Power motion picture machine, and J. H. Hallberg, inventor and manufacturer of the Hallberg electric economizer.

F. H. Richardson, editor of the Projection Department of the "Motion Picture World," in an address called particular attention to the great value of organization among operators. He laid stress on the fact that while operators and other labor bodies form unions the bankers, manufacturers, business men and exhibitors also form organizations for their protection, but they are not called unions, as that would not be respectable and high-toned enough as a definition of them.

The members of Local 384 must not let politics enter in the union and he also said that if a politician is discovered among them they better take him to the river and drop him in than to leave him still hold his membership in their organization, which would be sure to promote its destruction.

In the absence of Mr. Nicholas Power, his representative, Mr. Will C. Smith, assistant general manager of the N. Power Company, was called upon to make an address. Mr. Smith was introduced as one of the old time operators who had gone through the mill. He called attention to the great care necessary in watching the manufacture and distribution of a great product like the Power's Cameragraph.



Mr. Hallberg Makes Plea for Operators

He said many operators when they have troubles to discuss call at the plant of the company to seek relief for or explanation of their troubles. Mr. Smith is in charge of this department and impressed upon the operators the necessity of carefully observing the conditions under which the troubles occur and to clearly and carefully explain them and to save time as much as possible in doing so. Time can be saved and better results can be obtained by closer co-operation between the operators and the motion picture machine manufacturers.

The next speaker to be introduced by Mr. Sherman was Brother Hallberg, who he said was known from coast to coast as the "Economizer Man."

Mr. Hallberg in his address called attention to the absurd condition which exists in some of the largest theatres in New York City where operators are working for less than twenty dollars per week and assistant operators working for from ten to twelve dollars per week. These salaries may be high enough in the small towns where the attendance is necessarily limited and in all places where the seating capacity is very small, ranging from 200 to 300, but in playhouses having more than 1,000 seats such salaries are more than absurd.

Mr. Hallberg called attention to a few large theatres in New York where these low wages prevail, having seating capacity around 2,000, and where the operators have to be on duty from about 11 in the morning until after 11 at night.

THE BANQUET GIVEN BY LOCAL 384 I. A. T. S. E. AT HOBOKEN, JULY 14—INSERT, IRA G. SHERMAN, PRESIDENT

Mr. Hallberg also stated that modern exhibitors are not looking for something for nothing, but are willing to pay their operators good living wages, ranging anywheres from thirty to fifty dollars per week, depending upon the knowledge and the experience of the man.

To deliver a performance like now demanded by the better exhibitor and more particularly by the high-class audiences which now attend picture theatres, requires great experience and a peculiar training on the part of the operator. One cannot say that picture projection is a science. If it was everybody could go to school and learn how to project pictures. First-class picture projecton is an art which only a few possess and which can only be acquired by hard study, constant observation and long experience, and these qualifications an operator can never get from any school or book.

In closing, Mr. Hallberg complimented Mr. Sherman and the other officers and committees upon the success of Local 384 and their entertainment. Mr. Hallberg also extended to all of the members invitations to open discussion of any question which might come up in connection with their business in the pages of Motion Picture News.

Another speaker called upon was "Hoboken Joe," Mr. Horowitz, representing the P. T. E. Co. Among other invited guests at the speakers' table mention must be made of our congenial friends, Ernest C. Baerveldt, representing the Simplex Projector made by the Precision Machine Company, of New York, and C. B. Wilson, representing J. H. Hallberg, the "Economizer Man," of New York.

The large photograph herewith reproduced gives a good idea of the fine looking lot of men who belong to the new Local 384. Unfortunately the dining room was very long, about three times the length illustrated, and therefore only a few of those present could be within the scope of the picture. At the head of the table we see President Sherman surrounded by his staff of officers and invited guests.

Motion Picture News was represented by J. H. Hallberg, and the "Moving Picture World" by F. H. Richardson. The News extends its best wishes for the welfare and prosperity of Local 384.

110-VOLT, D. C. MOTOR RUNS TOO FAST

F. C., Moulton, Texas.—I have a 110-volt D. C. motor and can say that I am pleased with it, but it runs too fast for a picture machine. I like to have it so that I can control it slower or faster. Also show me how to couple up a 110-volt D. C. motor on a 200-volt D. C. city line.

ANSWER.—Not knowing the size of your motor, it is difficult to give you absolutely correct information.

However, it would seem that if you have a D. C. motor you could arrange a system of shafts and pullies to secure at the mechanism of your projector the proper speed. If you will be kind enough to give the following information I will answer you in detail.

1.—Make, type and serial number of machine.
2.—Make, speed, voltage and type of motor.
3.—Has the motor a speed controller?
4.—For what purpose was the motor originally used?

In the meantime I may tell you that if you do not have or wish to purchase a specially made speed controller for your motor you can make up one, for experimenting at least, by securing a few incandescent lamp sockets or receptacles and connect them in multiple series with the 110-volt line and the motor as illustrated in Fig. 1. You understand, of course, that in testing the motor it should be made to operate a machine or a fan or other load for which it is intended, as otherwise the motor, if it is of the ordinary fan motor type, will speed up and your test would be to no purpose. All fan motors, as a general rule, are made with series windings, that is, having the field coils and armature connected in series with the line, and I take it that is the kind of a motor which you have. Now, in making your test you may use 32-candle power, 110-volt old style carbon lamps. Put one such lamp in one of the sockets and switch on the motor. If it does not start or run at the speed you desire, screw another lamp into socket No. 2. This increases the current delivered to the motor and it may then run at a speed satisfactory to you. If it still does not run fast enough you may put in another lamp and so on. You understand, of course, that the more lamps or the larger the lamps you put in parallel the greater the number of amperes there will be at the motor and the faster it will run.

If you knew exactly the resistance you require for your particular motor it could be made up from ordinary resistance wire or you may be able to use one large incandescent lamp in series with the motor, but by using several lamps in parallel, as illustrated, you can secure almost any speed you desire, and by using 110-volt lamps they will last indefinitely.

Now in regard to the second question you ask about operating a 110-volt D. C. motor on a 220-volt D. C. line. I do not like to answer this question without knowing the size, make and style of your motor. I want to know if it is series or shunt wound and the horse power and the speed. Upon receipt of this information more detail answer will be given.

THE COMPENSARC AND AMPERAGE

C. P. H., Marblehead, Mass.: I would like information on the following questions. I am using A. C. current, 110 volts through a Ft. Wayne Compensarc. All wires and connections have been inspected and are all right. With the arc running under test we are getting only 29 amperes. The equipment is all new. Can you tell me what is the trouble?

Second.—When the light is on the screen through the M. P. Lens there is a ghost in the center. Have tried moving the lamp house without result. Distance of throw, 58 feet 6 inches, size of picture 13 feet 8 inches, moving picture lens 4 inches, E. F. condensing lenses 6½ inches back and 7½ inches front.

Ans.—The Fort Wayne Compensarc operating on 110 volt, 60 cycle line if it is made for that current will, when the arc is properly maintained between the proper kind of carbons deliver 60 amperes on the highest notch. If the ampere meter is connected on the line side of the Compensarc the amperes going into it would be about 28 to 32 depending upon the exact line voltage and the distance your carbons are apart.

From the foregoing explanation and from your description I take it that you put the ampere meter on the line side of your Compensarc. If my assumption is correct then your Compensarc is operating properly and you are securing the results expected as far as the current consumption is concerned.

In answer to your second question I want to say that with A. C. there will always be more or less uneven distribution of light on your screen which generally manifests itself in the shape of a dark spot in the center, usually called a ghost.

When the very best make and style of carbons are used and when the carbons are set and the arc maintained to the very best advantage and when through experimenting for your particular installation the proper condensers are used and the distance from the condensers to the aperture and the distance from the arc to the condenser has been made correct, you should get a very fair and satisfactory light.

It is true, of course, that the A. C. arc can never be compared with the illumination secured from a D. C. arc for projection.

If I were in your place I would try a carbon setting approximately as illustrated in Fig. 2 or maybe in Fig. 3 on page 120 of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS for June 26. Setting the carbons as illustrated and by feeding them often and a little at a time I believe you will overcome most of your trouble.

Please let me know if you tested the amperes on the line side or the lamp side of your Compensarc. If you really did make the test on the lamp side then the only explantion that I can give is one of the following:

First.—You were using the Compensarc on the lowest notch with the carbons too far apart.

Second.—Your line voltage is not 110 or your Compensarc is not made for 110 volts but for a higher voltage.

Third.—If either of the above is not the case then your Com-pensarc may be made for a lower frequency than 60 cycles, or the cycles of the electric supply system may be higher than 60.

In order to make questions of this kind with the answers as interesting as possible to all other readers I ask you to kindly write in again and explain what you found. There is no expense attached to getting this information, and it is of great value to all concerned.

HOW CELLULOID IS MADE

J. W., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—My dear Mr. Hallberg: I would be pleased if you would favor me by settling a dispute between two of the boys in regard to the manufacture of celluloid for moving picture film.

"A" makes a bet that film is made in the following way. "Celluloid is made by dissolving cotton in sulphuric acid. After it has been thoroughly dissolved the acid is washed out with water, at this stage it is guncotton. Then the guncotton is dissolved in alcohol, mixed with camphor and rolled out in sheets."

"B" gives me the same answer, but he states that it is nitric acid instead of sulphuric, so to decide the bet I was not sure as to which acid was used. Kindly inform me in regard to same and the bet will go the way you decide as both are satisfied to let the bet go the way you answer me.

Ans.—The celluloid used for films is made in several different ways. Some manufacturers use cotton, camphor and nitric acid; some use cotton, camphor and acetic acid; sulphuric acid is only used as a dryer. If the cotton is wet it is generally treated with sulphuric acid to remove the moisture before treating with nitric acid.

In view of the foregoing it would seem that in a measure both "A" and "B" are right, but "B's" answer is more correct, because sulphuric acid is merely used as an incident in the manufacture of celluloid.

Of course, the actual methods pursued are varied with different manufacturers and are more or less trade secrets.

THE OPERATOR AND THE PICTURE

By G. Harry Brophy

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This is the second article contributed by an operator in the interest of better projection. All are invited to send in articles, either on this subject or any other connected with better conditions in motion picture theatres, projection, music or equipment. The free interchange of ideas will prove of benefit to everybody interested in the subject of motion pictures and their betterment.

IN every picture house there is at least one operator. His name is never among the posters and photographs that usually adorn the lobbys. In fact, few people ever give him a thought. In a sort of subconscious way they know that there is an operator, in a kind of fireproof "box" behind the wall where the tiny ray of light shoots forward through a little hole onto the screen. But what he does up there or how he does it, they know little and care less.

He is little known and seldom thought of, except when trouble of some sort interrupts the movement of the picture upon the screen. But his position is one of importance, for upon him rests the ultimate success or failure, to a degree, of all photoplays. Poor projection will offset the clearest and most perfect photography, will make the best efforts of the foremost photoplayers seem flat and lifeless. No matter if a director has put into a picture years of experience and has spent thousands of dollars in the making of it, just as sure as pictures have come to stay will it be a failure if it is not properly handled or projected so as to bring out all of its best possible points.

Every one connected with the business now appreciates the almost perfect machines which are in use. The men who handle these machines are like other people—of all kinds, qualities, sizes and nationalities, even the sexes are represented, though the "weaker sex" are the exception rather than the rule. Some operators are very competent and dependable, others either from ignorance or carelessness, never are to be depended upon and are unsatisfactory to a high degree. Occasionally there will be an operator who is all nerves. Such a man may get good results, but let something go wrong and he is at once up in the air and goes all to pieces.

Operators receive salaries varying from fifteen to forty-five dollars a week and work from forty minutes a day to twelve hours. Some houses will not take a man on at less than eighteen dollars a week. They figure that if he is not worth that to them he is not worth anything. Some operators are treated like princes—and others—well, different. Some booths are roomy and comfortable, some are cramped and hot; it all depends upon the theatre and its proprietor.

But upon the operator alone rests the responsibility of projecting pictures that can be seen and enjoyed, or who can ruin a show by poor projection. But no matter how good an operator may be he cannot give perfect projection with poor equipment.

Pictures Must Be Shown Under Best Conditions

I have known some proprietors who have built houses costing upwards of a hundred thousand dollars, and then have installed inferior and even second-hand machines in them. They wondered why their picture was not as good as the house around the corner. Possibly it was the fault of the operator, but if I were running a place I would secure the very best of equipment and a first-class man to handle it. I would pay him enough to make him stay with me. For what matters if you have the best house in the city, and run the best pictures, if in the end the picture is not properly projected upon the screen?

The best operator in the business is helpless if his machine is no good or his film is old and brittle. He can make temporary repairs but he never knows when something is going wrong. Every time he gets through with a show without a break down he offers up a silent prayer of thanksgiving—and he begins to worry about the next show. And no matter if your film be one of the strongest possible interest, or if your pictures have been filmed in a manner absolutely perfect, if it is not reproduced on the screen with clearness, devoid of excessive flicker, steadiness, and with fidelity to the subject, all expenditure of time, talent, money and human endeavor, will count for nothing.

To be able to get these results an operator must have a good working knowledge of electricity. The more he knows of electricity the better operator he will be. He must be a machinist, for he has the care of a machine which must be adjusted perfectly, and he must know optical lenses.

So when all is said and done, it will be seen that upon the operator alone rests the responsibility of projecting a good, clear, life-like picture—not upon the proprietor whose money is invested in the show, not the manager who gives out orders, but upon the man who is not seen at all, way up in a little six by seven coop near the roof, where it is so hot that if "Old Nick" should ever call him to his infernal regions the first thing he would ask for would be a fur-lined overcoat. Without the operator there could be no show. He never has his name in big letters in front of the house. His name sometimes is not even known to the rest of the employees. To them he is simply and only the "operator," but, nevertheless, when it comes to giving credit where credit should be due, if the show is what it should be, do not forget the man up there in the coop.

TENNESSEE EXHIBITOR NAMES THEATRE AFTER HIS WIFE

JOS. GOLDBERG, a well known business man of Clarksville, Tenn., is building a new theatre which is to be called the Lillian, in honor of the owner's wife.

Mr. Goldberg says that his wife and he are partners, and that she has always been the greatest help and encouragement to him in all of his many business enterprises, and when the new theatre was being built, and a name needed, he insisted on calling the place the Lillian, in her honor.

The Lillian will seat eight hundred, is fitted with opera chairs, Two Powers 6-A machines and a Minusa Gold Fibre screen, which was built to fit the conditions of the house.

BIJOU ENTERPRISE MOVES OFFICES TO BATTLE CREEK

ANNOUNCEMENT is made that the headquarters of the Bijou Theatrical Enterprise Company, controlling numerous theatres in Michigan, will be transferred from Chicago to Battle Creek, Mich., on September 1.

The change is made in order to bring W. S. Butterfield, head of the company, nearer to his Michigan theatres. This will effect several Michigan cities. Harry S. Lorch will be transferred from Battle Creek to Chicago; and Jack Yeo returns to Battle Creek from Milwaukee. The Bijou headquarters were formerly located in Battle Creek, but were removed to Chicago about a year ago.

PARAMOUNT THEATRE IN NEWARK, N. J., IS UNDER LOCAL CONTROL

CHANGES affecting the controlling interest in the Paramount theatre, Broad and Hill streets, Newark, N. J., became known when it was learned that Sigfried Leschziner, the local real estate operator, closed a deal with the Paramount Finance Company by which the operation of the picture house comes under local supervision.

The Paramount theatre will remain under the management of Tali Esen Morgan, who is perhaps best known in musical circles as the impresario at the Ocean Grove auditorium. Its policy is to remain the same but certain embellishments to the weekly program are included in the plans.

The interior of the building will be done over, the work having already been commenced. Part of the material changes about the building will be the installation of a soda fountain in the colonnade lobby about where the executive offices of the house staff are now located.

So far as the refinishing scheme is concerned the interior of the house, the stage and the boxes are to undergo changes. The walls and pillars will be retouched and the ceiling arches decorated with paintings symbolic of historical events in the world of music.

The stage will be enlarged so as to accommodate a full symphony orchestra. There will also be an orchestra pit and a full array of musicians are promised to augment the large organ which now provides practically all of the musical entertainment in connection with the pictures.

BING BROTHERS PUT OUT NEW MACHINE FOR SHORT THROWS

A SMALL new model motion picture projection machine adaptable for commercial and home use, has been put on the market by Bing Brothers, 381 Fourth avenue, New York. Set up, the projector occupies only about four cubic feet of space and has a capacity of one thousand feet, standard size film being used.

It can be folded into a very compact form for shipping. At short distances a very clear picture is produced and the mechanicism is strong and comparatively silent. Each machine is provided with a baby arc lamp of eight hundred candle power, taking about six amperes. The rheostat supplied is suitable for 110, 150 or 220 volts.

Although these machines are manufactured in Germany, Bing Brothers have a large stock on hand which they are to sell through dealers. In spite of its low price this Home Entertainer, as it is called, has been found most satisfactory for all purposes where a long throw is not required.

FIRE CHIEFS SEE VITAGRAPH PICTURE PROJECTED BY POWER'S MACHINE AT EXPOSITION

ON July 4 a benefit was given to the San Francisco fire department in the interest of its fund for entertaining the fire chiefs of United States and Canada at which many noted stage stars performed, among them David Warfield and Al Jolson.

A Power's 6-A machine was loaned and operated by R. W. Horn, the Power's representative at the fair and the Vitagraph picture, "The Locked Door," was shown.

The machine was placed in the central box of the theatre and it is a fact of some note that no booth was considered necessary by the chief of the San Francisco fire department, thus demonstrating the machine was absolutely fireproof.

SWANSON BUYS TWO SALT LAKE HOUSES FOR $210,000

THE American and Liberty theatres of Salt Lake, Utah, have been purchased by William H. Swanson, of New York and Denver, and H. T. Nolan, also of Denver, who own the Rex theatre in Salt Lake and in addition have a string of theatres throughout Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and New Mexico.

The consideration for the two Salt Lake picture show houses, which was paid in cash, was $210,000. The houses formerly were owned by the Liberty Theatre company and the deal was made by H. A. Sims and Albert Scowcroft. Other stockholders in the company were Charles Ziemer, H. E. Skinner and Joseph Chez of Ogden.

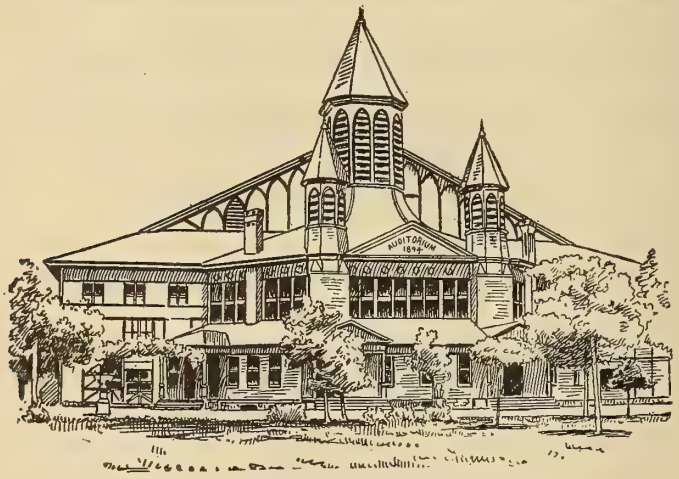
Motion Pictures in the Ocean Grove Auditorium



By J. H. Hallberg

BY the sea, on the coast of Jersey, over 45 years ago there was established a resort by the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which was called the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association. This beautiful place has been slowly developed and built up under the able management of the guiding spirit of its executive committee and officers, so that today it represents the most exclusive and beautiful religious summer resort.

The auditorium is in itself a marvelous building and I believe I am safe in stating that its seating capacity of 10,000 is as large if not larger than any other place for lectures and musical entertainments. Among the members of this great organization you will find the names of men and women who stand foremost in this country. The Ocean Grove Auditorium is known the world over for its exclusive and high-class entertainments.

The motion picture producer might well feel proud that he has succeeded in producing photoplays which are acceptable to this most critical of audiences. Under the able direction of its musical director, Mr. Tali Esen Morgan, and Frank B. Smith, general manager, of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association, performances exhibiting high-class motion pictures will be given.

The musical program under the great artist Tali Esen Morgan promises to be a revelation to those who have not yet seen motion pictures accompanied by proper music. Mr. Morgan has at his disposal what is claimed to be the largest pipe organ in the world and with the Ocean Grove orchestra there can be no doubt as to the quality and success of this entertainment.

Complete Equipment

The entire machine and electrical equipment was installed under the direction of J. H. Hallberg, of New York, who took the contract for the apparatus and supplies. The equipment consists of an asbestos booth, two latest type Simplex projectors fitted with the large type "S" lamp house, which has a capacity for more than 100 amperes at the arc. These machines are motor driven with the latest Simplex speed control and have especially fitted Gundlach lenses.

The electrical equipment consists of one Hallberg A. C.-D. C. Electric Economizer adjustable from 20 to 70 amperes, D. C. at the arc, complete with switchboard, including ampere and volt meters, and the necessary switches. The A. C.-D. C. outfit operates on the 220 volt, three phase, 60 cycle current generated and distributed by the private plant, owned and conducted by the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association.

The screen is of the removable type, and is of the ordinary muslin kind painted with a coat of Hallberg's Curtain Compound, which gives great detail in the picture where plenty of light is put back of the film.

FRANK B. SMITH, TALI ESEN MORGAN AND WALTER D. FRANKLIN, ON THE STEPS OF THE AUDITORIUM

The distance is about 200 feet, the size of the picture is 18 x 24 feet, and when one considers that this wonderful building occupies a space almost as large as a city block it might well be considered that this enterprise represents one of the most important steps taken for the exhibition of motion pictures.

For the successful carrying out of the plans I am indebted to the gentlemen whose pictures appear herewith, naming them from left to right: Frank B. Smith, general manager; Tali Esen Morgan, director of music; Walter D. Franklin, electrical engineer, and to the electrical inspector for the Board of Fire Underwriters and to the Precision Machine Company, of New York City, who furnished an expert to install the two Simplex projectors.

It is most gratifying to all concerned in the art of picture projection that our efforts for high-class picture production and exhibition and quality installations are at last to be appreciated.

TEXAS EXHIBITORS FIND BUSINESS EXCELLENT

WITH the exception of the city of Dallas, the motion picture business in Texas is in rather good shape, with a gradual increase in patronage from week to week. In north Texas, about a week ago, an exhibitor played a big production two days, and the business secured was very large.

In central and southern Texas a number of the exhibitors have either already made arrangements for new equipment and plans for remodeling their houses within the next sixty days, or have planned to have the houses remodeled by October 1.

In the reports received by supply and equipment concerns, there seems to be a larger number of new houses in the southwest than in the past three months.

AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY MAINTAINS REPUTATION FOR SERVICE

THE quality of service in all lines of construction nowadays is considered an important feature. Many of the exhibitors who have been taught in the school of experience have looked upon this word as a catchword to be used in modern salesmanship.

Merely as an incident the largest manufacturers of theatre seating in the world wish to defend the use of this word as it has been used in their establishment for nearly half a century. Experience of doing work for the largest operators in the theatrical field, who are now taking active interest in the film end, has taught them to give what they promise and promise only what they can give.

A report of orders entered by them the past week file twenty-five theatres, which will be well known in their immediate locality and whose range covers from coast to coast. The seating for these theatres will be shipped and installed ready for opening on an average of within twenty days.

This will give the exhibitor a vague idea of the comprehensive manner in which the installation division of that organization, working in co-operation with factories which have been taught by experience to produce nothing except what appeals as a standard to quality. Service in its true meaning is found throughout the work of the American Seating Company from the free draughting of plans for the seating of the theatre to the complete installation.

AIRDOME WITH ROOF SCENE OF PRIZE DANCING

DAVIS BROTHERS, who operate two airdomes in addition to the M Street theatre, in Georgetown, Md., are utilizing a number of novelties to boost their summer business and have made quite a hit with their Charlie Chaplin and dance contest nights. The first of these is of a nature which soon becomes tiresome, but for the one evening during which it was held, the Charlie Chaplin contest provoked no little amusement for the audience. This contest was open for men and boys in costume in imitation of the famous comedian and some very good representations were offered.

The dancing contest is of a more permanent nature, and is held each week in conjunction with the country store on Tuesday evenings, at the Georgetown, said to be the only airdome south of New York which is completely covered by a roof and equipped with electric fans. This airdome covers a space 100 by 150 feet and is equipped with a 24-foot stage.

When the storekeeper disposes of his stock of merchandise, the orchestra strikes up the dance music and the contest is on. The couples waltz, fox trot and hesitate to a finish for a prize of five dollars in gold for the best efforts of terpsichorean art. That this weekly prize may not be won continuously by the same couple, all prize winners are barred from making further entry until the wind-up night at the close of the season, when these alone may compete for a handsome silver trophy.

The airdomes of Washington have been badly handicapped this season by reason of continued rainy weather, but needless to say Davis Brothers have been able to do a good business on the off nights and to more than make up for the losses sustained on the others.

Fischer, general manager, St. Louis, Mo. Directors: Russell Palmer, John T. Schley, E. R. Stephens, L. E. Fischer, R. L. Scheig, M. Plunkett and J. M. Putnam.

WYOMING THEATRES FITTED WITH MINUSA SCREENS

THE Grand theatre at Sheridan, Wyoming, has been surveyed as to its projection possibilities and a Minusa Gold Fibre screen to fit the conditions is being made at the St. Louis factory of the Minusa Cine Products Company.

Thomas Kirby, proprietor of the Grand, is a well known figure in amusement circles in the West, and his management of the Grand will insure the people of Sheridan a good program.

FLORIDA.

THE Republic theatre, Jacksonville, has changed management and service. They are now running the General program.

The Pastime on Bey street, Jacksonville, owned by George Watt, has been temporarily closed. It will also change its policy and discard the small musical comedies which they have been putting on.

ILLINOIS.

The Palace theatre at Rockford, Ill., has closed its regular vaudeville season and is now showing motion pictures. The house opened its picture show program with the big feature, "Uncle Sam at Work."

Irving and Buchanan, managers of the Dixon Opera House at Dixon, Ill., now are showing motion pictures along with vaudeville. The picture program is changed daily.

INDIANA.

A picture show has been opened at Sherburne Park by Jacob Cronbach.

A moving picture show has been started at Clarksburg, Ind., by the Odd Fellows lodge.

A new moving picture theatre is being built at New Richmond, Ind. It is to be named the Crystal.

People of Vevay, Ind., are contemplating forming a stock company to finance a moving picture theatre for that town.

The Majestic theatre at Evansville, has been leased for twenty years by M. Switow and James H. Button, of Louisville, and Louis Zoller, of Chicago. They will make a movie vaudeville house of it and have announced that $20,000 will be spent in improvements.

Wilbur Fiske will open a moving picture theatre in the Irvin theatre at Winchester, Ind.

The Minuet theatre, of Fort Wayne, Ind., has been ordered to close by the Superior Court of Fort Wayne. Receivers' certificates will be given employees for about three hundred dollars in wages due them.

The Lyric at Vincennes, Ind., has been bought from Lawrence O'Donnell by Herman J. Arnold and Herman Becker. Mr. O'Donnell has been forced to sell out his theatre on account of business interests for his father which will take him out of Vincennes. Mr. Arnold was manager of the Lyric for several years, and also managed several of Menlo E. Moore's theatrical companies prior to that time.

The Liberty Bell Day celebration at Gary, Ind., was filmed by M. I. Wohl.

The opera house at Tell City, Ind., will be opened as a moving picture theatre after the revival services now being held in the opera house close.

E. P. Fuller hereafter will manage the Angela, at Bicknell, Ind. Mr. Fuller is father of C. P. Fuller, the original owner of the Angela.

W. C. Conway is the new manager of the Majestic theatre at Cannelton, Ind., which reopened recently after being closed for several weeks.

V. S. Ralston is considering opening a moving picture theatre at New Corydon, Ind.

Ballard and Sons' new airdome at Whiteland, Ind., opened recently to a good crowd. The tent walls were taken down to accommodate the crowd.

W. R. Wilson has opened an airdome at North Vernon, Ind., and is using the Universal program.

George Killen, owner of the Crystal theatre at Fort Wayne, has changed his program and is now using the Universal.

The Lyric theatre at Connersville has been closed for the last week for repairs, alterations and improvements. J. A. Chrismer is the owner. It is understood a new front will be put in and a number of other features will be added. A new ventilating system is to be put in besides redecorations.

C. A. Baldwin and F. C. Stock have brought suit against Dr. J. N. Ledbetter and Louis Ganschow, owners of the Lyric theatre, Michigan City, Ind., asking for the return of five hundred dollars paid as purchase price for a lease on the theatre. The plaintiffs declare that Dr. Ledbetter falsely represented himself to be the sole owner and misrepresented the house as having a profitable business.

The Church League, of Greensburg, Ind., which was organized hurriedly after James Alcorn had obtained permission from the city council to run two of his theatres, one an airdome, on Sunday. Alcorn said that there would be no shows in conflict with church hours, and kept his word, running only in the afternoon, but the church league is not satisfied and promises trouble.

Phil Worthen, who has been employed as an operator at the Star at Hartford City, has accepted a position with the Orpheum in the same town.

The Lincoln theatre at Valparaiso has reopened after being closed for several days, while it was being remodeled.

KENTUCKY.

The city commissioners of Lexington, Ky., have decided that there will be no modification of the new building code to allow for the elimination of parapet walls on the roof of the new Strand theatre which is being erected by the Phoenix Amusement Company in East Main street.

A request was made by Manager Louis Zahler that the theatre be allowed to be built without the parapet walls as required by the building code, contending that the roof will be twenty feet above the gallery and that this is equivalent to the regulation parapet wall. The commissioners, however, could not see the matter in that light.

An insurance expert who appeared before the commissioners gave the opinion that if the parapet walls were left off it would increase the insurance on the theatre and probably affect the rate of insurance on adjacent buildings.

The Strand is being built at a cost of $50,000, and will be opened about October 1. The house will have a seating capacity of 1,200. A pipe organ costing $10,000 is to be installed.

In the case of the Farmers and Traders Bank against Nelson Ward, Annabelle Ward and Mrs. Clara Ward, owners of the Pastime theatre at Maysville, Ky., the attachment issued several weeks ago has been sustained and judgment for $150 given the bank.

An order of sale has been issued, and unless a settlement is made within thirty days, the house will be sold at auction to satisfy the judgment. There have been several people trying to make a deal for the sale of the theatre with the present owners, and in case it is sold at auction, it is likely that the bidding will be brisk.

Michael Switow and James H. Button, of Louisville, and Louis Zoller, of Chicago, have closed a deal whereby they acquired a twenty-year lease on the Majestic theatre at Evansville, Ind. The terms have not been made public. This theatre was built about five years ago by August Ropke, of Louisville, at a cost of $75,000.

The new lessees announce that a company is to be formed to be known as the Majestic Amusement Company to operate the theatre as a vaudeville and motion picture house and to make improvements costing approximately $20,000.

With representatives of the Louisville firm of Joseph and Joseph, architects, Messrs. Switow and Button and Philip Skora, owner of the Evansville house, went to Evansville a few days ago to make arrangements for the proposed improvements.

Messrs. Button, Switow and Zoller have negotiations pending for the acquisition of picture theatre leases in several other cities and are interested in the Phoenix Amusement Company, which at present is building a $50,000 house at Lexington, Ky.

Keith's Louisville theatre, which a few weeks ago dispensed with vaudeville and adopted a picture policy exclusively will, beginning this week, reinstate the variety form of entertainment and offer a vaudeville and picture bill instead of a straight picture attraction. Four photo comedies including Charley Chaplin films and the Keystone output will be shown at each show with a change in the picture program daily.

The Paramount theatre, under the management of Lewis A. Judy and Marvin N. Gay, opened, July 10, at Mt. Sterling, Ky. The opening attraction was "Behind the Scenes," featurirng Mary Pickford. Music will be furnished by a violinist and pianist. Admission ten cents.

The Alamo theatre, Louisville, has installed a new Hope Jones orchestra.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Glover Ware, of Beverly, who runs the Larcom theatre in the former summer White House home, has just booked the complete V-L-S-E service. Glover has now completely recovered from the bombardment of biscuits he received at the outing of the exhibitors held at Pemberton Inn last month. At the time, his one objection to the attack was: "It's all right to throw biscuits, but why bother to butter them?"

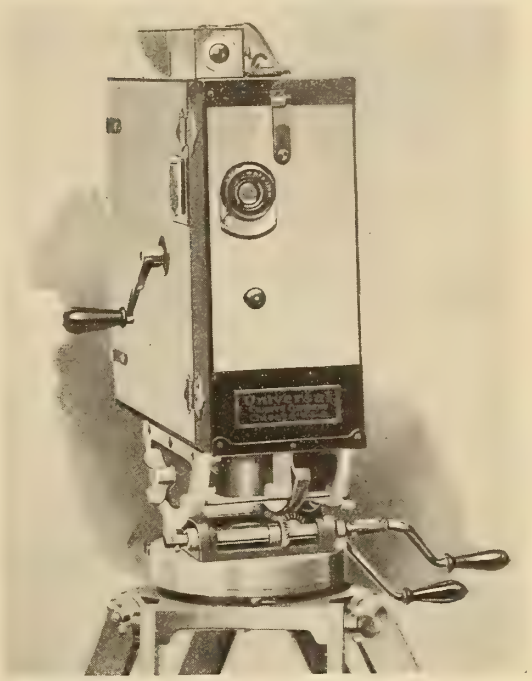
At the request of the fathers of Mission church in Boston, Manager Balsdon, of the Big Four, sent "The Rosary" to the church, where it was shown before and received the enthusiastic approval of all the fathers.

One of the coolest theatres in Boston is the Modern. In addition to the system of a ventilator under each seat, this house possesses the advantatge of a well of its own, dug below the theatre. The water from this well is used to wash the air used in the theatre. The temperature inside the house during the summer is always several degrees below that on Washington street outside.

The Gloucester theatre at Gloucester, Mass., opened on July 19 with Fox and United Film service. This theatre has been closed for several weeks.

A. Gordon, reported to be one of several prominent exhibitors interested in a plan to form a producing company of their own, has gone to Chicago, where it is said these exhibitors are holding a meeting.

Construction of the new Orpheum in Boston has met a legal snag in the filing by Charles E. Cotting and Philip Dexter, trustees and owners, of Hamilton place, which the rear of the old structure faces, of a bill in equity against the president and Fellows of Harvard College, owners of the building, the Moving Picture Company of Massachusetts, lessees, the Fleishmann Construction Company and the Swift, McNutt Company.



The bill seeks enforcement of a clause in an indenture made in 1882 under which the then trustees gave to the owners of the famous old Music Hall and those having business with them the right to use Hamilton place. The claim is set up that the contractors working on the building now are using the street in a way alleged to violate this indenture.

MISSOURI.

The Princess theatre, Grand and Olive street, St. Louis, will open under the management of Charles B. Bellknap as an exclusive motion picture house on Saturday, July 24. The Princess has been dark for several months, after running burlesque shows during the fall and winter.

The Princess was the first large theatre to be built away from the business district down town. It was intended for a straight dramatic house, but when motion pictures became popular, and other theatres were being built in the outlying sections of the city, the Princess tried other ways to keep its patrons by varying its program with musical comedy, vaudeville, pictures and vaudeville, until now, when it will run exclusive features, with four daily performances, two in the afternoon and two in the evening.

The admission will be ten cents for the entire lower floor, and five cents for the balcony. Nance O'Neill in "Princess Romanoff" will be the opening bill.

The Compton airdome, which has just been completed by Wm. McDonald, proprietor of the Compton theatre, at Compton and Easton avenues, St. Louis, is the last word in airdomes when it comes to beauty as well as stability.

The benches, which were specially made of hard maple, have curved backs that make them more comfortable than are most airdome benches, and the supporting timbers and posts are all made of red cedar.

Mr. McDonald went to much expense to fit up his airdome with the best material he could procure, and his intentions are to make it a permanent summer theatre.

The Echo airdome, Lillian and Arlington avenues, St. Louis, was turned over by the management to the Harney Heights School Patrons' Association, who gave a big show for the benefit of the pure milk and free ice fund, an institution that was inaugurated and managed by the St. Louis "Post-Dispatch." The entire association took part in the entertainment, several children from each section of the district selling tickets at five cents each for a program of seven reels of pictures.

Mrs. Nellie Snawder, manager of the Criterion theatre, 2644 Franklin avenue, St. Louis, intends to keep her theatre open all summer this year. She says she has been showing to capacity audiences all season, and business has never been better in all the time the Criterion has been running.

NEBRASKA.

Manager Thomas, of the new Omaha theatre at Fortieth and Douglas streets, Omaha, has changed to the Universal program, and speaks very highly of it. The Omaha is the only theatre in Omaha having its screen on the front wall. It has numerous exhaust fans to complete a perfect ventilating system, and in other ways is up to the minute in its structure and equipment.

NEW JERSEY.

Proctor's Broad street theatre, Newark, which has been showing motion pictures exclusively for the past three years, closed its doors Saturday night for the purpose of undergoing extensive repairs. The interior will be redecorated and the seating capacity enlarged to accommodate 2,200. It is planned to reopen the playhouse about the first of September.

PENNSYLVANIA.

A fire which badly damaged a store and warehouse at 2007 Frankford avenue, Philadelphia, also endangered the motion picture theatre next door to the burning building. The manager tactfully informed the audience of the facts and all filed out quietly and quickly without any excitement or trouble.

A permit has been granted to J. P. Fallon to make alterations to the motion picture theatre at Fifty-ninth and Market streets, Philadelphia, for James J. Cunningham, at a cost of $4,000.

An addition is being made to the photoplay house at 1301 S. Napa street, for Thomas M. Burghart, at a cost of $2,000. This will be of one-story, brick and stone, 40 by 55 feet.

The Hoffman Company, Philadelphia architects, are preparing plans for R. Topkis and Son, of Wilmington, Delaware. The plans are for a one-story brick, concrete and terra cotta, store and motion picture theatre, 30 by 125 feet. Bids will be asked for in one week.

The Sewickley Amusement Company, of which William R. Wheat, Jr., is president, is erecting a magnificent house in that suburb of Pittsburgh. The theatre when completed will cost $45,000 and it is expected to have the theatre complete by the latter part of September.

The theatre is to be located in Beaver street and will be erected on a lot 43 x 119 feet and will have a seating capacity of five hundred. The same firm is now conducting the Lyric theatre at Sewickley. The Lyric will still be conducted by the company. The name of the new theatre has not as yet been selected.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

M. B. Bolsiger, of Heron, S. D., has remodeled his theatre and has installed two Powers 6-A machines. He is now charging a straight admission of ten cents.

WASHINGTON.

The Arcadia, a new photoplay house, has been opened in Deer Park, a suburb of Spokane. The manager is William A. Pease, who plans to give performances each evening except Sunday.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

ORIGINALITY A NECESSARY FACTOR IN PICTURE MUSIC

IF, while at private exhibition of a feature for the purpose of setting a musical program, you became highly interested in a discussion of proper music with a second and third person, and one suggested that at the first appearance of French soldiers on the screen he had heard a beautiful and appropriate French number, the title of which he had forgotten, and when whistling the tune for you it turned out to be the "Mazel Tof," a Jewish number used at the end of Jewish wedding ceremonies, wouldn't it make you feel that the picture game was no place for a musician of intelligence or ability?

The above is but one instance of the ignorance coming to the writer's notice in the last five years.

While the actual impressions upon the layman are essential to the betterment of picture music, it does not mean that his suggestions could in any way help music and the picture. The time has come when the picture theatre requires more of the original and less of the reminiscent in picture music.

There is a vast difference in the requirements of the creator and the critic. The only criterion in the picture theatre after all are the box office receipts.

With the influx of more original ideas into picture theatre music the drawing power of the theatre will be ten-fold greater.

Picture Music Requires Entire Time

This requires that many musical minds be interested, not to give picture music a passing thought, but that they give it their entire time and study.

It is quite possible that a musical plot for picture screen action set-up according to the thematic requirements would be set to music by a thousand different musicians and leaders, none of them exactly alike, each and every musician or leader being able to inject a new and original idea into a similar thematic program without any possibility of musically detracting from the picture action.

With the view of giving musical originality full scope I have created and successfully used plots such as I give in these columns, not meaning them to be dictatorial, but a guide to the thematic requirements of the picture, giving the suggestions for musical numbers only for the purpose of showing the kind of number I would use.

Musical programs, without thematics or means whereby other similar numbers could be used when numbers suggested are not known or unobtainable, have been tried in the past and met with no success for the reason that such a method would give the musician no opportunity for a display of his originality, destroying every chance of competition, putting the picture theatre music on a single basis, whether it be right or wrong, good or bad.

It may be difficult to understand how when a musical program is good it still might be improved by another. Were I or any one to positively dictate a certain musical program, what assurance could any one have that it would be properly played, for it is common knowledge that the abilities of musicians differ greatly, and to have their efforts appreciated and make them entertaining, you must allow them to perform according to their ability. Dissecting the picture action or story into proper musical themes, is the only means whereby we can hope to get universal results in picture music.

Right to Suggest Picture Music

Until the present time everyone, regardless of his musical knowledge, feels it his right to suggest or dictate picture music, thereby simply creating musical confusion and discontent, making the solution of picture music more difficult, and the entree of the better musicians into the picture field more improbable.

The making of a thematic picture analysis is just as impossible to the musician as the making of a working scenario is to the average story writer.

Many exhibitors have told me that they have excellent musicians, but that they lack intelligence and do not obtain good results.

In picture making every department in its manufacture has a separate head, from the story writer to the assembling of the film for the market. In music we engage one head, we admit that he is competent as a musician, but because he is not a hundred other necessary things we say he is ignorant and we unjustly class him as incompetent.

We need a method wherewith we can get results from musicians because they are musicians, creating friendly competition among them, which is the means whereby it will be possible to get musical co-operation among them, laying the foundation for that which is admittedly new to music and creating a desire for the study of picture music.

The music plots and suggestions given in these columns have been made along these lines, the description of music being thematic abbreviations for the kind of music to be played between the cues mentioned. It is not necessary that one certain number need be used, for there are many numbers with similar theme ideas and when your repertoire is properly classified it is a simple matter to substitute numbers when more convenient. To many the description of music as given is not understood, for which reason notes are added to each plot.

With the completion of my A B C method for picture playing the notes as given will be unnecessary and the same space can be taken up by playing instructions.

Question and Answer Department

Beginning with next issue, we set a space for Questions and Answers, hoping that our readers will make free use of it. Through this department we hope to be a help to both musician and exhibitor, being always ready to answer all questions. Our best efforts will be given to make it educational as well as giving all necessary information asked for the betterment of music in the picture theatre.

It is our intention to be strictly co-operative, feeling certain that your views and our views aired thoroughly through these columns will result in creating a certain basis whereby picture music will become a positive factor in picture theatre entertainment.

and hundreds of seasoned exhibitors throughout the country use the STANDARD because they have found it to be the best projector. The MASTER MODEL now built by the American Standard Motion Picture Machine Company, whose offices are at 110-112 West 40th Street, New York City, is a wonderful piece of projecting apparatus. The American Standard people gladly send to all who inquire full particulars about this MASTER MODEL motion picture machine. All operators who are not familiar with this projector will find No booth is complete without the American Standard Motion Picture Machine Company's MASTER MODEL projector. It is so easy to operate that it instantly wins the admiration and approval of the operator. He finds all adjustments are quickly made; the maintenance cost he discovers is very small; he does not work under the constant dread of a bad breakdown; he revels in the work of the MASTER MODEL on the screen. His boss, the manager or the owner, will wonder why they never had the MASTER MODEL before. The STANDARD motion picture machine was the first projector to use a motor drive; it was the first to harden the wearing parts; it was the first to enclose working mechanism; it was the first to use a large lamphouse; it was the first to put lamp adjustments outside the lamphouse; it was the first to install automatic fire shutter controlled by governor; it was the first to devise and install a take-up for 5,000 feet of film; it was the first to use 2000 feet magazines and later, 3000-feet magazines, and reels. "THE SANDS OF TIME"

Three-Part Selig Feature Drama Written and Directed by Colin Campbell. Released June 28.

Dr. MacGregor ..... Harry Lonsdale
Enid, his wife ..... Martha Boucher
Young Dr. Blake ..... Wheeler Oakman
The Butler ..... Frank Clark

Superlatives of panegyric are dangerous, especially as a better picture might be released before the encomiums of the present picture have been given time to die away, but it is perfectly safe in stating that no finer three-reel feature has ever come to my attention, since perhaps another three-reel Selig, "The Master in the Garden." In accomplishing this result two very commendable things are noticeable. Mr. Campbell not only directed, but wrote the story himself, and it is another triumph of the scenario conceived directly for the screen. True enough, the theme is an old one as certain blase ones will immediately notify you, but we think that to the rank and file of humanity this picture will appeal as being one of the best it has ever had an opportunity to see. It is a sure combination of materials that gets under the skin of outward indifference to picture effect and that stays there. It stirs mightily, its pathos is extreme and its final moments are a true triumph of motion picturing. We have little hesitation in calling this one of the masterpieces of the screen.

The subject is, as we have intimated, that of the young wife who accepts the veteran and much-consulted doctor, whereas his young assistant also wished vainly for the privilege of her continuous company. Now the gentleman she does marry likes her dearly, is devoted as much as his pre-occupation will allow, and loves her, we are led to presume, in a more or less platonic fashion. The assistant, on the other hand, uses hot words of persuasion, so that it is no wonder that presently the young girl does leave.

Then the scene switches, and we see her living with her younger friend, while a notice arrives that her husband has secured an absolute decree. By this time her ardent young friend shows no further inclination of marrying her, so she leaves, to become a wanderer on the streets, finding lodgings where she can. One night she wanders slowly by a stone parapet in which she discovers a man and woman making the best they can of their hard lodgings, but with their arms about one another. Then there walks slowly and sorrowfully by her, the doctor. He pauses and silently she kneels, then kisses the edge of his coat. He moves onward, then a swift climb to the parapet, a splash, and next two policemen are dragging her body from the river, the young doctor looking on. For the final scene the doctor is to perform a clinic, the background being occupied by note-taking students; while into the foreground a covered body is pushed as subject for the demonstration. The fact that one is allowed to guess that it is his former wife does not abate the tremendous power of this revelation, with which the film ends.

Martha Boucher is a newcomer but extremely effective in registering the scope of feeling required in such a leading part. She looks a good deal like Anita Stewart. Harry Lonsdale played the physician with repression and feeling, while in a somewhat minor part of the impetuous youth, Wheeler Oakman gave a first rate accounting. Frank Clark made more than a butler of his character. Of course in this short space we are unable to more than intimate the course of action which Director Campbell has filled with the heighth of artistic and realistic touches, that make the film what it is. It is one in a year's output that you should not miss.

F.

Ward and Fitzgerald will remain in the varieties until the middle of August, when they plan an appearance in burlesque.

Leona Thurber and Harry Madison will present a new act in August.

THE Wayman plan is a new development of the news-of-the-day-on-the-film idea. Show the first one and you will show them regularly; your audiences will demand them. Most news films are a collection of pictured happenings of slight general and NO particular interest, gathered here and there by photographers who have had no training that would qualify them as judges of news values. The items which make up each film of the National News Weekly are selected by the editors of more than a score of BIG newspapers. One half of the film (500 feet) depicts happenings of general interest; the other half reproduces news events that have occurred in your city—selected by the editors of your favorite home town paper. Here's a slogan for the National News Weekly—You'll find it irresistible:

EQUITABLE

CREATED WITH HONEST PURPOSES

The Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation in introduc ing itself, does so with the full knowledge that motion picture exhibitors, generally, are justified in being skeptical.

We make no promises other than to issue for release each and every week:

1st—A five reel feature production

both of such a standard as the best talent (in each of the respective departments required by such an enterprise as ours) can produce, with a keen foresight toward the ever and rapid changing conditions and improvements that time demands and master minds create.

We do not believe that our success shall come over night—our goal is too great to be reached hastily—but with the courage of our convictions—a willingness to toil incessantly—inspired by an ambition to become the pride of the industry and representative of America's highest commercial ideals, we feel that our honest and honorable policies, coupled with a determination to help elevate our trade, will ultimately gain proper recognition, and to that end we solicit your co-operation.

The Stars and some of our early releases, follow:

William Courtleigh	in	"Life's Crucible"
Florence Reed	in	"The Cowardly Way"
Tom Wise	in	"Blue Grass"
Helen Ware	in	"The Price"
Julius Steger	in	"The Master of the House"
Robert T. Haines	in	"Human Cargoes"

The above are merely mentioned to acquaint you with the type and character of Equitable Productions.

Our regular announcement of releases and dates of release for the first three months will be issued in due season.

Many a packed house is directly traceable to an advertisement in the "News."

STRAIGHT from his heart of hearts, General Manager Hathaway, of the Trimount Theater Company (Cambridge, Mass.), fires in a letter of enthusiasm. Like a swift, true shot, his finger goes right to the vitals of film success. He says of a Thanhouser release: "EACH ACTOR IN THAT PICTURE PERFECTLY FITTED THE CHARACTER IMPERSONATED WITHOUT FAULT. I WAS SO IMPRESSED THAT I FELT CALLED UPON TO EXPRESS MY APPRECIATION."

THAT is the milk in the cocoanut! Mr. Hathaway has hit it! The characters are real!—They're true!—They live! They are convincing! THAT'S what makes pathos! THAT'S what makes comedy!

THAT'S the Thanhouser aim! The Thanhouser method! And take Mr. Hathaway's word for it, it's the consistent Thanhouser performance! Take HIS word or the word of ANY exhibitor who KNOWS that Thanhousers and Falstaffs are making good with a rip-roaring hurrah.

Edwin Thanhouser

Edwin Thanhouser Presents

"When the Fleet Sailed"

It is doubtful whether any release ever represented greater effort than this. Florence La Badie, Peggy Burke and Harry Benham are cast wonderfully in this production, which will be noted for its genuineness. Everything in it is real, from the great battleships to the officers' shoulder-straps, and there is action every sprocket-hole of the way.

Released in Two Reels Tuesday, August 3rd.

"The Revenge of the Steeple-Jack"

Prepare to lose your breath when you see this one. The big punch is a battle 200 feet in the air by two men who love the same girl. No counterfeit thrill effects! You won't need to ask a question after you see the hair-raising work in this film. Mignon Anderson, Harris Gordon and John Lehnberg worked with all their might—and they know how!

Released in One Reel Sunday, August 8th.

A Smashing Big Broadway Success!

THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY

A Picturized Romantic Novel
By Roy L. McCardell

This wonderful film production—the original continued photoplay in chapters—is the big sensation of Broadway. In the heart of New York's great theatre district "The Diamond From The Sky" plays to the biggest crowds. Throngs clamor night and day for admittance.

Everywhere—in the metropolis—the smaller city—the town—village—everybody goes to see "The Diamond From The Sky."

You exhibitors who have not booked "The Diamond From The Sky"—you are missing the greatest box office success in the history of motion pictures. A new two-act chapter is released each week. Fourteen chapters are now appearing. Book this biggest money-maker in the business!

For booking information, write, wire or see at once the North American Film Corporation representative at your nearest Mutual Exchange, or write or wire us.

READ MESSAGE ON NEXT PAGE

Read this message from J. Stuart Blackton to the mothers of America

This Film is dedicated with respect, reverence and admiration, and with the earnest prayer that their eyes may be opened to the peril which menaces and will continue to menace them, their children and their loved ones until the present state of "Unpreparedness" has been remedied.

"The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world," and in those mother hands lie the power to demand and to receive adequate protection against war, just as they demand and receive proper police protection against crime.

To the fearless patriotism of Hudson Maxim, and the plain, practical, straightforward truths in his book "Defenceless America," I owe the inspiration and impetus which caused me to conceive and write the silent drama of "The Battle Cry of Peace."

To over a score of other real Americans—some of the most prominent men in Army and Navy Administrative circles in the United States, I owe a debt of gratitude for the invaluable assistance of their advice and counsel in the preparation of that photo drama and its subsequent visualization in motion picture form.

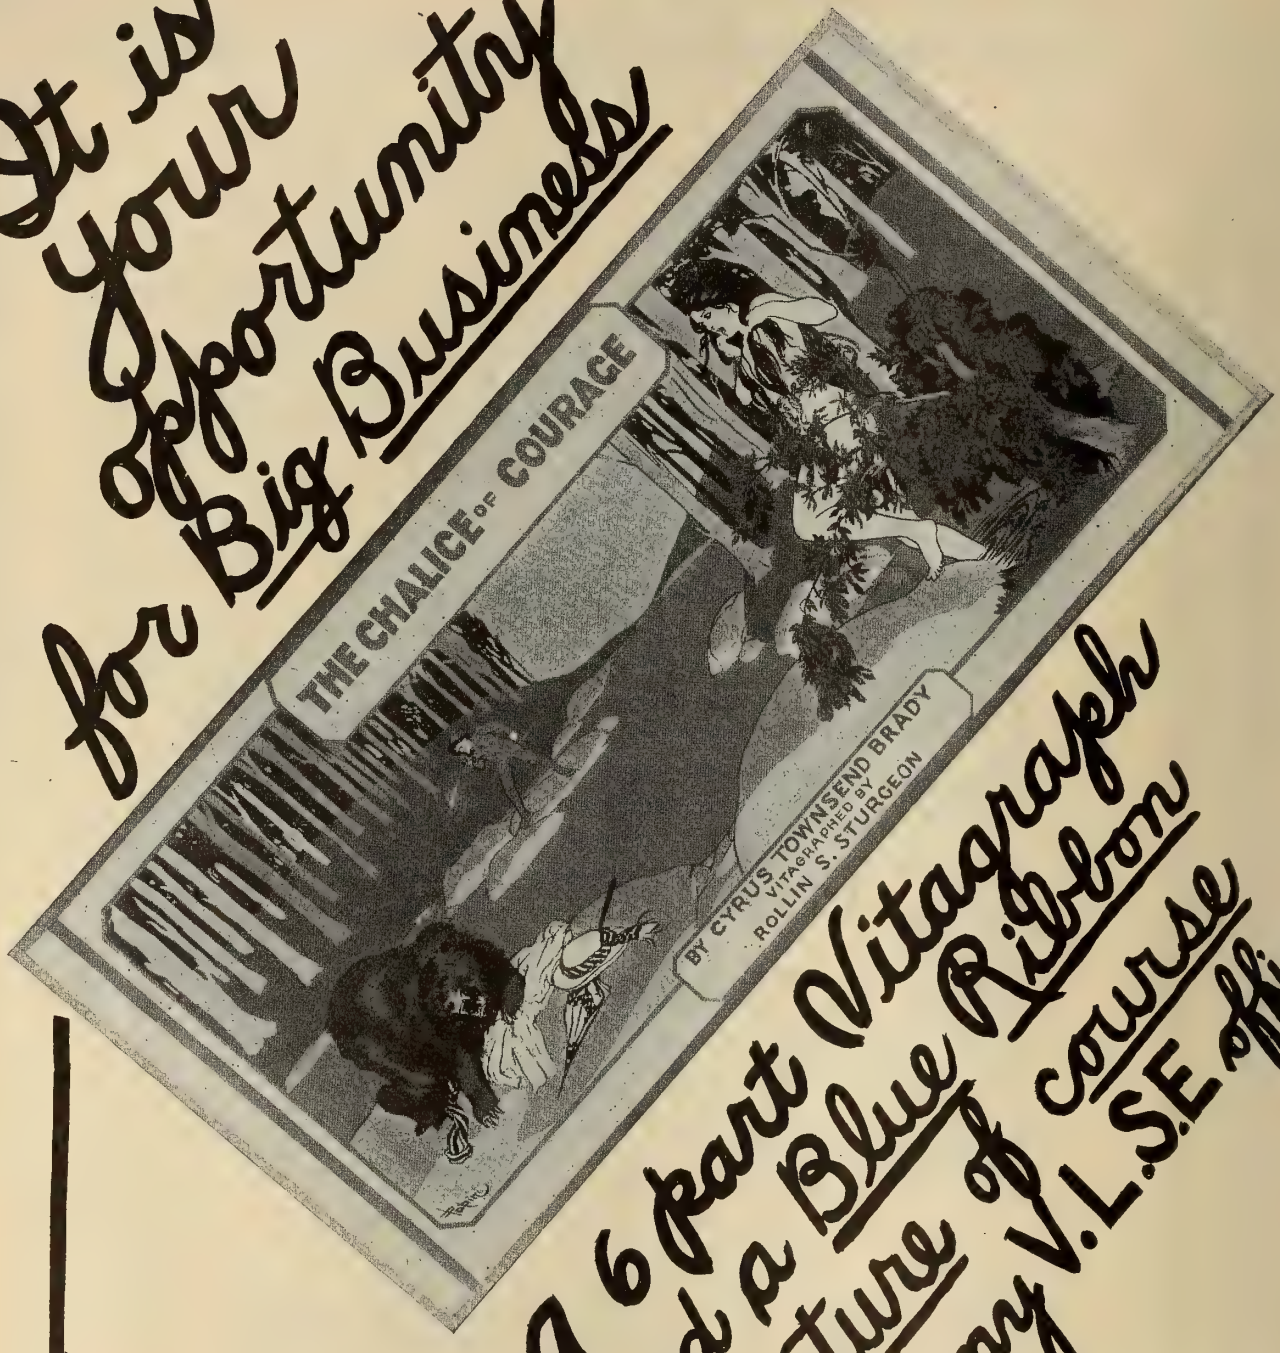
Nearly every important motion picture yet produced has been made from a story or a book. In this case the book was written after the completion of the silent drama.

The aim and object of both book and picture are to arouse in the heart of every American citizen, a sense of his strict accountability to his government in time of need—and to bring to the notice of the greatest number of people in the shortest possible time the fact that there is a way to insure that peace for which we all so earnestly pray.

"Let us have Peace!" General U. S. Grant, one of the mightiest warriors in the world's history, coined that phrase. With his genius for command, for attack and defense, he whose business was War, wanted Peace.

No body of men are half so anxious for Peace as the Army and the Navy. Every sane, conscientious human being is against War and for Peace.

But as a Nation we must not only be Champions of Peace and of the laws of humanity, but we must have the Power to enforce those laws! The Power to insure that Peace!



Let us disarm—let us become helpless, unprotected, emasculated, and there shall be Peace, but not Peace and Plenty, not Peace with Honor. Crushed, bleeding and trampled upon, America may find herself on her knees begging for "Peace at any price."

"A Bunch of Keys" Will Make the World Ring With Laughter

Nothing puts the spectator in such good humor as a good comedy.

It stirs up all his latent love of fun and makes him smile at the cares of life.

The trials of the day loom large and oppressive when seen at too close a view.

There is nothing like a good laugh to reestablish the equilibrium and give a correct perspective of life to the careworn.

A hearty laugh banishes gloomy forebodings and turns all petty ills to a rose colored hue.

"A Bunch of Keys" is the funniest of all the great comedies of that master fun maker, Charles Hoyt.

Essanay's five-act photoplay surpasses the screamingly funny stage production in genuine humor and comic situations.

The all star cast with June Keith, John Slavin and William Burress in the leads assures its success. Produced by Richard Foster Baker.

To be certain of a really good comedy book this Essanay feature through any of the branch offices of the V. L. S. E. Inc.

The Wail of the Ohio Censors

THE movement for a referendum of the Ohio censorship law to the voters of the state is now well under way.

In fact, it has assumed such proportions that the censors feel obliged to make a few statements—or rather, misstatements—in their own behalf, and to the intended damage of everybody else concerned.

WHAT Mrs. Miller, Mr. Wilson and their associates have to say in this connection would be important if it were true.

As it is, their remarks are interesting because they are samples of the misrepresentations which the industry must endure and the public must guard against from now until there is an end of censorship.

"IN trying to lighten the burden of the exhibitors," is the suave beginning of this utterance, "the censors have been amazed to find that the exhibitors are allowing themselves to be used by the exchange men and the manufacturers to assist in getting the referendum. . . ."

"Should the referendum be successful, the first censorship law would not be repealed, but the new one will, and the burden of violations will again fall on the exhibitors instead of the exchange men, as provided by the amendment."

SEVERAL facts are revealed in these few words, including one or two that, perhaps, the censors would prefer to keep in the background.

The first is, that the censors are preparing to fight the referendum. That, of course, is a foregone conclusion.

What seems to be equally clear, however, is the method the censors will use to defeat the referendum vote, if they can.

THEY propose to do precisely what they charge the exchange men and the manufacturers with planning to do—to narrow the referendum vote to the Besaw amendment, passed last spring, and permit that to be repealed for the sake of saving the censor law as a whole—and their own jobs.

TO do this will require some little hookwinking of the "dear peepul." The voters must be made to think they are having their own way—but this is surely better than exposing them to the horrible dangers of uncensored motion pictures again, to say nothing of the cruelty of depriving their hard-working and ambitious censors of their jobs.

IT is an old, almost a stale game the Ohio censors are playing.

Their very lame and ill-concealed attempt to cause distrust of the exchange and manufacturing interests in the exhibitors' minds is one of the ancient devices of political strategy.

But it wants doing better than these little provincial politicians are doing it.

THEIR description of the case might impress a careless outsider. It is only cause for ridicule to those in the business, who know, first, that the referendum idea was originally broached and begun by exhibitors, and, second, that the exhibitors and exchange men are too keenly aware of the identity of their interests in this matter to permit their opponents to breed discord among them.

WHAT is not false in the announcement from Columbus is funny.

There is something excessively humorous in the idea of a censor trying "to lighten the burden of the exhibitors," when it is the censor and censorship that is the chief, or rather the only burden.

It is the Tammany politician who scents the "better conditions" move from afar, making a pretence of putting his house in order, and then, when the "clean government" army sweeps down upon him inexorably demanding in an aggrieved tone, "For heaven's sake, what do they want? Ain't we just given 'em some reform?"

JUST so the censors in Ohio. They are "amazed" that the exhibitors should insist upon "lightening the burden" upon them, in their own way, when the censors have thoughtfully tried (?) to lighten (?) it for them.

They forget, these censors, that they are the burden the exhibitors want to get rid of, and intend to get rid of.

They forget that the referendum petition demands the abolition of all censorship. Not the Besaw amendment or any other single feature of the law but CENSORSHIP.

THE exhibitors, the exchangemen and the manufacturers are asking for that or nothing.

And the censors' record, either in Ohio or in other states, has not been such as to cause any feeling of pride at their administration, or any feeling of hesitation at dispensing with their services, or any pang of sorrow at seeing them return to the oblivion from which they came.

Vol. XII August 7, 1915 No. 5

Why the Eisner Amendment Failed at the Albany Constitutional Convention

IT is greatly to be regretted that the Eisner measure to prohibit all censorship legislation against motion pictures, by extending the protection of the free speech clause explicitly over them, should have failed of adoption by the Constitutional Convention at Albany, N. Y.

The failure is to be regretted, but it is not to be wondered at.

IT was a bold attempt to accomplish by a single stroke, what cannot possibly be accomplished save by slow and gradual steps, by a series of victories, each one of which brings the business a little nearer the haven of refuge than it was before.

"Trench fighting," in short, is the only method of attack that will conquer censorship.

THE Eisner proposal to exempt motion pictures from censorship legislation was, in other words, a demand upon the law-makers to agree that the picture business should be placed, by the Constitution of the State, permanently beyond their control.

That was the fatal weakness of the idea.

You cannot induce any legislator or any body of legislators to concede that much to any business.

THE American Senator or Assemblyman of today is firmly convinced that his law-making right is not and cannot be limited by anything except his ability to get a majority on his side.

He believes he has a right to pass any kind of a law he pleases in regard to any business in existence, and he does so, periodically, just to show that he can—when he has no more sinister motive for so doing.

COUPLED with this is the overwhelmingly evident spirit of the times to pass laws regulating and relating to everything under the sun.

Never before in the history of this or any other country has there been such a swelling of the statute books of every state in the Union as within the last ten years.

Many of these laws are preposterous. Many of them are ridiculous. Many of them are aimed with vicious or greedy intent against some group of men whose prosperity has aroused the envy of the politicians in power.

But the making of laws goes steadily on, until it has become an unquenchable lust in the breast of the law-makers, and they must satisfy their appetites for creating new laws, regardless of their necessity, intent or consequences.

IN such a state of affairs, it is unthinkable that any body of politicians would deliberately sign away their right to legislate, if they saw fit, against the motion picture business, by endorsing the Eisner amendment.

They might agree, informally and orally, to respect the freedom and independence of the business. They might refrain indefinitely from legislation because of the number of friends the motion picture would be found to have in the legislature.

But as for publicly, and in set words, renouncing forever the "divine right" to meddle in business affairs—that would be midsummer madness, from the legislator's point of view.

THAT is why the Eisner amendment failed. It is no fault of the men behind it that it did fail.

The longest way around is not only the shortest way to solve the censorship question. It is the only way.

The Victory of the Exhibitors in Dallas

DALLAS exhibitors have won the first round in their fight against the Sunday closing movement engineered by the Council of Churches in that city.

The ministers, defeated in the local court, have recourse, it is true, to the State Court of Criminal Appeals. They are said to be hesitating about carrying their case to the higher tribunal. Whether they carry it there or not, the exhibitors have gained the essential victory, for they have established in a court of law in their own city their case.

IT is not strange that the ministers, as self-appointed guardians of morals, should have thought it necessary to attempt to run counter to public opinion, but it is strange that they would take into a law court so flimsy an argument as they presented.

The exhibitors were operating their Sunday performances on the contribution plan, and that is precisely the method used on the very same day of the week by the ministers in their churches.

The ministers were toying with a boomerang. All the exhibitors had to do was to let the boomerang work in its natural way. It worked perfectly.

AND the striking lesson of this incident for exhibitors everywhere is this: that efforts to oppress their business may come not alone from legislatures and censors, but also from grave and reverend gentlemen in clerical garb whose ideas belong to the Dark Ages. The fact that these gentlemen use the guise of religion for their unwarranted attacks does not make their attacks on a legitimate business any the less oppressive.

If there is one thing worse than a legislator with a mania for regulating everything and everybody, it is a minister who attempts to force down the throat of a community his superstition-saturated ideas.

OHIO CENSORSHIP IN HANDS OF VOTERS

Exhibitors Throughout the State Organize in Effort to Quash by Referendum Obnoxious Law Now Interfering with Rights of Picture-Going Public—Censors in Report Charge Manufacturers and Exchangemen Behind the Movement—Cleveland Makes Strong Protest Against Actions of Censors

Cincinnati, July 28.

THAT exhibitors throughout the state of Ohio have begun to organize in an effort to defeat censorship by referendum next fall was made known here several days ago, when wide publication was given to a report filed with the State Industrial Commission by the Ohio Board of Censors. So quietly and smoothly had this organization sprung into being that many exhibitors themselves expressed surprise when the fact of its formation and the statement of its purposes were outlined in the censors' report.

The report of the censors charged that film manufacturers and exchange men were back of the fight by referendum and were using sinister arguments to induce exhibitors to aid in a referendum on the Besaw bill, which was an amended measure to the original law and made the manufacturers and exchanges equally responsible with exhibitors for failure to make eliminations.

The censors charge that the manufacturers and exchanges who are the real violators of the law are making every effort now to hoodwink the exhibitor by having them defeat the Besaw bill by referendum and thus shift back the whole responsibility on the exhibitors' shoulders. This is what the report said in part:

"In trying to lighten the burden from the exhibitors the censors have been amazed to find that the exhibitors are allowing themselves to be used by the exchange men and manufacturers to assist in getting the referendum. This is to be done by the use of slides in the motion picture house, calling on their patrons to vote against censorship. Should the referendum be successful, the first censorship law would not be repealed, but the new one will, and the burden of violations will again fall on the exhibitors instead of on the exchange men, as provided by the amendment.

Accuse Manufacturers and Exchanges

"The manufacturers and exchange men have been the real violators of the law. They know when a picture has been rejected and what eliminations have been ordered, yet they have persistently sent out films rejected by this board, removing leaders of approval from other films which have been passed, and placing them on the rejected pictures. The exhibitors of such films throughout the state have been given the impression that the board of censors has passed them because they have been shown with our leaders of approval.

"Back of every movement against state censorship is the National Board of Censors of New York, representing a large group of manufacturers, who wish to exhibit indecent, coarse and vulgar pictures and films showing crime in every form. Those pictures will not be passed by the Ohio Board of Censors."

This extravagantly-worded report and its subsequent publication throughout the state was immediately appraised at its true value by Cincinnati exhibitors. Many of the leading motion picture men, whose lips have been sealed on the censorship question for months, were aware of the statewide movement for the referendum. They understood the charges in this report and realized that the first attempt of the consors was being made to forestall the impetus which has already been given to public sentiment against the principle of censorship.

Since Cincinnnati exhibitors had gone on record as approving the state board of censors and their work, and their subsequent experience with "Three Weeks," which proved that the state body was powerless to prevent municipal interference with "approved" films, and the "Devil's Daughter," they have maintained a discreet silence on the subject. But to one who followed closely conditions in the film business there was apparent an undercurrent of deep feeling—a resentment against the censorship idea, which amounted to a tacit understanding that if this monster were not destroyed before it gained a full maturity, it would ruin their industry.

Exhibitors See Purpose of Report

And so Cincinnati exhibitors, while they have taken no part in the comment occasioned by the charges in the censors' report, can see clearly the purpose of this report. They know that the report is calculated to offset any opinions against censorship which have already been formed in the public mind and they realize that the charges are as manifestly unfair as some of the censor judgments of the board have been.

Leading exhibitors of Cincinnati have been in communication with B. J. Sawyer, of Cleveland, leader of the statewide movement, and have announced that they will give the proposition careful consideration before taking either the side of the censors or the other exhibitors.

Under the circumstances and in view of past experiences of Cincinnati exhibitors with the censors, it will not be taking a wild shot to predict that when the exhibitors line up in their trenches for the big referendum fight the Cincinnati men will be in the front rank, fighting to maintain the dignity and integrity of their business.

Cleveland Men Register Strong Protest Against Censors

Cleveland, July 28.

HAVING come into personal contact with the Ohio censors, Archie Bell, dramatic editor of the Cleveland "Leader," declares that censors are a relic of antiquity. Referring to the censors, Archie Bell writes thus:

"We have our board of censors in Ohio, and they are living up to all the absurd practices of the censors of history. They draw $1,500 a year each for telling the people of Ohio what they think is good for them—and more frequently what is not good for them—and something like 6,000,000 persons are obliged to abide by the consequences of their action.

"It is conservatively estimated that in Cleveland alone 80,000 persons must visit the motion picture theatres every day to keep up the running expenses of the 160 regular theatres. But the law says that these 80,000 persons may be prevented from seeing a film which they may want to see, because three censors at Columbus have sat in judgment and decided that the film is not what they would like it to be.

"That's the law today—but who can tell what will happen to that law after the November elections? There are 172 exhibitors of motion pictures in Cleveland, 980 in the state; all men and women who are in closer touch with the people than are the censor who senses for cents. Referendum petitions arrived in all parts of the state last week and an active campaign is to be conducted to have the law put where it belongs and the censors relieved of their positions and salaries."

B. J. Sawyer, of this city, who is president of the Moving Picture Referendum League in Ohio, has this to say:

Law Absurd in Theory and Practice

"Along with the rest of the people who think, I am of the opinion that the censorship law was absurd in theory and more absurd in practice, but the law is there and motion picture exhibitors must obey the law. The thing now is to appeal to the people of the state and let them say what they will do to this law.

"We need only 67,000 signatures to our petition, and that will be easy. There will be no legal phraseology and voters will know for what they are voting. They will be asked this simple question, 'Are you for or against censorship?' And, of course, we are confident that Ohio will thus relieve itself of a law that works a hardship upon exhibitors and manufacturers and is insulting to the intelligence of theatre-goers."

An amusing sidelight is the fact that the "Ten Nights in a Barroom" has been barred in Ohio. "Hamlet," too, has been censored because of "Hamlet's ungallant behavior toward Ophelia." "The Merchant of Venice" was forbidden because it was "offensive." A film sanctioned by President Wilson and in which the President appears with the Boy Scouts has been censored because boys were visibly smoking cigarettes Jack London's "John Barleycorn," wanted by the Ohio Anti-Saloon League for its campaign, was censored and forbidden.

Another comment by Mr. Sawyer is well worth offering to the motion picture public:

"There has been much talk about removing all gunplay from motion pictures. There is talk that 'the children must be protected.' Any sort of gambling must not be shown. And yet in the nineteen years that motion pictures have been shown in Ohio, there has not been one case of murder traceable to motion pictures and the exhibition of gunplay. Talk about gambling! There never was less gambling in the city of Cleveland or in the state of Ohio than in this present era of motion pictures.

"You can't find a dice box in the city. As for 'the children,'—always the plea of politicians—Judge Addams, of the juvenile court in Cleveland, told me that in twelve years' experience he was unable to find one case of deliquency directly traceable to picture shows and their influence."

"The Devil's Daughter" has been exhibited in Cleveland, and the film fans who saw the production shake their heads and wonder audibly what objection there was to the film, which the Ohio censors first rejected and then sanctioned.

About 600,000 feet of film is "passed" (?) upon by the Ohio censors each week. It requires from 15 to 17 minutes to see 1,000 feet. If the censors sat in judgment for about twenty hours seven days in the week they would be able to "pass" upon all films submitted.

Ohio citizens are beginning to wake up to the absurdity of the law, which says:

"Only such films as are, in the judgment and discretion of the board of censors, of a moral educational or amusing and harmless character shall be passed and approved by the board of censors."

Piffle! This law might do well for the autocratic powers of a Russian governor of a Siberian province—but in the United States, never! Who said anything about "the land of the free"?

DENVER CHOSEN FOR PRODUCTION CENTER BY BUCKWALTER

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Denver, Colo., July 28.

With the arrival of Arthur Hoffman, a scenario writer and director, comes the announcement that a company in which H. H. Buckwalter, a pioneer in the business, E. H. Pearl and other Denver men, is being organized for the purpose of establishing a film studio here.

According to announced plans, the enterprise will operate on a small scale at first, and later build a big studio building and lay out scenic grounds. It is agreed by motion picture experts that Denver is an ideal place for filming.

INDIANAPOLIS COMPANY FORMED TO MAKE COMEDIES

A motion picture company, known as the Flying Eagle Film Company, in Indianapolis, Ind., has been incorporated by George J. Sailer, P. G. Cody, Newton Van Beck and Virgil E. Burris, the capital stock being $10,000.

The company already has engaged several actors and actresses and will produce its first feature, "The Country Boy's Triumph," a two-reel comedy written by Virgil Burris, general manager of the company.

The company's studio is in the When building, Indianapolis.

Dawley, Back with Famous, Will Direct Miss Clark

One of the Oldest Studio Managers to Undertake the Production of Features, He Has Several Successes Credited to His Name—"Helene of the North" Is Vehicle for Dainty Star

J. SEARLE DAWLEY, conceded to be one of the foremost feature directors in the world, who joined the Famous Players Film Company shortly after its inauguration in 1912, remaining with that organization until the formation of the Dyreda Film Corporation, of which his name supplied the first two letters, has now returned to the Famous Players' producing staff, and will be assigned the direction of an important series of features.

J. SEARLE DAWLEY

Mr. Dawley is among the oldest directors associated with the motion picture art, and was one of the first in the United States to undertake the production of features. His activities in this direction cover a wide range of subjects, many of which have been recorded among the most notable feature successes in the annals of the screen. These will be readily recalled.

He contributed a great part of the success achieved by the Famous Players' third release, Mrs. Fiske in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," and subsequently created a number of the epochal productions.

In a statement to MOTION PICTURE NEWS Mr. Dawley said: "It is gratifying to me, after a cycle of varied activities, including a personal venture of large proportions, to return to the company which introduced the policy of presenting the famous plays and stars of the stage on the screen, in whose early developments I was permitted to be associated. I have, of course, many happy memories of the pioneer days of this form of screen drama, and to resume my place in the studio that saw the birth of this history-making advance in the film art carries a strong sentimental and artistic appeal."

Mr. Dawley's first production for the Famous Players in his new affiliation with that company will be of Marguerite Clark in "Helene of the North," an unusual romance that presents this dainty star in the most unique impersonation she has yet assumed since her first triumphant association with the screen.

The subject combines in a decidedly novel manner the cultured atmosphere of aristocratic society circles with the rugged environment of the trackless wilds of northwestern Canada, between which far extremes the drama sways with uninterrupted fascination. "Helene of the North" is scheduled for release on the Paramount program August 19.

"Arnold Daly Series" by Shaw Star Is Pathé Plan

Actor Will Picturize "Ashton Kirk" Novels of John C. McIntyre, and Is Making Preparations for Detective Character Expected to Become as Popular as Craig Kennedy

PATHÉ has just made with Arnold Daly a contract of unusual interest, arranging for a series of pictures to be known as the "Arnold Daly Series." The "Ashton Kirk" novels, by John C. McIntyre, will be picturized, and Mr. Daly will create a detective new to the screen and one which it is expected will be as famous as the actor's Craig Kennedy. The new character is to be known as Ashton Kirk, Investigator, and will be carried through a series of adventures, each one complete in itself, and each to make a four-part feature.

Mr. Daly has assembled for his cast a number of well known players. Sheldon Lewis, the Clutching Hand in "The Exploits of Elaine," whose work in the fourteenth episode is still remembered, is one of them.

Louise Rutter, recently leading lady with William Gillette, will have the feminine lead. William Harrigan, son of Edward J. Harrigan, and just returned from a two years' visit to Australia; Charles Laite, who has been in a number of Mr. Daly's dramatic productions, and Martin Sabine, leading man with John Drew and Maude Adams, are the others of this well balanced cast.

Mr. Daly is acknowledged to be one of the cleverest and most widely known men upon the stage. Through his work in "The Exploits of Elaine" his name became a household word all over the United States. The Pathé pictures under his name should prove to be exceedingly popular.

Kansas Exhibitors Face Burden of Censor Tax

Exchangemen at Recent Meeting of Association Hold View That Managers of Screen Theatres Should Bear Expense of Censoring Films by Additional Charge to Rental of Reels—Declare Laws Is Meant for Exhibitors, Who Ask for Amendment of the Code for Relief of Both Exhibitor and Exchangeman

Kansas City, Mo., July 28.

THE burden of the expense of censoring films shown in the State of Kansas will be thrown on the shoulders of the exhibitors of that state. It will bring home to them the unjustness of the heavy expense that has been borne in the past by the exchanges of Kansas.

At a recent meeting of the Film Exchange Men's Association of Kansas City the consensus of opinion was that the exhibitor should bear the expense of censoring films insomuch as the law was directed at them, and not at the exchange men.

John S. Dawson, former attorney general of Kansas, in his pleadings before the United States Supreme Court when the constitutionality of the law was being fought said: "The film exchange man claims that the burden of this censorship will fall upon his shoulders. This is not the case. The law is directed against the exhibitor, and not against the exchange, and I suggest that if the exchanges do pay for the censoring of the films, that they reimburse themselves by charging a small amount on each reel to the exhibitor."

It is following this suggestion that some of the exchanges will begin on July 26 to make a charge of ten cents on each reel sent to the Kansas exhibitor.

But it should not be understood by the exhibitor that the exchange will not stand behind him in a fight for the remedying of this heavy, unnecessary tax.

There is no referendum in the state of Kansas for the recall of the acts of the legislature, but there is a way to amend this law so that the censorship fee will not be felt by either the exhibitor or the exchange.

Objection of Five Citizens

An amendment suggested by one of the exchange men of Kansas City, which seems to be about the best way around this obstacle, is to have no films censored, except those that have been objected to by at least five citizens in the state in writing to the state superintendent of public instruction. If this should be made it would throw the cost of censoring such a film on the shoulders of the owner of the film.

The Film Exchange Men's Association at a meeting held last week adopted the following resolutions:

First—Each one write a circular letter that can be mailed to all theatres in this district, setting forth particularly the present objection to censorship procedure in Kansas, in that a fee of $2 is charged, which is apparently four times more than is necessary to cover the present expenses of the board; in addition to which we are compelled to provide our own exhibition rooms. Also calling attention to the most recent notice by the superintendent that all films must be censored at once, which, in any event, would be a physical impossibility, and at the same time keep all theatres open now operating in Kansas.

Second—We shall by every possible means give publicity through the newspapers to our reasons for opposing censorship, such reasons being pretty definitely defined in pamphlets, besides every other available consistent reason.

Third—To add to this educational campaign by enlisting the aid of the exhibitors in the distribution to their patrons of all propaganda material that can be obtained; to start with pamphlets, further securing and having made as many sets of slides with terse arguments opposing the censorship as can be circulated to the exhibitors by the various exchanges; have two or three changes of slides per week of approximately four slides to the change, which would enable us to conduct on the screen of every theatre in the state, perhaps, as well as in the entire territory, a screen campaign covering from 15 to 20 weeks.

After which we can determine whether to enlist the voters of Kansas on a referendum to have the law repealed, or to secure pledges from all aspirants to the legislature possible, and support on the screen and through the press, by the exhibitors to their clientele, etc., for only those who are in favor of repealing the law, giving opposition by all consistent means to the aspirant who is in favor of censorship in its present form.

Fourth—Should we deem it not possible to have the law repealed entirely, efforts might be made to have it amended so that all films would not have to be submitted nor any censorship be paid for. In that only such films as are objected to in writing by at least five citizens of the state of Kansas, and such objection filed or mailed to the superintendent of public instruction, would then empower him to call for any inspection of such complained of subject, at which time owner of such subject should pay such expense as is necessary to its being called in and censored. Should such films be rejected, the provisions of the present law might prevail.

Not Able to Censor All

The state superintendent of public instruction has issued an order that all the films in the state of Kansas that have not been censored must be sent in to be censored. This would mean that something like 2,200 films would have to be called out of service and sent to Topeka to be censored.

In addition to this there are something like two hundred reels of new film being sent in each week for censoring. The two deputies that the law allows can by working ten hours a day only look at 80 reels a day, so it can readily be seen that to comply with this order is a physical impossibility. It would also mean that after all these films were censored the state of Kansas would be about $4,000 richer. There are about 4,000 films in Kansas, about 1,800 of which have been censored.

It is claimed that this censorship is not a revenue measure, yet, according to the figures issued by the state superintendent of public instruction the early part of the month, a clear profit of something like $3,000 is shown since the law went into effect, the twelfth of April this year.

According to these figures the inspectors have looked at 1,877 reels, and the fee inspection receipts were $3,754, while the expense of maintaining the board and the deputies was $767.

The exhibitors of Kansas are all worked up over this matter since some of the exchanges have decided to make a charge for the censoring of films. Some have threatened to sue the state to have the fee reduced, while others say they will close their houses.

The final settlement of the question is in the future, but no doubt some action is going to result.

$2,000,000 COMBINE FORMED FOR FILM SELECTION

The formation of a $2,000,000 combine of moving picture exhibitors for the purpose of standardizing the output of film producers was announced July 21 at St. Louis, by William Sievers, in charge of organization work. Assisting Mr. Sievers is E. H. Hulsey, of Dallas, Texas.

The organization, it is said, will combat the dictatorial policy of producers, who demand that exhibitors show all of the films or none by opening an office in New York for the selection of only such films as association members desire. Poor films will be eliminated. At the final organization meeting in Chicago, August 25, plans will be made for the production of one big feature film every year.

LOCKWOOD LEAVES FULTON AND MAKES INDUSTRIAL PICTURES

Chicago, July 28.

E. B. Lockwood, formerly connected with the E. E. Fulton Company, in conjunction with John A. McGeary, has gone into the manufacture of industrial motion pictures under the firm name of McGeary-Lockwood.

Their office is 412 Mallers building. At present they are manufacturing a one thousand feet production for the Chamber of Commerce of Benton Harbor, Michigan. They have just finished two thousand feet of film, caled "The Whim of Fortune," for the "Chronicle," of DeKalb, Illinois. State Senator Cliff played the leading role in this latter production.

LUBIN STUDIO OPPOSITE SAN DIEGO NEARS COMPLETION

San Diego, Cal., July 26.

Just across the bay, at Coronado, carpenters and other workmen are rushing to completion the new studio and general plant which is to be operated by the Lubin company.

The main building is to be 115 feet long by 100 feet wide. Besides a huge stage it will contain eight dressing-rooms.

In the rear is to be erected a garage 16 by 100 feet. An old adobe building, formerly used as a city hall, will be occupied as an administration building. The site faces the bay and will be admirably situated for still water scenes, or, a short distance away, just across the Coronado peninsula, is the ocean shore, for surf and beach effects. J. F. Deuel, technical director of the company, says that everything will be ready for use by August 1.

Captain Melville will be in charge of the new Lubin studio. The very latest motion picture apparatus is to be installed, and the many available spots about Coronado and San Diego will be utilized in making exterior scenes. Captain Melville's yacht, the "Vergena," formerly owned by the late Governor Roswell P. Flower, of New York, is to be anchored in the bay near the new Lubin plant.

Miriam Nesbitt Is First Woman Director for Edison

Actress Was Picked from Dramatic School by the Frohmans to Play Opposite Hackett, and with Same Exhibition of Faith in Her Own Talents Will Put On Four-Reeler

AS the first woman to direct an Edison production Miriam Nesbitt, the talented and popular star of that company, starts Sunday on a six weeks' vacation and tour of the West and the Panama Exposition, during which she will film the exterior and some of the interior scenes in a four reel feature, "A Close Call," in which she will star, direct, and of which she is also the author.

The picture concerns the pursuit of a missing man whom she must find and marry within a limited time to win a fortune. Miss Nesbitt has placed the story in the World's Fair location and she expects to make the feature doubly attractive because of its embracing some of the most beautiful scenes at the exposition. The plot will take her also to San Diego, while a vivid Chinatown den scene will be taken in the famous Chinatown section of San Francisco. Afterward the chase takes her through the Panama Canal where the story dramatically ends. She will also represent Edison at the exposition.

On her trip, Miss Nesbitt will first spend some time at a camping party in the wilds of northern Wisconsin, then visiting Chicago and St. Paul. Six days will be spent in Yellowstone Park where her mother now is, and from whom she has just received word advising ther to take no money to the Park as she, her mother, had just been held up. Miss Nesbitt, accordingly, shipped her jewels direct to the coast. Other cities visited will be Portland and Los Angeles.

At a performance given by a dramatic school the Frohmans, with quick and experienced eye, picked Miss Nesbitt to play opposite James K. Hackett. To say that she not only qualified for this trying role opposite one of the best romantic actors of the stage, but prepared for the then going production in five days, speaks much of the woman whose intellectual and artistic impersonations of the screen have placed her easily among the foremost of finished photoplay players.

MIRIAM NESBITT

As no uncommon success can be made without an unusual personality, so is explained much of the charm of Miss Nesbitt's characterizations. She tries to keep in the front at the expense of her artistry. She is ever willing to sink her own individualism so that the actuating motives of the character she depicts may live with convincing reality.

A girl of the South, Miss Nesbitt secured a splendid education to build a theatrical success upon. Among the leading actors she has appeared with are Henry E. Dixey and William H. Crane, in such stage productions as "The County Chairman," "The Road to Yesterday," "The Traveling Salesman," and the original London production of "Peter Pan."

It is now five years since motion pictures won over Miss Nesbitt, and Edison can fortunately claim them all. To list her pictures would seem a catalogue of many of Edison's best photoplays.

Lasky Announces 9 Films for Paramount Quarterly

Subjects Will Be Distributed at Rate of Three a Month—"Carmen," Featuring Geraldine Farrar, Is Set for Release in October—"Case of Becky" Is Listed for September

WITH nine new productions as its portion of the new quarterly list of releases through the Paramount Pictures corporation, the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play company announces for the first time that the photoplay version of "Carmen," with Geraldine Farrar as the star, will be shown to the public in October.

The new Lasky releases will be equally distributed through September, October and November, which marks the beginning of the second twelve months of the Paramount program. Three Lasky plays will be released each month. While for the moment chief interest probably devolves around Miss Farrar in "Carmen," the list of stars and productions contains several important names new to the field of the photodrama and some exceptionally interesting titles.

September will be a month of exceptional interest on account of the selection of the stars and plays for that period. The releases will be the Lasky-Belasco productions, Blanche Sweet in "The Case of Becky," Charlotte Walker in "The Revelation," original play by Hector Turnbull, and Lou-Tellegen, noted romantic actor, in "The Explorer," by W. Somerset-Maugham.

Great expectations are centered around "The Case of Becky," with Blanche Sweet. Frank Reicher is the producer. He supervised the making of "Secret Orchard," with Miss Sweet, and in this new Lasky-Belasco production he and Miss Sweet have stopped at nothing to further the ends of the play. As recalled by those who saw Mr. David Belasco's stage version, the leading woman role is a girl with a dual personality. This sort of work is new to Miss Sweet.

October's three releases, of course, are chiefly interesting because the name of Geraldine Farrar appears among them. The "Carmen" production, staged and produced by Cecil B. DeMille, from a scenario by William C. DeMille, is one of the most ambitious things the Lasky company has attempted. In support of the noted prima donna will appear Wallace Reid, Pedro de Cordoba, William Elmer, Jeanne MacPherson and Anita King. The other two plays of the month will consist of Donald Brian, his debut, in "The Voice in the Fog," from the novel by Harold MacGrath, and Laura Hope Crews in "Blackbirds," from the play of the same name in which Miss Crews appeared as a star on Broadway two years ago with great succes.

November promises comedy of exceeding worth in the photoplay versions of James Forbes' great play, "The Chorus Lady," and Victor Moore in "Chimmie Fadden Out West." Blanche Sweet in "The Cheat," also an original photoplay by Hector Turnbull, will be released that month.

No play by a modern author has been so eagerly sought by producers as "The Chorus Lady," in which Rose Stahl several years ago had universal success. When announcement is made of the cast for this production a surprise is promised. "Chimmie Fadden Out West" will be second of the great comedy series based on E. W. Townsend's stories and Mr. Moore will follow the new "Chimmie Fadden" with others. Cecil B. DeMille will direct the productions.

"Bigger and Better" League Is Plan of New Officers

Herrington and His Associates Look Forward to Time, Not Far Distant, When the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association Will, Through Their Efforts, Become One of the Most Powerful Trade Bodies in the Country—First Move in Increasing Membership Is Reduction of Per Capita Tax from Two Dollars to One Dollar a Year

San Francisco, July 26.

PLANS are being made by the newly elected officers for a greater exhibitors' league, and it is the expectation of the workers of the organization that in the future more interest will be taken, all of which will aid in the building up of a more substantial and financial organization.

The convention of San Francisco adopted a number of important resolutions, and made changes in the bylaws. The most important resolution perhaps to the exhibitors as a whole was that regarding censorship, which was as follows:

"Whereas, we as a nation are a free people, a liberty-loving people, believing in free speech, the freedom of the press, and the freedom of the screen. Therefore, be it resolved, that the fifth annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America go on record as being unalterably opposed to legalized prepublicity censorship of motion pictures in any form."

The resolution committee of the convention called the attention of the increasing number of motion picture theatres, and the several attempts of liquor interests to introduce them in saloons and places where liquors are sold. A resolution giving the views of the members present was framed and adopted, in which they urge the cooperation of manufacturers, exchanges and police officers to prevent renting films to the liquor interests.

It is believed the reduction of the per capita tax, which heretofore has been two dollars a year, would mean a greater increase in the number of members, and this was reduced to one dollar per year. A resolution thanking MOTION PICTURE NEWS for the generous publicity given the convention was adopted.

On Friday afternoon, Manager Citron, of the Fox Film Exchange at San Francisco, entertained the exhibitors at an auto party to various places of interest in the local city.

Saturday morning the first subject of quality pictures to be released on the Metro program, "The Second in Command," was given a private showing at the Tivoli theatre, where it was viewed by many of the exhibitors who attended the convention. All who saw this film were very enthusiastic regarding it, and the showing elicited much praise.

The appreciation of officers of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition for the great service given the exposition by Sol. L. Lesser, president and general manager of the All Star Feature Distributors, in the planning and carrying out the excellent program on "Metro Day," will in all probability be shown in the presentation of a beautiful medal to this very successful film distributor.

Unfortunately it was impossible for Mr. Lesser to be present on "Metro Day" owing to having been called east on very important business, and the plans which he had prepared vere very successfully carried out by E. M. Asher, publicity manager of the All Star organization, and Harry Reichenbach, of the Metro corporation.

Pictures of the crowds taken at the Court of the Universe show there were thousands and thousands present, and the count by the officials of the exposition show that that day's receipts were more than twice the average Thursday attendance. The motion pictures made of Art Smith writing "Metro" in the sky over the Tower of Jewels on Thursday evening have been given screen examination, and they show the very successful flying and looping of this aviator. The filming was made under the direction of George Collins, and will in all probability be released on the Metro program as a part of a coming Bushman-Snow subject.

The assembly of motion picture stars at the San Francisco National Exhibitors' League ball was the largest that ever attended a similar function by this organization, and included representatives from many of the leading brands.

Civic Auditorium Decorated

The large hall of the Civic Auditorium at San Francisco, almost two hundred feet square, with overhanging balconies and nothing to interfere with the dancing on the big floor, was very attractively decorated with life-size photographs by Hartsook, the photographer, and draperies of the exposition colors.

Many of the boxes were decorated with photographs and bright colored draperies, while that of the Universal was decidedly attractive, it being the only one where flowers were used. During the evening a motion picture of the grand march and general views of the hall was made by the Universal camera man. The programs for the ball were furnished by the Universal company, and included a Laemmle Hesitation, Power's Fox Trot, Cochran Tango, Kerrigan One-Step, Eddie Lyons Glide, Lee Moran Swing, a Smalley Waltz and many others.

Boxes were built across the entrance side of the big hall, and the front row of these were occupied by the photoplayers and other representations of numerous film companies. Above were boxes for the public. Among the prominent people to be seen in the boxes were:

Officers box: Retired President Marion Pierce and President-Elect Fred Harrington; M. E. Cory, L. W. Brophey, Peter Jeup and J. S. Lustig.

Universal: Hobart Bosworth, Robert Leonard, Ella Hall and mother, Grace Thompson, M. G. Jonas, W. E. Cory, Dan and M. L. Markowitz.

Vitagraph: Myrtle Gonzales, William Duncan, Sam Spedon, C. B. Price, R. B. Quivie and friends.

Lasky: Geraldine Farrar, Jesse L. Lasky, Cecil B. de Mille, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Gest.

Paramount: W. W. Hodkinson, Herman Webber, Carlyle Blackwell, Blanche Sweet, and Kenneth McGaffey and friends.

Keystone: Mack Sennett, Mabel Nor-

USE SLIDES TO BOOST "NO CENSORSHIP" POLITICIANS

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 28.

The motion picture exhibitors of this section are getting busy and are using their screens for political purposes as well as for entertaining. They have awakened to the fact that the men to be supported are the ones who will lend their assistance to the film men.

No one is getting the support of the motion picture exhibitors who are not in favor of the repeal of the state censorship bill and he will have to go on record as being against it before he will be given any support.

A number of the screens are showing pictures of the candidates who the motion picture men feel confident will do their full duty should they be elected.

HERALD FILM TAKES "MELTING POT" RIGHTS FOR NEW YORK CITY

The Herald Film Corporation, which has taken New York City and Long Island in the distribution of the Cort Film Corporation's screen production of "The Melting Pot," has also contracted for the New England rights to the picture, and will begin booking this week. Washington, Oregon and Idaho were sold last week, too.

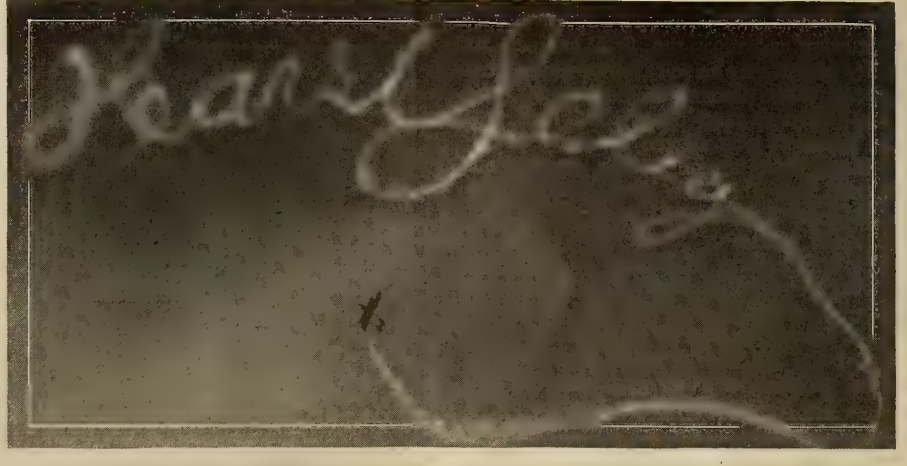
"Sin" Is Scheduled for First Fox One-a-Week

Picture Stars Theda Bara, Whose Ability in "Vampire" Parts Is Well Known, and Will Be Followed by "Wonderful Adventure," Featuring William Farnum

WILLIAM FOX announces that the first release under the new one-a-week policy of his firm will be "Sin," an original photodrama of great power and dramatic intensity, starring Theda Bara, written and produced by Herbert Brenon, director of "Kreutzer Sonata," "The Clemenceau Case," and other successful plays.

The second release will be William Farnum, in "The Wonderful Adventure," a striking drama of dual identity from the pen of Captain Wilbur Lawton, the romantic novelist. "The Wonderful Adventure" is a drama of romance, love and thrills, especially conceived by Captain Lawton for the dramatic genius of Mr. Farnum.

The picture is directed by Frederick Thomson and Dorothy Green is seen in the star's support. Photographically and dramatically "The Wonderful Adventure" bids fair to make a red letter day in the history of the photodrama.



Following "The Wonderful Adventure" will be a screen drama based upon Sardou's "The Sorceress." The title of this is "The Witch," featuring Nance O'Neil, whom David Belasco declared to be the greatest of America's emotional actresses and who has already been seen in the Fox productions of "Princess Romanoff" and "Kreutzer Sonata." Frank Powell, director of "A Fool There Was," is the producer of this latest Nance O'Neil feature, which is a striking one, both dramatically and from a spectacular viewpoint.

The fourth of the new releases is "Regeneration," a photoplay version of Owen Kildare's most widely known work, "My Mamie Rose." Raoul A. Walsh, the producer, has engaged a cast of unusual ability for this production, including Rockcliffe Fellowes, the star of "Under Cover," last season's big Broadway success, and Anna Neilsen, the dainty and charming screen favorite. "Regeneration" possesses unusual interest, as in it are seen scenes depicting the actual life of the Bowery, including the famed Chicory Hall, Chinatown by night and day, and the seething tenements of the East Side.

The releases to come, on which all advertising matter will be ready a month in advance, are equally strong and will include the great Robert B. Mantell series of modern screen plays and the Annette Kellermann photodramas.

REBOOK "FOOL THERE WAS" IN BOSTON

Boston has just turned in a record for "A Fool There Was." Manager Hawes, of the Puritan theatre, showed this film recently for its twenty-second engagement in Boston, and then booked it for a return engagement.

ART SMITH WRITING "HEARST-SELIG" IN THE SKY OVER THE EXPOSITION DURING THE EXHIBITORS' CONVENTION

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 220 West Forty-second Street, New York City

NEWSBOYS TURN CRITICS FOR MONEY PRIZES

ONE of the most successful publicity "stunts" ever put forth in Cincinnati was engineered recently by Lew Foster, manager of the Grand theatre, when he invited three hundred newsboys not only to be his guests, but to become critics of the film "Marrying Money."

The little merchants, each by displaying his badge, were admitted to seats in the gallery. They were told in a previous announcement that they were to write criticisms of the film drama. Many of them were busy with pad and pencil as the plot unfolded.

Three prizes—one of $7.50; one of $5, and one of $2.50—were offered by the management for the best three criticisms which are turned in within a specified time. Howard Saxby, humorist and writer; Ren Mulford, Jr., former sporting editor of note, and Harry Pounsford, prominent merchant, are to act as judges of the contests.

On the Saturday preceding this show and contest, the newsboys were assembled on Fountain square and paraded before the eyes of a camera. This picture was thrown on the screen during the exhibition Monday, to the intense delight of the little screen fans.

DALLAS THEATRE ATTRACTS AUTO PATRONAGE

THE photograph reproduced herewith shows the Washington theatre of Dallas, Texas, one of the finest houses in the southwest. The Washington runs all Fox Film Corporation's releases for seven days and during the time they are being run raises its admission prices to twenty cents.

Leo F. Levison, manager of the Dallas branch, reports that the Theda Bara releases as shown at the Washington have resulted in absolutely record breaking business, with the very highest class of patrons. Note particularly the number of automobiles drawn up in front of the Washington, which terms itself "The Quality House."

SIGN GIVES NAMES OF COMPANIES

THAT the theatre-goers of the Middle West are becoming educated to the value and non-value of this or that service is shown by the advertising capital being made by the names of producers. For instance:

The Farnam Street theatre, one of the leading downtown houses in Omaha, Neb., advertises itself with a big front sign as "The Universal Picture House. This Theatre Shows Only First Run Pictures."

A year ago the majority of patrons would not remember the Universal from the Mutual, much less know anything about what "first run" meant. Now they know. The exhibitors have educated them, and it is up to the producers to live up to the names by which they are known to the public. The length of run of a picture is also going to have its effect in the Middle West as advertising material, as its influence is already beginning to be felt.

RAISE ELECTRIC LIGHTS

THE large electric light globes that were mounted on top of the wall surrounding the Apollo airdome on Grand and Bell avenues, St. Louis, have been raised two feet higher by the use of gooseneck brackets which extend out over the pavement and give a better lighting effect, as well as adding to the beauty and attractiveness of the place.

Manager Fios, of the Apollo, is a wide-awake young man, who is quick to see and put in effect any improvement that will add to the appearance of his garden.

RED-HAIRED GIRLS FOR THE FORD—THEATRE, NOT AUTO

THE Ford is to be the name of a new picture house on Wade Park avenue, near East Seventy-ninth street, Cleveland.

David Schumann, who will open the Denison theatre late in August, is engaging his help and is insisting that all have red hair. Four red-headed girl ushers have been engaged.

A POPULAR CONTEST—MONEY FOR EVERYBODY

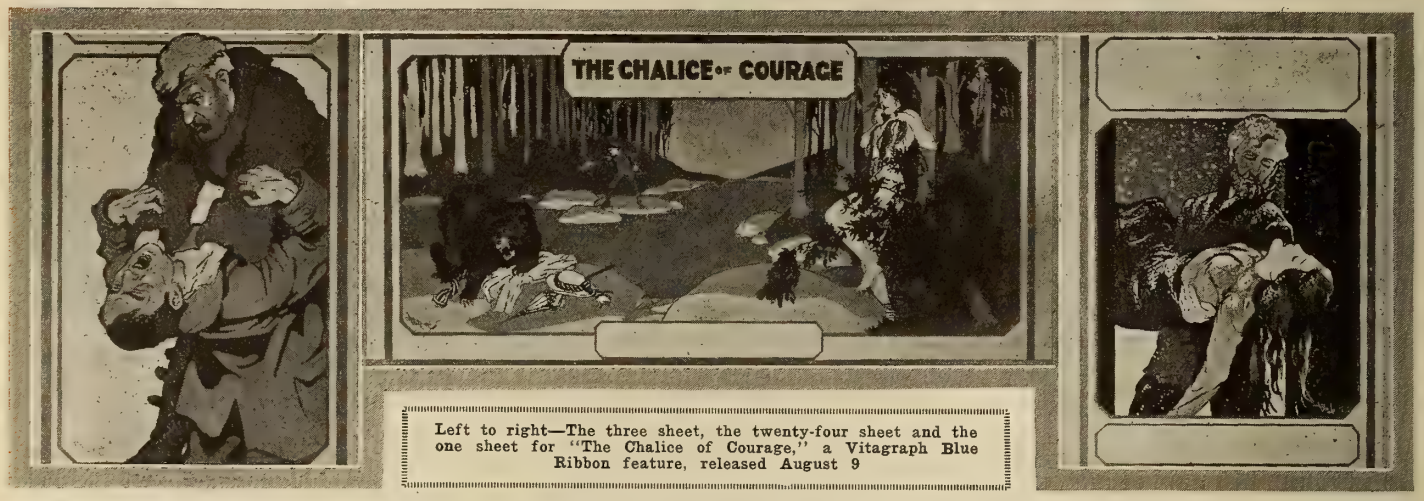
THE Princess and Colonial theatres, Toledo, Ohio, under the same management, are running a five weeks' popular voting contest. There are three grand prizes: first, a 1916 Overland motor car; second, a Ford touring car, and third, $200 in gold.

Eighty-five dollars in cash is being given each week during the contest to the persons turning in the greatest number of votes: $35, $25, $15 and $10 to the next highest. The losers in the contest will get 10 per cent. in cash of their sales, so that everybody in the contest is bound to get something. The contest closes August 14. Votes are given with each purchase of a cash ticket at either of the theatres.

The contest is creating a great deal of interest.

"COME INSIDE, WHERE IT'S COOL," A "LIVE WIRE" INVITATION

"THE thermometer on Main street is now at 96; in our lobby at 75. If you feel uncomfortably cool in here, notify an usher. We want you to be comfortable."



There's a live exhibitor idea culled from a slide shown at intervals in the Broadway theater, Springfield, Mass., and as backing up this standard of comfort first, Goldstein Brothers have recently made additions to their cooling plant.

Ten-foot fans have been installed under the balcony in addition to the batteries of oscillating fans on the side and rear walls. More than 35,000 feet of cooled air per minute is forced into the auditorium, kept in circulation by the fans and finally exhausted by the ventilating system.

ETHEL CLAYTON, LUBIN, WINS PRIZE IN DENVER

The Onyx Club, with headquarters in Denver, Colo., has just finished its second annual photoplay contest, and announces that Ethel Clayton, the Lubin leading lady, wins the prize, with a total vote of 378,235; Mary Fuller being second with 327,645, and Charlie Chaplin third with 325,885.

Among the other Lubin players are Romaine Fielding, 255,605 votes; Arthur Johnson, 155,490, and Crane Wilbur, 131,805. Last year the contest was won by Muriel Ostriche, with Ethel Clayton second. Miss Clayton led in the present contest on the first day of every one of the nine months of its duration.

JUDGE TUGWELL IS MADE CENSOR IN LOS ANGELES

Judge A. P. Tugwell, president of the California State League, and president of the Los Angeles Municipal Board of Censorship, has been appointed a member of the National Board of Censors, and will view films for that organization for companies releasing out of Los Angeles.

Lillian Lorraine, Pathé-Balboa, Was Broadway Star

Actress in "Neal of the Navy" Began, Like So Many Favorites, in the Good Old Standby, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," Almost Indispensable in "Legit" Training

LILLIAN LORRAINE, who is to star in the forthcoming latest Pathé-Balboa serial, "Neal of the Navy," was born in San Francisco in 1892. Like a number of others of the popular stage favorites of the day, she made her debut before the footlights at a very early age, playing Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" when she was only four years old. Subsequently she took a child's part with a stock company at the old Central theatre while attending the public schools.

At the age of fourteen she left San Francisco for New York, just three months before the big earthquake. She obtained a small part in a musical comedy under Richard Golden almost immediately on her arrival. Next engagement was with Eddie Foy in "The Orchid," half time in chorus and half doing a small part. Because of her striking personality Mr. Foy soon took her out of the chorus and gave her a song.

The impression she made resulted in her being given an engagement in "The Great White Way," with Blanche Ring and Jeff De Angeles. Her first real chance came when she was engaged by Florence Ziegfeld to appear in support of Anna Held in "Miss Innocence." The next year saw a further advance in that she was featured in the "1909 Follies" with Nora Bayes and Jack Norworth. She remained with the "Follies" for the next three years, being starred in the "Follies of 1912" when Nora Bayes dropped out.

LILLIAN LORRAINE

She became the sensation and favorite of Broadway in a remarkably short time. She broke into vaudeville with a six months' engagement over the U. B. O. eastern time as a headline feature in a single singing act with original songs. In 1914 she was featured in the big "Whirl of the World" cast, an all season New York success.

She was filling another U. B. O. vaudevilleville engagement when approached by H. M. Horkheimer, of Balboa, who induced her to appear in pictures for the first time in "Neal of the Navy," which he was about to put on for Pathé. Previously she had turned down many flattering offers from film manufacturers.

Artist Popini Designs One, Three, Six and Twenty-four Sheets for "Chalice of Courage" with Fanciful Conception of the Star in Fetching Pose

A LINE of posters that reflects credit on the industry will make its appearance with the release on August 9 of the V-L-S-E feature, "The Chalice of Courage." This paper consists of a one, a three, a six and a twenty-four sheet stand from paintings by the celebrated artist, Popini, who designed "The Island of Regeneration" posters.

All this paper has a distinct note of refinement. The figures are all idealized impressions of the artist, gained by viewing the film, and are done in warm, pastel shades that are conspicuous yet soft.

The twenty-four sheet poster is an exceptionally fine piece of artistic lithograph work. It portrays Artist Popini's idea of how Miss Gonzales appeared when surprised by a bear while in bathing. This poster furnishes another excellent example of how this distinguished poster artist can introduce the nude figure into his drawings without giving offense.

The six sheet is almost a two-tone creation. It illustrates a snow scene, and is executed entirely in wonderful shades of blue contrasted with white. The master artistic touch is shown in this poster by a single brilliant red blood spot on the snow. This one touch illuminates the whole poster and will make it stand out no matter in how inconspicuous a manner it may be posted.

Paper of this kind is expensive, but the dignity and strength of "The Chalice of Courage" is worthy of high grade paper, and the money and care expended in its preparation will most surely repay the V-L-S-E and Vitagraph Company who make the Blue Ribbon Features.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

V-L-S-E ADVANCES GOFF, ABEL, SHRADER, HUTTON, HARRIS, HATCH, QUIVE, NAUGLE AND NORTH

THE V-L-S-E in accordance with its policy of recognizing and rewarding integrity and merit, as recently announced by General Manager Walter W. Irwin, makes known the promotion of several members of the Big Four sales force.

The unprecedented success of the V-L-S-E program, and the Big Four policies, has resulted in the promotion of Branch Manager A. W. Goff, while many members of the sales force have been elevated to managerial positions.

A. W. Goff, manager of the Cleveland branch, is named as the first Big Four division manager. He assumed charge of the western division, embracing Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles, on July 24 and will make his headquarters at the San Francisco office.

Mr. Goff, by untiring effort, has made enviable record in the Cleveland territory. He has been unusually successful in promoting the co-operative ideas of the V-L-S-E. The weekly reports from the section under Mr. Goff's supervision, show that V-L-S-E business has grown there by leaps and bounds.

Sydney E. Abel, a salesman in the Ohio territory, becomes manager of the Cleveland office, succeeding Mr. Goff.

R. S. Shrader, formerly a salesman in the Ohio territory, is placed in charge of the Cleveland sub-office at Cincinnati.

R. R. Hutton, another of the Ohio salesmen, becomes manager of the Cleveland sub-office at Detroit.

Frank Harris and S. W. Hatch, formerly salesmen in the Kansas City territory, are now managers of the Kansas City sub-offices at Denver and St. Louis, respectively.

Assistant Manager R. B. Quive becomes manager of the San Francisco office.

H. D. Naugle, salesman in San Francisco territory, is made Los Angeles manager.

Tom North, salesman in San Francisco territory, has been made Seattle manager.

These comprise the list of promotions each of which are the result of integrity and merit, displayed by those affected and based on the successful accomplishments of each individual.

It has been proclaimed as a policy of the Big Four, to fill positions, as they develop, from the ranks. Promotions will be made without fear, favor or politics among those whose records warrant advancement.

By a system of education, by personal visits, sales letters and articles in "The Big Four Family," the V-L-S-E house organ, it is possible for every man who will study to fit himself for the better positions that the rapid growth of this organization is constantly creating.

The company endeavors to employ only the best men, all working for the common good, to the end that the success of the company shall be their success, and that they and the exhibitors shall share in the benefits.

The results of these policies have been most gratifying. The success of the V-L-S-E program is remarkable in the annals of the film industry.

By accepting the suggestions and advice offered by Big Four representatives, exhibitors all over the country are securing higher admission prices for their picture exhibitions. A percentage of this increased revenue, naturally comes to the manufacturers, and they, in turn, are enabled to make features of greater superiority.

HODKINSON WILL BECOME ASSISTANT TO HIS FATHER IN PARAMOUNT

KENNETH HODKINSON, who has been with the Progressive Film Exchange in San Francisco for the past year, has gone to New York, where he will become assistant to his father, V. W. Hodkinson, of Paramount Pictures Corporation.

Mike Rosenberg, formerly with the Golden Gate Film Exchange in Los Angeles, who for the past year has had the state rights for "The Christian" and "The Spoilers" in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana, has disposed of the rights and returned to San Francisco, where he will have charge of the one "Birth of a Nation" company for the new corporation being formed by Lee A. Lesser, of the All Star Feature distributors, and George Davis, of the Alcazar theatre, San Francisco, which has taken over the rights of all but five states west of the Mississippi.

EMPLOYE OF METROPOLITAN PICTURES CORP. PITTSBURGH DROWNED

ROBERT WHITEHALL, aged 19, employed at the Metropolitan offices in Pittsburgh as assistant shipping clerk, is drowned in the Allegheny river last Saturday.

Whitehall, in company with Robert Hoffman, left the offices of the company shortly after noon last Saturday to spend the remainder of the day on the Allegheny river. Both boys were riding in a canoe, and when near the Sixteenth street Ferry bridge, Whitehall leaned over the side of the craft as it neared a whirlpool and the canoe turned over.

DRASTIC FINES MAY AROUSE PITTSBURGHERS TO ACTION AGAINST LAW

THERE was some jolt given the Pittsburgh exchanges by the film censors of Pennsylvania and it might have the effect of arousing from their long sleep all of the men in the film business there. For many months they have been absolutely against the censorship law. Now they have had a chance to find out just what they are up against, and it might be the means of making them join hands and fight against all of the politicians who do not pledge themselves to fight for the movies and not against them.

The censors were in Pittsburgh this week, and when they got through with their work many of the exchanges found themselves fined to the limit for showing films that had not been sent to that august body for a showing before they were put in the theatres.

Few if any of the exchanges escaped paying a fine and it is said that some of the exchanges have been assessed fines that would make it cheaper for them to go out of business than pay. The censors have bumped them good and hard and it has hurt, and now they see where they were wrong in not using their screens to assist the candidates favorable to the motion picture business, in winning out at the last election.

Some of the films censoreed by the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors have been hacked to pieces in such a way as to take all of the good out of the story, and in many instances they have ordered out of the reels parts that there could be no possible harm in showing.

Some of the exchanges have been running their pictures before they have had them O K.'d, and now they must pay heavily for their defiance of the law. They are all of the opinion that the best way to kill a bad law is to enforce it, and now they are up in arms and will be awake at the next election.

KNOTTY PROBLEM FOR V-L-S-E DECISION

R. R. SHRADER, V-L-S-E representative, wiring from his home in Indianapolis to Branch Manager A. W. Goff, said: "It's a boy. Wire me advice."

Mr. Goff's immediate reply was: "Congratulations this time. Be careful next time of repeaters."

The Big Four is puzzled as to what action to take in this matter, as the main policy of the company, which advocates repeat bookings, has been violated by one of their trusted branch managers.

H. M. WARNER IS IN FAVOR OF INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES

CONVINCED that individual exchanges allowed to operate without being dictated to by a governing body, are in a better position to flourish than offices established throughout the country under managers selected by a parent organization, H. M. Warner, secretary and treasurer of the Standard Photoplay Distributors, Inc., returned to New York with contracts to supply the Standard program to independent exchanges in every territory visited during his two weeks' absence from New York.

"What appeals most strongly to the many film men with whom I discussed the program," said Mr. Warner while commenting upon his trip, "is the fact that the man handling Standard pictures in every territory must necessarily be a responsible exchange man with his own capital invested in his own enterprise.

"This makes it incumbent upon him to deal with his patrons so as to give his business permanence by representing his goods exactly as they are and charging for them in accordance with their true value.

Under these conditions he must demand productions that meet with the approval of the theatre owners, and he must charge for them according to their worth and without being controlled by prices fixed at some point where conditions are entirely different from those in his own territory.

"This compels him to exercise his best judgment in determining the needs of the theatres and causes him to use his best efforts to select the subjects that will help him to maintain a well-balanced, high-class service."

ST. LOUIS IS CENTER OF FILM CHANGES

W. R. SCATES has been in St. Louis looking after the World Film Corporation's office. Mr. Scates is district manager for the corporation and makes periodical visits to the different exchanges in his district.

T. W. Chatburn, Jr., who has been employed in the Pathé exchange in St. Louis, has severed his connection with Pathé's to take charge of the World Film exchange in Memphis, Tenn.

Henry Slocum, assistant manager of the General Film exchange at 3610 Olive street, St. Louis, recently resigned his position with the intention of taking a long vacation, but the latest report is that Mr. Slocum is now with the Universal exchange, at 2116 Locust street.

R. L. White, who has had charge of the World Film exchange at 3626 Olive street, St. Louis, for some time, has been transferred to the head of the Minneapolis branch of the corporation. E. W. Dustin has been appointed successor to Mr. White in the St. Louis office.

LAEMMLE FEATURES BOOKED 60 DAYS AHEAD

THE Broadway Star specials, handled by the Laemmle Film Service Company at Omaha, are booked solid for sixty days ahead. "That," as Manager Van Husan says, "is prosperity."

METRO PICTURES HAS AUTO BUS FOR NEW JERSEY DELIVERIES

EVIDENTLY summer residents along the New Jersey coast cannot get along without Metro pictures, if the success of the New Jersey Metro Film Service in placing Metro pictures in every town along the shore is any criterion.

In order to expedite the labor of calling upon exhibitors, the exchange has installed an automobile service for its salesmen. In a recent tour of the shore, this exchange was successful in signing contracts in every town from Atlantic Highlands to Point Pleasant.

In the northern part of New Jersey Metro has at the present time nearly one hundred customers, all well satisfied with Metro service. The towns and cities embrace the largest exhibitors. Among the theatres of northern New Jersey using Metro pictures are: Monticello and Apollo, Jersey City; Arcade, Princeton; Colonial and Spring, West Hoboken; Lyric and Colonial, Orange; Halsted, East Orange; Empire, New Brunswick; Bergen, Goodwin, Loew's and Roseville, Newark; Ampere, Ampere; Playhouse, Passaic; Montclair, Montclair; Lincoln, Bloomfield; Palace, Morristown; Englewood, Englewood; Bijou, Hackensack; Surf, Keyport; Regent, Paterson; Trent, Trenton; Pastime, Union Hill; Strand, Lambertsville; Proctor's and Plainfield Arcadome, Plainfield; Fulton, Union Hill.

EHRGOTT TOURS MAINE, PLEASED WITH GENERAL OUTLOOK

A. L. EHRGOTT, manager of the Bangor (Me.) office of the General Film Company, has been in Boston for the past few days, in conference with the Boston office of the company.

Mr. Ehrgott says that business in Maine in the motion picture theatres is keeping up in good shape. He planned while in Boston to make arrangements for bringing to Maine some of the big features which have been so successfully shown by the General Film Company in the larger cities.

There is a good demand for features, but hitherto the exhibitors have been prevented from taking them on, except in the larger cities, because of the prohibitive price.

Mr. Ehrgott has recently been in touch with the Maine Anti-tuberculosis Association, through the suggestion of Rev. A. J. Torsleff, secretary of the state of Maine Anti-tuberculosis Association, with the view of furnishing films for a big benefit for the work against tuberculosis in Dexter. The association is desirous of getting "The Temple of Molloch" and "The Price of Human Lives" as well as a new feature recently released by the General Film Company, which is along similar lines.

The first two pictures were shown with a great deal of success in a campaign of the same sort in Aroostock county, and the office of the company in Bangor received many commendatory letters from prominent citizens in that part of the state after the exhibition.

C. J. Rush, of Millinocket, was a visitor at the General Film Company's office in Bangor this week, and made arrangements for increasing his service.

NUMEROUS CHANGES IN KANSAS CITY EXCHANGES

DURING the past week many changes have been made in the management of exchanges in Kansas City.

M. E. "Marty" Williams, who has had charge of the Mutual Kansas City office for some time, has accepted the management of the Metro Pictures Service Kansas City office. He takes the place of C. F. Miller, who has returned to the Pittsburgh office of the same company.

Charles Werner, one of the oldest film men in this section, has resigned from the Picture Playhouse Film Company, and will go to the Metro Pictures Service as St. Louis manager. Mr. Werner's successor has not been appointed.

F. L. Kiltz, who has been the United manager there for some time, has taken the position as manager of the Mutual Film Corporation, which position was formerly occupied by M. E. "Marty" Williams. No one has as yet appeared to take the place vacated by the resignation of Kiltz.

George A. Magie, Universal field manager, spent three or four days in Kansas City recently. He was there to confer with Manager Ross C. Cropper on the Kansas censorship question.

SCHAEFER CONFERS WITH BAMBERGER

GEORGE W. SCHAEFER, eastern division manager for the World Film Corporation, spent four days at the Washington branch of that company last week, in conference with the manager, L. J. Bamberger. Mr. Schaefer went there from Boston and stopped in Philadelphia on his way back to the executive offices.

Mr. Schaefer was very enthusiastic about the big things under way, and commented especially on the "News Weekly" which will be inaugurated the first part of August, and which, in Washington, will be known as "The Washington Times World Weekly." He seemed pleased with the conditions at the local exchange, considering the extreme hot months, and is looking forward to an immense increase in business in the early fall.

MOYLE IS PATHE CASHIER IN DENVER

GILBERT MOYLE, of New York, who has been with Pathé since the days of the old Electric company, has been added to the Denver Pathé exchange as cashier

WORLD FILM IN CINCINNATI IS WELL EQUIPPED

THE new quarters of the World Film Corporation in Cincinnati which are considered among the most beautiful as well as the best equipped offices in that section of the country, speak well for the rapid growth of the business and the efforts of Manager Clay H. Brehm and his staff of assistants.

The offices take up two entire floors of the Savoy building, 17 East Sixth St., and number ten rooms, all tastefully decorated and supplied with the finest equipment. On the first floor are located the executive offices and reception room. This is comfortably furnished for the convenience of visiting exhibitors.

Poster racks of the swinging type display the paper on the various productions and can be examined with ease by the mere swinging of the racks. The huge library table is filled with the latest trade literature with plenty of comfortable chairs awaiting the visitor.

The system established in the new quarters provides separate offices for each department and matters pertaining to each are taken up with the respective heads without necessitating an interview with every member of the force.

Assisting Mr. Brehm are George W. Hinton formerly of the Americas Feature Film Company of Chicago, who is a recent addition to the force. Mr. Hinton has had a wide experience in the field, having handled film for years as well as managing several theatres, R. S. Moran who has been road man for World Film since the opening of its first Cincinnati office, is still in charge of the force on the firing line and together with Harry Young and H. P. Rhinock will take care of the out-of town business. Tom Neer will retain charge of the shipping department.

PITTSBURGH MAY ENTER AUTO RACE

SEVERAL of the managers of film exchanges in Pittsburgh have bought new automobiles and as a result some interesting talk is heard about the town. Each man states his machine is the best, and the horsepower, some of them say, to be found under the hoods, would astonish even the makers of the cars.

One thing after another has been said in boosting the various cars so that it is possible a race between all of them will be arranged at Schenley Oval and the Bob Burnhams and Barney Oldfields in film circles here will be brought to light. If it is possible to arrange the race, the speed demons will be able to see just how their cars performed.

GEO. H. ATWOOD, PATHE EXCHANGE MANAGER, IS FILM PIONEER

ONE of the pioneers of the film game, and one of its best versed members is George H. Atwood, manager of the Philadelphia branch of Pathé Exchange, Inc. Mr. Atwood has been in filmdom ever since 1897, and was in the employ of several of the other large companies before he allied with Pathé.

Born in Pittsfield, Me., in 1873, Mr. Atwood at an early age became connected with repertoire companies touring New England, playing character and old man parts. The year 1897 saw his start with the motion picture, using films as fillers in a vaudeville house in Salem, Mass. He tells of the crudeness of the projection machines and films at that time, and of the great improvement he has seen in each.

Some years later he was chief operator of a motion picture theatre in Boston, after which he became associated with George Kleine, being connected with the Boston exchange.

He remained with the Kleine Optical Company until the General Film Company was incorporated. In the latter organization he managed the offices at Boston, Albany, Phoenix, Arizona; Oklahoma City and Dallas. In 1914 he severed his connection with the General Film, and became manager of the Pathé Philadelphia office, which place he now holds.

ACTIVITY IN DALLAS FILM CIRCLES

HARRY BOTTO, booking clerk for the World exchange at Dallas, is now with the Mutual, and C. E. Buchanan, formerly with the Progressive, is handling the booking at the World.

Joe Gilligan, formerly a traveler for the United and Fox exchanges in Dallas, has assumed the management of the Progressive Feature Film Company at Dallas.

Albert Russell, general manager of the Texas Metro office, sojourned in Atlantic City with the stockholders of the Metro recently.

W. E. Atkinson, special representative of the Metro, from New York, visited the Dallas office of that concern recently, and left for Chattanooga, Tenn.

F. G. Wallace, representative of the Williamson Submarine Pictures in the Consolidated Film & Supply Company, offices at Dallas, has returned to New York.

E. Auger, southern district manager of the World Film Corporation, visited Dallas last week.

BYRD MADE DALLAS MANAGER FOR WORLD

W. M. BYRD, traveling representative of the World Film Corporation at Dallas, has been installed as manager of that office by the southern district manager, E. Auger.

F. M. Sanford, former manager, is in California on a vacation, and it is said upon his return he will be appointed manager of another World office.

Mr. Byrd is very popular in the southwestern territory among the exhibitors and his competitors. He has received prizes from Lewis J. Selznick, general manager of the World Film, for turning in more business than any other road man in his territory.

GOLDSTONE SHOWS PUBLIC SPIRIT

P. H. GOLDSTONE, manager of the Omaha branch of the World Film corporation, has blossomed out as a public spirited business man. He is furnishing features free to the congregation of the St. Mary's Congregational church, Omaha, to be shown at the church and the proceeds given to charity.

CHARNAS SIGNS WITH STANDARD PROGRAM FOR CINCINNATI, CLEVELAND AND DETROIT

ALTHOUGH he has not yet celebrated his thirtieth birthday, Harry Charnas, of Cleveland, or Harry Charnas, of Pittsburgh, or Harry Charnas, of Detroit—for in motion picture circles he is equally known in all three sections of the country, is the proprietor of two flourishing exchanges, and is arranging for the opening of a third at present writing, as the result of his visit to New York for the signing of a contract with the Standard Photoplay Distributors, Inc.

This gives him control of the Standard program for the territories covered by his three exchanges: The Standard Film Service Company, 218 Columbia building, Cleveland, Ohio; the Standard Film Service Company, Griswold and State streets, Detroit, Mich., and the new office which he is opening in Cincinnati.

Harry Charnas first attracted notice with the Duquesne Amusement Supply Company, of Pittsburgh, and little surprise was accorded to his large circle of friends when he proved himself to be the most successful manager of all of the Warner's Features exchanges when that organization was at its height. It was then that Cleveland and Detroit made his acquaintance and received much of their education in features through his efforts.

200 FEET OF NEWS FILM IS OUTPUT OF PATHE IN COLORADO

THE Pathé exchange in Denver, which recently added the news film to its service in that territory, is now making two hundred feet a week of news films covering Colorado events.

Selig Guests, Happy and Content, Back from Trip

Colonel's Hospitality Impresses Travelers on the Flier, Who in Throes of Enjoyment Petition for Another Sight-Seeing Tour of the Country

THE Selig Special arrived in Chicago Sunday morning, July 25, completing its several thousand mile tour. The success of the trip, insofar as the enjoyment of the Selig tourists is concerned, is attested by the fact that one and all petitioned for another tour next year.

In Kansas City the tourists were guests of the local Chamber of Commerce, and were shown the sights of the city. While en route to St. Louis, Manager Hoagland telegraphed ahead to the Hotel Jefferson and made arrangements for a dinner and dance for 106 people. This affair, which was not on the schedule, was in the nature of a farewell festivity, and proved one of the most enjoyable events in a very happy and remarkable trip.

The final scenes of "The Seven Suffering Sisters" were filmed upon the arrival of the special in Chicago. Director Coleman says it is going to be a corking picture. If so, it should go big, for certainly no three-part feature ever enjoyed so much publicity in so many newspapers. It is safe to say that the great majority of the people in every town and city covered by the special, and in most adjoining places, know all about it and will await its appearance. Much interest was taken in the trip by people everywhere. At Calento, Nev., ranchers and cowpunchers drove in from points 60 miles away. They had been waiting for the "movie" people, they said, since May.

From an advertising standpoint the trip was decidedly a success. All the same, says Manager Hoagland, he doesn't want a repeat.

SURPRISES AND PLEASURES SWING IN KEN OF SELIG GUESTS, WRITES "NEWS" CORRESPONDENT, EN TOUR

(On board the Selig Movie Flyer.)

This has been a glorious trip, with everything our own way. There were delays, and the train was even late at times, but what of that when they were our own delays for our own pleasures?

The personnel is the most congenial one could wish—husbands and wives, sweethearts, sisters and brothers, friends, young folks, bachelors and bachelor maids, and youngsters—all one big family. Headed by H. C. Hoagland, general manager of the Selig Polyscope Company, with Mrs. Hoagland and their children, the company felt at once in the best of hands. The Selig household was well represented, including the genial John Selig and E. A. McManus, general manager of the Hearst-Selig company. There were also several photoplaywrights, a number of exhibitors, a company of Selig players to enact "The Seven Suffering Sisters"; C. A. Frambers, scenario writer of the Selig company, and Director W. R. Coleman, also of Selig.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS was represented by its own editor from New York, and the writer, its correspondent from Washington, D. C., who also represented the "Washington Times," to which frequent letters are being sent.

Entertainment by the citizen and commercial clubs of various towns added to the pleasures, and there the women also did their shares, especially at Santa Cruz, when they stripped their own flavor gardens and brought these blossoms in large baskets to the station to give them to the Selig party. And oh, such wonderful flowers!

The auto drive through Ogden Canyon, and the luscious cherries, the large apricots and lemons at Son José, the city bands and the cheers from children and passing trains will never be forgotten.

At Cheyenne an odd incident brought Mr. Johnston and Harry Reichenbach face to face on the railroad tracks. It was a mutual surprise. Both were traveling to San Francisco over different lines.

Continued pleasures and surprises await us as the trip advances.

WHAT WAS SERVED TO DRINK—GRAPE JUICE?

Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Bryan visited Universal City last week, where they were the personal guests of President Laemmle. As the party of the ex-Secretary of State arrived at Universal City from Hermosa Beach they were met by President Laemmle, Director-General Henry McRae, Manager H. P. Caulfield and other Universal officials.

Nearly a hundred cowboys and cavalrymen were lined up on each side of the boulevard and fired a welcoming salute as Mr. Bryan drove up.

Having been apprised of the coming of Mr. Bryan, the various directors had arranged a program of events calculated to give the ex-Secretary of State a comprehensive idea of the growth of the industry. Several scenes were staged for their benefit on the big open-air stage, among them being an interior of Al E. Christie's four-reel comedy feature "Mrs. Plum's Pudding," with Marie Tempest in the stellar role.

New Famous Players List Outshines Its Old Subjects

Mary Pickford Will Surpass Herself in "Madam Butterfly," Based on Well-Known Opera, and Marguerite Clark Is Expected to Win Larger Following in "Molly-Make-Believe"

IN accordance with its established policy of making each quarterly constellation of stars and plays on the Paramount program greater in merit and attractive power than the last, the Famous Players Film Company has lavishly selected as vehicles for its favorite group of stars during September, October and November, a surprising number of celebrated dramatic successes.

Mary Pickford, the supreme favorite of the screen, will appear in an elaborate photo-production of John Luther Long's world-famous opera and play, "Madame Butterfly," to be released in November, and in two typical characterizations, "The Foundling" and "Twisted Paths."

Marguerite Clark, whose association with the screen under the management of the Famous Players has been an uninterrupted series of brilliant triumphs, will be presented in "Molly-Make-Believe," the quaint and captivating romance by Eleanor Hallowell Abbott, and in a pretentious photo-adaptation of Mark Twain's great masterpiece, "The Prince and the Pauper," the first work of this great American humorist to be filmed.

Pauline Frederick, whose great personal triumph in her initial screen characterization, "The Eternal City," induced the Famous Players to obtain exclusive control of her film services, and who on August 5 returns to the screen in the emotional drama, "Sold," will be presented in October in a film version of the international dramatic sensation, "Zaza." "The Fatal Card," the great American stage success, will be released in September, jointly starring Hazel Dawn and John Mason, the first time in the entire history of features that two stars of such individual importance were thus presented in one subject.

Hazel Dawn will again appear in November in the romantic classic, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

In October Sam Bernard will make his debut to the motion picture public in the much-discussed comedy-feature, "Poor Schmaltz," a characteristic Bernard vehicle. It is expected that Sam Bernard will in this subject introduce a new type of screen comedy.

John Barrymore is represented on the program by "The Incorrigible Dukane," George L. Shedd's melodramatic farce, to be released in September, and "The Three Elks," a play that should equal this comedian's success in "Are You a Mason?" scheduled for November.

Besides Sam Bernard, the Famous Players introduce two other new stars to Paramount audiences in its autumn program, in the persons of Charles Cherry and Gail Kane, who will be jointly presented in the great dramatic triumph, "The Mummy and the Humming-Bird."

Marie Doro, who created a national sensation in her first film appearance in "The Morals of Marcus," and whose re-engagement before the camera has been requested by exhibitors throughout the entire country, will appear in September in a thrilling spectacular romance, "The White Pearl," in which mystery, love and adventure are dramatically interwoven.

EDNA MAYO'S ACTING IN "BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE" EXCITES PRAISE

Edna Mayo, Essanay's leading woman, has received a score of personal letters, warmly praising her work in "The Blindness of Virtue."

"It is particularly pleasing to me to have my own friends enthusiastic about my work," said Miss Mayo.

Dozens of other letters have been received by Essanay remarking on Miss Mayo's admirable interpretation of the character of Effie, the innocent curate's daughter. She carries out the part with a childlike enthusiasm and interest that cannot but appeal to all.

Paramount Head Predicts Popularity for Its Releases

W. W. Hodkinson, Returned from a Tour of the Western States, Sees in the Subjects of Its Producing Companies for This Quarter, Pictures Possessing Appeal to All Audiences—President of the Company Deplores Overproduction, Sure to Result in Rapid Process of Elimination

AFTER a four weeks' trip to the Pacific coast on which, though it was meant to be a vacation, he visited several of the company's exchanges situated en route, W. W. Hodkinson, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, returned to his desk on Monday morning, July 26.

Though he made San Francisco his headquarters during his stay in the west, he managed to cover a good deal of territory in the comparatively short time he was away from New York.

He was a visitor at both fairs and addressed the business session of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League Convention at San Francisco on Wednesday, July 14. When seen he said:

"My trip has brought home to me more forcefully than ever the fact that there is at the present time an overproduction of motion picture films and an oversupply of motion picture theatres. There will have to be a narrowing down process, an elimination process, and we are about to see the beginning of the last struggle for the survival of the fittest in the motion picture industry.

"The amount of capital necessary to engage in the business in any branch insures an early termination of the present condition of excessive and destructive competition. The prizes of the future are bound to go to those who best realize what the future has in store and who best plan what steps are necessary for their welfare.

Necessity of An Ideal

"Today the motion picture business is one of the greatest industries the world has ever seen and is rapidly enlisting the largest capital and best brains of our land. Those who are in it must advance with it or drop out. The man who has seen fit to conduct his company or his theatre in a haphazard manner is bound to fall before those business men who work along different lines.

"No great thing has ever been accomplished without an ideal, without a plan. Neither the manufacturer, the distributor, nor the exhibitor can continue in the future without a definite plan, and the ideal way to advance the best interests of the business as a whole would be for the different elements to combine as a team and to work accordingly.

"They should co-operate. The plans of the Paramount Pictures Corporation provide for team work. Never before in the history of the company have the manufacturers, the distributors and the exhibitors been more closely together.

"Paramount has made it possible for the Famous Players Film Company, the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company to expend large sums on their productions with the assurance that they cannot but profit. In other words, it has made it possible for them to produce films such as have never before been seen on the Paramount or any other program.

"To me talk of seriously attempting to produce and exhibit two-dollar motion pictures is ridiculous. Paramount Pictures in the not too distant future will be the best pictures in the world exhibited at any price, and they will be presented throughout the country for fifty cents. It will be impossible for anybody to release pictures that are any better. Those made by our producers and released by Paramount to the biggest and best theatres throughout the country during the months of September, October and November constitute the greatest aggregation of talent ever released either singly or on a program. During those three months Mary Pickford appears three times, Marguerite Clark twice, Hazel Dawn twice, John Barrymore twice, Pauline Frederick, Marie Doro, Laura Hope Crews, Elsie Janis, Charles Cherry, Victor Moore and Charlotte Walker, each is seen again on the screen in famous plays originally staged by such theatrical managers as David Belasco, Charles and Daniel Frohman, and Lou Tellegen, Donald Brian and Sam Bernard play for the first time before the camera.

What a Year Brings Forth

"I think that it is only natural that I should point with pride to such a list of plays and stars.

"Little more than one year ago the Paramount Pictures Corporation announced a quality feature program. Old-timers in the business laughed. They gave us so long to live. Our reply is that we are very much alive and that developments during the next quarter year, half year, year and five years will prove it more conclusively than ever.

"Team work is necessary with regard to censorship. We recognize in censorship one of the big problems that faces the industry, but unfortunately merely going on record as denouncing it and being opposed to it does not solve the problem. I have tried to look into the censorship question from all angles, and I believe that we should have free speech and a right to express ourselves as we see fit in the greatest of all means of expression, the motion picture.

"None of us know to what extent the business may advance in the future. Who could have imagined five years ago that at an exhibitors' convention, such as I attended in San Francisco, we would have present the greatest and most popular operatic star in the world—Geraldine Farrar?

Business Deserves Best

"The success of such theatres as the Strand in New York, the Stanley in Philadelphia, the Imperial in San Francisco and Orchestra Hall in Chicago, as well as many others throughout the country, shows that the motion picture business is fast reaching a systematic state. It is a business that deserves the best we have in us. It is a business that has never had a history, but is now getting one.

"It is a business in which the efforts of the Paramount Pictures Corporation and its allies will be always towards advancement. In it, gathering statistics and data as to what has been done in the past and what is being done now, will guide us as to what we may do in the future.

MABEL VAN BUREN IS WITH BALBOA

Mabel Van Buren, motion picture actress, best known for her work in a Lasky-Belasco production, "The Woman," has been signed by the Balboa company, where she will play leads.

All members of the staff of the United States cruiser "Maryland," from Commander Kittle to the humblest of the seven hundred aboard, aided the Balboa company the past week in making scenes for the Balboa-Pathé series, "Neal of the Navy," which features Lillian Lorraine and William Courtleigh, Jr.

The "Maryland" was in California waters for more than a week, and practically every day the photoplayers worked on the deck of this mammoth ship. The officers gave the producers every aid possible to further the exploitation of the navy and bring it to the favorable attention of the country's population.

DORIS WOOLDRIDGE, INGENUE, SIGNS WITH FOX

The latest recruit from the ranks of the legitimate stage to join the forces of the William Fox photoplayers, is Doris Wooldridge, who plays the part of the daughter of the Governor of Iceland in support of William Farnum in "The Bondman," a forthcoming Fox release.

Miss Wooldridge was born in California and has earned the distinction of being the youngest emotional actress on the American stage, as she is but little over twenty years of age.

Miss Wooldridge originally studied singing in Vienna, as it was her ambition to cultivate a markedly good contralto voice. While singing in Paris she attracted the attention of Sarah Bernhardt, who persuaded her to leave the concert stage for the drama.

After a season with Bernhardt, the actress returned to America and appeared in stock companies as leading woman in San Francisco, Portland, Halifax, N. S., Washington, D. C., New Orleans, Chicago, Cincinnati, Albany and Philadelphia.

Considering her youthful years, her personality is known to as many thousands of theatregoers throughout the country as of almost any other actress. Miss Wooldridge has also appeared in support of William Lackaye, Margaret Angling, Maud Adams and James K. Hackett.

David Horsley Leaves for His Los Angeles Studios

Arrival of Centaur President Will Be Signal for Production of First One Reel Comedy for Mutual Program, to Be Released About the Middle of August

ALL details of the arrangement bringing him into the Mutual having been completed, David Horsley left New York on Wednesday for his studio in Los Angeles. Immediately upon his arrival there he will begin work on his first one-reel comedy for the Mutual to be released about the middle of August, and on the first two-reel animal picture which will follow about two weeks later. Mr. Horsley will personally supervise the production of these releases.

Before departing for the west, Mr. Horsley said:

"With the beginning of my releases on the Mutual I will have severed entirely my connection with any releases of MinA Films, the brand of one-reel comedies which I distributed through the General. My last release of a MinA comedy will be August 12, at the latest, and if the brand is continued on the Generaleral Film program after that I will have nothing to do with it whatsoever.

"My contract with the Mutual calls for the release of my entire output through that source. This will include a one-reel comedy picture and a two-reel animal subject every week, and a four-reel Mutual Masterpicture every five weeks.

"I have decided to make the comedies and animal productions in Los Angeles, where I have special facilities for making such pictures. The Masterpictures I will have staged in my Bayonne studio, a better equipped place than which does not exist in the east.

"The brand names of the different releases have not yet been determined, but this matter will be taken care of in a few days and an announcement of our selections will be then forthcoming.

"I am going to introduce something new in motion pictures with the two-reel animal productions, in which the Bostock animals will be featured.

"These pictures will not be like the usual animal subject. We haven't any claw-trimmed, worn-out animals. Everyone is a most magnificent specimen of his species, active and intelligent. The Bostock animal combination has been in existence for a hundred and ten years, handled by three generations of the Bostock family, and the collection today is the result of a process of elimination.

"The one-reel comedies will be snappy creations, directed by Milton H. Fahrney, and featuring George Ovey. The Masterpictures will present well known stars in the leading parts.

"In all these productions my double exposure camera will be used whenever there is occasion for it, and I can safely promise some surprising photographic novelties."

SNIFFEN IS MADE GENERAL SALES MANAGER FOR PARAMOUNT

That a new office has been created by the Paramount Pictures Corporation is discernible in the statement that Frank D. Sniffen, one of the best-known advertising men in this country, has been appointed general sales manager.

In 1901 he was advertising manager of the New York "Morning Telegraph." Later he was associated with Harper and Brothers and with magazines and newspapers of national scope.

He is an experienced salesman and he will undoubtedly bring to the motion picture business methods which, though new to it, have been provedly successful in other lines.

HART STARS IN "KENO BATES, LIAR," NYMP WESTERN

William S. Hart is starring in and directing another absorbing western this week at the Inceville studios of the New York Motion Picture Corporation.

It is entitled "Keno Bates, Liar," and has to do with the efforts of a whole-hearted saloon-keeper of the plains to win the hand of a girl, whose brother he had slain.

Hart is playing the title role and his supporting cast includes Margaret Thompson, Herschel Mayall, Louise Glaum and Gordon Mullen. J. G. Hawks and Thomas H. Ince are responsible for the scenario.

Express Companies May Charge Film Shippers an Increase of 5 Cents on Each Consignment

THE shippers of the country are facing an increase of from one to five cents on each shipment sent over the lines of the Adams, American, Wells Fargo & Co. and the southern express companies. The Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington, D. C., has granted the petition of these companies to so arrange the express rate basis as to yield them an average increase of 3.93 cents on all shipments under one hundred pounds in weight, first class, and 1.79 cents on all second class shipments.

Some time ago the companies asked that they be permitted to transpose two of the three factors entering into the making of the one hundred pound rate. The first of these factors is the collection and delivery service allowance of 20 cents per shipment, which does not vary with the weight of the package or the distance it is to be transported.

The second factor provides for a terminal allowance of twenty-five cents per one hundred pounds, which varies according to the weight, but not the distance. The third factor is the rail transportation allowance per one hundred pounds varying with the weight, the distance and in the several zones.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has agreed to the transposition of the first two of these, which means that shippers will be required to pay an additional five-cent collection and delivery charge on shipments weighing from one to five pounds, but as the rail terminal allowance is reduced five cents per one hundred pounds, the additional five-cent charge will be reduced at the rate of approximately one-twentieth of a cent per pound until the weight of the package exceeds ninety-nine pounds, when the additional charge will have been wiped out.

It is estimated that a single reel in a carrying case will weigh fifteen pounds. The extra charge on shipments of from 6 to 29 pounds is four cents. A two-reel shipment will also come within the latter weight, and in some instances a three-reel shipment. Shipments of four reels or more will take an increase of three cents or less for the increase on from 30 to 49 pounds will be three cents, from 50 to 70 pounds will be two cents, and from 71 to 99 pounds will be one cent. The increase in rates on second-class shipments will be one-fourth less than the amounts stated.

In ordering the companies to place the new rates in effect on or before September 1, upon not less than ten days' notice to the commission and the general public, the Interstate Commerce Commission declared that, "while it is true that under the proposed plan the small shipments will bear the greater share of the increase, we do not think that any unjust discrimination will result therefrom, because it was on the small shipments that the greater reduction was made by the rates which we prescribed."

The commission referred to the existing express rates which it ordered placed in effect on February 1, 1914, and which the companies showed to have so curtailed their revenues, regardless of a marked increase in the number of packages transported, as to have caused them to continue in business at a loss. The commission also referred to tables showing the rates in effect prior to that date, the present rates and the proposed rates, and stated that "it clearly demonstrates that the rates on the small shipments were decreased to a greater extent than those on the larger shipments, and that the proposed changes will, with few exceptions, result in rates substantially lower than those in effect prior to our order."

This change in rates will net the companies involved more than five million dollars per annum.

It is estimated that for the year 1915 the companies will suffer a deficit of over two million dollars.

EARLE A. DYER.

Judge McPherson of Circuit Court of Appeals Upholds Lower Tribunal in Fight Film Case

AN opinion which motion picture circles have been eagerly looking for during the past few months has just been handed down by Judge McPherson, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The opinion sustains Judge Haight, of the Federal Court of New Jersey, who refused an injunction restraining Frederick S. Freed, Collector of Customs at Newark, from barring out the films of the Jess Willard-Jack Johnson fight in Havana, Cuba.

These films were brought to America shortly after the big bout by T. Lawrence Weber, of New York, and offered for entry at the Newark port. Collector Freed based his refusal on the ground that the act of Congress of July 31, 1912, prohibited entrance of prize fight pictures, either by mail or commerce.

It was then that Weber's counsel applied for the injunction from Judge Haight, full details of which appeared in MOTION PICTURE NEWS of June 5.

The same grounds, in addition to the declaration that the films were not for sale, but for exhibition purposes and therefore not within the scope of the commerce clause, were urged in the appeal before the Circuit Court in Philadelphia.

In his opinion, Judge McPherson says: "In our opinion the statute under review belongs to a class of which numerous examples exist, namely, statutes that fall directly under the commerce clause, but effect indirectly the field of the police power. It can hardly be doubted that the right or the power to determine what articles offered for import shall be admitted into this country belongs solely to Congress, and that the right to admit on certain terms implies the plenary right to refuse admission on any terms.

"The declaration that the films are intended not for sale but solely for exhibition is not controlling. Indeed, the allegations of the bill, as a whole, leave no room for doubt that the object of exhibiting the films is the large gains that are expected to accrue therefrom, and we see little if any difference between such an object and the sale or leasing of the films themselves."

Benjamin F. Spellman, one of the New York attorneys for Weber, announced that an immediate appeal will be taken to the United Supreme Court. Mr. Spellman said that a motion to have the case preferred would be made as soon as the court convened in October, and he expected a final decision would be reached late that month or early in November.

SUNDAY OPENING IS LEGAL IN DALLAS

Sunday picture shows in Dallas, Texas, between 2 P. M. and 12 P. M. were held legal in the case tried July 22, in Criminal District Court at Dallas, in the case prosecuted against W. D. Nevills for Sunday violation of law.

County Attorney M. T. Lively announced in court that in view of the decision, no more Sunday picture shows would be prosecuted unless the Criminal Court of Appeals should change the ruling under which the Dallas ordinance was held in force. Twenty-nine complaints had been filed charging violations of the Sunday law.

Summed up, the argument on behalf of the picture shows was that the Dallas ordinance did not suspend state law, but that by provisions of the Home Rule bill the control of picture shows was legally accorded to cities of over 5,000 inhabitants. It is expected that the Council of Churches will appeal the case to the Criminal Court of Appeals for decision.

ST. LOUIS MANAGERS PROTEST AGAINST FREE PICTURES

The Theatre Managers and Motion Picture Exhibitors Protective Association of St. Louis recently sent a delegation to wait upon Mayor Kiel to urge him to discontinue the exhibition of free pictures in the parks and playgrounds of the city.

They declared that the free motion pictures take away their patronage. The mayor stated that it is not the intention of the city to compete with airdomes and motion picture theatres in giving the free performances. The object of the free pictures is to give occasional entertainment to the poor families in the congested districts who are not able to afford to go to the theatres.

As the city is under contract for the season, it is probable that the free pictures will not be discontinued, and Park Commissioner Cunliff declared that as the free pictures are of an educational nature, and only shown at each park or playground once in two weeks, it can scarcely be called competition with the theatres and airdomes, and that nothing was further from the city's intentions.

In many instances it is the means of bringing more patrons to the theatres, who have acquired a taste for pictures by seeing the free exhibitions.

AGITATION AGAINST "NATION" IN PHILADELPHIA

Already agitation is being started by the colored people of Philadelphia against the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in the Quaker City. Though the famous picture is not scheduled to appear there until next October.

The fight in this particular instance is taking a rather unique form. Charging that this photoplay is derogatory to the colored race, independent colored voters have decided to fight it at the polls. To this end they will refuse to support in the coming election for municipal offices any candidate who will not declare himself against the showing of the film.

To ascertain the stand of each candidate, a canvass will be made in advance.

The St. Silenia Association, an organization for the uplift of the colored race, numbering in its membership many prominent colored men and women, is responsible for this act of absurdity.

High Finance Genius Tries to Start $100,000 Film Concern with 11 Cents and No Credit

THAT there are plenty of men and women in Indiana who are desirous of becoming moving picture actors is shown by the results of the insertion of several want ads. in Indianapolis papers by Charles K. Franklin, age thirty-four, who says he is from Paducah, Ky.

Franklin went to Indianapolis to start a $100,000 moving picture concern with eleven cents, and found a fertile field as far as getting actors was concerned. The only difficulty he found was in getting the money.

He inserted several want ads. in Indianapolis newspapers, announcing that he desired two hundred men and two hundred women to work in a feature motion picture. He instructed the applicant to call at a hotel. By hundreds the applicants came.

Franklin told the applicants he would have his offices ready at 818 Hume-Mansur building in a few days and asked them to call there. When the men and women called at 818 Hume-Mansur building and found the offices vacant, back they surged to the hotel and demanded to see Franklin. Franklin dodged them and left the hotel clerks to struggle with the disappointed ones.

The hotel clerks in desperation called the police, and detectives found Franklin. They also took David Griffin, age twenty-four, of Bloomington, Ind., who was said to be the secretary and treasurer of the $100,000 concern. The police slated the men on loitering charges and held them under $1,000 bonds.

They had a hearing in city court, when the detectives told of the excitement Franklin had caused at the hotel by his advertising.

"Franklin had eleven cents when we arrested him, and he was trying to start a $100,000 film concern," the detectives told the court. There was no evidence to show that Franklin had attempted to defraud any one, and Judge Deery discharged the men.

"You better get out of town before a sanity inquest is held on you," the court told Franklin.

It is said Franklin planned to start a screen actors' school and to charge a tuition fee of $50.

Fakers of this sort have done and are doing more than anything else in fooling the gullible public and bringing discredit on legitimate motion picture companies, and Indianapolis motion picture men feel that if the story of the attempt of these men to swindle the Indianapolis public is printed broadcast, their future attempts in other towns to work the same scheme can be nipped in the bud the same as it was in Indianapolis.

Spokane Is Hit by Agitation Stirred Up by Colored People Over "Birth of a Nation"

SPOKANE'S storm of protest over "The Birth of a Nation" finally has broken, a belated echo of those made in other cities in which the Griffith spectacle has been booked.

The film, signed by the Clemmer brothers, of Seattle and Spokane, for a run of five weeks in the former city and three weeks in the latter, has been running since late in June in the Clemmer theatre in Seattle, without objection. It is due in Spokane August 2.

The local fuss started when members of colored congregations sent Pastor Graham of the African M. E. Church to Seattle to witness a performance. Graham went back with a report that the film was grossly immoral and calculated to stir up race hatred. He went before the Spokane Ministerial Association and asked indorsement of a protest to be presented to the city council against having the film shown there. The indorsement was granted unanimously.

When Pastor Graham went before the city council, his appeal was backed by members of the ministerial body, of the G. A. R., and by Judge Adolph Munter and other influential German people, who declared they had lived in the South when the Ku-Klux Klan was operating and that the picture glorified the work of the night riders.

The city council voted to send Commissioner Samuel Glasgow to Seattle to see the film and bring back a report. Mr. Glasgow is the municipal censor of public amusements. He stated before the council that his policy always had been to O. K. all films which bore the stamp of the National Board of Censorship and that he probably would report favorably on "The Birth of a Nation" if he found the official approval of the board upon it.

Manager H. S. Clemmer of the Clemmer theatre offered to pay the expenses of the censor to the coast and back, but this was declined by the council and the cost of the trip will come out of the municipal coffers.

"I base my protest upon four points," said the colored pastor: "First, it is false history; second, it is being shown to create race prejudice; third, it shows the negro as an irredeemable degenerate; fourth, some of its themes are certainly grossly immoral."

Manager Clemmer told the council that the scenes objected to were mere incidentals and had little to do with the main theme of the picture.

ST. LOUIS FORBIDS ERECTION OF MORE TENT SHOWS

A bill prohibiting the erection of tents for the use of motion picture shows was passed by the Board of Aldermen of St. Louis last week.

This bill will not affect the tents now in use, but no more permits for the erection of tents to be used as motion picture shows will be issued by the city.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

"Secret Orchard" Is Fifth Appearance of Blanche Sweet in Lasky Feature Photoplays

BLANCHE SWEET, who is appearing as a star exclusively in the photoplay productions of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, has added to her list of notable characterizations Diane in "The Secret Orchard," from the play by Channing Pollock, founded on the novel of the same name by Agnes and Egerton Castle. It will be released through Paramount Pictures Corporation on August 9.

This is Miss Sweet's fifth appearance in Lasky productions, the others, in the order of their release through the Paramount Pictures Corporation, being "The Warrens of Virginia," a Lasky Belasco production; "The Captive," "Stolen Goods," and "The Clue."

As the star in the play Miss Sweet will have the support of an excellent cast, including Cleo Ridgley, who recently was engaged as a permanent member of the Lasky organization; Gertrude Keller, Cynthia Williams, Marjorie Daw, Loyola O'Connor, Edward Mackaye, Carlyle Blackwell, Theodore Roberts and Sydney Deane.

Daughter of one of the stars of the demi-monde, the heroine of "The Secret Orchard" carried from birth a hidden taint of character, the more concealed because of the contrasting sweetness of her nature and the beauty of her personality.

From a convent, in which her mother had placed her as a child, to escape the pitfalls of the Paris environment, Diane, the daughter, steps into the world ignorant of her hidden weakness. Innocently, she falls victim to the Duke of Cluny, whose wife, unknown to the duke, subsequently takes the girl into her home.

Recognition between the duke and Diane is further complicated by a love affair between the girl and a young American naval officer. The subsequent stirring scenes are brought to a happy and reasonable conclusion.

As produced by the Lasky company "The Secret Orchard" is the acme of the photodramatic art.

FIRST EQUITABLE RELEASE STAR, COURTLEIGH, IN "LIFE'S CRUCIBLE"

Although Walter McNamara, the well known author and producer of "Traffic in Souls" and "Ireland a Nation," is producing a special five-reel feature picture, "Human Cargoes," for the Equitable Motion Picture Company, "Life's Crucible" is the first of the weekly offerings of the new company which will be released through the World Film Corporation.

The later five-reel picture is being staged under the direction of Isadore Bernstein, the recent director general of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and the builder of Universal City, who has become identified with the Equitable in the same capacity in which he served the former company.

The scenario was written by Marc Edmund Jones, the well known photoplaywright, who is coming to the Equitable as scenario editor, and its vivid portrayal of the regeneration of a renegade, with its underlying principles of natural science, will make "Life's Crucible" a drama of powerful interest to theatregoers of all classes.

William Courtleigh, the popular star, recently returned from a successful season with "The Song Bird" in Chicago, is being starred in this offering. Clara Whipple, George Soule Spencer and Roy Applegate, who will form the nucleus of the Equitable stock company, and Orlo Lea and Bessie Sankey are supporting Mr. Courtleigh.

John Ince, who has left Lubin to join the Equitable forces, will arrive in Flushing next week to begin the production of a drama entitled "The Cowardly Way."

HARLAN CAST FOR "BLACK SHEEP," A SELIG RELEASE

The filming of Charles Hoyt's "A Black Sheep," featuring Otis Harlan, supported by an exceptional cast of players, including Grace Darmond, Rita Gould, John Charles and others, has been virtually completed by Director T. N. Heffron at the Chicago studios of the Selig Polyscope Company.

"A Black Sheep" will be released as a Selig Red Seal play on October 18. Gilson Willets adapted the merry comedy for the screen. Another of Hoyt's best works, "A Stranger in New York," will be put into production soon with Mr. Harlan in the title role.

TELEPHONE TALK RECORDED IN PRINTED WORDS IN ESSANAY FILM

In "Eyes That See Not" Essanay introduces the unusual idea of recording the telephone conversation by photographing the printed words on the scene at the time the players are talking. While Dorothy and Ralph, the leading juveniles, are conversing over the phone, right over their heads in the picture appears what they say in large white letters.

Emmy Wehlen Is Cast for "When a Woman Loves"

ANOTHER new celebrity of the theatre to appear on the screen is Emmy Wehlen, a dainty little woman who has been seen on the regular theatre stage in foremost dramatic productions.

Miss Wehlen has youth, rare beauty and charm, which have endeared her to thousands who have seen her in musical and other plays.

The Metro Pictures corporation picked her above all others for the production of "When a Woman Loves," now being made by the Rolfe Photo-Plays Company, in which she will make her debut in the silent drama and on the program of the Metro Pictures Corporation.

Miss Wehlen was brought to this country from London, where she had been playing with success, to appear in the American production at the New York Casino of "Marriage a la Carte." At the end of this engagement she was immediately captured by Florence Ziegfeld for his production of "The Winsome Widow."

Her next appearance in this country was made in the London Gaiety theatre's production of "The Girl on the Film," and last season she appeared with the London Gaiety Theatre Company again in New York in "Tonight's the Night," which had a long run.

Usually Miss Wehlen returns to London for her summer vacation, but her acting before the camera for the Metro corporation has kept her this summer in New York and its surrounding country, where many of the scenes for "When a Woman Loves" were taken.

This play is an original drama by Charles T. Horan. It is peculiar in many ways, for it combines romance, introduced in a novel manner, with problems delicately solved, and there are many strong dramatic punches. The more dramatic scenes are offset by comedy relief.

MLLE. VALKYRIEN OF DANISH BALLET IS CAST FOR "YOUTH," VITAGRAPH

One of the most notable recent contracts signed by the Vitagraph company is for the appearance of Mlle. Valkyrien, wife of Baron Dewitz, in "Youth," by Lanier Bartlett, to be produced in three parts by Captain Harry Lambart.

Mlle. Valkyrien, probably the youngest baroness at the present time, is the acknowledged prize beauty of her native country, Denmark, her claim to loveliness being recognized by no less a personage than the King of Denmark, who awarded her the prize accorded by royalty to the most perfect type of Norse beauty.

Not only is the baroness remarkable for her exceptional loveliness, but has won distinction as a member of the Royal Ballet of Denmark, besides being well known in the Danish Biograph pictures of Copenhagen.

The baroness will, in "Youth," have a part ideally suited to her personality and artistic capabilities. Her associate players will include Antonio Moreno, Donald Hall and Frankie Mann.

MARGARITA FISCHER DANCES IN "THE GIRL FROM HIS TOWN"

Remarkable interior pictures of a theatre during the presentation of a play are shown in "The Girl from His Town," a four-part American production, to be released August 5, as a Mutual masterpicture. The scenes represent the interior of the Gaiety theatre, London, during the presentation of "Mandalay." In reality they were taken in the Republic theatre of Los Angeles, where American actors filled the house from midnight until the sun was high in the heavens.

Margarita Fischer, star in "The Girl from His Town," plays the role of Letty Lane, the London stage favorite. She is shown singing and dancing her way to the hearts of her audiences in a manner remarkable as a screen achievement. It is as though one sat in the back of the house and really watched the audience give rapt attention and enthusiastic approval of a real stage performance.

Miss Fischer reveals clever dancing ability, with a scantily-dressed chorus as a background. She, in her ballet skirts, looks for all the world like an ingenue in a present day musical comedy.

GLADYS HANSON IS STAR IN "CLIMBERS," V-L-S-E

"The Climbers," the next Lubin release, in five parts on the V-L-S-E program, will introduce to Big Four enthusiasts Gladys Hanson, widely known as a Broadway star, and one of the most versatile leading women on the stage today.

In "The Climbers," Mis Hanson takes the part of the wife who should and can be a wife and mother in the face of both adversity and plenty, and in this role she presents an exceptional characterization.

"The Climbers," from Clyde Fitch's most clever work, is a photoplay for the masses, because it preaches a powerful sermon. It unfolds the striving of a good wife and mother for the goal of happiness in a tainted world of sham, deceit, hypocricy and evil.

Film Industry Is in Vortex of Change

William Wright of Kalem Declares That the Business Will Never Cease to Be in State of Ferment—He Emphasizes the Importance of Program Releases—Says that New York Is Provincial in Its Outlook Toward the Conditions of Motion Pictures—Small Places Are the "Fat" of the Market, He Says

OUT of the seething maelstrom of conflicting estimates of the past, present and future of the motion picture industry rises William Wright of the Kalem Company with ideas of his own on current happenings.

"The motion picture business always has been and, I am afraid, always will be in constant change," says Mr. Wright. "Some of the changes which are taking place today are of material interest and advantage to the exhibitor, but most of them are to the exhibitor's detriment.

"The announcements of these changes are always intended to tell the exhibitor that his Utopia is near at hand.

"They all gild the future in enthusiastic terms. The exhibitor hears all about the wonderful programs which are 'in preparation.' He is told that these programs will supply pictures of a quality which has never before been equaled; that if he takes the service his business will be doubled or tripled.

"So much misinformation is being distributed that the exhibitor doesn't know where to turn. Motion picture theatres are closing all over the country as well as opening. Undoubtedly, in many cases, this closing is due to the growth of the industry and caused by the opening of a large, pretentious theatre in the immediate vicinity of a small, old-fashioned theatre.

Changing Policies

"But, in many cases, the theatre which is closed has encountered poor business because the exhibitor continually changed the policy of the theatre.

"This condition holds specially true in the smaller cities and towns of the country. But the smaller cities and towns of the country make up the most important part of the exhibiting end of the motion picture industry. Many manufacturers overlook that and, by so doing, hurt themselves.

"The trouble with most manufacturers today is that their outlook is too localized. Most of them have head offices in New York and the men who dictate the firm's policies are governed by the New York attitude. That is all wrong. New York is not the backbone of the industry, nor does it sound the keynote of progress.

"In proportion to its population New York is the poorest motion picture town in the country so far as pictures up through five reels in length are concerned. The small cities and the towns, the places where motion pictures are the only amusement, form the important territory, the real 'fat' of the market.

"The manufacturer ought to aim to appeal to the smaller cities and towns instead of to the metropolitan audiences. One good instance is Kalem's 'Midnight at Maxim's.' Most people thought this picture would only go in the very small cities and towns. It is doing wonderfully well in them, but it is also doing well in large cities. In Washington, D. C., for instance, one of the most blase cities in the country, 'Midnight at Maxim's' did a business which stretched the line at the box office for nearly a block and brought a repeat booking of a week.

"A manager with his eye upon metropolitan conditions and those along would have pooh-poohed such a subject as 'Midnight at Maxim's,' but it has proved to be our most popular recent release.

Call Halt on Wild Claims

"Comparisons are odious, but the time has arrived to call a halt on extravagant claims and the exhibitor should be set right.

WILLIAM WRIGHT

"I believe that a certain percentage of the trade has gone to extremes on so-called 'features.' Many of them, in fact the majority, are of questionable value; and, as we have repeatedly said before, we think it is only a question of time when the enormous majority of exhibitors will go back to the old program and no subject will be run where the length is greater than four reels, unless the story is of exceptional quality absolutely requiring a greater length, and these subjects will be run only in the very largest theatres.

"Having the above in mind and believing that a strong program consisting of one, two, three and four-reel subjects would ultimately rule, the Kalem Company has for several months been expending great efforts and unlimited money to produce a line of unexceled pictures; and we contend Kalem is making the best average one, two, three and four-reel subjects on the market, the best stories, and the best productions.

"In support of this I can point to our 'Ham and Bud' comedies, our two-reel detective series, 'The Mysteries of the Grand Hotel' and the 'Hazards of Helen' railroad series, real features in one reel. Our 'Broadway Favorites' series is made up of meritorious three-reel adaptations with favorite Broadway players in the leading roles.

"To use an old and worn-out adage, 'The proof of the pudding is in the eating.' Kalem Company is not making promises, but is calling attention to existing conditions.

"In booking the Kalem subjects, the exhibitor is not forced to deal with a half a dozen different agencies, but can secure the entire Kalem output from any branch of the General Film Company or from the Greater New York Film Rental Company, and all in regular service without extra charge.

"Through the General Film Company and the Greater New York Film Rental Company exhibitors can secure advance advertising slides, handsome photographs of the principal incidents in our multiple-reel subjects, and four-color lithographic posters.

"One might think that Kalem had departed from its usual modesty in speaking so forcefully in the first person, but 'truth is ever modest' and we propose to advise the exhibitor where he can obtain the product his business demands.

"We have ambitious plans for the future, but in line with the Kalem policy we will not announce them until they are accomplished facts; but we can safely assure you a continuance of the release of high average one, two, three and four-reel subjects."

SPEDON ON TOUR OF AMERICAN CITIES, STOPS IN DENVER

Denver, Colo., July 28.

S. M. Spedon, head of the publicity department of the Vitagraph company, spent last week in Denver on his tour of American cities. He has been in close touch with the stilent drama since its birth, and he looks into the future and sees a development even greater than the astonishing past.

His own company, he says, has produced since it was organized six years ago, more than 3,000 films of more than one reel, with an estimated value of $3,000,000.

W. H. BELL FINDS DEMAND FOR "PROHIBITION" IN INDIANA

W. H. Bell, of the W. H. Bell Feature Film corporation, Chicago, has just returned from a trip, taking in some of the most important centers in Indiana, in the interest of "Prohibition," the six-reel photo drama exploited in that territory by the Bell corporation.

Mr. Bell reports that after having met some of the leading exhibitors in the state, that general conditions are unusually good and the houses are doing fairly well, considering the present hot spell of weather.

DIRECTOR TAYLOR HAS NARROW ESCAPE IN "DIAMOND" EPISODE

W. D. Taylor, director of "The Diamond from the Sky," the North American Film Corporation's $800,000 continued photoplay, had a narrow escape from death a few days ago, when he accidentally stepped on a heavy charged electric wire.

The members of the company were at work in an underground tunnel, in which one of the scenes takes place, when Taylor, walking in advance of the players, stepped on the wire, which was not covered.

Luckily, a physician employed in the mining camp nearby had come over to watch the taking of the scene. He offered immediate assistance.

Film Success Is Like Baseball, Says Thanhouser

"It's a Matter of Percentage—To Spurt All Season and Then Slump Badly Is Not Pennant Winning—Consistency Is What Counts, and Average Performances Make Reputations"

EDWIN THANHOUSER, the New Rochelle film wizard who took the first mortgage on the word "consistency," talks for publication once in a while. Although he has only been back at work a few months, he is an authority on the tendencies of the film market; he is a quick student of conditions and just now is very optimistic.

"The program method of release is the original staple of the film industry. It stands practically alone as the survivor of all the changes which have occurred in the five or six years past," he says.

"Every other phase of film activity has changed with time, but the program release system remains. The reason is merely a matter of ground-work, like the building of a house. It takes a great deal of foundation work to launch a program, therefore its roots are firm.

"It holds fast. To launch it successfully is perhaps the most difficult undertaking in the industry. The Mutual program was launched under unusually favorable circumstances; it has been the positive channel for the exhibitor; by that I mean the absence of those chameleon qualities which have added to the uncertainty of things.

"In my opinion we are due for the showdown' this fall. The much heralded survival of the fittest will be a certainty. To those who can see clearly, it is evident that the process of elimination has already begun.

"Who will win? Well, it will be a matter of percentage. In a baseball pennant race it is not the team with the most spectacular plays to its credit that carries off the gonfalon; it's the team with the highest percentage of games won. To spurt all season and then slump badly is not pennant-winning baseball.

"Consistency is what counts; average performance makes reputations that are not quickly forgotten. And this applies more to the film race than any other. What the exhibitor needs is assurance that his money does not buy him less one week than it does another.

"That is the viewpoint I have always taken of the exhibitor's case, and it has been no more than ordinary business judgment for me to apply that to my own business; that made consistency my watchword. To be fair to the exhibitor I must first be fair to myself. I want the same minimum of value for every hundred dollars I spend. It is merely a matter of first knowing what that minimum is and then knowing how to get it.

"I am satisfied that I've been getting it in the Thanhouser and Falstaff releases. The letters which exhibitors have written me prove that consistency is a valuable asset. It instils confidence and the theatre man needs confidence. It is almost incredible how quickly the exhibitor's confidence is reflected in the attitude of the public. Consistency does it. When they learn that any certain brand is always to be depended upon, they are quick to show their recognition of the fact.

"When the fittest have survived they will be found to be the ones who have and hold the confidence of the public by their consistent performance. Thanhouser and Falstaff pictures, I am proud to say, are consistent examples—and the exhibitors know it."

Courtenay and Eleanor Woodruff in Brady Film

Vitagraph's "Island of Surprise" Is Expected to Make Public Stare in Amazement at High Tension Realism, Consisting of Railroad Wreck and Fire

THROUGH a peculiar combination of circumstances, two well-known authors wrote scenarios using the same theme as the basis of a story and both manuscripts, which bore titles, using a combination of words that meant exactly the same, were submitted to the Vitagraph company within a few days of each other. The authors in question were William Addison Lathrop and Charles T. Dazey, and the story, which will be told by the voiceless actors on the screen, known by the title "The Making Over of Geoffrey Manning." "The Making Over of Geoffrey Manning" is now being produced under the direction of Harry Davenport with a cast that includes Harry Morey as Geoffrey Manning, L. Rogers Lytton, Belle Bruce, Harold Foshay, Ned Finley, Jack Brawn, Logan Paul, Katherine Franek, Marion Henry and William Dunn, and will be completed as a feature picture in four parts.

William Courtenay and Eleanor Woodruff head a cast of Vitagraph players in a picturization of Cyrus Townsend Brady's human interest story "The Island of Surprise," now being produced under the direction of Lorimer Johnston. "The Island of Surprise," is crowded with adventure that will inject visualized action in the film version that is impossible to convey in the cold type on the printed page. Already two railroad cars, a full Pullman dining car with its load of human freight and a Pullman sleeper have been wrecked and completely destroyed by fire.

Director Johnston, taking a company of all-star Vitagraph players from Jersey City to within twenty-three miles of Philadelphia in order to obtain twenty scenes that included the wreck, which was staged near the residence of J. B. Duke. To add realism to this wreck, Director Johnston did not inform his players of what was to happen and his camerman, William McCoy, who had his camera set up in an advantageous position, secured realism in every minute detail, even to the horror depicted on the faces of the actors when they thought the wreck was real. "The Island of Surprise" will be completed in five parts and enacted in the principal characters by Mr. Courtenay, Miss Woodruff, Julia Swayne Gordon, Zena Keefe, Charles Kent and Anders Randolf.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Los Angeles, July 26.

OFFICERS of the Film Producers, Inc. the new releasing organization of Los Angeles, have every reason to be very optimistic, and plans are rapidly being completed for their first release which will be made some time in September.

Robert Levy, formerly manager of the production of the Eclair company, and later the Features Ideal, has organized the Eclat Film Manufacturing Company, which will make two-reel dramas to appear on the program as the Eclat and Elite brands.

The Bell Motion Picture Company, composed of C. Bell, president, and I. A. Yargar, secretary and treasurer, which recently purchased the Amex plant at National City, near San Diego, will make one and two-reel comedies and dramas.

Negotiations are now pending with the E and R Jungle Film Company for the making of two-reel animal comedies and dramas.

The brands for this program will be named as follows: Masterpiece, Eclat, Elite, Ameropa, Eureka, Crown, Crescent, Bell, and probably Jungle.

The Film Producers, Inc., has taken the agency for the Brifco Film Company for the Pacific coast, and is now perfecting arrangements for still printing plants, commercial laboratories, and other establishments necessary to conduct the releasing organization from Los Angeles.

Director General R. S. Sturgeon, of the Santa Monica Vitagraph studio, returned last week from spending a fortnight in the east, where he enjoyed his annual vacation. This week Manager Smith, of the studio; Mr. Sturgeon, and Sam Spedon, chief of the publicity department of the Vitagraph, who is here, were busy viewing proposed sites for the new Vitagraph studio which will be built within the near future.

Palette Again at R & M

There was a solemn funeral at Inceville last week, not enacted for films, when "Mack," the prize bull dog of W. S. Hart, was laid to rest in state. Mack's pedigree name is Vancroft Maximus, and five years ago Mr. Hart was offered five thousand dollars for him by W. K. Vanderbilt when the dog was wearing the medals and ribbons won at the annual dog show at Madison Square Garden.

Eugene Palette is again with the Majestic-Reliance companies, after an association of three months with the Selig players.

"In the Sunset Country" is the title given a three-reel scenario by F. McGrew Willis, which is being produced by the Burton King Company. As the title suggests it is a western type protraying the reformation of two western men, a sheriff and an outlaw, in their rivalry for the hand of the minister's daughter. Director King has Sherman Bainbridge playing the part of the road agent; Wilfred Rogers, the gambler; Charles Benson, the minister, and Suella Maxime, the minister's daughter. The subject will be completed in three reels.

The Curtis Joker Company has begun the making of additional reels for the "Lady Baffles" and "Detective Duck" series, the first of these being "The Dread Society of the Sacred Sausage." The usual Joker cast, including Max Asher, Gale Henry, William Farney, Lillian Peacock and Wilburn Moranti appear. In this the detective by his magic prevents the Prince of Chow-Chow from being assassinated by Chop and Suey. There is every reason to believe this will be a palatable subject, a portion of it being made on the day a barbecue was served to the exhibitors.

A one-reel story portraying the life in a railroad town along the Mexican-American border entitled: "The Telegraph Operator's Daughter," from scenario by Carl Coolidge, is being made by J. J. Franz, a recent addition to the Universal producing staff. In the cast are Warner Elsworth, Marcia Moore, Ray Gallagher and Herman Ilmer. The daughter is taught to operate the telegraph instrument by her father, and is successful in aiding the officers to search out the assassin of her parent.

Dr. H. G. Stafford, who has been scenario writer, and recently made director at Universal studio, has completed his first picture, "The Sister."

In this, Adele Farrington appears in the name role, supported by Kingsley Benedict, Val Paul and Gretchen Lederer. The older sister of the young bank clerk aids him to straighten out his financial difficulties caused by his wild oats life, and at the same time brings about a crisis in her love affair which is very pleasing.

"Both Sides of the Cross"

While Robert Leonard is engaged in producing "Renunciation," featuring Julia Dean, members of his company, including Ella Hall, Maude George, Allan Forrest and others, are appearing in a picture under the direction of Lynn Reynolds entitled: "Both Sides of the Cross."

Scenario is by L. V. Jefferson. This is a story of the efforts of the minister at a slum parish, whose early day sweetheart spurns his love because she wished to preside in the gay whirl of society. In her conquest for hearts, the woman is confronted with a dare to infatuate the minister. For a time she believes she will be successful, but his better self asserts, and he defeats her endeavors when he weds the innocent girl who is the woman's maid.

The "Neal of the Navy" company of the Balboa studio, including Lillian Lorraine and William Courtley, who are featured; Edward Bradey, William Conklin, Henry Stanley, Lucy Blake and Ruth Lackaye, together with Director Harry Harvey and camera man Joe Brotherton, went to San Francisco last week to film scenes for episodes No. 2, 3, 4 and 5, of this serial for the Pathé exchanges. Before departing the company made some very unusual scenes at the harbor of Long Beach, where by the aid of various vessels they secured some very successful effects.

"Comrade John," adapted from the Samuel Merwin and Henry Kitchell Webster story, is being filmed at Balboa by Bertram Bracken. This subject will be completed in five reels and features William Elliott and Ruth Roland, supported by Madeline Pardee and Lewis Cody. For this subject a four hundred foot Paris street scene was built and used in about one hundred feet of film. Another very spectacular set was that of the castle built in a canyon in the foot hills back of Long Beach.

This was destroyed by fire and realistic effects were secured by creating the building wholly of wood. The people who see this picture will never realize the strenuous work necessary to secure the pictures. In order to take advantage of the very beautiful scenery in this canyon, it was necessary to build roads, lay water mains and construct a lake. The scenario called for the burning of a miniature palace, but General Manager H. M. Horkheimer found this impracticable and built the three thousand dollar set. This was constructed under the direction of Norman Manning, business manager of the Balboa studio.

Manning's Engagement to Miss Jacobson

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Norman Manning, business manager of the Balboa Amusement Producing company, of Long Beach, and Anna Modiese Jacobson, of Payette, Idaho. The wedding will be solemnized early in September by Governor Stanford of Idaho.

The Nestor company, under the direction of Al. E. Christie, has completed the filming of "Mrs. Plum's Pudding," which has now been cut and projected for the first time. Mr. Christie claims this is one of the funniest pictures he has ever made, and his assertion is backed up by Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, who stand pat on anything Christie says.

Tuesday of last week was "Bryan Day" at Universal City, when the grape juice orator, his wife and son, paid the producing plant of the Universal a visit. President Carl Laemmle personally entertained the distinguished visitors, and a very out of the ordinary program was given throughout the afternoon.

Universal City was invaded by fifteen hundred Elks who were in Los Angeles recently to attend the annual convention, and two hundred and fifty members of the Rotary Clubs of Texas. A very successful Rodeo was given for the visitors by the Universal cowboys. This week a large number of Shriners were entertained at this mammoth producing plant.

SIGNE AUEN (R. & M.)

"At Watt College" is the title given the four-reel comedy now being produced by William C. Dowlan for the Universal special feature program featuring Mr. and Mrs. Carter DeHaven. This picture, as the name indicates, is a story of college life and the romps of the rah-rah boys.

The Ford-Cunard "Broken Coin" company spent the past week at Tia Juana, Mexico, where the filming of scenes for the numbers eleven and twelve episodes of the series were made.

Giblyn Back at Universal Studio

The three-reel subject "Coral," production of which was begun by Henry McRae, has now been finished under the direction of Normand McDonald. Work on this subject was delayed because of the inability to secure a yacht for sea pictures.

Director Charles Giblyn has returned to the Universal studio after a short vacation which he spent at Seattle at the Shriner's convention.

A near riot was caused on the rear stage and in the zoo of Universal City the early part of this week when practically all of the animals were turned loose for the filming of the one-reel animal comedy, "Joe Martin Turns 'em Loose." The name part is taken by the chimpanzee, who opens the cages of a circus. Direction of this is in charge of Rex Roselli and Paul Bourgeis.

The Worthington company is now filming a three-reel subject, "The Queen of Hearts."

An effort will be made by motion picture directors to improve general conditions, and also correct the impression given out by disgruntled players and extra people, who have caused the belief that a motion picture studio is a most immoral place.

To this end, the Motion Picture Directors' Association has been formed, and a charter for its conduct secured from the state. The following officers have been selected: Otis Turner, director; Charles Giblyn, assistant director; William R. Daley, technical director; Raymond West, scenarioist; and Edward Dillon, treasurer.

That cleanliness is not next to godliness around a moving picture studio was proven when Manager Tom Eyton of the Morosco company caused the janitors of the studio to clean out a perfectly good alley set which had been prepared at the rear of the property. The very enthusiastic manager discovered this and, not knowing it had been built, caused it to be carted away before consulting with Director Frank Lloyd, who was to use it in scenes for the coming Bosworth picture, featuring Maclin Arbuckle in his vaudeville stage success now adapted for pictures, "The Reformed Candidate."

Mr. Arbuckle, who is a prominent Elk from Dallas, Texas, induced many of his brother "Bills" to take part in scenes that were made during the past week. Fred McJunkin, owner of the famous Sixty-Six ranch in Texas, was one of the prominent men to take part.

Popular Photoplay Stars in Scenes From a Quartet of Current Universal Releases

Belmont with a cast composed of Billie West, A. D. Sears, M. Blue, Richard Cummings and Elenora Washington. This is a crook story portraying the efforts of a girl of the slums to lead other than a criminal career.

The Victor-Kerrigan company at Lake Tahoe is making, "A Night at the Pines," wherein a New York stock exchange operator attempts to force his son, just home from college, to wed the daughter of a broker who is opposing him in cornering the market. The son refuses, and weds the girl of his choice against the wishes of the parents.

Just following the marriage it is found that the father of the college youth was mistaken with regard to his opponent.

Another Nestor comedy is, "Kids and Corsets," wherein a family is rent asunder when the wife returns and finds the corset of her neighbor in their parlor after she has seen the woman leaving the house. The children had been playing with the corset, and when called home had left it there, all of which causes many lively scenes. The principals are Billie Rhodes, Jack Dillon, Lee Moran and Jane Waller, who appear under the direction of Horace Davey.

"Colorado" Features Bosworth

The Augustus Thomas story, "Colorado," has been adapted for the screen by Harvey Gates, and the production features Hobart Bosworth, and is now progressing under the direction of Norval MacGreggor. Supporting Mr. Bosworth are Carl Von Schiller, Albert MacQuarrie, Mildred Brown, Anna Lehr, and Louise Baxter.

Victor Eubank, advertising manager of Essanay, has been in the city paying a visit to the Charley Chaplin studio while enroute to San Francisco to attend the convention.

Director General Bruce Mitchell, of the National Film Corporation, accompanied by Norma Talmadge, who is to be starred in productions of this company, are on their way to the coast, and will arrive the latter part of this week. While enroute Mr. Mitchell, aided by A. W. Caldeway, scenario editor of the company, is making pictures at Chicago and other points.

Eddie Foy, and the seven little Foy's have arrived at the Keystone Film studio, and the first of this week their first subject was taken up. This is being produced under the personal direction of director general Mack Sennett, and will probably be an early release.

Mr. Sennett has also made the announcement of contracts being made with Weber and Fields, San Bernard and Bert Clark of musical comedy fame. All these four notables of funny land will arrive in Los Angeles within the next three weeks to begin their first subject of Keystone brand. The scenario department is now preparing stories that will feature these players, and at the same time special sets for the comedy players are being made.

The second Raymond Hitchcock feature is now being completed and the first one "Stolen Magic" in which Mr. Sennett, Mabel Normand, and Owen Moore supported the celebrated comedian will soon be released. This is in four reels, and will be a Mutual masterpicture.

Morris with Vitagraph

Dave Morris, formerly of the Vitagraph company is now with the Hollywood Kalem company. Mr. Morris has also appeared in a number of Klaw and Erlanger attractions.

During the absence of Lloyd Hamilton from the Kalem studio, owing to his recent injury when he suffered a broken leg, the company is continuing comedies under the direction of Rube Miller.

The Kalem company has just completed the filming of "Bud's Narrow Escape" written by Rube Miller, who is also in charge of the direction. Bud Duncan appears in the name part, supported by Ethel Teare. This is one of the Ham comedies, and others will be made to keep up the release until Mr. Hamilton recovers.

At the Glendale Kalem studio, the James Horne company producing the detective series, "The Mystery of the Grand Hotel" is now on the sixth episode. Helen Holmes is featured in this, and even more thrills than were injected into the "Hazards of Helen" will make this one of a thrilling melodramatic nature.

Director Archer McMackin is making a one reel allegorical picture entitled, "Every Heart." The film will be replete with trick photography, and a number of new features will be shown in this.

The cast for the Universal feature, "Business Is Business," a five-reel subject, adapted from the tragedy of Octave Maribau by F. McGrew Willis, which features Nat C. Goodwin, has been announced as follows: Mr. Nelson, Maude George, Anna Little, Gretchen Lederer, Marc Robbins, Frank Newberg, Wellington Playter and Wyndham Standing. The recent announcement that this was a farce-comedy is an error. The production will be in charge of Otis Turner.

Director Marshall Neilan, who has been in New York for the past week, returned Monday and took up the filming of additional subjects of the Selig comedy series. "Chronicles of Bloom Center." Four of this series have now been completed.

J. W. Allen, formerly manager of the Universal exchange at Los Angeles, and for the past two months in charge of the United exchange in San Francisco, has been added to the staff of Herman Wabber, manager of the Progressive Motion Picture company exchange at San Francisco, and took up his work the first of this week.

Le Saint Joins Universal

Director E. J. LeSaint, who has been with the Selig company for the past eighteen months, has been engaged by Director General Henry McRae of the Universal Film Company, and this week took up his first work in the direction of the four or five reel subject which will feature Frank Keenan, the character actor who admits that he is good in pictures, and cites the instance that he has seen himself on the screen, and knows that he is good.

In fact, he has boasted of his good work. The title of this subject is "The Long Chance," the story of which was written by Peter B. Kyne, of San Francisco. To Harvey Gates, of the Universal scenario department, much credit must be given for the scenario which has been prepared for this story.

He has retained all the punch given by the original author, and has given much which will be beneficial to the subject.

Stella Rosetta, who has been leading woman of the LeSaint-Selig Company, who in private life is Mrs. LeSaint, will appear in a leading part in this feature production.

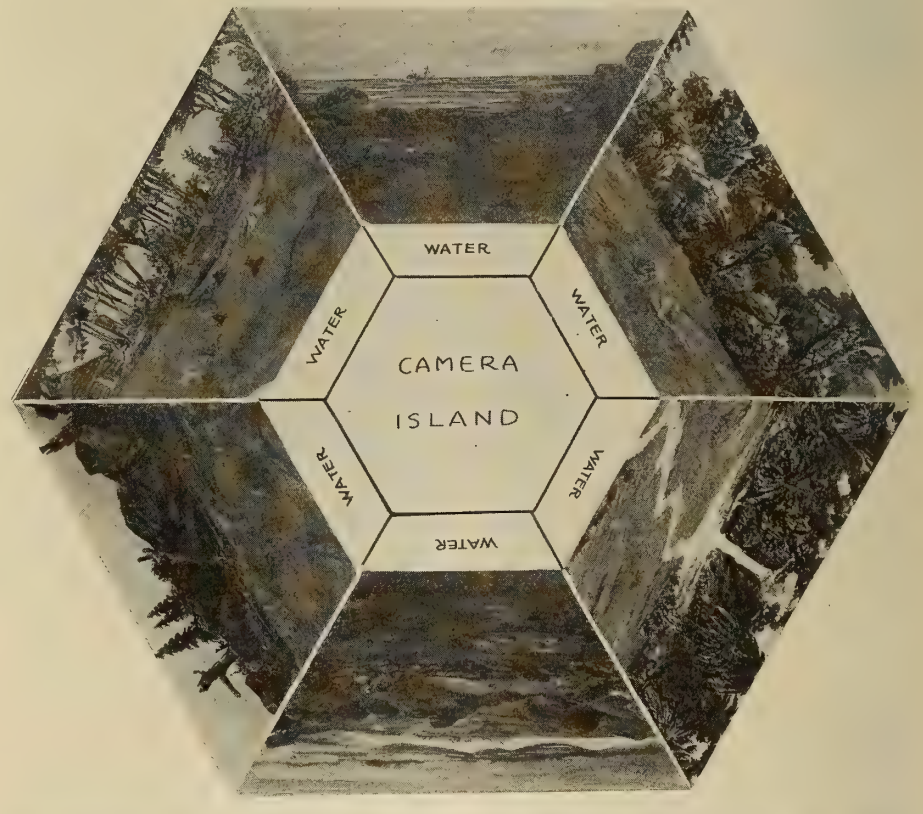
The Quality Pictures Company is this week completing the interiors for "The Silent Voice," the second Francis X. Bushman-Margaret Snow subject for the Metro program. For this a number of very elaborate sets have been prepared.

Horsley Pacific Coast Studios Near Completion

Arena, for Taking Animal Pictures, First Released in September on Mutual Program, Is Important Innovation—Dressing Rooms with Combination of Bungalow Fronts

COINCIDENT with the alliance of David Horsley with the Mutual Film Corporation, under the terms of which all productions of the Centaur Film Company and the Bostock Jungle and Film Company, are to be released under the "Winged Clock," comes the news that the mammoth new plant which Mr. Horsley has been building in Los Angeles is now practically complete.

Here the new animal pictures, which will be released through the Mutual in September, will be produced, as well as many of the comedies, which will form no unimportant part of the Horsley contribution to the Mutual program.



The new plant, which covers a space of five acres in all, located at Main and Washington streets, Los Angeles, contains many unique and entirely novel devices and applicances, which never before have been incorporated in studio construction. The most important of the innovations in the "arena," so called because it is here that all the animal pictures will be taken and which, by reason of its originality and construction and design, may be rated as among the most important of Mr. Horsley's numerous inventions.

Among the other devices and appliances installed in the Los Angeles studios, all of which were worked out by Mr. Horsley, are twelve modern dressing rooms, which have a combination of 144 bungalow fronts of different design for exterior settings; a property room measuring 70 x 140 feet, spanned by sixteen massive steel trusses, the roofing and diffusers of which are operated by shaft gearings; and a stage large enough to permit six companies to work at the same time without interfering with each other.

Specially notable among many new devices incorporated in the Los Angeles plant is the "arena," where by means of a unique arrangement in the plan of construction, the wild beasts of the jungle can perform on the same stage with the human actors without the slightest danger to the latter.

The diagram shows the "arena" is hexagonal in shape. It measures 144 x 144 feet in area and is surrounded by walls twenty feet in height. In the centre, at the apex of the six triangles is a concrete platform, on which the camera is mounted. Around the platform, or "island," is a moat, six feet wide and four feet deep, which is constantly filled with water. Iron bars, a dozen feet high, surround the platform to protect the director and cameraman from any sudden attack by the animal or animals. At each junction of the different triangles, another row of bars extends from the "island" across the moat to the wall behind. These bars extend only a few inches below the water, when crossing the moat, so that all a performer has to do to escape a threatened attack is to dive into the water and come out in the adjoining section of the "arena."

The advantages of this unique construction are many and obvious. Not only does it facilitate the escape of the human artists in time of peril, as well as affording complete protection for the cameraman and director, but it also makes it possible for the stage hands to remove one scene and erect another without interfering with the direction of the production, thus minimizing the delays which hitherto have been a serious factor in the manufacture of animal pictures.

THE HORSLEY SYSTEM OF STAGES, SHOWING LOCATIONS WITH REFERENCE TO THE CAMERA

Interesting and novel are the dressing rooms proper, twelve in number, including the office of the chief director. These rooms, like the "arena," and other modern devices and appliances employed in the studio, were designed and worked out by Mr. Horsley. The fronts of these dressing rooms have been built to represent bungalow fronts. They are all of different design, no two doors or windows alike, and have a combination of 144 fronts of different design for exterior work.

The property room, one of the largest and most modern on the coast, measures 70 x 140 feet. It is spanned by sixteen massive steel girders which carry the diffusors and canvas roof, which are operated by means of geared shafting. The laboratory, laid out by Mr. Horsley, is equipped with all the modern improvements, and contains two large, fireproof vaults for the storing of the film.

In the same building are the private offices of the administrative forces, the negative, printing, winding, developing, washing, drying, assembling and patching rooms as well as the offices of the scenario department.

The first of the Horsley animal pictures, according to present plans, will be released through the Mutual early in September, while the initial comedy is scheduled for the latter part of August.

SCENES FROM TWO JULY MINA COMEDIES—"A NIGHT'S LODGING" (July 8)—"ON THE JOB" (July 22)

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By George D. Proctor

THE Triangle Film Corporation, the name under which the Griffith-Ince-Sennet combination has been incorporated for $5,000,000, fires its opening gun in the exploitation end with the announcement that the Knickerbocker theatre in New York City will play its mixed program at prices up to two dollars.

This is the first time that a mixed picture program has played at this price. Both "Cabiria" and "Birth of a Nation" have played at two dollars top rates, but these pictures constituted an evening's entertainment in themselves. Now, two dollars will be charged for program with both drama and comedy in two or more subjects.

This sounds like a striking innovation, but so was every other important change, including the time when "Quo Vadis?" played at fifty cents for the orchestra, and everybody held his breath with anxiety. "Quo Vadis?" was a success, and good pictures have had a striking habit of being successful both before and since them. So the answer lies in the merit of the pictures even if two dollars is a lot of money when one has just $1.95 to spend.

Behind this lies a story that may have considerable interest—in trade circles anyway. The "Sig" Feature Film Corporation was practically formed. In fact the incorporation papers had been drawn when word came from the Pacific coast asking for a conference on the matter. So H. E. Aitken, Adam Kessel, Jr., and C. O. Baumann started west to meet Griffith, Ince and Sennett, who started east.

This hands an awful jolt to the Kipling theory that "West is west, and east is east, and never the twain shall meet."

The six met at La Junta, Col., La Junta being a Spanish word, which, oddly enough, means "the meeting place." There things were mulled over, and the Triangle Film Corporation was formed for $5,000,000 instead of the $4,000,000 originally planned. In addition to the officers, as named last week, there are fifteen members of the board of directors, three of whom are Griffith, Ince and Sennett.

Don't yawn, boys; the good part is coming right along. The first release is slated for some time between September 15 and October 1. The policy, as has been told long ago, is a 4,500-foot drama by Griffith, and the same by Ince each week, and two two-reel Sennett comedy each week.

It is understood that the New York Motion Picture Corporation and the Reliance and Majestic companies will not make any more Mutual Master-pictures, and that all Majestic releases will be made through Triangle after October 1. The Reliance brand, so the story continues, will continue on the regular Mutual program with one, two and three-reel subjects. This has no bearing on the question of whether NYMP will continue to make pictures for Mutual or not. That will come in later.

One of the best little excursions of the many which fall to the lot of the writing persons was the week-end trip to Winsted, Conn., to see the ball game scenes of "Right Off the Bat" taken with Mike Donlin. Mine hosts were W. E. Schellenberger and A. S. Le Vino. Other players beside Mr. Donlin are Claire Mersereau, Fan Bourke, Rita Ross Donlin, Beatrice Dancourt, Doris Grey, Mabel Wright, Charles Mather, George Henry, J. Arthur O'Brien and Frank Fane, Jr. The whole town turned out for Donlin Day and the picture folks owned the main street. Yep, lots of fun.

Following the policy of turning the pitiless spot light onto the dark corners of the industry, a request that Julian M. Solomon be asked to keep his shoes on at social gatherings is hereby registered.

Eleanor May Haddock arrived a few days ago, weighing about nine pounds, and the proud daddy is W. F. Haddock, director, the Screen Club's own "Silent Bill." Now you can't keep him quiet, and he can't keep her quiet. Bill's voice has so attracted the attention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League that he has been appointed official announcer at the carnival to be held at Brighton Beach August 21. But, seriously speaking, here's all sorts of congratulations.

Still they come. This week's addition to the ranks is the Lambart Film Corporation, incorporated in New York state for $2,500,000. Captain Harry Lambart, a director who has been with Vitagraph for some time, is the Lambart and the promoter of the organization and its chief executive. All the whisperings say that the new company is very well backed financially. Among the pictures Capt. Lambart made for Vitagraph are "The Tangle" and "The Finest."

Then there's H. H. Van Loan, who has a grievance. If it's publicity you want, H. H., here it is.

Although he is vice-president of the new Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, and an advisory director, Lewis J. Selznick is not going to leave World Film or lessen his activities with that concern. This is official.

Also it is officially announced that the World Film will release two features a week after September first.

One of them will be Walter MacNamar's "Human Cargoes," which he is now making at the Equitable studios. Walter is the author of "Traffic in Souls," and author and producer of "Ireland as a Nation." In "Human Cargoes" he says he has the greatest theme he has yet tackled.

Just heard a peep from Albert W. Hale, who is making comedies with the Essanay Los Angeles company at the Chaplin studio.

Henry Walthall recently won the suit brought against him by Balboa to restrain him from working for other companies. He was with Griffith when the suit started, but is now with Essanay. The suit grew out of a contract.

The Minusa Cine Products Company is issuing a multum in parvo little house organ from its home office in the Houser building, St. Louis. At least so it is said. If one of them ever reached here it would be easy to tell. Uncle Sam will bring it if the other fellow will address and stamp it. The "Minstrel" is the publication's name. George B. Logan, president of the Minusa company, is editor and chief scribe. More hearsay.

CHANGES OF THE WEEK

John H. Pratt, whose latest feature is "The Garden of Lies," is now directing for Lubin.

Alfred N. Weiss is no longer general manager of the New York Mutual exchanges. He is succeeded by A. F. Beck, a pioneer film man, late of Universal and Kinetephote.

Harry Spingler, juvenile and leading man, is going to the coast to play with Balboa, leaving Fox.

POLICE HOLD FOX EXTRAS IN "WITCH" SCENE AS OIL RIOTERS

As three hundred or more extras for a mob scene and fight in "The Witch," staged at the Fort Lee studios of the Fox Film Corporation, were crossing the ferry they were held up by the police, who took them for strikers from Bayonne and a riot was threatened.

These supernumones had been promised a sandwich at noon and a dollar at night. They finally allowed the mob to proceed and the riot was avoided.

This mob scene is a part of the picture in which Nance O'Neil is playing the leading role. The setting is a Mexican village which in itself is a marvelous piece of work.

Frank Powell, who is directing the picture, by diplomatic flattery and promises got the crowd of six hundred extras with him from the start and they went at their work with an enthusiasm and realism which was convincing.

So convincing in fact that Miss O'Neil, whom they burn as a witch, actually fainted at the stake after being jostled over the heads of the angry crowd on a door. It was an hour or more before she was able to resume her work. Sadie Gross, formerly the leading dancer at the once famous Niblo's restaurant, the Pavlowa of her day, is a super in this picture.

KLEINE ENGAGES SMALLWOOD TO DIRECT ETHEL GRANDIN

Ray Smallwood, formerly head of the Smallwood Film Company, is the latest acquisition to the George Kleine studios. Mr. Smallwood was engaged by George Kleine to produce the Ethel Grandin series and is already busily at work on the first of a long list of carefully selected stories especially written for pretty little Miss Grandin.

Mr. Smallwood has directed all Miss Grandin's pictures for a number of years and is more familiar with the particular talents of the diminutive star than any other director.

The Grandin series will be released in the form of two-reel subjects through the General Film Company every Monday commencing September 6.

"YORK STATE FOLKS" IS IN WORK AT DRAKO STUDIOS

In selecting "York State Folks" for one of their feature four-reelers, the Dra-Ko Film Corporation selected a play that for years has been dear to the hearts of thousands of play-goers from Maine to California.

The story deals with the lives and charters of people in a small New York State town.

A number of the original cast who helped Fred E. Wright make this play famous have been secured, among them are James Lackeye, whose ability as a screen artist has long been recognized, and Ray L. Royce, who also originated his part in the initial production.

The Dra-Ko people announce that the feature will be released in August.

Bronze Medal Is Awarded Metro at Fair

THE bronze medal awarded the Metro Pictures corporation by the officials of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, at San Francisco, on Metro Day, July 15, was a special award for the best motion picture shown during a competition in which the manufacturers participated.

Metro's entry was the Quality Pictures production of "The Second in Command," in which Francis X. Bushman and Marguerite Snow are presented for the first time on the Metro program.

The presentation of the award was made a signal honor for Francis X. Bushman, who on behalf of the Metro Pictures corporation received it. Mr. Bushman was unprepared for the honor conferred upon him and was taken completely by surprise when called upon. He gracefully stepped forward on the platform in the glare of the sun and received the tribute, thanking the president in glowing terms, and at the same time he paid a plendid tribute to the Metro Pictures corporation for its productions and the remarkable list of great stars of the screen and dramatic stage which it had already presented before the public and has yet to come.

THE BRONZE PLAQUE TENDERED TO METRO BY THE OFFICIALS OF THE PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION

The general public attended and some 70,000 people, it is said, cheered Metro when the award was made.

Competition for the special award was keen to the utmost. The Metro Pictures corporation has aimed from its inception to make pictures among the best. That it has achieved perfection in the art of producing motion pictures, Metro may be justly proud.

Metro proposes to continue to deserve this unusual mark of esteem and appreciation by continuing its energetic methods in producing pictures that will not only prove satisfactory to the public, but that will meet always the demands of the most critical.

"BULL" IS "SOAPY" WITH "OILY" IN "$100,000 BILL," A DOMINO

Lewis "Bull" Durham and Robert Kortman, regarded as two of the most perfect "heavy" types in film circles, form a strong combination in support of Walter Edwards in "The $100,000 Bill," a two-part release of the Domino-N. Y. Motion Picture Corporation on the Mutual program, August 12.

Durham plays the part of "Soapy" Smith, leader of a gang of crooks, and Kortman that of "Oily," master thug of the Yukon.

"TWO WEEKS" RUN IS RECORD FOR "ROSARY" IN LOS ANGELES

In the Elk's Pageantry, held recently in Los Angeles, the first prize was awarded to a float advertising the V-L-S-E feature "The Rosary," an entry that created enthusiasm among the many thousands of people thronging the city.

The prize winning exhibit was chosen by popular demand through its rare beauty and appeal of the subject.

In the center of the float stood a huge cross, magnificently adorned with foliage and flowers and electric equipment for lighting at night, serving to retain its imposing aspect either in darkness or daylight. In front of the cross was a miniature fountain and in the rear a statue of an angel seated on a stone form.

The outfit was drawn by a team consisting of two horses and four camels, all from the Selig zoo.

At the time of the floral parade, the Selig seven-part feature, "The Rosary," was being shown at Clune's Auditorium, and the entry in the pageant proved so successful that the continued use of the S. R. O. sign was made necessary for more than two weeks following.

LUBIN BRINGS OUT ANOTHER PLAY WITH IRISH SETTING

"Bold Emmett, Ireland's Martyr" is a one-act comedy drama, released through Lubin, written by Sidney Olcott and produced by him among the hills and dales of old Ireland. The play is enacted during the stormy days when Robert Emmett tried vainly to free Ireland. It tells the story of a young Irish couple who become involved in the attempt at revolution and are saved through the intercession of a British officer, who had been shot in ambuscade, and whom they had nursed back to health.

In the cast are Valentine Grant, Sidney Olcott, Laurene Santley, P. H. O'Malley, Jack Melville and Robert Rivers. The photography is superlative and some of the scenic environments are beautiful beyond description.

Samuel Long, Kalem Head for 7 Years, Dies at Home

Typhoid Carries Off Pioneer Film Man, Founder with George Kleine and Frank Marion of Well Known Producing Firm, in the Prime of His Life

SAMUEL LONG, president of the Kalem company since its formation in 1908, one of the pioneer manufacturers of the motion picture industry, a man who has always stood for all that is good in the business, died at 5 o'clock in the morning of Wednesday, July 28, at his residence at Riverside Drive and Eightieth street, New York City.

Mr. Long had been ill since about July 4 with typhoid fever, but when the end approached it came very rapidly. He was in the prime of life, between forty and forty-five years old. His widow, Alice, survives.

The funeral will be held on Friday, July 30, from his residence. The interment will be in Woodlawn cemetery. All the prominent motion picture manufactures are expected to attend. Telegrams were received Wednesday from George K. Spoor and Col. William N. Selig in Chicago, expressing condolences and saying that they would attend. Through his long connection with the motion picture industry and his prominent position Mr. Long had a host of friends.

Samuel Long was one of the pioneer motion picture men. He entered the industry in 1897, being connected with Biograph company as technical expert and head of the factory. He held that position for ten years. Those were the years during which the business made the greatest strides in technique and in photography. To Mr. Long is due most of the credit for the technical excellence of Biograph pictures at that time.

In 1908 Mr. Long, together with Frank Marion and George Kleine, started the Kalem company, which takes its name from the initials of the surnames of the founders. Mr. Long was the first president and had remained president ever since.

As president of the Kalem company Mr. Long brought that company to the fore. He was one of the first men to grasp many changes which are now in common vogue, such as advertising the players and sending producing companies wherever it might be advisable for exterior scenes.

Mr. Long's passing is regretted not only by his immediate associates and friends, but by the whole industry.

Biograph Re-issues Three More Griffith Subjects, "The Wanderer," "Oil and Water" and Another

THREE more of the Griffith re-issues have been decided upon by the Biograph company. They are "The Wanderer," one reel, September 3; "Oil and Water," two reels, September 10, and "The Girl and Her Trust," one reel, September 17.

"The Wanderer" deals with a wandering flute player and his adventures. It is a romantic, costume picture with Henry Walthall in the title role. Other players are Mae Marsh, Lionel Barrymore, Claire McDowell, Robert Harron and Walter Miller.

"Oil and Water" is probably the best known of this lot of three. In it Blanche Sweet does some of her very best work. She plays a dancer who marries a high minded young recluse. The appeal of the stage is too strong for her and she goes back to it.

The theme is that the natures of the dancer and the recluse cannot mix any more than oil and water can. The theatre scenes are very fine and Miss Sweet does some excellent dancing. Though it is not generally known Miss Sweet was a professional dancer before she came to pictures. Others in the cast are Henry Walthall, Lionel Barrymore, Walter Miller and Robert Harron.

"The Girl and Her Trust" is a story of the fidelity of a girl who is a telegraph operator at the railroad station in a little western town. Dorothy Bernard, now with the Fox Film Corporation, plays the girl. Others are Wilfred Lucas, Charles Mailes and Alfred Paget.

These pictures were shown recently at a private exhibition. All have the Griffith technique and fine photography, as well as several players who are now established as stars.

Exchanges Threaten to Move From Dallas If Drastic Censor Laws Are Enacted

DURING the middle of July the board of public welfare, Dallas, under which the local motion picture censors work, had a meeting and formulated plans to restrict films from showing in the city that had any tendency toward the immoral. According to the ideas advanced at that meeting, about one-fifth of the pictures that have been coming in to Dallas would be on the restricted list. This, they say, is totally unwarranted.

On Monday, July 19, the exchange men met in the offices of the Consolidated Film & Supply Company, and discussed the situation, and it was suggested by Manager Levison, of the Fox branch in Dallas, that the exchanges give notice to the municipal authorities that unless the censorship ordinance was put more reasonable, the exchanges would vacate the city, moving to Fort Worth, thirty-three miles west of Dallas.

He said that Dallas as a city should appreciate the investment the film exchanges had in the city, and that they should do what they could as a city to help the film business, and not be hampering the industry at every chance as the city fathers have been in the past two months.

It is very probable that definite action in the entire matter will be taken within the next two weeks; but the majority of the exchange men believe the city will so arrange the ordinance that the really meritorious film will be passed for showing in the city.

FLORENCE LAURENCE SERIOUSLY ILL

Milford, Mass., July 28.

Florence Laurence, who, before her retirement from moving pictures a year ago, was one of the best known screen actresses in the profession, is seriously ill at her country home here. Two Boston specialists have been telegraphed for.

Miss Laurence entered the motion picture field ten years ago while yet a girl in short dresses.

AMERICAN CORRESPONDENT RELEASE "FALL OF PRZEMYSL"

The American Correspondent Film Company, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, announces that its war feature, "The Battle and Fall of Przemysl, or Smashing the Armies of the Czar," is now ready to be shown.

This picture, which was actually taken on the battlefield by their correspondent,

M. B. CLAUSSEN

A. K. Dawson, is said to be the first and only one of the kind on the market.

M. B. Claussen, president of the American Correspondent Film Company, has engaged in the factory at Stamford and in the home office at New York and afield with the warring nations a working staff of remarkable ability. The first fruits of months of preparation indicate that the features forthcoming from the American Correspondent Film Company have been prepared on an elaborate and business-like basis.

Following the release of "The Battle of Przemysl," which will be sent out with attractive posters and multi-color photos for a high-class lobby display, with heralds, circulars, sheets and copy for a lecture, the company will have for its next attraction a most unusual feature, entitled "Germany in War Time," which will show the vast industries and the universal preparedness for war of the German Empire. Other war features from the Italian frontier are expected also very soon. They will be full of war action.

GEORGE OVEY, LEGITIMATE COMEDY OF NOTE, IS WITH CENTAUR FOR MUTUAL

George Ovey, famous for his many successes in comedy roles on the legitimate stage, will be featured in one-reel comedies to be produced by the Centaur Film Company, of Bayonne, N. J., for the Mutual program. This announcement was made recently by David Horsley, owner of the Centaur company and the Bostock Jungle and Film Company, of Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Horsley signed a contract, whereby the entire output of these two plants will be released exclusively through the Mutual.

Ovey is a natural born comedian, in whose every action Mutual audiences will find a laugh. One of Ovey's chief assets is his originality and his ability to present the most ludricous roles in such a way as to keep an audience in a stage of convulsive laughter.

Ovey was playing an important comedy role with a large traveling company when he was prevailed upon to transfer his many talents to studio work by Milton H. Fahrney, chief comedy director for Mr. Horsley.

Ovey began his stage career with the Beach and Howers Minstrels. Later he was with "1492," "A Texas Steer," "A Knight for a Day," "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," one of George M. Cohan's greatest successes; "Coming Through the Rye," "The Ginger-bread Man," "The Time, the Place and the Girl" and others, in each of which he played a comedy role.

The first of the Centaur comedies in which Ovey will be featured will be released in the Mutual program the latter part of August, according to the company's present plans.

SELIG GETS READY FOR PRODUCTION OF "GARDEN OF ALLAH"

Colonel William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, is busily engaged in completing final preparations for the filming of "The Garden of Allah," by Robert Hitchens. Mr. Selig's agents have worked for several months gathering the essentials and planning the properties and scenic environments for the forthcoming spectacle.

Colonel Selig is considering a de Luxe presentation of "The Spoilers" in its original length of twelve reels. "The Spoilers" is one of the most popular picture plays ever shown and it is as much an annual amusement institution as are the stage plays of "Way Down East," "Rip Van Winkle."

ALFRED MOSES, CAMERAMAN, HANGS UP "NO RETAKE"

The newer men who are entering the film industry as motion picture photographers will do well to keep ther eyes on the efficiency record hung up by Alfred H. Moses, Jr., the Thanhouser photographic expert. He joined the company in 1910, and in all these years of incessant work in all kinds of climates and lights there have not been four instances where retakes were necessary for reasons which might in the remotest way be laid to photography.

In hanging up this record for other camera men to shoot at, Mr. Moses injects an element of competitive endeavor into the work of all camera operators. His efficiency is the fruit of painstaking labor and thoroughness. He took to photography in 1888, and has given time to every branch of it. He is the inventor of the Multi-Exposure Camera, the Baby Simplex Projector, as well as all the articles now being manufactured by the Simplex Photo Products Company.

He is an electrical expert as well as a machinist, having built and operated mechanism from electric bells to power plants. Mr. Moses is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institution of Technology, and worked on the original Lumiere cinematograph in 1905, when Keith brought it over and Moses was his technical expert.

Mr. Moses is a southerner, hailing from Louisville, Ky. To him goes the credit of conceiving the automatic dissolve, and he is now at work on a natural color process.

WORLD DAILY FEATURE SERVICE IS IN BIG DEMAND

Among the many houses that have taken advantage of the World Film Corporation daily feature service proposition are the Hippodrome theatre, Washington, D. C.; Bell's opera house, Edenton, North Carolina; the New theatre, Robersonville, North Carolina; the Crystal theatre, Goldsboro, North Carolina; the Wonderland theatre, Norfolk, Va., and the Ocean View theatre, Ocean View, Va.

A COMING METRO RELEASE

FOX FILM WINS VICTORY OVER PREJUDICE IN MASSACHUSETTS

The much disputed Fox film, called both "The New Governor" and "The Nigger," won a victory in Brockton, Mass., recently when the mayor and other city officials viewed the complete film, and then passed it to be shown at the Orpheum theatre under the name, "The Nigger."

The manager reported that he turned away a thousand people whom he could not accommodate.

Genial Jake Junkets Journalists to Jadeless Job

Press Representatives, Under Escort of Mr. Wilk, Are Taken to Witness Filming of Scene for "Life's Crucible," World, and with the Banquet, Find No Dull Moments

GENIAL Jake Wilk, World Film's premier publicity artist, effervescing benignity in his customary manner, inaugurated another party on the evening of July 26, to which he cordially invited the press representatives of various trade journals and dailies. This time the journey was to Flushing, N. Y., to see Isidor Bernstein dance and direct a ballroom scene at the studio of the Equitable Motion Picture Corporation, the recently formed concern in which Mr. Bernstein and Lewis J. Selznick are the most prominent.

Mr. Bernstein is producing the picture from a scenario by Marc Edmund Jones, entitled "Life's Crucible." It is to be in five reels, and when complete will be released through the World Film Corporation. William Courtleigh and Orla Lea are appearing in the leading roles, supported by Clara Wiffle, George Soule Spencer and others.

Although the primary object of the evening's trip was to superintend the filming of the full dress ball, by far the most gratifying event of the night's entertainment was the presentation of a gold watch to Mr. Bernstein by Mr. Courtleigh in appreciation of the entire company's regard for their director.

Mr. Courtleigh presented the watch accompanied by a brilliant speech during the course of which he showered Mr. Bernstein with innumerable compliments from the entire staff of picture people at work on the film, and also reminded him that in the future, if he would be so thoughtful as to glance at the timepiece every day or so, his subordinates and co-ordinates would be pleased with the opportunity to grab a bite to eat.

Mr. Bernstein responded, offering his profuse thanks to the members of the company, saying that although there was a time when it almost broke his heart to leave all his friends in California, he had discovered plenty of new ones in the East.

Following these eulogies the members of the Fourth Estate, chaperoned by Mr. Wilk and a few feminine guests, repaired to a road house nearby and took the edge off their appetites with much that was good to eat and—drink. The repast was due to the ever-to-be-thanked efforts of Jim Cunningham, assistant to Mr. Bernstein in the direction of the new picture.

The rain, which threatened all night, and came down with a rush on the homeward bound party, did nothing to mar the enjoyment of the evening, Mr. Wilk.

Elsie Janis Cast in "Nearly a Lady" for Bosworth

ELSIE JANIS IN TWO SCENES FROM "NEARLY A LADY" (Bosworth)

AT the opportune time, when the daily press in this country and abroad, is telling of Elsie Janis' departure from London to the land of her birth, after winning envious honors among the English nobility, Bosworth, Inc., announces as its next release, "Nearly a Lady," a new film subject starring this clever little artist.

In presenting Miss Janis in "Nearly a Lady," the producers offer a vehicle for her that differs from previous film subjects in which she has appeared. It affords her dramatic ability plenty of opportunities to assert itself, and the picture displays her in many sparkling comedy situations. The subject is a romantic comedy-drama and various stirring scenes have been portrayed by Miss Janis in a manner that will even surprise those who are familiar with her wonderful versatility.

The producers have taken particular pains to give Miss Janis the proper atmosphere in which to work. Some of the most elaborate scenes were taken in the famous $250,000 swimming pool and palm garden of Edward L. Doheny's town house in Los Angeles. Many of the palms seen in the picture are importations from the Doheny plantation properties in old Mexico.

Other scenes showing life on a big western ranch display a striking contrast and lend a natural beauty to the play which greatly enhances its general merit.

In addition to giving the star particular opportunity to show her real worth as an actress, "Nearly a Lady" shows her in several new feats, including expert swimming, lariat manipulation and horseback riding. A lariat dance by Miss Janis, which is embodied in the story surprised even the cowboys who appear in the picture, as did several exhibitions with the rifle.

Supporting Miss Janis are such well-known film artists as Myrtle Stedman, Owen Moore, Frank Elliott, Harry Ham and Roberta Hickman. "Nearly a Lady" will be released on the Paramount program, August 19.

KATHRYN OSTERMAN GOES TO EQUITABLE FROM FOOTLIGHTS

Kathryn Osterman is the latest "legitimate" star to succumb to the lure of the film.

The signing of the contract by Miss Osterman with the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, a new $3,000,000 organization, to star in three big features, will mark, so Broadway hears, the beginning of a retaliatory process on the part of both moving picture producers and the so-called legitimate forces.

The Frohman offices declared some days ago that the signing of a moving picture contract by any of heir stars would automatically cancel their contract with the Frohman management.

Now with the announcement of Miss Osterman's advent into the film camp the moving picture producers are going to insert a clause in the contracts with their stars that they cannot appear on the legitimate stage, thus holding fast the letter of the old adage that it is a poor rule that will not work both ways.

WICHITA, KAN., THEATRES OPEN ON SUNDAY, FIRST IN FOUR YEARS

On Sunday, July 4, all the shows in Wichita, Kan., were open. This is the first time in four years that the moving picture shows have been open on Sunday.

It is said that the exhibitors intend to attest the validity of the Sunday closing law in their city. No arrests were made.

MANTELL, SHAKESPEARE ACTOR AFTER BOOTH, SIGNS WITH FOX

Robert B. Mantell has been engaged by William Fox to pose exclusively in moving pictures during the coming theatrical season. Genevieve Hamper, who in private life is Mrs. Robert B. Mantell, will also forsake the speaking stage and appear in pictures under the same management as her husband. Mr. Mantell is one of the last well-known stage artists to succumb to the lure of the screen. He will appear in modern drama.

Mr. Fox, who also produces the photoplays in which William Farnum, Valeska Suratt, Nance O'Neil, Annette Kellermann, Betty Nansen, the Danish actress, Theda

ROBERT B. MANTELL

Bara, of the Theatre Antoine, Paris, and other speaking stage stars appear, said:

"Artists appearing under my management in photoplays in future will not be permitted to appear on the speaking stage during the current season of their picture performances. This specification will be embodied in contracts. The moving picture stage today has reached a magnitude, artistic and commercial, sufficient for us to assure the patrons of the silent drama the exclusive services of the greatest dramatic artists."

THAW PICTURE, PASSED IN 1913 BY NATIONAL BOARD, BARRED FROM PENNSYLVANIA

Neither excessive heat nor high humidity dampen the ardor of the Pennsylvania board of censors. The latest film to come under the ban of Breitinger is "The Adventures of Harry Thaw," during the six months after his escape from Matteawan.

This picture was made in 1913, passed the national board of censors, and had remarkable success all over the country. Feeling that this feature would have enormous value when Thaw's final trial showed good chances of his freedom, Charles J. Kraus, of 227 North Thirteenth street, controlling the film, made numerous bookings and now he cannot put on the picture, as it is barred from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Kraus has placed the case in the hands of his attorney, with a view to appealing the censor's decision in the Court of Common Pleas, if such action be found advisable.

"EVIDENCE," NOW IN PRODUCTION AT KINEMACOLOR STUDIOS, IS WORLD RELEASE

For the production of "Evidence" into a motion picture drama, Edwin August, the director, has picked a cast which would assure the success of the most mediocre of plots.

Lillian Tucker, Haidee Wright, Florence Hackett, Richard Buhler, Richard Temple, Lionel Pape and little Maurice Stewart will without doubt make it an extraordinary production. Mr. August will play the role of Lord Wimbourne, while Miss Tucker will interpret the role of his wife, the Lady Una.

"Evidence," which was one of the popular Shubert productions at the Lyric theatre, New York, during the past season, is being staged at the Kinemacolor studios in Flushing, and is being produced by the F. Ray Comstock Film Corporation. It will be released through the World Film Corporation.

WATER OUTING PLANNED FOR MASSACHUSETTS FILM MEN

Boston, July 28.

Massachusetts exhibitors are trying out their water-wings in the bathtubs just now in preparation for the water events, which will be the big feature of the second outing of the summer at Pemberton Inn, along the South Shore, August 4.

There is a movement afoot, or "afin" might be more proper, to bar Glover Ware from the floating contest, but he may yet be able to thin down to the required weight, his friends say.

Another feature of the big time will be a ball game for the cup donated by Manager Fred B. Murphy, of the United Film service. This cup was donated back to the league by the team, which won it at the outing held in June.

Jack Lourie has by this time recovered from his last outing, and is expected to take the porpoise prize this year without half trying.

CHARTER FEATURES

Lincoln Cycle Releases

September 13th chosen for opening date of Greatest Serial of Moving Pictures in History of the Industry

Order Now

THE announcements of The Lincoln Cycle have stated that orders would not be received before August 1st.

The reason for this was that the entire field was to be acquainted first with the facts of this stupendous enterprise, before exclusive arrangements were made in given territories. Beginning with August 2nd, orders, contracts and applications will be received.

"Old Abe," the first release, is shown in five reels. It is a perfect motion picture production with Chapin as Lincoln and as Lincoln's grandfather. "Old Abe" is the first big feature of the Cycle, each of which is an independent play, yet all of which fit into the progression of the whole Cycle in point of unity and time. "Old Abe" is complete by itself.

Show it to your audience and forget the Cycle if you want to, but you will find that every man and woman will be "on the job" as each release appears. The Cycle has been laid out in detail.

The Cycle has been blocked out to the very last Feature. It is now in process of creation with a staff of experts in the many departments of picture production.

We are ready to accept your order now for "Old Abe" and we are ready to accept your order for the entire Cycle. Of course, the exhibitor who takes the Cycle, has something with which to conjure—has something to offer his audience, such as no other man in his territory can even compare with.

How the Cycle Will Be Advertised

There are two ways to advertise.

One is to spend the money in a national way, trusting to the density of population for reaching the local theatre's audience.

The other is to spend it in sections around the theatre as a pivot.

Making the Theatre the Pivot

The reason and the advantage of the first are that money goes further in that way—spreading thinly over more territory.

The reason and the advantage of the second are that each territory is covered thoroughly, reaching every person in it.

The Boards of Education to Advertise Chapin's Lincoln

The Charter Features Corporation is going to use the second as its advertising policy. Therefore, it should be understood that Cycle advertising will mostly be done at and about the theatre showing it.

The Churches to Advertise the Cycle

Among other plans which the advertising department are completing is that of co-operation with the schools and the local faculties, and the literature thereof promises to bring many people to Cycle Theatres.

All Societies to Advertise the Theatres

A like plan will be used with the churches.

Chapin (Himself) as Lincoln

LINCOLN

THERE is nothing with which to compare the Lincoln of Benjamin Chapin—unless it be Lincoln himself. Since Chapin produced his great four-act play, "Lincoln at the White House," some ten years ago, there have been many imitations in pictures of this great artist's work, but there is only one man in all the world who has ever succeeded in making the character a living reality.

Chapin's Lincoln is recognized at Washington and all over the world. Chapin's Lincoln is the Lincoln whom people have laughed with and cried over and paid their money, many thousands of dollars, to see and to hear, in vaudeville, on the legitimate stage and in lyceum work for fifteen years. Chapin is the Lincoln whom Lincoln's friends declare is perfect. And it is Chapin's Lincoln that will appear exclusively in the Cycle. Chapin will not be seen in any other Lincoln pictures but the Charter Features Corporation Cycle.

Literature Mailed on Request

The most unique "big book" of all motion picturedom is being sent out now to the hundreds who have requested it. Mr. Exhibitor, we have your copy ready. We have printed only enough to go to the better class theatres—the theatres that can handle the Cycle properly and do justice to it.

We will bring new patrons to your theatre! We will draw people who have not before been movie patrons Write or wire

NEW YORK EXHIBITORS, WHO ARE SUPERVISING THE BIG CARNIVAL SCHEDULED FOR AUGUST 21

JOE SARZIN, CHAIRMAN OF CONTESTS | ROBERT C. WHITTEN, SERG'T-AT-ARMS | W. HILKEMEIER, CHAIRMAN INVITATION COMMITTEE | A. CORN, CHAIRMAN ENTERTAINMENT COM. | THOMAS HOWARD, FINANCIAL SECRETARY

Joe Humphreys Engaged by New York Exhibitors as Carnival Master of Ceremonies

JOE HUMPHREYS, well known from coast to coast as the Major Domo of every important athletic gathering in the last ten or more years, has been engaged by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Greater New York to act in the capacity of Master of Ceremonies at the Gala Carnival and Field Day given by New York Local Number One at Brighton Beach, Saturday, August 21.

This is the one big news item of the week in connection with this big outing. Mr. Humphreys has been so long connected with every national athletic meeting of any importance that there is nothing that he does not know when it comes to taking charge of a field day program. Those who have seen Mr. Humphreys at the big prize fights or important athletic meetings may have thought that he was getting away with things very easily. The truth of the matter is that Mr. Humphreys has made a life long business of athletic matters. He is an authority of sporting events. He seems to have a special talent for that sort of thing. His mind is bubbling over with clever ideas in the way of novel and comic field day contests. He can reel the ideas off so fast that the New York Exhibitors have already begun to consider him a find. He was engaged only last Monday and is now working on the program of events. He has made many changes in the schedule as originally drafted by the exhibitors, all of which have been improvements.

Many letters are coming in to the rooms of the New York Exhibitors endorsing the idea of the Carnival and Field Day and expressing the intention of helping the cause along. A number of these communications have come from prominent out of town exhibitors. Bill Sweeney, president of the Chicago Exhibitors' League, has written a letter of congratulation and further states that it is his intention to be in New York with a loyal bunch of Chicago exhibitors on the 21st of August for the express purpose of taking in the Carnival and Field Day gathering. From Kentucky comes a letter from J. P. Masters, proprietor of the Elite, Princess, Alhambra, Lillian and Majestic theatres of Bowling Green. He writes that himself and Mrs. Masters and a delegation of Kentucky exhibitors will be on hand when the festivities begin. Incidentally it may be said that Samuel H. Trigger is going on to Chicago to bring Charlie Chaplin back to New York with him. Sam never takes "no" for an answer and if he goes out there to get Charlie Chaplin it is almost certain that Charlie Chaplin will come on to New York with him.

GOVERNOR OF MICHIGAN SHOWS INTEREST IN "LINCOLN CYCLE"

One of the many notables throughout the country who have expressed themselves in unquestioned approval of the "Lincoln Cycle," now being issued by the Charter Features Corporation, is Governor Ferris, of Michigan.

In writing to the Charter Features Corporation, he addressed Benjamin Chapin, the Lincoln characterizer, who is the chief of staff, and suggested the names of several theatres in Michigan that unquestionably would find it to their best interests to handle the Cycle.

He, moreover, mentions some theatres that should not be approached, and in addition indicates his regret that he himself cannot assist in the promotion of this feature series.

LEON BAMBERGER GOES TO V-L-S-E FROM WORLD EXCHANGE

Leon J. Bamberger has resigned as Washington representative of the World Film Corporation, to accept a position with the V-L-S-E.

Mr. Bamberger has succeeded in making an enviable reputation for himself during his connection with the World Film Corporation, and comes to the Big Four with a host of friends and well-wishers.

GLEN WHITE PICKED FOR LEADS OPPOSITE ETHEL GRANDIN

Glen White, with a long and successful record as a picture player, has been engaged by George Kleine to play leads opposite Ethel Grandin. He will be seen in the Grandin Series to be released weekly through the General Film Company.

Mr. White, like most of the present day film stars, enjoyed a varied and successful stage experience prior to his advent into motion pictures. He was for a long time associated in leading parts with some of the better class road companies, including leads in Augustin Daly's "A Country Girl," Lew Fields' "It Happened in Nordland" and Charles Frohman's "Hook of Holland."

GLEN WHITE

He also played leads in the Vaughan Glaser stock at Cleveland and spent a season in support of Fay Cortney in Columbus. He passed the following two years in vaudeville under the management of Joe Hart in J. V. Hobart's popular sketch "Bill's Wife." His last appearance on the stage was in London, where he played the gambler in Joe Hart's production of "Every Wife."

Mr. White, however, lays claim to considerable picture experience, including the lead in "Seats of the Mighty."

"MY LOST ONE"

(Vitagraph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE fact that a theme is commonplace does not necessarily condemn it, in fact, if a story be made over time and again it is a sure sign of its popularity. "My Lost One" is based on a plot familiar to both the spoken and silent drama, yet as here presented by Vitagraph it still manages to hold the interest. Jesse Datus Smith prepared the scenario from the opera "Mi Perdida" and Harry Handworth directed the production. For presenting a purely heart-interest story in a pleasing manner, all concerned with this number have done very well.

From the short outline of the story its heart-interest qualities may easily be gleaned. Juan, a struggling musician in the Neapolitan Opera orchestra, marries a member of the chorus. Much later she tires of her life and wishes to go back on the stage.

Consequently she accepts the offer of the leader of the orchestra and goes back to her old life. Henri, the leader, plans to place her in a new opera in the prima donna's role. He learns that Juan is writing an opera, "Mi Perdida," a piece inspired by his wife's desertion.

His underling steals it, produces it and the entire performance is a great success. Juan, who has become almost unbalanced through the loss of his opera, becomes a waiter. He hears parts of his opera being played by the orchestra with the ultimate result that he comes into his own and is reunited with his wife. Dorothy Kelly, Nicholas Dunaew as the husband and William Dunn as the leader render characteristic performances in the leading parts.

JUAN MEETS AND WINS HIS WIFE

"SEVEN SISTERS"

(Famous Players—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

A DELIGHTFUL comedy is "Seven Sisters," full of delicate humorous touches, deftly conveyed to the audience by the clever acting of a carefully picked cast.

Nothing in the picture excites audible laughter; it just tickles the risibilities, bringing a quiet smile to the satisfied spectator. An air of whimsical phantasy pervades all the scenes, from the time Marguerite Clark, as Mici, the mischievous younger sister, appears in the opening reel in an attitude of whispering confidence with a wise-face cow, who, for a moment, is forgetful of its bovine dignity, and must have winked knowingly at the very eye of the camera in the snapping of the incident.

The hour of midnight is quaintly recorded by the introduction of two wakeful and energetic cats. These hardened caterwaulers, the bootjack and old-shoe magnet kind, scratch and bite in a pinwheel whirl of belligerency on rooftop in the blue haze of moonlight.

Mesdames Grimalkins, with touching vanity, watch with condescending approval the battle of the feline knights for their favor. But cats are not the only animals assisting, in a subordinate way, to carry on the fun.

The demure and apparently serious minded donkey that carries Cousin Toni on his wife-quest to Mici manages to wiggle his long side-intelligencers in a most diverting manner. The flash shown of a gentlemanly house dog forgetting his manners and barking rudely at the heroine on her return to the convent is another piece of side-business which indicates the director's attention to laughter-producing details.

A very amusing scene is the pillow fight in the girls' dormitory after hours in the convent, where impish Mici has been sent by her mother, fearful of her young daughter's tricks interfering with the older daughters' chance in marriage. Another good bit is the pious horror of the unworldly convent sisters on the discovery of Mici's terrible, terrible crime of stealing off for a few hours' innocent pleasure at a properly conducted costume dance.

This ball set was magnificently staged, and is one of the finest scenes of its kind yet shown on the screen. Mici, played with captivating witchery by Marguerite Clark, in her best mood, finally shows her mother that she can think to some purpose as well as play elfish tricks on the family and neighbors. The resourceful little puss does something for her three elder sisters which they are unable to do for themselves—find docile and willing youths to lead them to the altar.

The plot of "Seven Sisters" is based on a Hungarian marriage custom. The girls in a family must be married according to their relative ages—the eldest first, then the second, the third, and so on. None are allowed to "marry out of turn."

The youngest cannot marry before any of her older sisters. Mici was third in a string of seven. She fell in love with a young man who wanted to marry her at once—but there was the bar of custom.

But Mici was not going to wait, particularly as the eldest sisters were at an age when every day lessened their chances. But equal to the emergency, Mici finds a way out of the situation—pleasantly done in five reels of beautiful photography and graceful acting.

"THE GOLD IN THE CROCK"

(Lubin—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

THE two women in this story act in an improbable manner when the crisis is reached, yet there are enough thrills in the other scenes to overcome this defect and make this picture of interest to the average audience.

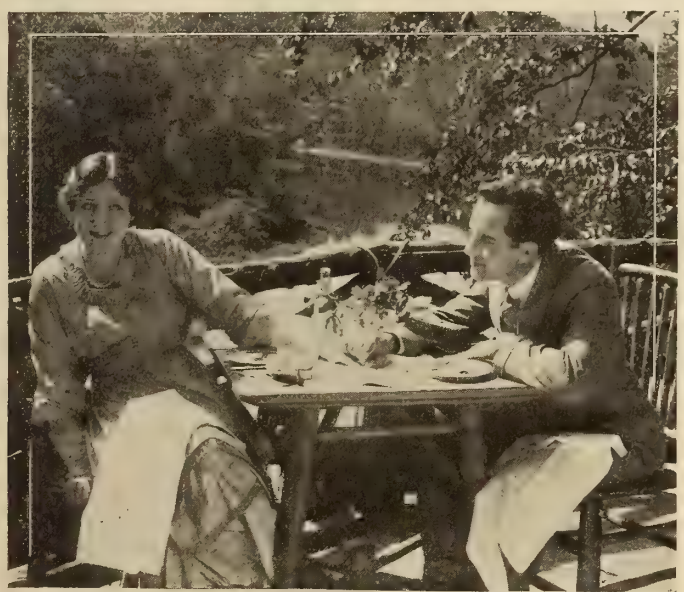
Chester and Jessie Gray have grown indifferent through years of miserly saving while trying to become owners of a large lumber tract. When Grace, the wife's young sister, comes on the scene, there are complications. Harry Vane, assistant to Gray, falls in love with Grace, as does the latter himself.

THE FOUR COME TOGETHER

Both Jessie and Harry see Chester's lovemaking, but miss Grace's repulse. However, both sisters, from unselfish impulses, start separately to run away. Jessie takes the gold hidden in the crock. Their exciting adventures and final rescue make the ginger in the remainder of the play, which ends happily for both couples.

Edgar Jones directed and played the part of Chester. The rest of the cast: Louis Mortelle, Josephine Longworth, Phyllis May, George Gowan and Harry Loomis.

SCENES FROM CHAPTERS ELEVEN, TWELVE AND THIRTEEN OF THE VITAGRAPH SERIAL, "THE GODDESS"



"MARRYING MONEY"

(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"MARRYING MONEY," based on the successful legitimate farce by Washington Pezet and Bertram Marburgh, relies on its clever construction more than its several character interpretations for its ultimate humorous effect on the spectator. It is really a comedy that has lent itself with admirable adaptability to the screen. Its situations are strikingly clever and while the majority of them can be laid to the efforts of the co-authors, we suspect the scenario writer of being responsible for some that have been added to the original play during its preparation for the screen.

Laughter of that natural, whole-hearted variety follows the varied course of the two impecunious lovers of this romance, from their introduction until their marriage, followed by the discovery that they own a million dollars after all. The lovers are impersonated by stars of no less ability and popularity than Clara Kimball Young and Chester Barnett.

MONEY IS NOT TO BE CONSIDERED

Although she has devoted practically all her previous efforts to dramatic work, Miss Young displays a genuine appreciation of the comic possibilities of her role in this picture, and appears to good advantage in all her scenes. Mr. Barnett is a tried and proven comedian and his performance is as intelligent and humorous as those we have become accustomed to in past pictures.

Locations of appropriate and ideal appearance have been chosen as backgrounds for that part of the action that transpires at the summer resort. Several views of a small lake and stream are unusually pretty, while they and the other localities are photographed in a pleasing and consistent manner.

There is only one thing in the picture that should not be present. The door of an office reveals, beyond a doubt, when its "glass" upper half is broken, that the "glass" is paper. Aside from this Director James Young has presented a picturized comedy that will certainly amuse by its plot and acting, besides creating a pleasant effect as to the manner in which it has been produced.

It may be mentioned that the last scene will create a very big laugh. The couple now married, possessed of the million, are on their honeymoon. They stop their automobile across the railroad tracks that they may grasp the opportunity to indulge in a kiss, in so doing they hold up an express train to the great distress of the crew and passengers—it was quite a kiss.

"THE KING OF THE WIRE"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

THERE is little to be said against this latest of Edison's multiple reel dramas but much more can be spoken for it. In addition to carrying a plot that is interesting throughout, never letting the attention of the beholder lack for a moment, it has good, clear photography, perfect interior settings, and beautiful views of a country estate for a background in the exterior scenes.

The acting of the principals, Pat O'Mally as a wire walker and Gladys Hulette as the girl reporter, leaves nothing to be desired. It might be mentioned right here that Gladys Hulette doesn't look any older in her long (regular) dress than she does in her characterization of a romping schoolgirl. The latter character she assumes when trying to gain entrance to the senator's home by mingling with his small children. The character fits her to a dot.

From the way Pat O'Mally makes himself perfectly at home on the slack wire, one is apt to infer that he has had previous experience, probably in a former incarnation (am I right?) Twice he gives an exhibition of a circus-slack-wire performance that certainly borders on professionalism to say the least. Once in the circus scene, where by the way he does an exceptionally realistic fall from the wire, and second when he rescues the girl from a window, carrying her over his shoulder while walking the wire from the window to a pole outside.

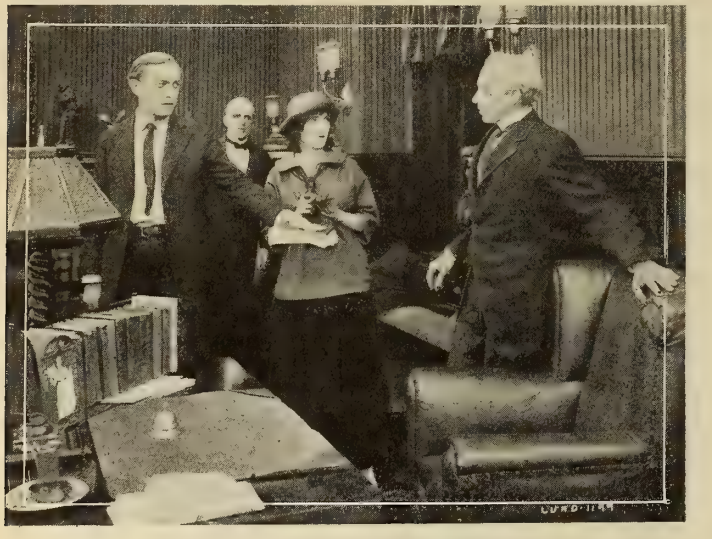
The entire story is full of interesting situations.

"JUST JIM"



(Broadway Universal Feature—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

GIVEN a free hand in the preparation and production of a picture, O. A. C. Lund knows in just what manner it is easiest to reach the sympathies of his audience. He holds the key to the average mortal's heart and he knows the expedient moment to use it. In other words, Oscar Lund knows human nature and "Just Jim" is proof conclusive of this statement.

In this production Mr. Lund has centered his whole story about an ex-convict, a man fighting and winning an unequal battle against miscarried justice. Such a character as Jim probably never existed and never will exist, but this is not detrimental to the interest in the picture; in fact, because he is a purely imaginary figure, he claims more attention and more admiration that he would otherwise.

This fascinating title character has been most appropriately interpreted by Harry Carey, who will be remembered as one of the old Griffith-Biograph stars. As the constantly hounded man, who is doing right when his enemies believe him continually doing wrong, Mr. Carey plays with sincerity.

The picture offers a wide variety of scene. Some of the action takes place in a typical western frontier town, some in the city and some on the high seas. While in the west we are treated to a thrilling scene that convinces besides. A terrific rain storm causes a wash-out on the stage road with the result that the coach plunges over a high precipice—a most realistic and sensational episode.

Then the overhauling and the capture of the smugglers by the revenue cutter is another rapid and stirring series of scenes. It may be mentioned that the atmosphere in every case is about as realistic as one could ask for, while the camera work throughout is excellent.

An idea of the story may be gleaned from the following brief. Released from prison Jim enters a house with intent to rob. A dying woman, believing him a friend, places a package in his hand beseeching him to find her daughter. The nephew of the dead woman being very much a rascal puts the police on Jim's trail, as he knows his aunt's fortune to be enclosed in the package. Jim finds the girl (Jean Taylor), but only after many adventures of the most thrilling variety.

"THE CLIMBERS"

(Lubin Liberty Bell—V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

WHEN Amelia Bingham so successfully carried off the honors in "The Climbers" of Clyde Fitch at the Bijou theatre some dozen odd years ago, none of us who so much enjoyed this satirical, society drama with its skillfully woven touches of clever comedy and its high lights of tragedy, dreamed that in the year of grace 1915, a new and more interesting version of this popular play would be placed before an eager public—a photo drama of high merit.

Clay M. Greene has made a dexterous adaptation in his scenario. Some scenes have suffered; the funeral which caused a veritable sensation because of its novelty, in the play, is tame on the film. Also the sale of the Parisian dresses of the bereaved family naturally lacks the touches which the silly chatter of the society butterflies alone could give it.

On the other hand many things which are only spoken of in the play, notably the wedding of Blanche, are vivid on the screen. Director Barry O'Neil used with skill and understanding, every resource for making this a fine feature, giving us clear photography, beautiful scenes of the many social functions indulged in by the climbing Hunters, above all a large cast in which even the menials are stars.

Then we have as the bright, particular star of the whole, Gladys Hanson. This young actress invests every role she essays with her own charming personality, added to a conscientious and feeling portrayal of her characters. As Blanche Sterling, the married daughter of the Hunters, she lives the devoted daughter, the loving mother, the outraged wife, the passionate woman, and is excellent in all.

George Soule Spencer ably supports Miss Hanson as Ned Warren, the family friend, but hopelessly in love with Blanche. Walter Hitchcock gives a good impersonation of Dick, the erring husband.

Edith Ritchie (Mrs. Stephen Morris), a young society woman, who entered the picture field only a few months ago, shows no trace of amateurishness in the part of Ruth Hunter, the good angel aunt of the whole family.

As Mrs. Hunter, the scheming mother who captures the rich husband away from her own daughters, Eleanor Barry is clever. Likewise clever is Clarence Jay Elmeras Trotter, who allows himself to be easily caught. Ruth Bryan and Frankie Mann as the daughters are especially good in the scene where Mamma's elopement is phoned to them. Only lack of space forbids the mention of others in the long cast, all of whom are worthy of note.

When Hunter finds himself on the brink of ruin, not only by the silly extravagance of his socially ambitious family, but by the just discovered peculations of his son-in-law, Dick Sterling, he kills himself.

The bankrupt family is saved by Aunt Ruth, who shares her fortune with them, unwisely placing its management in the hands of Dick; the latter, more weak than vicious, lets this wealth slip through his incapable fingers by wild stock speculations, at the same time losing other moneys in his care.

This second crisis is saved by the intervention of the rich Trotter, now stepfathering the whole crowd. Ned Warren, for the sake of the woman he so unselfishly loves, uses his good offices to save Dick from prosecution.

When Dick finds that his wife's heart has left him, although for the sake of their child, she will not divorce him, he really loving her in spite of all, commits suicide, leaving the future clear for the ultimate union of Blanche and the faithful Ned.

"REAPERS OF THE WHIRLWIND"

(Biograph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

GRETCHEN HARTMAN and Jose Ruben, a young French actor, who was seen last year with Madame Yorska's company in New York, have the leading roles in this dramatic feature. The story is one well calculated to appeal.

John Howard enters into an intrigue with Cora LeGrande, a dancer. When he is dragged into a duel over her his good name is lost as well as hers. His son, ashamed, studies art under his mother's name. Cora, not knowing who the young artist is, goes to the son for a portrait with the result that he falls in love with her. The mother discovers what is happening and gets Cora to promise never again to see the boy. Charles rushes to Cora's rooms. There he meets his father. The elder man tries to shoot his son but instead he kills Cora. Thus comes the reaping of the whirlwind and the complete ruin of the lives of all implicated in the intrigue.

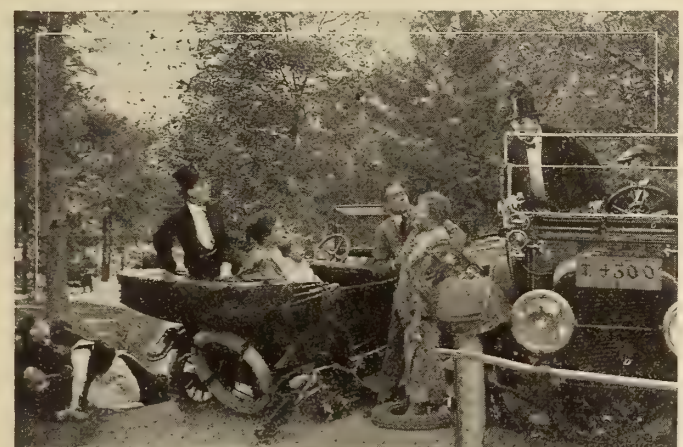
As the dancer Gretchen Hartman is superb. Not only is she compellingly pretty but she is also one of the most reliable screen actresses. Ruben is the most promising recruit enlisted from the legitimate in a long time. He plays the son. Charles H. Mailes plays the husband. G. Raymond Nye is the dancer's manager and Violet Reid is the wife. J. Farrell McDonald directed.

"JUDY FORGOT"

(Broadway Universal Features—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

EXHIBITORS who diet their patrons on the Universal program will be certain of distributing a series of hearty laughs when they offer "Judy Forgot." Although its theme might be criticised as having long offered a basis for other comedies of more or less merit, this fact does nothing to lessen one's interest in the plot as here presented.



Marie Cahill, the noted comedienne, makes her debut on the Universal program in the stellar role of this play and will probably be the cause of no little hilarity, although the humorous tenor of the play's situations furnish the greater number of laughs. The subtitles, too, are written in a very funny style, being in almost every instance extracts from the play.

The original comedy is the work of Avery Hopwood, who, evidently, well knew the respective values of farce and suspense, as both properties have been combined with an admirable degree of intelligence. It was adapted for the screen by Raymond L. Shrock, while T. Hayes Hunter directed the work.

In commenting upon the atmosphere of the picture it might be remarked that all the interiors, supposed to be laid in European resorts, are realistic enough, but the exteriors hardly convey the correct illusion. The railroad yard is plainly American, while a good many of the locations remind one of Greater New York's environs.

However, the comedy element of the film will serve to do away with this defect, especially before the audiences of smaller towns. The photography is very good throughout, while the light effects have been well arranged.

Playing the opposite role from Miss Cahill, Samuel B. Hardy

JUDY'S MEMORY COMES BACK TO HER

renders a well studied performance. The supporting cast gives sincere and pleasing characterizations.

After the marriage of the comedy queen to jolly Freddy they go abroad for their honeymoon, where Judy's wink gets her into all manner of trouble and angers her husband beyond patience. In an accident she loses her memory and subsequently a misunderstanding takes place at a hotel where another couple is staying, the husband of which does not wish his uncle to know that he is married.

The resulting situation can best be imagined, but it may be said that at frequent intervals through the picture the laughs are sincere and hearty.

LIBERTY COMPANY IS ON WAY TO CUBA

Jacksonville, Fla., July 28.

THE players of the Liberty Motion Picture Company, of Germantown, Pa., are on their way to Cuba, after a few days' stay in the city.

Kalem players are still busy on "The Curious Case of Meredith Stanwell." Harry Millarde is directing and playing the lead.

The Florida company has just finished producing a three-reel drama, entitled, "The Factory Girl." Several new players have been engaged, including Capt. G. Tighe, of Los Angeles.

"TIDES OF TIME"

(Knickerbocker—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

REVEREND C. J. HARRIS received his inspiration for this story from Edgar Allan Poe's tale entitled "The Conqueror Worm" and one of Shakespeare's most famous passages, "The Seven Ages of Man." He has combined the two themes in such a manner that the resultant picture will be of deep interest. In fact, as a program release, "Tides of Time" can rank with the good ones.

Although the story has offered great opportunities to its producer, all of which have been seized upon with more or less intelligence, either the Reverend Mr. Harris or Mr. Levering, the director, has been guilty of mixed imagery, which lend the picture somewhat of a weird aspect, although its intensity remains.

As for the cast, which is headed by Mary Nash, it is quite competent enough. Miss Nash plays with feeling and expression in the part of the woman who has been dragged down by an unmerciful factory owner.

She calls upon him to remind him to reform before it is too late. He dreams over his past and all the wrong he has done flashes before him. Then he has a horrible vision of his future—he sees first his bread and then himself being devoured by worms. And he awakes to become a much better man.

There are many allegorical scenes in the picture, the greater part of them exhibiting a group of ethereal characters looking down on the drama of the wicked factory owner and his suffering employees.

On the other hand, we are given a series of remarkable thrills showing the sinking of a boat. On the whole, the General program has seldom possessed such a novel release. It will without doubt create much talk.

JESSIE RALPH IS CAST FOR PATHE'S "THE GALLOPER"

JESSIE RALPH, who has scored many hits on the stage in character parts, will be seen in Pathé's Gold Rooster paly "The Galloper," by Richard Harding Davis. Donald Mackenzie, who is producing the picture for Pathé, feels that in her he has made a real acquisition, since Miss Ralph is one of those rare players who believe that acting is a profession that requires just as much hard work off the stage as on, and studies every part with the view of getting every bit out of it of which it is capable.

Miss Ralph had important parts in the following well known recent New York plays: "The Revolt," in support of Helen Ware; "A Rich Man's Son," "Help Wanted," "The Price," and "After Five."

Mr. Mackenzie's cast for "The Galloper" is an exceptionally strong one, headed by Clifton Crawford, and the picture will be finished before August 1, for release in the fall.

"ON HER WEDDING NIGHT"

(Vitagraph—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

BY the ingenious practice of inverting the usual sequence of action, Eugene Mullin, the author of this melodrama, has achieved in the completed story, a work of novelty and power. The actual climax serves as the opening scene and then by scientific deduction practised by one of the characters the entire story is gradually unravelled and pictured in a manner that substantially justifies it being defined as a melodrama of mystery.

Due to this method of plot development combined with the well defined ability of the cast the familiarity of the story is eclipsed to such an extent that it is hardly noticed. The intensity of the situations and the logical manner in which they have been constructed also count largely in favor of the picture's refreshing aspect.

In many respects "On Her Wedding Night" is one of the best features that William Humphrey has directed. The story could hardly have been handled to better advantage, as although several of its salient features are not made known until the end, the action is understandable and intensely interesting at all times.

The settings in every instance are strikingly realistic. Whether a scene be laid in a residence of the rich or a hovel of the poor, the fact that they are of studio manufacture is never belied. Given these realistic scenes, supported by camera work of a praiseworthy variety, the technical side of the production is as good as one could ask for.

The story starts with the murder of a man, who was to be married that night, by a woman, who as it develops later, he had once wronged. The discovery of the murdered man's past is made almost entirely through the efforts of Hallem a great friend of the girl's. Later he marries her.

UNAWARE OF THE DREADFUL TRAGEDY

Edith Storey, appearing as Helen Carter, performs with great expression and emotion throughout the picture, while as Hallem, Antonio Moreno vies with her for histrionic honors. The supporting roles are ably cared for by Carolyn Birch, Denton Vane, William Dunn, Louise Beaudet and Charles Kent.

"On Her Wedding Night" will certainly add strength to any program. It deserves to be played up well, for none who will have looked forward to seeing a fine picture will be disappointed in this.

"THE TOAST OF DEATH"

(NYMP-Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

LOUISE GLAUM is at her very best in this picture. Miss Glaum plays a vampire so well that there is a doubt if any other woman on the screen today could eclipse her in the part. Miss Glaum's work is that of the finished picture player, the pantomimist. Not only does she use her facial expression but her eyes, her lips, her hands, her arms and her body all convey a message of sensuousness, not sensuality.

The treatment of the story of "The Toast of Death" deserves consideration. It's simple enough. Poppea, an English girl, marries a tremendously wealthy Indian prince, a coffee-colored gentleman, who is lord over vast estates. She also retains her intimacy with Captain Drake. The husband finds the two and proposes the toast of death. He fills two wine glasses, pours poison in one and lets the wife choose which glass the captain shall drink and which he shall drink.

The wife's choice is blind as she doesn't know which glass contains the poison. But she picks the poisoned one for her lover. Her husband has the body thrown out and then drives the wife out in the desert, an ending reminiscent of Nazimova's "Bella Donna."

But the point is that C. Gardner Sullivan knew well how to weave a good story with few characters. The great beauty of this is its simplicity and clarity. Witness "The Toast of Death" and "Her Reward" with Bessie Barriscale. Yes, "The Toast of Death" is an exceptional picture in construction and acting. Harry Keenan is the Indian husband and Herschell Mayall is the English lover, both giving wonderful interpretations.

The theme is so well handled that its thinness is forgotten. The atmosphere is good in its sweeping effects and poor in details, such as mounting the men on McClellan U. S. army saddles.

A fine picture on the whole and one touching the high water mark in "sirenism."

"A MAN AFRAID"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THIS picture utilizes some well photographed automobile race film which is so fitted in as to add considerably to the interest of the story.

Richard C. Travers is featured as Ted Barnum grown to manhood, while Tommy Harper does highly commendable work in the first part of the picture as Ted in his youth. Renee Noel makes both an able and attractive heroine in the role of Austen Martin. The other two principals are John Cossar as Mr. Martin and Herbert Heyes as Bayard Schnell, Ted's rival.

When Ted Barnum is eleven years old, a fall from a trapeze stuns him and deranges certain nerve centers, with the result that he becomes a coward. Fifteen years later he falls in love with Austen Martin. Bayard Schnell, also in love with Austen, knows this weakness in Ted's character and induces Austen to break her engagement after he has demonstrated to her Ted's cowardice. Shortly after this Ted proves his courage when he saves an old man from being run down by a machine. Austen wants to renew their engagement on learning of this, but Ted declares he will not do so until he has premeditatedly performed some test of nerve. With this end in view, he enters some automobile races. Schnell bribes his mechanician to quit in the midst of the race. Ted unsuccessfully tries to find one to take his place when Austen arrives on the scene and consents to drive the remainder of the race with him. The nerve he shows convinces both him and Austen that he has won out in his fight against cowardice.

"THE WITNESS"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

AN exciting plot, full of murder, suicide, threats, unjust suspicion and other thrills marks this scenario by Clay M. Greene. Joseph Smiley is the producer and takes the part of James Thorne, the guilty bank cashier who causes all of the trouble. Both these functions are acceptably performed.

FRED WISHES TO PROVE HIS INNOCENCE

Lillie Leslie in the double role of Mrs. Carlisle and her daughter, Elise, while almost too mature a figure to visualize well a girl of nineteen, gives, however, a creditable enactment of the role. A long cast of the well known Lubin support adds strength to this film.

James Thorne has Carlisle arrested for the bank robbery, of which he alone is guilty. Carlisle, out on bail, while at Thorne's house bent on revenge, is shot dead by the latter. "The witness" is little Carl Thorne, only seven years old. The efforts of the Thorne family to keep the child from revealing this secret ruins his life, until as a young man he meets and loves Elise Carlisle who, in the long ago, had been his child sweetheart.

Resultant complications lead Thorne senior to try to abduct Elise. This crime is frustrated by Carl, who at last tells all he knows. The guilty man commits suicide, the lovers are at last united and the tragedy is finally forgotten.

"CHALICE OF COURAGE" IS MADE NOTABLE BY ITS SETTINGS

THE next release of the V-L-S-E combination will be Vitagraph's six part production entitled "The Chalice of Courage," based on the novel by the Reverend Cyrus Townsend Brady. It was produced at the Vitagraph western plant and is set for release on August 9.

While the story is notable for its unusual strength, perhaps the most striking thing about the picture is its beautiful scenes and supreme photography. The greater part of the action is laid on a mountain-top in mid-winter and snow many feet deep is lying on the ground. This fact combined with the clear photography, entirely free from static, throws the picture in a setting that is ideal.

Besides there are not a few scenes of a thrilling nature in the course of the plot's development. A horse and rider falling from a high cliff, a girl swept on in a raging mountain torrent and rescued by a mountaineer, are instances in which thrills have been combined with flawless logic.

As the picture has already been reviewed in the columns of this paper it is unnecessary to relate the story, but suffice it to say that the action in every instance does credit to its beautiful setting.

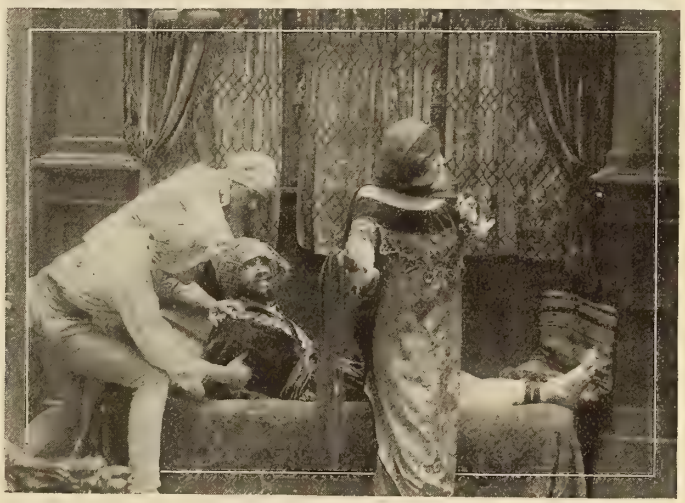
"THE MELODY OF DOOM"



(Selig—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

W. E. Wing is the author of the unusual scenario from which this picture is produced under the direction of Frank Beal. Aside from the fact that it diverges from the commonplace, one of its chief recommendations is that it offers Eugenie Besserer splendid opportunity to display her ability as an emotional actress.

She plays the part of Zara, an adventuress of the vampire type most convincingly. The rest of the cast include William Sheerer, as Henri; Fred Huntley as Chand, a Hindu crystal gazer, and Bertram Grasby as Weaver.

Henri, a violinist, learns that his brother has been put out of the way by an adventuress known as Zara, after his infatuation for her had ruined his life. A Hindu whom Henri had nursed back to life has also sworn vengeance on Zara. He teaches Henri to play "The Melody of Doom" on his violin. With this horribly weird tune they first prevent Zara from weaving her spell around Weaver, a young bank messenger, and later after they have lured her to a deserted house, the terror which this music brings to her soul forces her to confess to the murder of Henri's brother. As she reaches the climax of the confession, she falls lifeless to the floor.

ZARA PUNISHES CHAUD

"THE DAWN OF FREEDOM"

(Pathé—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

HENNY PORTEN, one of the most famous foreign screen stars, is featured in this drama. She plays Joanna, daughter of a Swiss peasant and an ardent sympathizer in the Swiss revolt against the French. She is engaged to one of the revolutionists, Peter.

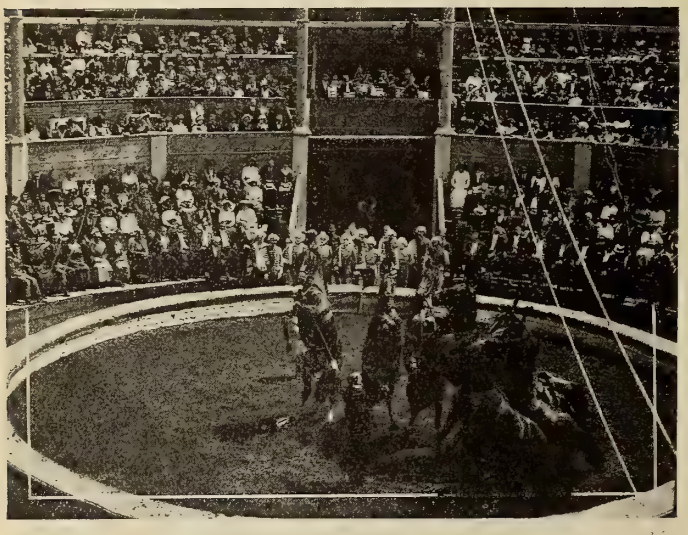
One day Joanna rescues from Peter a wounded enemy. She pleads for the man and takes him to her father's house, where he is paroled on his promise not to escape.

Joanna feels drawn to the captive and they fall in love. But the captive, one day, escapes after listening to his captors discuss their plans.

Peter finds out that Joanna loved the man and is wild with jealousy. The former captive finds out that he loved Joanna and goes back to meet her. Peter and the father come upon the sweethearts, seated on a rustic bench overlooking a deep ravine. The sweethearts see that the men are determined to kill them, so they leap over the cliff together and the death of their bodies is, for their souls, the dawn of freedom.

Henny Porten's work is very pleasant. She has a sweet, lovable face and so much dramatic ability that she is famous on the continent where good actresses abound. In addition to the love story there are many good battle scenes and the Tyrolean Alps form beautiful backgrounds throughout the picture.

The story is by Walter Turzinsky.



"THE RIGHTED WRONG"

(Pathé—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THIS is one of those enjoyable imported pictures with a wealth of pretty scenery and settings, good playing and wonderful camera work. The tinting and toning is also exceptional.

The wrong comes when Prince Lindow substitutes a false will and gets possession of the fortune of the prince who had intended to leave most of his estates to Diantha, his adopted daughter. The prince has to pay blackmail to Norris, who found the real will.

THE TRAINED HORSES HOLD THE RING

Diantha leaves home and becomes a famous trick trider in the same circus with Travers, a former groom of hers, who loves her. The groom had been discharged for the crime of stealing Diantha's picture. Travers scents something wrong in Diantha's not inheriting her adopted father's estate. On investigating he locates the will, steals it from Norris and establishes Diantha as owner of the estate. Then Diantha and he marry.

The production is very fine. For instance the set showing the circus must have cost a small fortune and a whole circus is put on the screen. The lighting effects and general artistry is way ahead of most American-made pictures. Altogether it is a thoroughly high class and enjoyable picture.

"THE MAKER OF DREAMS"

(Kalem-"Broadway Favorites"—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

AGAIN the Hobart-Vignola combination has presented a thoroughly interesting drama, with a good plot, excellent photography, and a thoroughly alive cast. This is getting to be a regular thing with this combination of author and actor-director, and soon the words C. Doty Hobart, author, and Robert G. Vignola, director, appended to a Kalem release will have the same significance as "Sterling" on silver. Just a few words detailing the plot and mentioning the principal "feature points" will be all that is necessary, and "The Maker of Dreams" is an example.

In the first place we have Hal Forde in a dual role playing both father and son. It will be remembered that Forde played opposite Kitty Gordon in the "legit" in "The Enchantress," "The Purple Road" and a number of other Broadway plays. As the country boy in love with the country girl (Alice Hollister) he is good. When his mother (Helen Lindroth) breaks off the match for him to marry money (Ethel Eastcourt) in the person of Rena, an heiress, thus bringing misery to two young lives, he is better. Later when he has a son and that son loves a poor girl, he is at his best.

He is supported by superior acting on the part of the other principals and everything considered one of the best releases of the month is the result.

"DETECTIVE BLINN"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

SETTINGS, all well chosen, from those laid in wealthy homes and in an exclusive jewelry shop to those laid in the squalid rendezvous of thieves, together with the usual excellent photography which is assisted by the attractive tinting effects, characterizes this picturization of a detective story. While it is at no time wildly exciting, nevertheless unflagging interest is consistently maintained throughout.

The story hinges upon a series of baffling jewel robberies committed on the wealthy families of society. Detective Blinn, a part well interpreted by Ed Coxen, decides to get at the bottom of these daring robberies, and with this end in view works into the good graces of two crooks.

The crisis is reached when at her coming out ball a valuable necklace is stolen from the neck of the debutante. Next day, Blinn who has been present among the crooks at the social function, gains admittance to a room in the back of a chop suey place to which the stolen jewels are taken for disposal.

Having secured the necessary evidence, the crooks are arrested one by one as they come out of this place. When the purchaser is unmasked, it is discovered that he is the proprietor of the most exclusive jewelry establishment in town, a man who has entree to the best circles of society.

Winifred Greenwood is seen as the debutante daughter of Judge Page, a part played by John Steppling. The work of George Field as the suave jeweler and master thief is worthy of particular mention. Beatrice Van plays the girl accomplice of the thieves.

MABEL NORMAND SEEKS IN VACATION FREEDOM FROM CAMERA WORRY

MABEL NORMAND, Keystone star, is planning a real vacation for the latter part of the summer. She visited the Exposition in San Francisco during March, but the entire time was taken up with making pictures.

The next trip is to be all vacation.

"THE SECOND IN COMMAND"

(Quality Pictures-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THERE is no doubting the truth of the old adage, "All the world loves a lover." And as "The Second in Command" deals mainly with lovers, their trials and misunderstandings, there seems to be small doubt as to its pleasing all classes of people.

The picture marks the entree of the Quality Picture Corporation into the ranks of producers and for first offering, "The Second in Command" will result in the producer's name being firmly established in the minds of the public.

Francis X. Bushman and Marguerite Snow are in the featured roles of the picture. The extreme popularity and their marked suitability for the parts of the two lovers well recommends the choice of the producers to feature them in the picture.

The story is based on the famous Belasco stage success of the same name. It was produced on the west coast. The photography is all one could ask for in every scene, while the settings and exterior locations are appropriate in every case.

MURIEL SHOWS HER AFFECTION FOR ANSTRUTHER

Major Bingham, a member of an English regiment is deeply in love with Muriel Mannering despite the fact that she has time and again refused him. So great is his love that he successfully contrives to cast the man she loves, out of the running. But his relenting in the end is the cause of the reunion of the true lovers.

In strong contrasts to the many love scenes are the realistic battles supposed to take place in South Africa between the English troops and the Boers. Besides being exceptionally thrilling these offer just the right amount of relief from the action which otherwise would be entirely romantic.

Perhaps the film would be benefited if some of the subtitles that are written in extremely flowery language could be toned down a bit, but as a whole "The Second in Command" will pass with much to spare as a fine picture.

The supporting cast includes William Clifford as Bingham, Lester Cuneo as Murial's brother and Helen Dunbar, Paul Byron, Marcia Moore and Evelyn Greeley.

"INFATUATION"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

IT is rather hard to classify this picture except to say that it is a drama. The production, the work of the players and the photography are all excellent. The trouble lies in the theme and the fact that its coarser application is made so apparent.

Margarita Fischer plays Phyllis Ladd, daughter of a rich man, who falls in and out of love with an ultra correct society man and a young German captain. Then she elopes with Cyril Adair, leading man in a road show, the part being played by Harry Pollard.

Their life disillusions Phyllis. Her husband brawls, gets drunk, is not a pretty sight in the cold grey dawn and altogether the romance is reduced to a very material footing. The father camps on Cyril's trail and gets several theatrical managers to refuse him jobs. But Cyril and Phyllis stick together though the father offers both money to quit. Finally a theatrical manager makes Cyril a big offer to star and the father, whose ideas about Cyril have been changed by the later's refusal to be bribed, backs the show.

The best part of the theme is the way in which Phyllis' love refuses to lower itself as much as the general tone of her romance is lowered by the husband's actions. But the husband's fidelity can not be denied and all ends happily.

"THE DEATH CLOUD"

(Pathé-Elaine—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THE sub-title of this chapter of the "Romance of Elaine" series is a poetical name for the fumes of the deadly gas bomb. The action in this chapter is unusually interesting.

Marcus Del Mar, the foreign agent, continues his machinations. Elaine is captured by his agents when she becomes separated from the others during a paper chase on horseback. But she escapes, disguised as a man, and a rough one. She gets almost away when an overhanging branch knocks her hat off. Her hair comes down and her sex is revealed to Del Mar's sentry. The captors give chase but Elaine gets away and is left wondering over the identity of the mysterious friend who aided her escape.

Pearl White, Lionel Barrymore and Creighton Hale continue as Elaine, Del Mar and Jameson. Bess Wharton is seen in a good role.

AT THE SOLDIERS' QUARTERS

The scenes around the making of the gas bombs and around the infantry encampment are very interesting. One great beauty of the Elaine series is that the Whartons use real infantry when infantry is called for, a real police station when a police station scene is taken and so on.

REEL FELLOWS HOLD ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL DINNER

Chicago, July 28.

THE July dinner of the Reel Fellows Club was a huge success, both from the standpoint of attendance and from the happy selection of a new place for their meeting. It was held in the balcony of the Movie Inn, Chicago's eating headquarters for those engaged in the film business. The tables were most attractively decorated and special menus were made up for the occasion.

The meeting was principally a business one. George Berg and Wiliam Sweeney were elected to the board of governors to fill the unexpired terms of the late Warren J. Patrick, and of Omer Dowd who has removed to New York with the George Kleine advertising department. A committee of five members was selected to promote a campaign to secure new members. Messrs. Von Meter, Bradford, Lesserman, Balaban and Spahr make up this committee.

Tribute was paid to the memory of Warren J. Patrick, late chairman of the board of governors of the Reel Fellows Club, and a message of condolence was sent to his bereaved family.

INTERESTING FILM REVIEWS

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"Jane Eyre." (Biograph. Three reels. Wed., Aug. 4.)—Reviewed at length in issue of July 31.

"Love's Rescue." (Biograph. Mon., Aug. 2.)—The intended robbery of a rich man by a crook who gets a job as his private secretary is foiled by the crook falling in love with his employer's daughter. Isabel Rea and Frank Newburg are the principals. F. Vroom is the father. Directed by George Morgan.

"The Drab Sister." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., Aug. 3.)—Olive is the elder sister, the drab sister; Evelyn the younger, flirtatious sister. The elder sister proves her worth by caring for Evelyn's baby when Evelyn is killed in a train wreck as she is deserting her husband, whom she only married for money anyway. The drab sister thus marries the man she loves, the man who first thought the other sister more attractive. Louise Vale is the drab sister and Madge Kirby the flirtatious one. Franklin Ritchie is the husband and K. Davenport, the lover. Kate Bruce plays an invalid mother. Travers Vale directed.

"The Fixer." (Biograph. Thurs., Aug. 5.)—The fixer is a lonely girl who spends her time patching up other folks' love affairs. Just as she finally lands a beau he deserts her precipitately for a pretty girl. Mostly comedy, but with a touch of real pathos. Irma Dawkins is the fixer. Adila Comer, Gus Pixley, Marie Newton and Jack Mulhall are in the cast. Edward Morrissey directed.

"Frederick Holmes' Ward." (Biograph. Sat., Aug. 7.)—Holmes, a bachelor, has a petty young girl thrust upon him as his ward. Finally they marry after several light adventures. Alan Hale is fine as the bachelor. Vola Smith is the ward. Directed by Walter Coyle.

"Clothes Make the Man." (Edison.)—A comedy with Yale Benner and Raymond McKee in the leads. They are rival suitors. The colored boy leaves Benner trouserless on the night of the party. Then the house takes fire. McKee starts to rescue Benner. Benner throws him down, takes his trousers and coat and sets out to make a bit with the lady in question. More action and spectacle than are seen in most comedies. Other players are Jean Dumar, Guido Colucci, Maxine Brown, O. N. Hardy and James Harris. Directed by Will Louis.

"The Kiss." (Essanay. Mon., Aug. 2.)—An absorbing drama in which a couple, long estranged through the extravagance of the wife, are reunited beside her mother's deathbed. This has been well worked out, while the cast, which includes Peggy Sweeny, John Thorn, Florence Oberle and Herbert Heyes, is competent.

"Business Rivals." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Aug. 3.)—One of Henry C. Rowland's intense thief stories that is bound to please the audience in search of this sort of thrilling entertainment.

It depicts the struggles of two opposing bands of thieves to gain possession of some precious jewels, the property of a debutante. The plans and ruses of both parties are exceedingly interesting to watch. In the cast are Sheldon Lewis, Nell Craig, Raymond Binder and Ernest Maupain.

"Dreamy Dud—A Visit to His Uncle Dudley's Farm." (Essanay. Wed., Aug. 4.)—This animated cartoon belonging to the series drawn by Wallace A. Carlson, is replete with very funny scenes, all of which take place on a farm. There is only five hundred feet of the cartoon, the rest of the reel being devoted to a scenic.

"Street Fakers." (Essanay. Thurs., Aug. 5.)—A western comedy concerning two pairs of street fakers who proceed to fool all the inhabitants of the town for a time and then are successful in their escape from the police.

"Eyes That See Not" (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Aug. 7).—This is a pleasing yarn containing many moments of excellent comedy, although as a whole it is dramatic. Ralph secures a position as secretary to Bell, who is greatly in love with a rich widow.

The two do not wish to marry until Bell's daughter has secured a husband. Ralph falls in love with the girl and finally succeeds in winning the consent of the father to the marriage. In the cast are Sydney Ainsworth, Beverly Bayne, Richard Taber, Marion Skinner and Frankie Raymond.

"The Hypnotic Monkey." (Kalem. Tues., Aug. 3.)—A Ham comedy in which quite a novel plot is exploited. Ham, sleeping, dreams that he has transformed his side partner into a monkey by hypnosis. His distress on awakening and finding a real monkey in his arms is well rendered. He thinks that the monkey is his pal and the resulting entanglement is a comedy away from the ordinary, and a thoroughly pleasing number.

"The Secret Code." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., Aug. 4.)—The third of the Hotel Mysteries Series and as such makes a decided hit. The plot deals with the government Secret Service, and a stolen code-key for the deciphering of secret government communications furnishes the basis of the story. Good photography, excellent interior settings—a perfect replica of a large hotel lobby in particular is exceptionally well defined—and a cast of clever principals make this a desirable release.

"For High Stakes." (Kalem. Two reels. Fri., Aug. 6.)—Lord Morey (Tom Moore) and "American" Joe, his double (Joseph Moore) are both passengers on board an ocean liner bound to America from England. An English detective pursuing the crook, Joe, is misled by his resemblance to Lord Morey and amusing complications result. Marguerite (Marguerite Courtot), daughter of a millionare (Richard Purdon), is kidnapped on the boat's arrival in New York and taken to the rendezvous of Joe's gang where she is subsequently rescued by Lord Morey and the police. Good photography and a good plot mark this release.

"The Substitute Fireman." (Kalem. Sat., Aug. 7.)—The latest of the Hazards of Helen Series, in which Helen Holmes as the station telegrapher dons a fireman's overalls and takes his place on the engine to foil a band of robbers. Good photography, and the regular railroad background, so popular throughout this series is in evidence. Up to the regular standard.

"The Rakoon Hose Company." (Lubin. Split reel. Tues., Aug. 3.)—On the same reel with "A One-Reel Feature." Lubin's company of clever colored comedians are featured in this slapstick vehicle, which concerns the rivalry of John, the fire chief and Rastus, the sport, for the hand of Mattie, the belle of Ethiopia.

John, having the "munitions of war" in his fire company, wins out in the end, after leading Rastus a merry dance first, in true slap stick fashion.

Mattie Edwards is cast as Mattie, John Edwards is John, Luke Scott is Rastus, D. Roseborolgh, Jasbo. The production by Will Louis.

"A One-Reel Feature." Lubin. Cartoon comedy, Split reel. Tues., Aug. 3.)—This weekly Vincent Whitman release shows in comic fashion, the interior of a motion picture theatre with all its varied types of humanity. The queer antics people are made to indulge in when drawn by a clever cartoonist cause shrieks of laughter.

"The Taunt." (Lubin. Mon., Aug. 2.)—A more than usually interesting plot with a climax worked out in original fashion marks this one reeler. The story is of William Kelcey, a bank cashier, who serves a prison term for a bank robbery which he never committed. Upon his release fate throws into his hands enough evidence to convict Fred Mack, a self-made broker, who had also married Florence, Kelcey's former sweetheart. How Kelcey cleverly contrives to force Mack to his own undoing, is shown in some good scenes. C. C. Miller, Jay Morley, Blanche Light, Melvin Mayo form the cast. Scenario by J. L. Lamothe.

"Country Blood." (Lubin. Two reels. Wed., Aug. 4.)—Those well-known favorites, Arthur Johnson and Lottie Briscoe, are always welcomed by their admirers, whatever the play though naturally some offerings please more than others. This tale of the "call of the country" to its sons and daughters will appeal especially to those originally from the rural districts and, in this country, their name is legion. Some typical, quaint characters add their quota of fun to the film.

The story tells how Sadie and Ben, the village sweethearts, are torn apart when Rudolph, an artist from the city, turns Sadie's head. She thereupon goes to town to be educated, and has many adventures, even becoming a dressmaker's model. Ben also goes to the city and succeeds, but can not conquer his longing for the old home.

In the end Sadie too is drawn homeward, so they make up again and live happy ever after. Howard Mitchell, Eleanor Blanchard, Bernard Siegal, Tommy West are the supporting cast.

"A Day of Havoc." (Lubin. Fri., Aug. 6.)—With Ethel Clayton and Thurston Hall as leads, assisted by Francis Joyner and Walter Law, to say nothing of the director being Joseph Kaufman, even a melodrama such as this will be watched with interest.

As the name indicates, all the exciting events happen in one day and that forsooth, the wedding day of the heroine, Estelle. The husband whom she had been persuaded to marry, is murdered and suspicion rests on the old sweetheart, Robert Dabney. But the confession of the crazy chauffeur clears Robert and leaves the way clear for the ultimate happiness of the old lovers. The picture is full of tense moments, well acted.

"Billie's Debut." (Lubin. Sat., Aug. 7.)—Billie's usual Saturday release features him as an actor among the "supes," in order to win the smiles of soubrette Patsy, with whom he had been trying to flirt "unbeknownst" to wife. The resulting complications are really quite funny, ending in a jail cell for the would-be actor.

Billie Reeves is supported by his usual company, Mae Hotely, Patsy de Forest, Billy Potter, Walter Law. Epes Sargent wrote and Arthur Hotaling produced the play.

"The Melody of Doom." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., Aug. 2.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"The Taking of Mustang Pete." (Selig. Tues., Aug. 3.)—A western drama produced by Tom Mix from a scenario by Emma Bell. A fierce holdup man is captured only after many incidents of the most exciting variety.

"The Prima Donna's Mother." (Selig. Wed., Aug. 4.)—The simple story of the girl who leaves her home because of its wretchedness. She becomes a great singer, and many years afterwards sings in her old town, where she again meets her mother. A conventional subject, yet produced in a manner that ought to please.

"The Black Leopard." (Selig. Sat., Aug. 7.)—One of the Clifton-Chaudet wild animal pictures, that contains a most interesting story besides setting forth some daring and thrilling scenes in which the actors appear with the inhabitants of the jungle. The story shows the faithlessness of a society girl to her fiancee, who is a hunter. He finally seeks his future wife in the person of the other girl's cousin, who has loved him all the time.

"The Scar." (Vitagraph. Three reels. Tues., Aug. 3.)—Reviewed at length in issue of July 31.

"The Serpent's Tooth." (Vitagraph. Mon., Aug. 2.)—Things look black for Cutey when "her" pa objects to the marriage, but thanks to his friend the dentist, and the "Society of the Serpent's Tooth," pa is forced to give his consent. This is a fair comedy written by Frank Dazey. Donald MacBride does excellent work as the dentist. Others are Wally Van, Nitra Frazer and Albert Roccardi.

"The Repentance of Dr. Blinn." (Vitagraph. Wed., Aug. 4.)—A pathetic number, in which a doctor disregards the first law of his profession, to save life, and allows a woman to die. The child lives to avenge the mother's avoidable death. This was made in the west with a cast including George Holt, William Duncan, Myrtle Gonzalez and Gretchen Lederer.

"A Disciple of Plato." (Vitagraph. Thurs., Aug. 5.)—One of Lee Beggs funny offerings, written by W. A. Tremayne. The starving poet flirts with the chef's wife more for love of "eats" than for herself. The chef gets angry, and humorous complications are in order until the poet has an opportunity to explain. Ricca Allen, Templer Saxe and Jay Dwiggins are the principals.

"Dimples and the Ring." (Vitagraph. Fri., Aug. 6.)—A very light comedy romance, with Lillian Walker and Billy Quirk appearing in the important roles. The situations are pleasingly funny, while the principals, being popular, practically assure the success of the picture.

"Pat Hogan, Deceased." (Vitagraph. Two reels. Sat., Aug. 7.)—While of a nature that is somewhat conventional, this comedy number will no doubt be well received because of the extreme popularity of the Comedy Four who appear in the main parts.

Flora Finch, Hughie Mack, Kate Price and William Shea constitute this quartette. The story was adapted for the screen by George Plympton from a yarn by Elizabeth Carpenter. It concerns a man who is shipwrecked and thought to be dead by his wife and her persistent suitor. He returns at the last moment and makes things hum.

"The Goddess." (Vitagraph. Two reels. Chapter Twelve.)—In this number Celestia succeeds in winning the miners over to her plan of dividing the United States into a large profit-sharing corporation. They are with her heart and soul and heed not the beseeching speeches of Tommy who attempts to warn them of their foolhardiness.

Following the conversion of the miners Celestia journeys throughout the United States and is greeted enthusiastically everywhere she goes.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"The Game." (Thanhouser. Sun., Aug 1.)—The young widow Marsh accepts a loan to help support her child from apparently wealthy persons who take an interest in the child. But a detective tells her that the benefactors are not what they should be and want to lead the child into a life of crime.

The detective proves his charges and later marries the widow. Ethyle Cooke is the widow and Morris Foster the detective. Ray Johnston and Helen Hilton are the crooks and little Helen Badgely is the child.

"Victorine." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., Aug. 1.)—A picture of circus life with Dorothy Gish and Ralph Lewis in the important roles, as Dottie, the assistant in a knife-throwing act and the side show manager respectively. The Angel falls in love with Dottie and finally rescues her during the course of the act when the knife thrower is drunk, though he is seriously injured in so doing. But Dottie and the Angel plight their troth at the hospital. William Hinckley is the Angel. Walter Long and Mae Gaston also have good parts.

"The Deacon's Whiskers." (Komic. Sun., Aug. 1.)—A Fay Tincher comedy. Her father is the deacon whose whiskers get caught in a seashore bathing house in the women's corridor. Others are Max Davidson, Eddie Dillon, Chet Withey and Frank Darien.

"The Bride of the Sea." (Reliance. Mon., Aug. 2.)—Grace, a hypochondriac wife, tries to commit suicide by drowning. She is rescued by Old Ben, a half-demented fisherman, who thinks she is his long lost wife. Finally Grace's daughter is the means of her husband locating her. The wife and husband start life together all over again. "Billie" West, Frank Bennet and George Beranger are the principals.

"Cupid Takes a Taxi." (Beauty. Tues., Aug. 3.)—This comedy drama shows how a young spendthrift home from college with his racing car, after being turned out by his parents, obtains a position as a chauffeur and elopes with a girl, outwitting the suitor whom her family desires her to marry.

"The Mighty Hold." (American. Mon., Aug. 4.)—The betrayal of an innocent girl is again used as the plot for a drama. In this instance the baby of the girl who has committed suicide, after learning the man's inability to marry her, is adopted by a woman of the cafes. The baby's influence reforms the foster mother. She later meets the baby's father and they are married.

"The Golden Trail." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., Aug. 4.)—Firth, a pugilist, loses out in the ring through dissipation and goes West. There he saves an old prospector, gets a half interest in a rich mine and marries the prospector's daughter. Richard Stanton is Firth. Margaret Gibson is the girl and J. P. Lockney the prospector father.

"The Promoter." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., Aug. 5.)—Mallard, a crooked promoter, swindles a farmer. Later the daughter shows Mallard's photo to her sweetheart. He finds Mallard, imprisons him in an abandoned mine, makes him disgorge the cash and leaves him with the worthless stock in the middle of the desert. Walter Edwards is the promoter. Elizabeth Burbridge is the girl and Lewis J. Cody her sweetheart. Fanny Midgely and Lewis Morrison are the parents.

"The Little Boy Who Once Was He." (Reliance. Wed., Aug. 4.)—Dan Adams goes back to the country home where he was raised. As he mentally reviews his boyhood and his later shameless career he becomes a changed man and goes back to the city to win back his wife and start all over. Charles West is the man and Buddy Harris the vision boy. Others are Marguerite Marsh, Spottiswoode Aitken and A. D. Sears.

"A Plugged Nickel." (Falstaff. Fri., Aug. 6.)—Mr. Christopher can't get rid of the plugged nickel. He throws it in the river and finds it in the interior of a fish he buys and, so on. So the nickel ties the proverbial bad penny. Boyd Marshall as Mr. Christopher and Leland Benham and Eldine Stuart as his children. Lila Hayward Chester as his wife.

"The Diamond from the Sky" (American. Chapter 13.)—The action goes rapidly on in this chapter. Luke Lovell crawls up on dry land, just missing a watery grave. Vivian Martin keeps watch on Arthur Stanley, who is becoming rich through an oil strike under the name of John Powell. She and Blair keep on plotting.

Arthur sends Esther Stanley $1,000 and she sends Quabba to him but Quabba is hit by a street car. Blair attacks Esther but she is rescued by a detective. Lottie Pickford, Irving Cummings, William Russell, Charlotte Burton and W. J. Tedmarsh are the prominent players in this episode of the serial, which is keeping the interest and action at a high pitch.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"Pathe News," No. 58. (Pathe. Wed., July 21.)—The flood at Lima, O., the Shriners' convention at Seattle and the Cunard liner Orduna, which was attacked by a German submarine, are shown in the opening views. The fashion views show latest styles for little boys. The eye-witness at the front shows scenes in the forest of the Argonne.

"Pathe News," No. 59. (Pathe. Sat., July 24.)—Harry Thaw reaches his home in Pittsburgh. The Elks parade at their national convention in Los Angeles. The strike trouble in Bayonne, N. J., waxes hot. Cooling views are shown of bathing at shore resorts and water carnivals from all over the country. The closing is an animated cartoon, "Uncle Sam Gets Wise at Last," showing Uncle Sam making friends with South America.

"Max and His Mother-in-law." (Pathe. Two reels.)—An excruciatingly funny comedy with Max Linder playing a newly married husband who can't get rid of his mother-in-law, even though he flees to the Swiss Alps and takes his wife out on skates, skis and a bob-sled. The fat mother-in-law is a real comedienne. Her antics are bound to get a lot of laughs. The Swiss Alps make a beautiful background.

"The Broken Coin." (Universal Special Feature. Chapter Seven. Two reels.)—Although Kitty is for a time in possession of both halves of the coin, at the end of this number she holds neither. The plotting and counterplotting still continues among all the parties concerned in the struggle for the precious coin. While the action continues to be of interest there is nothing unusually sensational in this instalment. Many of the scenes in fact border on the humorous.

"Bound on the Wheel." (Rex. Three reels. Sun., July 25.)—A strong drama that goes right to the point without any consideration for delicacy. It is one of Julius Furthman's stories produced by Joe De Grasse with a cast including Elsie Jane Wilson, Lon Chaney, Lydia Yeamans Titus and Arthur Shirley.

Married to a promising young man the Dutch girl leads a happy life, until her husband starts treading the path of his father, in other words being perpetually drunk and refusing to work. She is released from bondage by his death from poison. This is produced very well, with much attention being paid to the atmosphere of the tenement district. Lon Chaney as he husband does some excellent character work.

"The Scarlet Sin." (Broadway Universal Feature. Four reels. Mon., Aug. 2.)—Reviewed at length in issue of July 31.

"It Happened While He Fished." (Nestor. Mon., Aug. 2.)—The jealousy of the young wife causes the couple to become temporarily estranged. The comedy here offered presents little that is original and as the situations are uncommonly old, the reel will hardly excite laughter. Billie Rhodes, Jack Dillon and Neal Burns are the principals. The scenes are very pretty and the photography good.

"The Great Ruby Mystery." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., Aug. 3.)—In this detective drama the "Black Box" cast figures prominently in, practically the same roles in which they appeared throughout the serial. Sanford Quest is called upon to locate a stolen ruby and with the assistance of his helpers he succeeds in so doing. The story is constructed along the lines of a good detective story, although at the start the outcome can be anticipated. Otis Turner wrote and produced it.

"The Proof." (Rex. Tues., Aug. 3.)—The story in which a young man makes a bet that he can enter a house to steal something without being caught. He enters a lunatic asylum and steals the trained nurse, whom he afterwards makes his wife. This contains some funny moments and on the whole makes a very good comedy-drama. Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips are featured.

"Her Wonderful Day." (Imp. Tues., Aug. 3.)—The innocence of a girl of the slums awakens the dormant manhood in a millionaire idler, with the result that his intention in cultivating her acquaintance is never realized. This is a pretty story with an ending of originality, as we are not given to understand that the two "marry and live happily ever after." Frances Nelson and Jack Hopkins interpret the leading parts.

"My Tomboy Girl." (Victor. Two reels. Wed., Aug. 4.)—Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby in a lively boarding school comedy. That kind in which the girls are always racking their brains to invent new tricks to spring on the more or less unsuspecting matron of the establishment.

Rosemary very naturally elopes with Harry; while the minister, thinking he is running away with Rosemary, gets left with the matron, who, by the way, is a very funny character. On the whole, this comedy ought to make a hit, although when viewed some of the "pajama" scenes boardered on the risque.

"In the Claw of the Law." (L-Ko. Wed., Aug. 4.)—Everybody sees red in this number and takes to flirting as a cure for the ailment. It is quite a poor comedy, exhibiting nothing new or even laughably old. Harry Gribbon, Alice Howell, Fatty Voss and Peggy Pearce are the principals.

"Out of the Flames." (Big U. Thurs., Aug. 5.)—The wife, to prevent herself and her husband from starving, goes to work. The husband is suspicious of her, wondering the source of her money. A fire in the factory from which she is rescued by her husband brings realization on his part and paves the way for future happiness.

This is a fair subject, produced by Burton King from a scenario by F. McGrew Willis. Adele Lane and Edward Sloman handled the principal roles. The fire scene creates a considerable amount of excitement.

"Saved by a Scent." (Powers. Thurs., Aug. 5.)—One of the Lady Baffles and Detective Duck series that is bound to please. Max Asher as the far-famed detective introduces a famous invention in this. It is the "smellograph," an instrument containing a brick of limburger, which, when operated, will send its fumes through the thickest wall. Duck aids in fixing up a little romance and in the bargain baffling Lady Baffles, who wants the girl to marry her hireling. As serial burlesques these comedies are going well. Clarence Badger, the writer, and Allen Curtis, the producer, deserve congratulations, as also does the cast.

"Leah the Forsaken." (Imp. Three reels. Fri., Aug. 6.)—This is a reissue of a picture released by Universal about three years ago. It concerns a Jew who forsakes his religion on account of severe persecution. The subsequent trials of his family, and their meeting with him in the midst of the Christians form a series of strong scenes.

The love story is pathetic. Save for the fact that the properties used in the picture are plainly sudio affairs, the offering measures well up to modern program releases. Vivian Prescott, William Shay, William Welsh and Frank Smith are in the cast.

"Little Egypt Malone." (Nestor. Fri., Aug. 6.)—The college boys are broke at the end of the term, so Lee impersonates an Egyptian dancer and Eddie manages the show until they procure enough money to return home. At that time the ruse is discovered and they are chased half way home by the persons they have duped. Ed Lyons and Lee Moran are the principals in this laugh-maker, which is one of the best of recent Nestors.

"Gene of the Northlands." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Aug. 7.)—The unfounded jealousy of the husband, which causes him to mistake his wife's brother for a lover, forms the foundation of the story presented in these two reels. The satisfying termination only comes after small tragedies innumerable have been introduced, some of which are convincingly handled and some of which are somewhat ineffective. The scrip was prepared by Miss Gauntier, and besides she appears in the title role. Mr. Clark directed the work and played the husband. Duke Worne is the brother.

The story, old in itself, could have been presented in a more telling manner, if greater care had been used in procuring an even continuity of scenes. Again there is a great bit of useless and poorly motivated shooting indulged in by the various characters, some of which could be obliterated to the picture's advantage. In the manner of locations and photography the two reels are perfect. Some unusually expansive views have been obtained, and there are others that revel in pleasing artistry. As a melodramatic offering, this picture will pass as average.

"Around the Corner." (Powers. Sat., Aug. 7.)—This drama will appeal more to the class of people who formerly used to populate the gallery. It was produced by Carl Leviness from a scenario by L. V. Jefferson and features Sydney Ayres and Doris Pawn. The story is old and produced in a manner that calls for the words above. The man prefers the girl who has always believed him to the one who forsakes him in the hour of need.

"Their Bewitched Elopement." (Joker. Sat., Aug., 7.)—A rollicking farce of Allen Curtis's manufacture. The lovers are aided in their elopement by the good fairy. The usual Joker cast appears. The picture is one of the real funny ones that should go over anywhere.

"Betty's Bondage." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., Aug. 8.)—A poor girl seeing the drudgery that befalls her sister on marrying a man of her father's choice departs to the city and becomes a chorus girl. There she realizes that the life is worse than the one she left and when her lover comes for her she returns with him. A good subject rpoduced with evident attention to detail. Pauline Bush and Arthur Shirely are featured. The contrasts between the two varieties of life portrayed is striking.

"The Source of Happiness." (Laemmle. Sun., Aug. 8.)—A truly delightful subject that no Universal exhibitor can afford to miss. Charles Manley, Millard Wilson and Olive Fuller Golden are the principals. The old man seeks quiet in the country and after a while his son follows his footsteps, dropping forever his questionable feminine acquaintance of the city and finding happiness with a country girl. The scenes in this are charming. L. V. Jefferson prepared the script, while Frank Lloyd directed.

"Shot in a Barroom." (L-Ko. Sun., Aug. 8.)—A rampant wild man tells the manner in which his contemplated victim ruined his romance by "flicking aunts" on him during the marriage ceremony, breaking it up and afterwards marrying the girl himself. A fair farce with Fatty Voss and Louis Orth appearing.

"Animated Weekly," No. 177. (Wed., July 28.)—Scenes connected with the recent strike riots in Bayonne, N. J.; manoeuvers of the New York National Guard at Fishkill Plains, N. Y.; and William Jennings Bryan visiting Universal City, seem to be the events of most country-wide interest in this number.

WORLD FILM CORPORATION

"Letters from Bug to Gus." (World Film.)—This is number five of the Ring W. Lardner comic pictures. As in the others, much of the humor comes as a result from the subtitles, which are extracts from the original writings. Here the two ball players visit a regiment and henceforth are in terror lest the general will deprive Manager Bresnahan of their services and take them away to fight.

"Pokes and Jabs in Juggling the Truth." (Wizard-World.)—Pokes thinks to fool his wife when she accuses him of being seen in the company of two bewitching young girls, and tells her that that man was his double. Matters become seriously complicated when a real double does put in an appearance. This is a very funny reel and should create just as much laughter as the previous experiences of Pokes.

Film Business on Business Basis

Associated Service

This incomparable film service, conceived along lines of perfect business principles, dedicated to the sole purpose of placing upon the exhibitors' screen a diversified selection of pictures as nearly perfect as it is humanly possible to produce them, is the only film project in the history of the motion picture industry that has found itself in a state of absolute preparedness before the date officially set for its initial release.

EFFICIENCY, the secret of all successful business undertakings, received in the building of the Associated Service its first and only application in the film world. In purchasing the Associated Service the exhibitor is reaping to the full extent the great advantages of our unparalleled economic system of production, and distribution, and is paying only for what he receives—pictures of unimpeachable merit. Waste of material, loss of effort due to faulty management has been entirely eliminated in our operating organization.

All the elements that ought to enter into a business such as ours are to be found in it, and found in their proper places—Talent and Artistic judgment in the directing and acting of our films, generous, but judicious expenditures in their production, and the application of conservative, and basically correct business principles in the distribution of our Service.

This is without doubt one of the most unprecedented and interesting ventures ever launched in filmdom, and we are absolutely confident of but one result—SUCCESS.

Photoplay Vogue

(The New Motion Picture Publication)

To your Patrons as they leave your Theatre and stir up real interest in the films you show.

This you can do at a cost but slightly in excess of what you are now paying for heralds.

Each number of Photoplay Vogue contains illustrated interviews with leading screen favorites; several excellent short stories and serials by well known authors; a fashion page; a page devoted to queries and answers—in short, all that is in vogue in photoplayland. Published on the 5th and 20th.

Only one Theatre in each city will have the privilege of distributing Photoplay Vogue, although it will be sold on all newsstands at 5c. the copy.

Tear out this adv., write your name and address on the page margin and send it to us today. You will receive sample copy by return mail.

"ALL FOR A GIRL"

RUPERT HUGHES

FIVE REELS

A Really All-Star Cast—State Rights For Sale

The cast includes the greatest ensemble of well known actors ever presented in a film, including Miss Kelly, Roy Applegate, E. T. Roseman, Sidney D'Albrook, Jerold Hevener, Frank DeVernon, Sue Balfour, E. G. Longman, Margaret Willard, Al Grady, Bert Tuey and Georgia Harvey. Miss Harvey is the popular comedienne from "The Pink Lady" and makes her film debut in this picture. The newspapers have commented as follows:

MOVING PICTURE WORLD: Flawless photography makes every scene a delight to the eye. Audiences will like Rupert Hughes' wholesome story. Renee Kelly is the very fresh and engaging star, and she appears equally to advantage as the center of attraction at elaborate social functions, or in the simple garb of a rural maid. There is a charm and a spontaneity about the playing of Miss Kelly that is of particular value in a role of this type.

TELEGRAPH: The new company which made this picture should be congratulated upon achieving a degree of success not often obtained by more pretentious organizations. A cast of good comedians is a rare thing, and each actor in this picture has made his part stand out. The photography deserves special mention.

VARIETY: The Mirograph Corporation has every reason to feel mighty proud of this picture from an acting and photographic standpoint. Miss Kelly is a charming actress. The realism of the outdoor pastoral is so close to photographic perfection one would not think of comparisons.

DRAMATIC MIRROR: Too much commendation cannot be given for the able manner in which the first production of this new company has been handled, and if they live up to the standard of this picture they will rapidly attain an enviable position in filmdom. Throughout the offering was an example of what skillful direction can do in transferring the written word to the screen, and when this is backed up with photography so clear and distinct that it causes favorable comment, and able, consistent acting, a successful picture is bound to result.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: Photographically the subject is not to be criticized, as every scene is clear and well defined. In regard to the selection of correct and telling types they could hardly have done better. From the principals down to the various incidental characters the casting has been exceedingly well done. When the neglect of minor characters often mars it immeasurably one wonders why all producers do not take the care in such matters that the producers of this feature have done.

Thomas A Edison presents

A Three-Act Thriller

By the Author and Director of "Out of the Ruins"

"The King of The Wire"

Pat O'Malley

Daredevil Thrillmaker

And

Gladys Hulette

The Talented Little Beauty

Here's a record-making companion for that suspenseful masterpiece, "Out of the Ruins." "The King of the Wire" is written and produced by the same emotion twister, who played with our nerves in "Out of the Ruins—Ashley Miller. The same actor who, in "Out of the Ruins" put over the big life-saving act, Pat O'Malley, is here presented in a nerve tingler—see him walk on a slack telephone wire, high above the tree tops, with Gladys Hulette on his back! As the wire swings and sways, as we see the pursuing crook start out on the wire in pursuit, even a "hardened" Exhibitor will get a thrill that starts the perspiration. Then comes the battle in the air. It's nothing of the same old stuff—something new, big, gripping in the unusualness of it, not to mention how cleverly the scene is inwrought to put punch of triphammer power into the play. Friday, Aug. 13th. 3000 feet.

William Wadsworth, Raymond McKee and Jean Dumar in the really funny comedy, "Food for Kings and Riley." 1,000 feet. Direction Will Louis. Wednesday, August 11.

Bessie Learn, Pat O'Malley and Gladys Hulette in the pretty one-act drama, "A Sprig of Shamrock." Direction Harry Beaumont. Saturday, August 14.

Everything for the Modern Picture Theatre

18 K—Do you know of any other method by which flickerless pictures can be projected without a light interrupting shutter?

Ans.—In the Vanoscope, a machine which has been under construction for several years past, and which may be placed on the market in the near future, an entirely different system of projection is used than in any other type of machine.

The Vanoscope machine feeds the film continuously past the aperture and the image of the film is carried on to a set of revolving and rocking mirrors from which the image is then projected through the lens on to the screen.

The Vanoscope really is technically the most perfect projector, because it portrays on the screen continuous motion never interrupted by either darkness or intermittent motion of the film.

18 L—If the Vanoscope machine is technically or theoretically the most perfect machine, why is it not on the market?

Ans.—Like all other important developments, particularly where entirely new ideas are concerned, the experiments and changes require much money and plenty of time. The change in the operation of the Vanoscope as compared with all other make projectors is so radical that entirely new mechanical construction and methods of operation have had to be brought about. I hope to be able to give a clear and comprehensive description of the Vanoscope later on.

18 M—What other method for projection can be used to secure a continuous uninterrupted picture on the screen?

Ans.—In 1910 the son of the well known Motion Picture and Photographic Scientist, Mr. Lumiere, of Paris, visited the United States and together with him I worked upon the development of a new type of projector in which two films were used, running together, each one alternately exposed and dissolved into the other.

This system of projection is no doubt the most perfect so far as a steady picture on the screen is concerned. The difficulty arises in that ordinary films cannot be used, but special films have to be taken in special cameras, and of course special projectors with double lenses must also be used.

A great point in favor of this type of projector and film is in the possibility of its application to produce stereoscopic pictures and no doubt developments along this line will be made.

18 N—Is there a projector on the market which is successfully projecting motion pictures without the use of a light interrupting shutter?

Ans.—Yes, the Edison Home Kinetoscope, developed by Thomas A. Edison, has been on the market during the past three years. The Edison Home Kinetoscope, as its name indicates, was developed for use in the home and also for the exhibition of motion pictures by churches, schools and lodges where a regular professional entertainment is not necessary.

In order to have this machine simple to operate and maintain, of low first cost, and also in order to make the machine as light as possible and to use films of the most economical kind, many new and novel improvements had to be brought about.

One of the noteworthy points on the Edison Home Kinetoscope and which contributes much to its simplicity is the absence of the light interrupting shutter. The films used for the Edison Home Kinetoscope are of a special kind, non-inflammable, and upon a strip measuring slightly under 15/16 of an inch wide by about 85 feet in length. There can be reproduced a regular 1,000 foot film reel.

It is evident that due to the picture being so very small, not measuring over 5/32 of an inch in height by ¼ inch wide, the distance the film has to travel is less than ¼ of that required for the standard film, therefore the film movement can be accomplished in one-quarter of the time with the same film speed as with the standard machine.

The effect on the screen with the Edison Home Kinetoscope as far as the movement of the film is concerned is practically the same as would be the case with the regular film if it was moved at the rate of 64 pictures to the second and at such film speed the light interrupting shutter could very easily be done away with.

necessary to move the film any faster than normal because of the small size of the picture, which accomplishes the same result without any trouble from film reaction or other difficulties due to high momentum and sudden stoppage.

18 O—Do you believe that it will be commercially possible to use the idea of the Edison Home Kinetoscope film for professional projection?

Ans.—Yes, with the development of the photographic art and more powerful illumination for projection and the use of the highest grade lenses it will be made possible to use a film with a picture measuring may be half the size used on the present standard film.

I have seen samples of special film made where the film movement would be reduced almost 50 per cent, which would mean that there would be a saving of 50 per cent in the cost of the material for the film and also it is possible to project such a picture without the use of a light interrupting shutter.

If a light interrupting shutter is used, and we assume that the shutter may be of the two wing type, the blades need be only one-half of the present size in width, which means that although the magnification is considerably greater than with the standard size film there will not be such a great loss in illumination, because the picture is exposed longer to the view and is therefore more distinct. Taken as a whole, development along this line seems to be worthy of very serious thought and attention.

When motion picture films were first produced the mechanical construction of the film, the photography and the general makeup of the very best pictures were not comparable with even the poorest films offered today; therefore, if there should be even the slightest improvement in the manufacture of films it seems possible and reasonable to realize a great, new, important development which will reduce the cost of the material for the films by 50 per cent and at the same time, I believe, give an absolutely flickerless picture.

SEVEN CHATTANOOGA EXHIBITORS IN COURT ON SUNDAY OPENING CASE

SEVEN motion picture theatre managers at Chattanooga, Tenn., charged with violating the law prohibiting the pursuit of one's regular vocation on Sunday, appeared in court the past week, waived examination, and were bound over to the grand jury. No bond was required, the men being released on their own recognizance.

The exhibitors are Peter Block, manager of the Royal theatre; M. H. Silverman, proprietor of two theatres on East Ninth street; H. M. Lusk, manager of the Picto; F. H. Dowler, Jr., of the Alcazar; C. T. Bobo, of the Bonita; Howell Graham, manager of the Majestic, Crescent and Alhambra, and W. S. Howell, of the Lyric.

In a special charge to the grand jury, Judge McReynolds, of the criminal court, declared that it is unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to follow their usual vocation on Sunday, and that so doing for two or more Sundays constituted a nuisance. He charged that if the jury found that operators of motion picture theatres were operating on Sunday, it was the duty of the jury to indict them for maintaining a nuisance.

The exhibitors have retained counsel and will fight. Many lawyers in expressing opinions, declared that if the law prohibits the operation of picture theatres on Sunday, it would also be illegal for news stands, soda fountains, cigar stores, and even drug stores, to do business.

It is also contended that, according to the charge of Judge McReynolds, it is just as unlawful for the street railway company to run cars on Sunday as it is to operate picture shows. Another opinion given by an attorney questions the right of ministers to follow their usual custom of taking up collections on Sunday under the court's interpretation of the law.

The law under which the exhibitors are being proceeded against is an old statute passed about 1803, but there is said to be more recent decisions of the Supreme court, which some lawyers claim sustain the charge of Judge McReynolds.

Some years ago, a law was passed prohibiting baseball and other forms of amusement on Sunday, but this was declared unconstitutional in a case three years ago when the Nashville baseball club tested the law.

Whether the nuisance claim for following the "usual occupation" will be applied to any business besides the motion picture theatres remains to be seen.

MANITOBA CENSORS HAVE BUSY TIME

THE three Manitoba censors put in an extraordinarily busy month in June, judging from the number of moving picture reels censored, which were 605. Of this number 549 were passed and 56 were condemned in toto.

One hundred reels had 333 pieces of film cut from them, for the following reasons:

Vulgar, 24; subtitles, 64; flag scene, 1; robbing safe, 5; assault, 11; gruesome, 11; suggesting suicide, 2; assassination, 2; murder, 5; shooting, 35; setting fire to powder, 1; knife scenes, 15; opening safe, 2; fighting, 14; drunken women, 1; suggestive dance hall scenes, 4; holdups, 9; robberies, 4; cutting telephone wires, 3; gambling, 9; abduction, 1; cutting mail bag, 2; abuse, 4; threatening with gun, 32; disgusting, 5; suggesting murder, 8; duel scenes, 2; cheating at cards, 3; German scene, 1; letters, 9; drugging, 2; stealing, 3; tying up watchman, 1; suggestive, 5; burglary, 4; blackmail, 4; saloon scenes, 4; infidelity, 2; attempted murder, 2; suicide, 1; insanity, 1.

ASSOCIATION AND STANDARD PROGRAMS WILL BE HANDLED BY SEESTEDT

THE Standard Film and Supply Company, of Detroit, Mich., has been incorporated for $2,500, of which amount $1,000 has been paid in cash. The company will have the Michigan and northern Ohio rights to the new Standard program. The company will have its offices on Jefferson avenue east, near Woodward, where it now occupies three upper floors doing business as the Detroit Kriterion Film Company.

The officers are Otto Seestedt, president; Charles Wesch, secretary and treasurer, and Ralph T. Peckham, vice-president and general manager.

In addition to the Standard program, the company will also handle the new Associated program.

"We will continue under the name of the Detroit Kriterion Film Company," said Mr. Peckham to the News representative. "We are incorporated under that name and the exhibitors are familiar with that name. Later on we may change."

"ROUND-UP" IS HELD IN FORT SMITH THROUGH UNIVERSAL

AT the instigation of the Universal Film and Supply Company, of which J. H. Crowley is the local manager, an exhibitors' "round-up" was held at Fort Smith, Ark., on July 26. The purpose of the gathering was to enable exhibitors from the country surrounding Fort Smith to become acquainted and to discuss business conditions of their districts.

The Universal office was selected as the headquarters for the round-up. That the exhibitors might see the merit of the Broadway Universal Feature, "Scandal," it was shown to the gathering at the Sebastian theatre of that city.

Many exhibitors of the country attended this round-up, and it was generally agreed that all profited by their meeting and their exchange of ideas.

DENVER IS BUILDING A THEATRE DESTINED TO BE ONE OF THE FINEST IN THE WEST

THE Strand Theatre Company, Denver, Colo., which now has in course of construction a motion picture theatre on the ground formerly occupied by the Isis theatre, will have, when completed, one of the finest motion picture theatres west of the Mississippi river, which will rank among the best in the United States. The theatre will be completed about August 15 and will cost, including the ground upon which it stands, $175,000.

The plans for both the interior and exterior of the Strand are most complete and several original and unique features are included.

A. F. Megahan, former owner of the Lyric, represents the Strand interests, and will manage the destinies of this magnificent theatre from its beginning.

The front of the Strand will have 58,000 candle power illumination, its stage will be of cement, the ventilating and heating system will be so constructed as to change the air in the building every five minutes. The theatre will be absolutely fireproof.

The furnishings and equipment to be installed in the New Strand will be of the massive magnificent order; the style of theatre and the class of pictures which will be shown being of the highest grade, much as are shown in the Strand theatre in New York City, the largest and most up-to-date theatre used exclusively for motion pictures in the United States.

Ladies' and gentlemen's rest rooms will be provided. Another unique feature will be a large roomy children's nursery and playroom, which will be in charge of a trained matron.

The idea of such a room will appeal especially to mothers who may care to enjoy an afternoon at the Strand, and who can leave their little ones in the playroom and feel no anxiety as to the child's safety and comfort while she enjoys to the fullest the photoplay masterpieces which will be shown.

The seating capacity will be 1,200, the floor space being amply large enough to accommodate this number without the slightest discomfort to anyone.

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., LIFTS BAN FROM SCREEN THEATRES

Newark, N. J., July 28.

ONE of the few municipalities to place a ban on commercial motion picture theatres, years ago, South Orange village has at last decided to permit such form of amusement. An ordinance providing for the moving picture entertainments was presented at a meeting of the village board of trustees by Trustee Edward A. Marks, chairman of the committee on licenses, and was passed unanimously on first reading and second reading and set down for final action for August 15.

The measure specifies that the annual license fee for a theatre accommodating 250 persons shall be $200; for a theatre seating 500 persons, $250; and for a playhouse with a capacity for more than 500 persons, $300.

Theatre buildings must be of non-combustible construction, with from three to five exits, each six feet in width. The galleries must not seat more than twenty-five per cent. of the entire capacity. There must be no winding stairways and the stairways must be fireproof.

The theatres must be heated with either steam or hot water. The hours during which theatres shall be open in South Orange were fixed at from 10:30 in the morning to 11 at night, except Sunday, when no performance will be permitted.

Applicants for licenses must file plans of their proposed buildings with Building Inspector S. Theodore Schwarze. The ordinance consists of forty-six sections. A fine of $100 may be imposed for a violation of any section.

ST. LOUIS AIRDOME IS EQUIPPED WITH BOX SEATS

MARTIN J. GALLAGHER, manager of the Penrose Garden, Grand and Penrose avenues, St. Louis, displayed artistic talent to an unusual degree when he designed the sign over the entrance to his outdoor theatre. Nearly a thousand lights are used in the sign, which consists of a huge rose formed of red lights, while green lights are used for the leaves and stems.

The name "Penrose" is in white lights with the rose extending clear across it, making a very imposing and beautiful effect. The Penrose is also proud of the fact that it is the only airdome in the city with box seats.

The boxes are about four feet from the ground, extending in a half circle on both sides of the Garden, and three hundred patrons can be seated comfortably. A spraying fountain, and vines growing all around the walls of the garden add much to the beauty of the place. The operating booth is worth especial mention, as it is a distinct novelty, with its little ornamental balcony that runs around three sides of the booth.

The Penrose shows many large features, being the first neighborhood theatre to show "Cabiria" since its first run at the New Grand Central several months ago. Ten and twenty cents admission is charged.

OPERATORS PASS EXAMINATION IN WILKES-BARRE

THE examining board of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has announced the applicants who passed the motion picture machine operators' tests. Of the forty-one men who took the examination to procure licenses required by the city, twenty-five scored an average of seventy per cent., which is passing; four failed to report for examination, and twelve were below 70 per cent. and will not be granted licenses.

The following operators passed the examinations:

Charles Dippe, Joseph Moser, William Piatt, Harry P. Eggleston, Jr., Clyde Coleman, George Domovitch, Rufus Kraemer, Remuel Milnamo, P. J. Boyle, Lewis Thomas, J. P. Straisel, Joseph Malloy, John Miller, Earl Gehringer, Harry Richards, G. Clayton Heebner, Hasting Jones, Cummie Piatt, Henry Czeromka, William Bohn, Edward Parsons, Edgar Knittle, John Wallace, Charles Gorman and Fred Alles.

John Wallace, who is the operator at the Poli theatre, this city, had the highest average of all, making 91 per cent. The licenses will be issued August 1. Those who failed to make the necessary percentage will be dismissed at that time if the law is rigidly enforced.

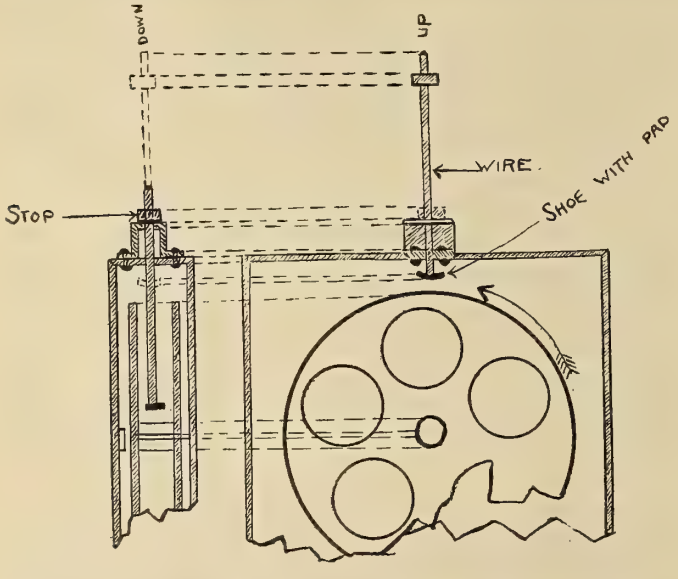
Questions Answered

Repairing Equipment

Here Mr. Hallberg will answer all the questions you send in—no matter how simple or difficult.

Film Indicator



Edward B. Daschbach, of Lisbon Theatre, Lisbon, Ohio, submits the following:

"Dear Sir.—Have been reading your Hallberg Helps in Motion Picture News, and as you invite suggestions from operators, I enclose a sketch of a film indicator which I made and attached myself. The little shoe on the end of the wire which rides on top of the film is padded so as not to scratch the film, and when the wire is all the way down, the stop on top keeps the shoe about ½-inch from the hub. (See sketch.)

"We have two Power's 6-A machines, and I have been using the indicator for over a year and wouldn't be without it, as I can tell at any time how much film there is in the upper magazine without opening the door.

"When the wire is about all the way down, the other operator knows it is time to light his lamp; or, in other words, there is still ½-inch of film in the upper magazine.

"I hope this suggestion will be of some benefit to other operators."

Ans.—Many thanks, Mr. Daschbach, for your interesting letter and sketch, which I herewith submit to the readers of the News.

There have been several devices proposed along the line which you speak of, but yours is interesting in that it is particularly applicable to the requirement you mention.

There is no question about the advantage derived by an operator from the use of this device of yours. It is simple, efficient and can be made by any operator within a short time.

There are two suggestions which I could make, and they are:

First—That instead of the padded shoe which rides on the film, you might have a little roller if there is room for such in your magazine when the reel is full. The film exchanges might object to the rubbing of the shoe on the film, as it would come on the emulsion side. The roller or a small wheel would be decidedly better.

Second—That at the top of the fitting which you put on the magazine there be placed a small insulated contact connected with an electric buzzer in such a way that when the stop gets down so that you have a given number of feet of film left on the reel, the buzzer will be started to signal the necessity of having the second machine ready for cutting in.

All of these improvements show and prove that you are wide awake and on the job. You and every other operator should be encouraged in your efforts because through development along these lines you become more efficient and others will benefit by your idea through the publication of your and other articles in the columns of the News. I invite all operators to get busy and see wherein they may suggest or effect an improvement.

Lamp Trouble Rectified

G. E. B., Canton, Pa.—I am very glad to see that you and Mr. Luz are on the Motion Picture News staff. The Music and Projection departments were the only weak things in the News. Would like to have you answer a question for me.

The rod upon which our lamp moves up and down (Power's No. 6 lamp) sometimes will not support the lamp, except when it is at the extreme top or bottom. In other words, it slides down as if the rod was oiled, when in reality it is not, as we use nothing but graphite (mixed with a little oil) on our lamp. Is it possible to mix graphite with gasoline? What is the cause of the above trouble and what is the remedy for it?

Would also like to have you explain why films should have marks like rain running crosswise of the films.

Ans.—Evidently the rod which supports your No. 6 Power's lamp has worn in the centre of the travel of the lamp support. You will find that the casting which supports the lamp and which is moved up and down on this rod is slotted and has a lug through which a clamp screw works.

Try to tighten this screw, which reduces the diameter of the hole in the casting slightly. If this fixes your trouble, well and good; if not, it may be that your hole in the casting has also worn. In that case remove the casting and make the slot between the lugs in which the clamping screw fits, wider, so that you will have more opportunity of squeezing the casting together to make it bite on the supporting rod.

If this does not overcome all of your trouble, remove the supporting rod, and if you have a lathe put it in the chuck and file off the upper and lower end of the rod where the lamp casting travels to equalize the diameter. This will fix your rod.

There would be no objection to using a little gasoline with your graphite as a binder to get the graphite to stick on to the racks, gears and in the screw holes and on the screw treads. The gasoline would evaporate almost instantly after you have applied the mixture, but there is no objection to using a little bit of oil such as is used in the cylinders of automobiles, as this oil stands very high heat test and will not burn to cause any trouble. If you use gasoline you must, of course, not use it in any quantity which would cause trouble from ignition, but this is doubtful, as the gasoline you put in would evaporate right away.

Crosswise scratches on a film, if the film is new, could be due to carelessness in manufacture. If, however, the film is all right when received from the factory and the cross-wise scratches appear after it has been in service, then the chances are that these scratches are due to the upper or lower loop being too long in the machine. This would cause the loop, during its intermittent motion, to slam against the upper film guard above the film gate, or the lower loop might strike some projection on the machine which would scratch the film in spots as you describe.

If you stop to think, the crosswise scratches could easily occur at the time the loop snaps as it comes to a sudden stop after the momentum. I have oftentimes seen a great accumulation of carbon dust on the inside of the upper film shield and also in the bottom of the machine. Dust of this kind would cut the emulsion on the film and undoubtedly in time cause scratches such as you speak of.

Books on Electricity

W. H. B., Wellfleet, Mass.: —Can you tell where I can get some books on electricity as it is used for motion picture machines, direct and alternating current, two and three-wire systems of wiring?

Ans.—The most recent and complete book on electricity for operators is "Motion Picture Electricity," which costs you $2.50 by mail, postpaid. This book can be had upon receipt of money order for $2.50, sent to the editor of this department.

"Motion Picture Electricity" gives the most comprehensive description of the application of both two-wire and three-wire system of distribution, and is especially prepared and written for operators who want to know real facts in a simple and understandable way.

S. B. L., Montpelier, Vt.:—We have had a Monarch mechanism sent in to us for repairs, and we do not even know where the manufacturers are located; therefore, please give the matter your best attention. If you handle these parts, please quote us your wholesale price.

Ans.—Any one knowing where the Monarch machine or where parts for it can be obtained, please communicate with the editor of this department.

MANUFACTURING CONCERN BUILDS SCREEN THEATRE FOR EMPLOYES

THE Beacon Falls Rubber Company, New Haven, Conn., considerate of the welfare of its employes, has completed in Beacon Falls, Conn., a village not far distant from New Haven, a motion picture theatre to which only the several hundred men and women working at the plant, and their families, will be admitted.

Aside from being the only theatre in the town, and the only one in the state built for the employes of a manufacturing establishment exclusively, the house is one of the prettiest in the state. It seats four hundred and provides standing room for a hundred more.

The building is of stucco, and is well furnished and equipped. There are two projection machines, both Power's 6-A, a Mirroroid screen and a Johns-Manville Booth. General and Universal pictures are used.

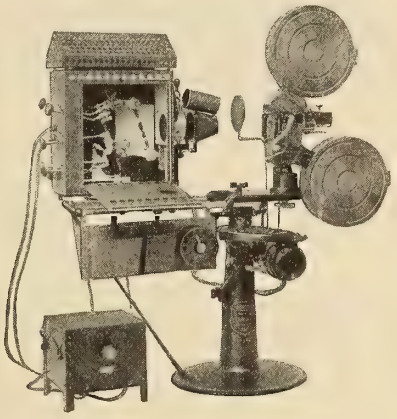
THEATRE AND FILM FIRM FORMED IN NEW JERSEY

ARTICLES of incorporation have been filed at Trenton, N. J., by the Compro Film Company, of North Bergen. This concern will carry on a general photographic business, deal in moving picture films and conduct moving picture theatres.

William Conway, of Bulls Ferry Road, North Bergen, is named the company's agent; it will start business with a capital of $1,000, and is authorized to have a capital of $50,000 composed of 5,000 shares valued at $10 each.

The incorporators, their addresses and the shares held by each follow: Boyd J. Gilmour, 227 West Forty-sixth street, New York, 34 shares; E. M. Behyl, 154 Nassau street, New York, 33 shares, and Harry Botter, Ocean Grove, 33 shares.

NEW SIMPLEX MODEL SUCCESSFULLY DEMONSTRATED AT CONVENTION



ONE of the interesting demonstrations of projecting machines was that by the Simplex in the miniature theatre at the National Exhibitors' League Exposition. One of the new models was used.

Each picture was started when the shutter was out of time, and the operator regulated the same while the machine was in motion. It also had the new speed control device, and the new automatic arc controller. The two Simplex machines completed the four days' running with a clean score, they having been the first started after the theatre was opened, and continued throughout the time without a break or poor light.

PERFECT PROJECTION

is the Keynote of success. Many beautiful Theatres in the most advantageous locations do not make the maximum profit, or fail entirely, because of poor projection.

DON'T DECEIVE YOURSELF. It is poor economy to try to get along with an old machine, when you should have a new one, and can get it on easy terms.

LET US SHOW YOU how you can get a new machine and make it pay for itself by increased receipts.

WINSTOCK RESIGNS FROM NATIONAL IN WEBFOOT STATE TO GO EAST FOR FILM PRODUCTION

MELVIN G. WINSTOCK, original organizer and president of the National Amusement Company, who erected the National theatre, Portland, Oregon, has resigned his position of general manager with that company, to take effect at once.

Mr. Winstock, prior to his identification with the National, was the general manager of motion picture interests for S. Morton Cohen, of Portland, first in the exchange end and later at the head of the Peoples Amusement Company, being associated with the Peoples interests some three years. Prior to that he was identified with Alexander Pantages, the vaudeville agent of the west.

Mr. Winstock will probably come east, or to California, and enter the producing end of the business, as he has many friends engaged in this work, and has had several tempting offers.

M. M. Rouse, a road representative for second-run Paramount attractions, will be the house manager for the National, for the present, and John Beall, vice-president and a director of the company, will assume the active management.

Mr. Winstock is one of the best known men in the picture business in the west.

AT the home of the Brooklyn National baseball team, Ebbet's Field, Brooklyn, N. Y., motion pictures have been installed. The seating capacity of the stadium is 23,000 and the installation was one that afforded unusual difficulties as all evidences of projection of pictures must be removed after each performance in time for the next game.

This has been accomplished by having the two Power's 6-A motor-driven machines and a specially constructed switchboard manufactured by J. H. Hallberg, which includes two ammeters, one volt meter, double lamp control, emergency A. C. switch, and field controller mounted on a wheeled platform, which is pulled into position each evening. For transforming A. C. to D. C. current there is a special Hallberg A. C.-D. C. Electric Economizer located underneath the players' bench and this is connected to the switchboard on the projection platform over 200 feet away by a flexible cable and is controlled at the will of the operator.

GRIFFITH, OF POWER'S, MAKES 10-DAY STAY IN PITTSBURGH

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 28.

HERBERT GRIFFITH, traveling representative of the Nicholas Power Company, is in Pittsburgh for a ten-day stop and will visit many of the motion picture theatres during his visit. He is making his headquarters at the Feature Film and Calcium Light Company's office and also at the Ludwig Hommel and Company. He has issued a general invitation to exhibitors and all persons interested in the motion picture business to visit him there.

Mr. Grffith is on his way to New York from the Pacific coast and stated that he received an ovation from the motion picture men at a number of the cities in which he has stopped on his trip east. When he arrives at New York he says he will take a much needed rest before getting into the harness again.

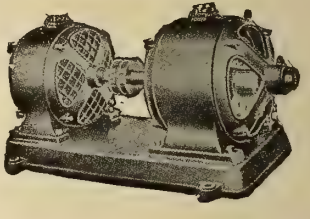
DAY AND NIGHT ACTIVITY NECESSARY TO FILL ENTERPRISE ORDERS

GENERAL MANAGER SPAHR, of the Enterprise Optical Company, Chicago, says the 1916 model Motiograph is going big. His force is working every night till twelve to keep even with orders.

On Saturday morning last the entire supply of 1916 model machines was exhausted by telegraphic orders. Also, Manager Kemp, of the San Francisco office, reports his supply sold out at the recent convention.

PASSAIC WILL OPEN $75,000 THEATRE IN SEPTEMBER

THE large motion picture house now in course of construction at 284 Main street, Passaic, N. J., has been leased by the Hudson Amusement Company, of New Jersey, for a long term of years at an aggregate rental said to be about $75,000 annually.



It is planned to have the building finished and ready for use about September 1.

MENGER AND RING BRING OUT BLACK AND WHITE FRAMES

ANTICIPATION is often the key to success. At any rate it has played a big part in the growth of Menger and Ring the enterprising designers and manufactures of wooden lobby frames. Anticipating a large demand this fall they have already made up a great number of new models of poster and display frames to fill every conceivable need of the exhibitor in this direction.

One of the most striking of these new designs is a black and white frame for 8 x 10 inch photos. Others are finished in pearl gray and delft blue; mission black and gold, and oxidized green copper bronze. For those who prefer the more simple styles there is a refined colonial mahogany.

The long narrow banner stretching across the entire front of the theatre is coming more and more into favor. For these a frame has been constructed which allows the stretcher to slip out very readily when repainting is necessary. Several of these have already been sold to the Strand theatres of Rochester and Detroit.

An entirely new departure for Menger and Ring is a ticket box with compartments instead of a chopper. There are four slots into which different price tickets may be dropped. This will enable an accurate checking at the end of the day as the tickets are not destroyed. This box can be made up to comply with any interior decorative scheme.

Mr. Ring says from present indications business will be better than ever this fall and he is preparing for the liveliest year since he entered the motion picture field.

QUICK CHANGE COMPANY PUTS OUT AUTOMATIC POSTER FRAME

THE Quick Change Poster Company is the name of a new organization which has begun the manufacture of a patent automatic poster frame, with factory and office at San Francisco. J. E. Roach is manager and owner of the company, as well as the inventor of this new and much needed accessory.

The quick change frame was invented to make possible the showing of lithographs, and do away with all wrinkles and creases in the paper while it is on display. The frame accomplishes this by stretching the paper tightly over a back wall, and locking and holding it securely. The change can be made very quickly, and no injury is done the lithos.

Furthermore the stretching kills off the cheap shoddy appearance caused by the paper having been folded. The new frames were displayed for the first time at the San Francisco Convention Exposition.

NOVELTY PREPARES SLIDES SHOWING "EASTLAND" TRAGEDY

THE dreadful Chicago tragedy of the "Eastland" has set the whole country thinking and talking. Film audiences are waiting impatiently to see the pictures.

The Novelty Slide Company, of New York, has secured views of this disaster and has prepared a set of twenty slides, in natural colors, each slide bearing a descriptive reading.

The scenes are the best of exclusive views made by the Hearst staff and Underwood and Underwood photographers. The slides are made from the original negatives and are clear, sharp and perfect. The rescue and wreck pictures were photographed immediately following the disaster and are full of thrills and action.

These slides are sure to prove a big attraction in picture theatres; they can be purchased outright or booked on rental. Publicity matter furnished, one sheet posters and advance slides.

WEST VIRGINIA THEATRE BREAKS SPEED RECORD IN CONSTRUCTION

Pittsburgh, July 28.

BURT'S theatre at Manningtown, W. Va., holds the record for speed in theatre construction, and shows what can be done when it comes to building a theatre in record breaking time.

A. M. Burt is the owner of the new theatre, and he received notice from his landlord to vacate the room in which he was conducting his theatre at the expiration of thirty days. There was not another room in the town he could use, and only one lot suitable, but it was not for sale.

Mr. Burt got busy and convinced the owner of the lot that he should sell, and made the price so attractive the owner sold. Three days after he had secured the lot he started work on the building of the theatre, and announced that he would be ready to operate the theatre at the end of 16 working days.

The lot was twenty-three feet wide and one hundred feet long, and the excavating was started. Many of Burt's friends made bets with him that he would not be able to do the job on time, but he worked two forces one day and the other at night, and on the evening of the sixteenth day he opened the house for business, completed.

The house has a seating capacity of 400, which includes a balcony which seats seventy. The house was wired complete, and an electric lighting plant instaled in the 16 days' time. It is of brick construction with a concrete foundation, and is one of the prettiest theatres in that part of the state.

30 THEATRES IN TRENTON RUNNING THROUGH SUMMER

Trenton, N. J., July 28.

ALL of the motion picture houses here, approximately thirty, are running throughout the summer season for the first time in years. Heretofore nearly one-half of the theatres have been in the habit of displaying the time-worn sign "Will Open Early in August."

The direct cause of the open-all-year policy is not so much due to an increase of screen fans as it is to the efforts of the managers to hold on to their regular partons.

Because of the keen rivalry among the picture house owners the 103,000 inhabitants of this city are enjoying the highest priced feature films at the usual commercial film prices.

The Paramount program leads in the field for popularity here and the State Street theatre, which offers this feature, is doing a record business notwithstanding the heated season. The William Fox features come next at the Trent. The Pathé romance of "Elaine," started here recently, packs the various theatres that offer this attraction. "The Goddess," of the Vitagraph program, has made a ten strike.

The several houses that are now offering this serial are well patronized.

The Taylor opera house, realizing the importance of the photoplay features, has added two-reel special features, including the Charles Chaplin series, in addition to the Keith vaudeville show.

LOYALTY OF CHATTANOOGA FANS PROVED BY LARGE ATTENDANCE FIGURES

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 28.

THE daily seating capacity of local motion picture theatres is 41,000 for shows of one hour in length. These figures attest to the loyalty of Chattanooga film fans. Four miles of film are shown daily in the "Quality Way" picture houses. Feature films are proving a big drawing card.

PENNSYLVANIA EXHIBITORS PLEASED WITH HERRINGTON ELECTION

MOTION picture exhibitors generally through central Pennsylvania are gratified at the election of Fred J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, as president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Mr. Herrington was the only delegate of the Pennsylvania branch of the national league to attend the San Francisco convention and, so far as known here, there was no preconceived plan to elect him to the high post. For that reason the central Pennsylvania exhibitors feel it was a free and open choice and that the honor conferred on Mr. Herrington was, therefore, all the greater.

HORNSTEIN, OF PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT, PRESENT AT HOBOKEN OPERATORS' BANQUET

IN the issue of July 31, there was an error made in the article entitled "Hoboken Operators Hold Successful Banquet." J. C. Hornstein was the representative of the Picture Theatre Equipment Company, not Mr. Horowitz, as stated.

The fact was also omitted that Mr. Edwards, of this company, presented the Operators' Protective Union of Hudson County, N. J., Local 384 I. A. T. S. E., with a framed cartoon picture, caricaturing the operator as he should not be. This was received with a round of applause by those present and immediately hung in a prominent position.

POWER'S ORIGINAL MACHINE, LETTERHEAD SIZE, SHOWN AT FAIR

This machine weighs but nine pounds and complete will cover but an ordinary sheet of letterhead writing paper. It is quite a contrast to the two hundred and fifty pound 6-A mechanism manufactured at the present time.

At the close of the convention, this novel exhibit was taken to the Power's booth in the Liberal Arts building.

Our 32-page catalogue No. 3, illustrated in colors, contains a large variety of artificial flowers, vines, garlands, shrubbery, palms, etc. Mailed free for the asking.

Directory of New Theatres

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres throughout the country. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, and this department fails to record the fact, kindly communicate it at once for publication.

COLORADO

THE United States theatre, Denver, again will open its doors to the public. This theatre, built less than two years ago, has been unfortunate inasmuch as it has been forced to close its doors on two occasions. This time, however, exhibitors, backed with plenty of capital, are planning to redecorate the interior, obtain a star feature service and again make bids for patronage.

The Lyric theatre, Denver, formerly owned by A. F. Megahan, was sold recently to the Todd Carr Amusement Company. This is one of the oldest theatres in the city, and still retains its share of patronage.

FLORIDA

The Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, was opened July 19, and a public reception given. It is one of the largest photoplay theatres in that section of the country. They are showing Paramount pictures to packed houses.

The Pastime theatre, Jacksonville, was re-opened again July 25, and is exhibiting General pictures with one act of vaudeville.

INDIANA

The management of the Why-Not theatre, at Greenfield, Ind., has signed a contract with F. R. Martin, of the Fox Film Corporation, to run Fox features.

Charles Blackstone is the new manager of the Grace theatre, at Martinsville, Ind., owned by F. J. Rembush, of Shelbyville, Ind.

The opera house at Franklin, Ind., is being remodeled by O. I. Demaree, the manager, who is installing ventilating fans and making other improvements.

A new floor, new wall decorations, new lighting fixtures and a better seating arrangement are included in the improvements of the Palace theatre at Peru, Ind., which is being remodeled at a cost of seven hundred dollars. Jimmy Chandler announces the house will have "an augmented" orchestra when it re-opens.

Charles Richards and J. M. Chamberlin, who have been running the Orpheum theatre at Lafayette, Ind., for some time, have bought the theatre from the Columbia Amusement Company, of Lafayette.

My Show at Rochester, Ind., has been bought by Layman Downey from Charles Walker. Mr. Downey's term as county treasurer expires in the near future and he bought the theatre as a future business when his term expires.

Levi Reynolds, of Chalmers, Ind., is building a new theatre at Chalmers, which will be ready about September 1. The theatre is to be equipped with removable seats so as they can be removed for dancing on short notice.

Manager Rogers, of the Crump's theatre, at Columbus, is going to add vaudeville to the film attractions at his theatre, beginning in August, the week of the county fair.

J. A. Ormiston has opened a moving picture show at Bruceville, Ind.

Vincent Kraig, of Huntington, Ind., has bought the Theatorium at Newcastle, Ind. He will run features Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and change his program every day.

A pipe organ is to be installed at the Bucklen theatre at Elkhart, which is running nothing but films now.

The Park theatre at 3431 East Tenth street, Indianapolis, will be sold at auction by McFadden and Burkhardt.

The stock season has closed at the Family theatre, Lafayette, but the house will run a picture program, afternoon and evening. The house is being remodeled, two Powers 6-A machines, electrically operated, a mirror screen, ventilating fans and later a pipe organ are to be added.

More seats have been installed, extra space obtained in the aisles and two big suction fans have been added to the Theato, Washington, Ind., which has been remodeled.

KENTUCKY

The Germantown airdome, at Clay and Kentucky streets, Louisville, reopened on July 25 under the management of A. J. Wagner. The airdome has a seating capacity of 2,000. Each patron will be furnished with a cushion.

Robert Hill has purchased the Dixie theatre at Tullahoma, Tenn., from Clara Norton and the Crystal theatre in the same town from Homer Smith. Both theatres will continue as ten-cent motion picture houses.

MAINE

E. B. Wilder, proprietor of the Odd Fellows hall in Lincoln, is now building a new picture theatre in South Brewer, which he expects to be ready to open August 2. It will have a capacity of three hundred and the admission will be ten cents. He has contracted for Universal service.

George Ferland, formerly of Ferland's hall in East Millinocket, has closed his theatre there and is about to open the Star theatre in Millinocket. The Bangor office of the Universal Film Company has sold him a Powers 6-A projecting machine, and he has contracted for Universal service.

Riverside Park, a summer amusement place, about five miles below the city of Bangor, on the beautiful Penobscot river, which is operated by the Bangor Railway & Electric Company, opened Sunday night with motion pictures for the rest of the summer, the pictures to be shown free Sunday nights, in addition to the musical comedy features which run all the week.

This is the second place in Maine to use pictures on Sunday, and there is every indication that the venture will be successful, the company getting its returns from the extra car riding. The first picture shown was the Universal six-reel feature, Samson.

The Linekin Bay Yacht Club of Boothbay Harbor, a popular Maine summer resort, has installed a booth and picture machine and is going to have two performances each week for the benefit of its members.

MASSACHUSETTS

Middleboro, Mass., is to have one of the finest motion picture theatres in that section of the Bay State. It is being built by Fred L. Rounds, a dentist in that town. Construction is of cement blocks with a fancy full brick front. The building will be modern and fireproof in every way.

The floor will be cement, with opera chairs. There will be a large balcony and the projection booth, built into the building, will contain two 6-A Powers machines and a Fort Wayne generator. The lobby walls will be painted in Grecian and Venetian scenes. The structure will cost $25,000.

MISSOURI

Mrs. L. B. Stoddard, proprietor and manager of the Monroe theatre, California and Chippewa streets, St. Louis, is remodeling and enlarging her house so that it will hold twice as many patrons as formerly. The theatre will be extended to the alley in the back, will have a new concrete floor and other fireproof improvements, and will seat seven hundred persons. The Monroe was built seven years ago and never was large enough for the audiences that patronized the place. The alterations are to be finished by September 1.

East St. Louis has a new airdome which recently opened at 4,000 Waverly avenue. Alpha O. Ely, police sergeant of East St. Louis, is the proprietor. The new airdome was equipped by the Lears Theatre Supply Company, of St. Louis.

The Lindell theatre, Grand and Hebert streets, St. Louis, will run a program of pictures only on Sunday from now until September 1, when the regular feature program will be resumed. William Goldman, the new manager of the Lindell, is proprietor of the St. Louis theatre, Prairie and St. Louis avenues. The St. Louis will remain open all summer.

The West End Lyric, on Delmar at Euclid avenues, St. Louis, is closed for the remainder of the summer. John W. Cornelius, who operates the three Lyrics, will only open the west end house when it rains, and the program cannot be shown at the Lyric airdome, which is not far away from the house.

The Broadway theatre, Broadway and St. Charles street; the Arco theatre, Arco and Manchester avenues; and the Juniata, Grand and Juniata streets, three theatres in widely separated sections of St. Louis, showed two reels of pictures of the Advertising Clubs' convention, which was held in Chicago in June, on July 19, 20 and 21, respectively.

The films were shown under the auspices of the Advertising Club of St. Louis, and contained many interesting views of the convention, such as the parade, the baseball game, and other scenes in which the members took part.

The operating booth at the North Grand airdome, Grand avenue and Natural Bridge road, was struck by lightning during the severe storm in St. Louis on Sunday, July 18. Charles Warner, the manager, and H. O'Laughlin, the operator got busy as soon as the storm was over. It seems the lightning blew out the compensarc and it required some work to get things connected up in time for the evening performance. The North Grand airdome is directly back of the theatre of the same name, and is under the same management.

On July 3 a fire partially destroyed the Happy theatre at Rich Hill, Missouri, owned and operated by Harry Booth and his wife. The house was crowded at the time and Mr. Booth and his wife prevented a panic by their cool work. In addition to the damage to the building four reels of film were destroyed. Repair work was started immediately and the show will be open again in the very near future.

Miller and Chambers are putting in a new house in Wichita, Kansas that will seat 1,800.

NEW JERSEY

Announcement is made by Edward Spiegel that the Market & Beaver Realty Company, of which he is an officer, will rebuild the old Newark theatre, at Newark, during the next year. The entire structure will be torn down and a new playhouse of modern construction will take its place. The plans call for the expenditure of about $750,000.

George W. Cuff, a well-known member of Montclair Lodge of Elks, now controls the Colonial theatre, Halstead theatre, East Orange, and a large show house at Paterson. A Photoplayer, equal to a fifteen-piece orchestra, and costing $10,000 has been installed in the Colonial theatre.

OHIO

"Tim" Long, who is the man behind the wheel at the Melba theatre, Detroit avenue and 118th street, has worked up the business of that house to more than capacity and plans to build a house with 1,000 seats.

Charles A. Garner, former advertising, publicity and assistant manager of the Miles theatre, now is manager of the Princess theatre, Euclid avenue, near the Public Square, Cleveland.

OKLAHOMA

The Star airdome, McAlester, Okla., A. Bert Estes, manager, has changed at least temporarily from stock and musical comedy to moving pictures and vaudeville and will show western and comic pictures.

The Airdome, at Brownswood, Texas, which showed vaudeville and moving pictures, was totally destroyed by fire July 16, cause of fire unknown. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

PENNSYLVANIA

Peter Magaro, proprietor of the Regent motion picture theatre, 410 Market street, Harrisburg, and of a theatre in Carlisle, Pa., has just announced that he proposes to give Harrisburg another screen playhouse. He has bought a plot of ground, 149 by 150 feet, at Maclay and Susquehanna streets, in a new and rapidly growing section of the city, on which he plans to build a brick, fireproof theatre capable of seating 2,000 persons. Construction work will probably not begin until next year.

Several theatres in Pittsburgh have been closed on account of the shortage of business in that section during the hot weather. H. C. Bowers has closed his theatre the Avenue, at Turtle Creek. Pa., and has moved the equipment to Braddock. He is looking for another location, as he states the one he just left was not in a paying location.

The Majestic theatre in Bridgeville, Pa., has also been closed as have several other houses in that section. It is said all of the theatres but the one first stated will be opened the latter part of September.

George J. Sweitzer opened his new Century theatre in Ohio street, North Side, early last week and reports excellent business. The theatre is one of the best in that section of the city. He has an ideal location.

He has a large section to draw from and is sure of a crowd as long as he gives his patrons what they want. The theatre is decorated throughout in red, old rose and green and the seats and other effects of the theatre are all new and up to the minute. He has installed an organ and uses the latest pattern machines for projection.

Glen Jackson, who has been manager of the Lyric theatre, Hazelton, Pa., for several months, has tendered his resignation. His successor has not been named as yet.

Nicola Citola is erecting a new motion picture theatre in East Diamond street, Hazelton, Pa. The house will have a seating capacity of three hundred and fifty. It is expected the theatre will be opened Labor Day.

Charles H. Ringsdorf, who has been manager of the Orpheum theatre, Wilkes-Barre, since that house was opened about six months ago, has tendered his resignation. A. C. Cramps, who was formerly connected with the Savoy theatre, this city, has been named to succeed Mr. Ringsdorf.

Jacob Theis, wealthy real estate operator of this city, is the owner of the Orpheum, which is Wilkes-Barre's newest and costliest motion picture theatre.

An Austin organ has been installed in the Orpheum theatre, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. The instrument is one of the finest built by the Austin Company. It will be featured in all of the Orpheum advertising.

TEXAS

A. D. Bethard will soon open his theatre at Peak and Bryan streets, Dallas, Texas, with a seating capacity of six hundred. The house will be located in one of the best suburban districts of the city.

John M. Sayeg, exhibitor at Ennis, Texas, was blessed with a baby girl on July 12.

W. J. Shivers, formerly owner of the Cliff Queen theatre, Dallas, Texas, is now operating the Healy airdome in Fort Worth.

J. W. Box, Dixie theatre, Rockdale, Texas, has temporarily discontinued business, but will open again about September 1, with an almost entirely new house, the remodeling work starting upon his closing the house.

The Cozy theatre, Waco, Texas, opened the middle of July with what might be called "the official opener." "The Heart of Maryland," with Mrs. Leslie Carter starring.

John Sniveley at Paris, Texas, has closed his Lyric theatre for repairs, and will have one of the neatest theatres in the state when completed about August 15.

The war series of the Picture Playhouse Film Company are going good in the southwestern territory, and Managers McIlheran is keeping them working solid.

W. J. Lytle, manager of the majority of the motion picture houses in San Antonio, still wants more of them. During the last six months he has opened the Empire, seating 1,800; the Soledad Roof, seating 2,100; the Soledad theatre, seating 2,000, and now he has plans approved for another big one on Commerce street, which will seat it is expected, about two thousand.

Edited by Ernst Luz

THEME ADOPTION FOR PICTURE PLAYING

A THEME in music is a melody, usually short, with which the composer hopes to popularize his composition and around which he writes musical embellishments with a view of having his theme stand out more prominently.

Such themes are the result of the composer's temperamental moods, while the embellishments are the result of his musical knowledge and ability—in other words, the first is his inspiration, the other, theory.

In the adoption of music to the spoken drama, the theoretic part of the composition is dropped, the theme only being used, hence the term, "theme playing."

For many years many writers have claimed that on account of the picture being subject to so many interchangeable scenes, it was not practical to use musical compositions in their entirety and consequently we have the market flooded with books of themes or short extracts from standard musical compositions, very erroneously calling it picture music.

Theme Ideas

Theme ideas such as the above do not only belittle the picture, but constitute a gross insult to music as an art, and are detrimental to the betterment of music and the picture.

A picture dramatic story is the direct result of a theme of thought. Why then should not musical themes which are the result of temperamental moods inspiring their composers, synchronize with the picture?

The musical picture plots that appear in this department are based on the above being the fact. The description of music being a thematic analysis of the screen action, while the musical numbers suggested are the result of a thematic musical analysis of each number. When properly and intelligently done there should be no difficulty in having the two to temperamentally synchronize.

The cues as given designate the points in the picture where there are temperamental changes in the screen action. In pictures void of any musical or thematic suggestion the cues are guides as to how long each number should be played.

In making a thematic analysis of screen action we find that we have four classifications, viz.:

1. Introductory or descriptive action. 2. Characteristic. 3. Dramatic. 4. Suggestive.

Classifications Well Known

Excepting the suggestive, the above classifications are well known to music, the suggestive being an innovation of the picture theatre, brought about by the futile attempt of players to follow screen action with numbers having titles suggestive of the screen action, regardless of their temperamental or thematic value. It is gratifying to note that in the musical accompaniment of dramas the above idea or method is now more or less obsolete.

In comedies when such suggestion adds to the mirth of the picture, it is still rightfully in vogue and when properly done and not overdone it certainly meets with the approbation of audiences.

Suggestive music should not be miscontrued as that which is characteristic. Playing music which is known as of Spanish character to a picture suggesting Spanish customs, staged and costumed in Spanish vogue, while suggestive of that which is Spanish is termed characteristic, not suggestive.

The study of characteristic musical color in picture playing, is a very necessary and interesting study.

The very fact that many composers have written numbers, giving them titles suggesting foreign or oriental character, (personally classifying them as such) while their themes and tonal modulations are entirely foreign to the known requirements of such numbers, proves that this study is sadly neglected in both the theoretic or practical in music.

Characteristic Music Hard to Write

Few composers can successfully write characteristic music of more than one type. We therefore know our musical numbers by their composer, feeling assured that Tschaikowsky will give us the plaintive in the Russian; Wagner, the severely dramatic of Germany; and Gillet, the light or frivolous, characteristic in French music.

Of all characteristic music the oriental is the best known, for we have worthy compositions of this type of music by composers of every nationality known.

Oriental dances as well as oriental settings in spectacular performances have been very popular, consequently creating a market for music of such character, making its study profitable.

Its frequent use, with its character designation on musical programs has made it known to the public, consequently it has an intrinsic value in picture theatre music.

Dramatic music is the most studied in picture playing, many players thinking that when they have mastered some agitatos and hurries, they are capable of portraying the necessary dramatic climaxes of picture action. They forget that such music is melodramatic, the real dramatic music expressing a much greater degree of seriousness.

Serious Dramatic in Music

After making a thematic or temperamental study of Wagnerian music you cannot help but know that which is seriously dramatic in music, for in all his themes and at all times when he is melodic, his music suggests the passion and fire of dramatic inspiration.

As a preliminary study take the "Evening Star" from "Tannhauser," which is possibly the most popular and least dramatic or melody or song of all Wagner music and see if you will not find more than melodic inspiration in its theme.

I cite Wagner not as the only writer of advanced dramatic music, for there are many others at the present time, all of whom must admit Wagner as the master of dramatic music.

While with the suggestive, characteristic and dramatic, we can obtain all the musical color pertinent to the picture and screen action, there still remains the greater portion of the picture to be thematically analyzed, consisting of the introductory or descriptive action necessary to picture clarification and plot development.

All musical numbers not having a positive suggestive, characteristic or dramatic value in picture playing can at some time be used as introductory or descriptive numbers.

While the numbers for this kind of playing are more numerous, we must remember that the temperamental requirements are much greater, for the musical appeal in introductory or descriptive playing may be the most frivolous, and again very serious.

While descriptive playing may call for a lively gallop at one time, it can and quite often does require the most plaintive adagio as a succeeding number. The thematic classification of introductory numbers is a necessary factor in the musical setting for pictures as well as the playing of such numbers, and will be taken up in the coming articles appearing in this department.

Theme adoption for picture playing is consequently an essential part of the work, when such themes with their component parts are selected and placed with the view of working on the temperamental senses of their hearers, thereby placing the audience into a more receptive mood, the music laughing when the picture laughs, and crying when the picture cries.

NOTES FOR "DON CAESAR DE BAZAN."—Reel I.—Nos. 3, 5 and 8 are slow Spanish numbers. No. 2, any Spanish waltz with an introduction.

Reel II.—No. 7, any Spanish suite as published by G. Ricordi or Carl Fischer, New York City.

Reel III.—No. 9 is a slow, serious number, with a positive dramatic appeal. No. 11 is a somewhat less serious number than 9, neverthless slow. No. 12, same as 9.

Reel IV.—Nos. 15 and 16 are the same as Nos. 11 and 12. No. 18 is a slow number with a dramatic as well as a pathetic appeal with a usual agitated strain in minor key. It is best when the minor theme is in the bass clef.

Nos. 11, 12, 15, 16 and 18 can be appropriately played on organ.

MUSICAL QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

D. N. M., Muskegon, Mich.—Have sent you some of the plots you requested. In the near future I will be able to give you all the information you require. Hope to hear from you, telling me what success you have had with the crude forms I send you. In the future write to our New York address.

E. E. H., Syracuse, N. Y.—Pleased to hear that you found the musical plot of "Always in the Way" helpful and that you liked it. Am writing you as requested.

C. E. R., Chicago, Ill.—You will find many concert waltzes having slow introductions, which have a positive romantic or pathetic appeal. This is very valuable in picture playing. You can cover a pathetic scene with the introduction going into neutral or descriptive playing without any break in your number. The terms semi-heavy (S.-Hy.), heavy-romantic (Hy.-Rom.) or heavy-pathetic (Hy.-Path.) denote the degree of seriousness, which you obtain by selecting your number and the way you need play it.

When the term heavy is used you should look for numbers wherein minor keys are prominent, remembering that all such introductions must be slow. Most all Waldteufel waltzes have such introductions. You should avoid introductions of maestoso or allegro moderato movements, as they are better for ensemble (Ens.) or dramatic effects. "Adlyn," "Wedding of the Winds" and "Spirit of Love" waltzes, all published by Jerome Remick, New York City, are very good.

In making a research of your standard waltzes you will find many. Be sure that the introductions are melodious, otherwise they are good for ensemble effects only.

A B C SETS READY

THE Photo Play Music Company announces in this issue that six of its "A B C Dramatic Music Sets" are ready. These numbers are so arranged as to make it possible to follow dramatic action on the screen without a segue from one sheet of music to another, making it possible to play lengthy and difficult scenes without making a break in the music.

The sets all contain two or more numbers put together in the form usually required by the picture action. It is equally valuable to the pianist, one man orchestra player or orchestra.

Every set has an explanation of its picture value printed on the piano copy, with instructions for its use. Further detail will be found in the advertisement in this issue.

CHICAGO PENNANT COMPANY ENTERS FILM FIELD

THE National Badge and Pennant Company of Chicago, which for several years has been prominent in the manufacture of college and advertising pennants and badges, has entered the motion picture field.

They have made some attractive Charlie Chaplin pennants, which are for sale to the exhibitor at a low price, for use in decorating his theatre when playing films in which this favorite appears. They are planning later to branch out manufacturing pennants for all the leading film favorites.

MUSIC FOR "AN ALIEN"

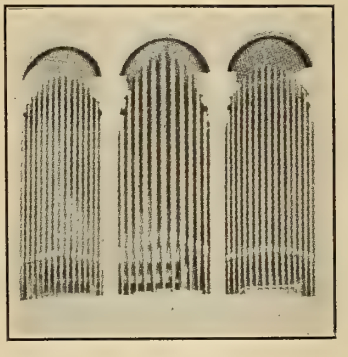
THE Paramount Pictures Corporation issues a musical plot to the Thos. H. Ince picture "An Alien."

The plot is identical with the music used at its initial production at the Astor theatre, New York City. The plot is not dictatorial, giving the musician full sway in setting music with whch he is familiar.

As there are many changes in the first two reels care must be taken in selecting numbers from and to which quick segues can easily be made. For use in the pit the musician or leader can materially condense the plot making it more practical by writing the stop or segue cues on his music.

If possible see your picture with this plot in hand before your first performance and you will have no difficulty in getting good results with it.

The Paramount Pictures Corporation is to be commended for the issuing of this plot which should be a positive help to the player.



"ALLEN" MAKES FAKE MUSIC OFFER

A MAN who signs himself J. Allen, at the present time is touring the country saying he represents the Waterson, Berlin & Snyder Music Company, and offers a professional copy proposition to piano players in all moving picture theatres collecting from them a fee of one dollar for which he promises them a certain amount of copies during the period of one year. He is using the stationery of the company, which misleads the public.

If by chance the party should approach you the company asks you to cause his arrest and notify the Waterson, Berlin & Snyder Company, 1571 Broadway, New York City.

At the present time he is located somewhere in the State of Ohio.

A. B. C. Dramatic Music

Music composed and arranged for picture playing only. Entirely new. So adapted that dramatic scenes can be played correctly without any interruption in the music. Every pianist, One Man Instrument Player and Orchestra leader should have one or more copies of the A. B. C. Dramatic Music.

SET NO. 1 is a set of three numbers for Premeditated Murder scenes, consisting of a new kind of mysterioso, and agitato movement and a plaintive number for the aftermath.

SET NO. 2 consists of two long numbers, one illustrating heavy plotting or dramatic action leading up to fights. The second being a long allegro-hurry for fights or tumult.

SET NO. 3 is a two-numbered set illustrating fights or tumultuous action, ending in death or despair. No. 1 an agitato-hurry and No. 2 a plaintive.

SET NO. 4, consisting of a light agitato and Dr. andante movement, is a musical illustration for domestic quarrels or agitation with a romantic or pathetic aftermath.

SET NO. 5 consists of 4 numbers, a pizz. mysterioso, agitato, hurry and plaintive. Excellent number for burglary scenes, illustrating the sneaky entrance, agitation leading to a fight with a plaintive as the aftermath.

SET NO. 6 consists of 2 numbers, a heavy mysterioso and allegro-hurry. An excellent illustration for threatening action or plotting ending in confusion or excitement.

Prices: Piano, 10 cents a set. Small orchestra, including Cello and Organ, 25 cents a set. Full orchestra, 35 cents a set.

NAT GOODWIN IN THE MASTER HAND

The story of the machinations of a selfish, heartless husband who, in order to gain possession of his wife's fortune goes to the length of having her illegitimately confined in an asylum for the insane. His evil career is brought to a close by a spectacular automobile accident.

Mr. Goodwin has the role of a genial, lovable man of big affairs who proves that his is the master hand first by dominating an exciting situation in the stock market and then—bringing his histrionic ability into play.—By solving the mystery of the disappearance of the villain's wife and bestowing deserved happiness on two women who have been victimized.

NEW KRITERION

We have purchased the Kriterion—not for its past but for its future.

Our action in this matter, our plans, our organization here and abroad—all have now been consummated after months of steady and silent work.

There is much we might say: but you want facts. Very well.

We know and you know that a ready welcome and assured success await a highly desirable program, provided (1) it is strong financially, (2) it is able to offer better pictures continuously, and (3) to extend better service to its customers.

Now, we have on hand, ready for immediate release more than two hundred high-class subjects, our property, paid for in cash. They are high class and they are ready.

We have contracts with some of the best producers in the United States, in each instance a concern with the ability, equipment and capital which assure quality production.

And finally, money talks! Look up these references:

NEW KRITERION

To Exchange Men:

From this day on the Kriterion program will be conducted as a business organization by business men.

Our plan of business is a strictly co-operative one.

We realize keenly the necessity of good pictures and our contracts are made hard and fast to that end. We can and will eliminate all pictures not up to our standard; and shall expect our exchanges to do likewise, should the occasion arise.

We also know the diverse needs of the day. Our pictures will include comedies, dramas, cartoons, educational, topical and animal pictures.

In addition we promise only the strict business rules and honest purposes which are essential to every substantial and successful industry.

To the exchange men we would say: We have stated our proposition and you have our references.

We offer territory to the first responsible man who is equipped to handle successfully the Kriterion program. Your territory may still be open.

If you are interested, write or wire us. Or better still, come to New York at once and see us.

Remember: We are ready to release NOW—with pictures sufficient for eleven weeks advance

"A Bunch of Keys" Unlocks the Chest of Jovian Laughter

The ancients believed that when the great God Jove was pleased with mortals he unlocked a chest and loosed the spirit of laughter on the world.

This myth has a strong basis of fact. The world is full of laughter, although it is too often suppressed. But it is present in every human heart, ready to bubble out spontaneously and irresistibly when someone applies the key.

Charles Hoyt was one of the few men who possessed this key. In fact, he had a "bunch" of them. "A Bunch of Keys," Essanay's five-act photoplay, written by Hoyt, unlocks the heart and looses a perfect gale of laughter.

Nothing is so productive of good will and good feeling as a hearty laugh. Give your spectators a chance to laugh by booking this comedy through the V. L. S. E. Inc.

Where Is the Leak?

THAT there is a big leakage somewhere in the feature business goes without saying. Everyone concerned knows it; or at least, everyone is aware that profits are decidedly not what they should be.

THE exhibitor knows it and the manufacturer knows it. At the same time, both know the tremendous popular demand for features.

There is no gainsaying the feature's triumphant advance and its foremost position, now and to come, in this industry. This is certain.

Which gives all the more reason why a prompt effort should be made to find the financial nigger in the feature woodpile.

WHERE is the leak? There is, of course, considerable waste in production. This is true of every big new industry, based, as this is, upon an almost universal popular demand.

It is particularly true of an industry in which the creative element is so strong, in which spirited production goes ahead faster than system and economy can follow.

Probably the aggregated waste in production would present a startling figure. But here is a problem which calls for individual solution and it is already being worked out very well in a number of studios.

SO much, briefly, for the manufacturer. For the exhibitor it should be said that he could make features pay better—he could even afford to pay what seem to be production rentals for them if he gave them better advertising—if, too, the manufacturer helped him more in this respect.

So, undoubtedly, features could be made more economically by the manufacturer and they could be made to draw more money to the box office by the exhibitor—all of which would make greater profits for each.

BUT we have thus far, and purposely, overlooked one of the three big factors in the feature business, namely, the man between the manufacturer and the exhibitor, the middleman or exchange.

How about the distribution of features? Is it economical? Is it even correct in principle?

There are over three hundred feature exchanges in the country today. Giving each an average running expense of a thousand dollars a week, the total distribution cost of features today exceeds the staggering total of fifteen millions a year.

The figure is probably greater than this, but this hasty computation serves its purpose.

This is a big amount. To 10,000 exhibitors it means $1,500 a year apiece, which many an exhibitor this year would be glad to call his profit. To 30 manufacturers it means a half a million each a year, which is far indeed away from any present profits.

IS this great cost of distribution necessary? If not, it is the big leakage in this business today; and if wrong, it is not like waste in production, which is an individual problem. It is all wrong, fundamentally wrong.

In this consideration, one naturally turns to the distribution systems of other products—naturally, because this industry of the motion picture is bound sooner or later to be moulded by the very same great economic laws which mould every other industry.

THE manufacturers of 1,000 products don't own and maintain their own distributing houses. Some own their own retail stores, in which case they eliminate the middleman altogether and make this expense their profit, or their sales promotion capital.

But for a distributing facility they use, in each central city, a general wholesaler of all kinds of food products, a house which performs a like service impartially for many other manufacturers of these same commodities.

INSTEAD of paying out the huge sum of rentals and overhead charges for fifty such houses, they pay a commission; and they devote their capital and energies to helping the retailer sell more of their goods and thus sending him oftener to the wholesaler.

In other words, they let the wholesaler perform the mechanical functions of distribution; they, themselves, promote the sales of their goods.

IS it not possible to have such clearing houses for features? Why not one or a few such institutions in each exchange city, instead of twenty or more different exchanges?

Selling campaigns would go as forcefully, or more forcefully, than ever. There would be road salesmen and advertising campaigns to boost each picture. There would be more co-operation with and for the exhibitor. And even so an overhead of millions would be saved, the expenditure of which today is largely going outside the trade and accomplishing nothing.

The Awakening of the Press to the Significance of Censorship

THE censorship of motion pictures has at last begun to attract the attention of the press.

The impressive quotations from some of America's greatest newspapers, made by D. W. Griffith in his speech at the San Francisco convention, are one evidence of this encouraging realization of a serious situation.

Now, what is probably the most widely read and best known weekly periodical in this half of the world has paid a cutting compliment to the public nuisance of motion picture censorship.

THE following editorial appeared in "The Saturday Evening Post" of July 24, 1915. Under the title of "The Motion Picture Censor," this powerful publication sums up the "why and wherefore" of censorship in penetrating language.

"THE instinct to look after your neighbor's morals—however unsuccessful you may be in looking after your own—is ineradicable in human nature. If printing were a new art—invented, say, in the nineteenth century—it would undoubtedly be under a comprehensive censorship.

"There would be a college of censors in the postal department to scrutinize every printed sheet that went through the mails. There would be state censors, whose political activities had been of such nature as to inspire the governor with great faith in their general discretion.

"New York, Chicago and other large cities would have local boards, probably affiliated with the police departments and very zealous in seeing that the minds of the young were not corrupted by printed words which tended to raise doubts of the police department's intelligence and integrity. Recent issues of Chicago newspapers containing information that policemen had been indicted for grafting would have appeared with the corrupting columns carefully blacked over in the Russian manner.

"MOTION pictures are a new art, and a complicated system of censorship is growing up round them. There is no particular reason for censoring motion pictures more than anything else, except that they are new and their unsettled status gives the censorious instinct a chance to assert itself. Crime of all sorts is constantly described in print that is within the reach of any literate child possessed of a penny. It is constantly shown on the stage, the illusion of which is much more powerful than that of the motion picture.

"Motion picture men themselves set up and supported the National Board of Censors, because they wished the public to be assured that the entertainments were such as the public's wives and children could see without offense.

"A lot of state and city censors, each with his own notion of what is advisable for his neighbor to see, cannot fail to become in the end an impertinent nuisance."

TO the last sentence only we take exception, and to that only, because it understates the case.

State and city censors, wherever they exist, are already an impertinent nuisance. Exhibitors and exchange men who live under any one of the numerous censor regimes now in force can testify heartily to the truth of this assertion.

BUT relief is in sight. It may yet be far off, but however dimly, it is yet plainly visible to those who can see far enough ahead.

And the reason is this:

When the newspapers begin to take cognizance of a certain state of affairs it means the trial forthwith of the case before the people and by the people.

THIS is precisely what the motion picture men should desire and labor to bring about. There can only be one ending to such a hearing—the liberation of the motion picure from stupid and bigoted regulation, the silencing of the screen's enemies, and the discrediting and abolition of censorship in the United States.

THIS result will not be attained in a month, or in six months or a year. It will be the work of several years, marked by reverses, by drawn battles, by compromises, and here will be the compensating feature—by substantial victories.

But there can only be one result, the one we have indicated above, because in a country like this, however politicians and stiff-necked Puritans may toy and dally with the idea of censorship, the people as a whole will not soberly tolerate the establishment of such a supervision over them.

THE very spirit of freedom pervading America will permit these aspirants to censorial honors to experiment and entertain themselves with their reactionary ideas.

But that same spirit of freedom will be quick to defend itself so soon as it finds that men and women who have enjoyed its privileges would abuse them to deprive their fellow citizens of their individual liberty.

The Picture and the Printing Press

SOMEONE has said that the invention of the motion picture is as revolutionary as the invention of the art of printing. This is not an exaggeration. Rather, it is an understatement of the fact.

The motion picture has possibilities—and certainties of power and of appeal even greater than those of the printed page. For the motion picture is nothing more nor less than life on a screen—life in all its lights and shadows, acted by human beings for human beings.

And it is well to remember that the Puritans and prudes who attack the motion picture are of the same stripe as the ancient Puritans and prudes who were horrified at the revolution wrought by the invention of printing.

Five Comedy Releases Added to Mutual Program

President Freuler Announces New Beauty and a Second Falstaff, with Two English "Knockabouts" and the Horsley Comedies, Among Latest Accessions—"Broadway" Three Reelers Promised—Gaumont Scenic and Cartoon, Bostock Two Reelers and Mutual Banner Features Round Out List

DEFINITE announcement was made yesterday at the offices of the Mutual Film Corporation that its program revision and expansion is now complete and that the revised and increased schedule will be in the hands of the Mutual branch offices within the next ten days.

It had previously been announced by President John R. Freuler that the regular program was receiving his attention and that he would definitely settle on his releases before taking up anything else. As a result of extended conferences and contract making, President Freuler announces an all feature program, with no advance in film rental price, together with increased variety and a wide range of exceptional subjects.

It was learned that the following plans have been definitely completed:

Two three-reel features with Broadway stars in the leading roles will be released each week. The Knickerbocker Star Features pictures which have hitherto been released under the title of General Program will be released in the future on the Mutual Program, using such stage stars as Sir Forbes Robertson, Gertrude Elliott, Alice Brady and Florence Nash.

Five New Comedy Releases a Week

There will be five new comedy releases each week, the first being the New Cub Comedies with George Ovey as the star and David Horsley as the producer. To those will be added a new Beauty comedy release presented by a company personally recruited by President S. S. Hutchinson of the American Film Company. A new Falstaff comedy release made by a new company of players especially chosen by Edwin Thanhouser, and two new comedies featuring English knockabout comedians and directed by one of the most celebrated comedy men in motion pictures. After January first this comedy man will appear personally in special features to be released by the Mutual. The English comedians have been brought over under contract which gives the Mutual their exclusive services on long contracts.

The two reel pictures on the program have been brought to feature quality and will be known hereafter as Mutual Banner features. Among these there will be each week a new Western drama brand to be known as the "Mustang" dramas.

The Bostock Animal Pictures produced by David Horsley will be two reels long and as already announced there will be one two-reel release each week on the regular program.

Scenic and Cartoon by Gaumont

Contracts were signed yesterday with the Gaumont Company for a new split reel release each week which will be half scenic under the title "Seeing America First" and half cartoon and the cartoonist chosen is Clyde Forsythe who as "Vic" has made such a success with the "Axel and Flooey" series in the New York Evening World and a syndicate of 200 newspapers throughout the country. Mr. Forsythe will present the "Axel and Flooey" series to lead off this new feature.

In addition to the above many novelties have been arranged for the regular program and Mutual Masterpictures, a series of feature releases which has met with tremendous artistic and financial success, will be continued in order to present subjects impossible to handle in shorter length pictures.

President Freuler Highly Gratified

It is announced that a new series of masterpictures surpassing the present offerings are about ready for release. The general policy of the Mutual has been broadened to admit of more comedies, more feature pictures and more novelties in order to present a program that would satisfy the undoubted demand among exhibitors and the general public for a balanced program of entertainment.

The Mutual has had a wide range of choice as it is no secret that a good baker's dozen of responsible manufacturers have been endeavoring to negotiate for releases on the Mutual Program.

President Freuler when seen at the Mutual Offices said, "Our program schedule is completed and I am gratified at its merit. I do not hesitate to say that it is the best balanced, the highest quality and the most profitable program ever offered to exhibitors. The regular Mutual Program is in fact a feature program, because the quality of both the long and short subjects is equal to the best feature standard of the present market. I shall have more surprises to announce in a few days.

"The regular Mutual Program as I announced several weeks ago is, the Gibraltar of the motion picture situation. In the Mutual readjustments of this rapidly progressing business, we were enabled, because of our established position to make unusually attractive arrangements and with good pictures and long contracts, we feel confident that the Mutual prestige will not only continue but be strengthened and increased.

"I will not rest on my own oars but will continue to improve a program that never has been surpassed.

"I am a firm believer in the regular program as the greatest profit builder to the largest number of exhibitors but our activities will include especial attention to the longer Masterpicture subjects as the Mutual will be in a position to supply all the needs of the exhibitors large and small.

"We never have looked out upon brighter times than now, despite all uncertainties that seem to exist in other directions of the motion picture business."

Tickle Public's Ribs with Comedy Is V-L-S-E Idea

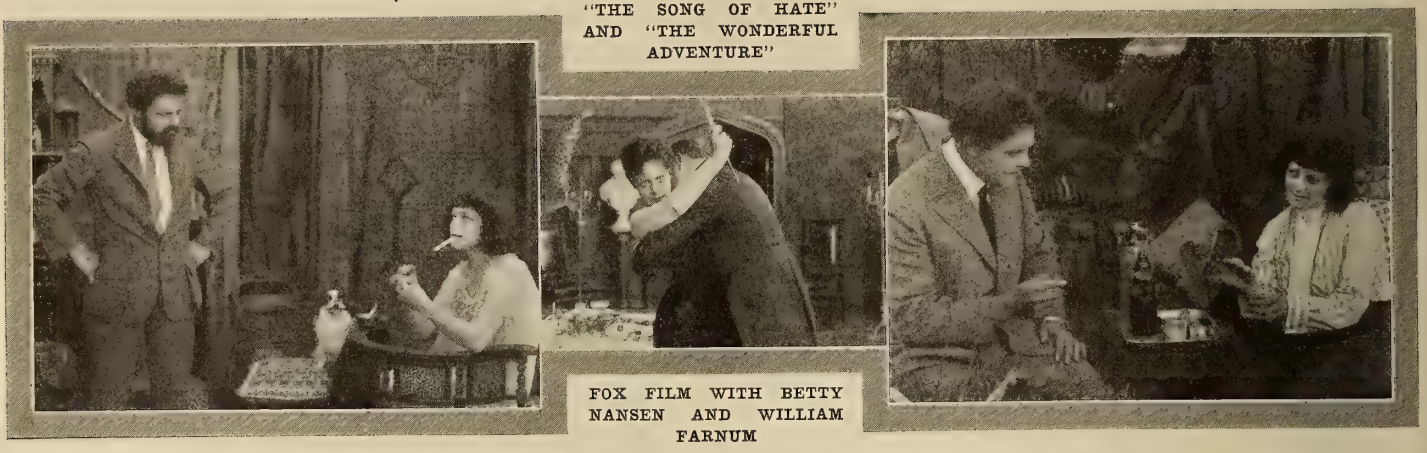
Big Four Producers in Responding to General Demand for Multiple Funmakers Are Paying as Much Attention to Details in Farce Subjects as in Dramatic Pictures

THAT big feature comedies are in demand is indicated by the attention given to this class of subject by the Big Four. Three comedies are scheduled on the V-L-S-E program for the month of August.

Marie Dressler in "Tillie's Tomato Surprise," Raymond Hitchcock in "The Ring Tailed Rhinoceros," while June Keith and Johhy Slavin will be seen in "A Bunch of Keys."

Heretofore the impression prevailed among some exhibitors that only dramatic subjects could be successfully offered as the big feature attraction. Comedies were out of the reckoning.

The Big Four reports that the success attending the presentation of the comedy features it has already released has been such that the company looks for a big increase in the popularity in humorous subjects.



In preparing their comedies, the Big Four has given the same lavish care to the details of production that is devoted to the straight dramatic subjects, and to make them still more attractive, it headed the casts with stars of national reputations.

"The Slim Princess," adapted from George Ade's most humorous story, with Ruth Stonehouse and Francis X. Bushman in the leading roles; "Crooky," with Frank Daniels, and "A Texas Steer," with Tyrone Power, have already gone into screen evidence and, according to reports of the company, have established a new record for multiple reel comedies.

With these comedy features, and others to come, the Big Four states it will establish a precedent in motion picture exhibitions, and will awaken every exhibitor to the financial possibilities that heretofore have been overlooked through sheer force of habit.

During the past several years the records of the speaking stage show that the greatest theatrical success have been comedies, it is said. One of them, "Potash and Perlmutter," has already run for fifty-two consecutive weeks. "It Pays to Advertise" is still running and is now in its fiftieth week. "Twin Beds" has played for fifty weeks and is still running.

These and several others stand out as phenomenal box office attractions on Broadway.

"THE SONG OF HATE" AND "THE WONDERFUL ADVENTURE"

FOX FILM WITH BETTY NANSEN AND WILLIAM FARNUM

52 Reels a Year Make Fox Studios Hum with Activity

Ten Companies at Work on Important Features, All Headed by Stars—Several Hundred "Supers" Employed by Company Every Day of the Week

SINCE the recent announcement by William E. Fox that, beginning September first, he would release fifty-two feature pictures a year (one each week) taken from some popular novel or play, and each picture featuring some star performer, the activities in the Fox studios have become apparent to even a casual observer.

Among the great pictures upon which prominent directors are at work, and in which leading players are being featured, are:

"Sin," a picturized version of "The Jewels of the Madonna," in which Theda Bara is playing the leading role. Herbert Brenon is directing and wrote this picture, and believes it to be among if not the greatest picture he has yet produced.

J. Gordon Edwards is working on "The Song of Hate," in which Betty Nansen and Jean Sothern are being featured. This is said to be a picture of unusual strength and power.

One of the best of the forthcoming Fox releases is "The Regeneration," which will be a picturized version of Owen Kildare's famous "My Mamie Rose." This picture is being directed by Raoul J. Walsh, who is now numbered among the best directors in the country. He was associated directly for several years with David W. Griffith. In this picture, Anna Nilson and Rockcliffe Fellowes, and William Sheer are being featured.

"The Bondman" is another of the big Fox features just about completed. William Farnum is featured in this picture. Edgar Lewis was the director.

"The Two Orphans" is also scheduled for an early release. This picture will feature Theda Bara, Jean Sothern and William E. Shay.

Mr. Fox now has ten companies at work on as many important features, all of which will be headed by a leading actor or actress. Several hundred "supers" are employed every day of the week and there is one constant stream of activity emanating from the Fox offices.

Among a few that may be noted are "The Witch," a picturized version of "The Sorceress," from the pen of Sardou, in which Nance O'Neil will play the leading part; also "The Wonderful Adventure," in which William Farnum will carry off the honors. This scenario is from the virile pen of the famous Captain Wilbur Lawton. The picture is directed by Frederick Thomson. All of these features are strong in themselves, but in addition they are being staged in a magnificent manner. One of the scenes in "The Witch" cost close to $10,000.

Every scene is being put on in the most lavish manner imaginable in keeping with richness and dignity. A large number of other features are fast nearing the point when they will be placed in the hands of the directors.

"Lady Audley's Secret," which is the latest Fox picture, made a strong impression when it was put on at a private performance at the Broadway theatre Wednesday morning.

Anti-Censor Arguments on Slides Aid Kansas Fight

Exhibitors Are Confident of Arousing by This Method Voters of the State to an Understanding of the Unfair Law Now Exacting Exorbitant Fees for Inspection of Films

Kansas City, Aug. 3.

THE latest move in the fight on the censorship law in Kansas by the picture interests is to have a number of arguments against unfair censorship made into films and shown in the different theatres throughout the state. This move was decided upon recently at a meeting of exchange men in Kansas City.

It is claimed that in this way the attention of the amusement loving citizens of the state of Kansas could be drawn to the unfairness of the censorship as it is now conducted in that state and to the exorbitant expense burdening picture people.

Deprived of many of the means of enjoyment open to city people, the rural inhabitants of Kansas turn logically to motion pictures. They find in these pictures an inexpensive and entirely satisfactory source of recreation. The people of Kansas are not children that they need to have chosen overseers to dictate to them the kind of fun that they shall enjoy. Even if they were, there is no disposition on the part of the film interests to force films into this state that will corrupt the morals of anybody.

Although the National Board of Censorship is not as liberal as it might be, it is reasonably fair in its decisions. And the film interests have a right to expect as much and as fair treatment from the Kansas censors as from the national board.

At the 1913 session of the Kansas legislature a law was passed making the state superintendent of public instruction the state censor of films. It carries with it a provision that the film exhibitor must pay a fee of two dollars for each reel of film censored and the law says that this shall be all that he be compelled to pay, yet the film men today are compelled to pay, in addition to the two dollars per reel, the express both ways between Kansas City, Mo., and Topeka and then must pay for a place in which to show his films to the censors, and it is against this exorbitant tax that the film interests are going to fight.

The exhibitors of Kansas are all worked up about this censorship fee since some of the exchanges in Kansas City, which have been paying for the censorship of their films, have decided to charge the censorship charge back to them. Some say that it will cause them to close, but the consensus of opinion is that they will put their wheel to the shoulder and work with the other picture interests to have the law amended at the next meeting of the legislature.

Newspapers in the state of Kansas will be asked to lend their columns to the movement, as it is just another step to the consoring of the press of the United States.

INSECTS, EMBRYO CENSORS, SHUT OFF VIEW OF SCREEN

"Canadian soldiers"—harmless insects that are said to breed on the Canadian shore of Lake Erie and migrate to the American side—have been a source of annoyance to Cleveland motion picture theatre managers. Attracted by the bright lights in front of the playhouse, the "Canadian soldiers" have made their way into the theatres and annoyed the audiences. They gather by thousands around the lights and clouds of them have invaded the theatres. They do not sting, but fly into the faces of patrons just about the time an interesting scene is being depicted on the screen.

Paramount Dips Deep in Printers' Ink for Exhibitor Aid

Corporation Comes Forward with Details of Largest National Advertising Campaign Inaugurated by a Motion Picture Company—Expects that 55,000,000 People Will Know of Its Productions Through Magazines and Daily Papers in the Biggest Cities of the Country, Beginning with First Thursday in September

FOLLOWING its recent announcement of the photoplays to be released during the first three months of the second year of its existence—the biggest announcement of releases in its history—the Paramount Pictures Corporation now comes forward with the details of the largest advertising campaign ever instituted by a motion picture company.

Beginning the first Thursday in September, in 11,944,105 copies of various publications, its advertisements will appear throughout the year 1915-1916. Assuming that five people read each paper, more than 55,000,000 persons will learn intimately each week of Paramount pictures, Paramount producers and the stars which those producers present on the Paramount program in the biggest and best theatres everywhere.

This gigantic campaign is for the benefit of the Paramount exhibitor.

Recently a stranger to New York, staying at one of the Times Square hotels, determined to go to a motion picture theatre. He did not hasten to the nearest film theatre, as he might have done a few years ago, without first ascertaining what was to be seen there; instead he inquired at the hotel desk where Paramount pictures could be seen and when the clerk suggested the Strand, he immediately went there.

This is the sort of thing that is happening all over the country, as film fans realize that consistent merit in the releases of a distributing organization means consistent merit in the offerings of the motion picture houses.

25-Page Booklet of Advertising

In addition to this, with the aid of one the most experienced advertisement writers in this country, Howard E. Spaulding, a twenty-five page booklet giving samples of advertisements different from anything yet attempted in the film business, has been prepared for use by Paramount exhibitors.

It is generally conceded that service to the exhibitor is the most important item in the distribution of motion pictures and it is service to the exhbitor that forms one of the strongest rocks on which the Paramount Pictures Corporation is laid.

The national campaign will undertake to teach a huge reading public that Paramount pictures are the best and it will tell them why the company considers them the best. Patrons have then but to go to those theatres where Paramount pictures are shown to be convinced of the truth of this statement.

It is to the exhibitor's advantage to identify his theatre with the campaign, as then it will be unnecessary for a stranger in his town to ask the hotel clerk where Paramount pictures can be seen.

Compare Releases of Each Quarter

It has always been the policy of the Paramount Pictures Corporation to lay its plans well and not to talk until it is sure that it has something worth talking about. Paramount co-operation and Paramount efficiency will be even more in evidence during the next year than it has been in the past.

When seen, W. W. Hodkinson, president of the company, the man who more than any other, is responsible for its success, said:

"Any exhibitor who is interested in his own future should compare what Paramount offers with any other productions already on the market. Then to learn how steadily Paramount producers have advanced. He should compare the releases of the first quarter of our first year with the releases of the first quarter of our second year.

"A little over twelve months ago we took the first steps ever taken to establish a quality feature program and to develop a high grade business. The trend of the whole industry since then has turned in our direction. The success of our methods is convincing proof that they are right.

"We shall continue with these methods. That our producers are now able to offer so magnificent a program for the coming three months with no increase in price of service, has been due to the loyal support of the exhibitor. With his continued support for the future, we shall be in position to make our offerings even better from quarter to quarter, which means bigger business for the exhibitor.

"That the Paramount program is consistently the best, few question; but a big point to my mind about Paramount pictures is that they are the cleanest—the pictures that appeal to the desirable class of patrons everywhere."

Kriterion Is Reborn with 11 Weeks' Releases Ready

S. L. Newman, of New York, and Lee Sonneborn, of Baltimore, Buy Everything but Accounts Payable and Receivable, and with 200 Negatives, Prepare for New Film Distribution

AFTER a long period of negotiation and investigation the entire film assets, trade name, and good will of the Kriterion program have been purchased outright by S. L. Newman, of New York, and Lee Sonneborn, of Baltimore, Md. The purchase includes everything but the accounts payable and receivable of the Kriterion Film Corporation. These latter are in the hands of a receiver and a settlement with creditors is to be made.

Mr. Newman is a member of the firm of Reinthal and Newman, 105 West Twenty-ninth street, New York, a concern of long standing and fine repute in the picture art business. Lee Sonneborn, head of Lee Sonneborn and Company, is a successful manufacturer in Baltimore, Md.

Mr. Sonneborn owns the original Kriterion exchange in Baltimore, one of the more prominent of the Kriterion exchanges and under successful headway when the Kriterion program ceased releasing.

Messrs. Newman and Sonneborn have incorporated under the name of the Kriterion Sales Corporation, under the laws of the State of New York. The new concern will be strictly co-operative in principle. A substantial number of exchanges have already been signed up. Two hundred negatives made for the original Kriterion program and of the same uniform good quality which distinquished the releases of this program from its outset are ready for immediate release. These are all new subjects. They provide the new company with eleven weeks' advance releases.

Production for the new program is also already going on. The names of all the producing companies will be announced shortly. The new program starts with eighteen releases a week.

Messrs. Newman and Sonneborn are modest, capable, successful business men. They have entered the picture business only after a painstaking investigation of its possibilities and conditions. They believe in distributing a high-class product and have geared their organization accordingly.

"BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE" COMPLETES SECOND-WEEK RUN IN CHICAGO

Another long run for its features is reported by the V-L-S-E.

"The Blindness of Virtue," four part Essanay production, on the Big Four program, completed its second week's successful run at the La Salle Opera House

MONTHLY LUNCHEON IS PLAN OF LOS ANGELES BOARD OF TRADE

The Los Angeles Board of Trade has adopted a plan of having a monthly luncheon which is held on the first Wednesday of each month, the same day of the regular monthly meetings of the organization.

The purpose of these is for shop talk and preliminaries pertaining to the organization which may be settled at the business sessions. The second of these luncheons will be held August 3.

EVERTHING RUNS SMOOTHLY IN CHAPTER 13 OF "GODDESS"

Ralph Ince, who has just finished chapter thirteen of the Vitagraph photo-play, in chapters, "The Goddess," killed whatever superstition either himself or the players may have felt, by filming one of the most tensely exciting episodes yet seen in this remarkable Gouverneur Morris story, without a hitch, hindrance, or accident.

"Carmen" Trade Showing Epochal in Lasky History

Geraldine Farrar Subject, First Paramount Release Featuring Grand Opera Star, Is Given "First Night" in Los Angeles to Appreciative Throng

Los Angeles, August 1.

"CARMEN," the first Paramount release of the subjects featuring Geraldine Farrar, grand opera star, made by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, was given its "first night" at the Isis Theatre, near the Lasky studio in Hollywood, Wednesday evening, to an audience made up of legitimate stage and motion picture producers, actors, actresses and newspaper people. Thursday Mr. Lasky departed for New York City with the first positive print, where he will arrange releases, and also a private showing to be made at the Metropolitan Opera House for people of the trade and members of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Following the showing a very enthusiastic ovation was tendered Miss Farrar, who with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Farrar, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse L. Lasky, Mrs. Samuel Goldfish, Mrs. David Belasco, Blanche Ring, Charles Winnegar, Mr. and Mrs. Nat Goodwin, Margaret Leslie, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Brian, Lou Tellegen, Raymond Hitchcock, Frances Ring, Tom Meighan, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil and Mr. and Mrs. William C. de Mille, occupied a box at the rear of the theatre.

The applause continued for several minutes and the star of opera, whose artistic work has now been recorded for the screen and record acknowledged her appreciation with her most bewitching smile.

After viewing the five reel picture the scenario for which was adapted by William C. de Mille from the Prosper Merrimee version of the story entitled "Carmen," and produced under the direction of Cecil de Mille, Miss Farrar expressed herself as being delighted and stated that she felt she had given to this picture her greatest and best portrayal of the delightfully deceptive Gypsy girl. The supporting cast included Wallace Reid, Pedro de Cordoba, Billy Elmer, Miss Jean MacPherson, H. B. Carpenter, Milton Moore, Mrs. Lewis McCord, and other prominent members of the Lasky stock company.

Throughout the showing the big audience of motion picture and theatrical people expressed their appreciation of the acting, the many pretty scenes, and the excellent photographic effects secured by Alvin Wyckoff, cameraman for the deMille company.

The settings made up for this subject are perhaps the most elaborate as yet made at the Lasky studio, and one, that of the entrance to the bull ring and the street scene of Seville, is the most expensive made in Los Angeles for one scene. In the introduction Miss Farrar was shown in several of the roles in which she has appeared in grand opera, including Madame Butterfly, La Tosca and Sans Gene.

The representatives of the press present were Al Cohn and Otheman Stevens, Los Angeles "Examiner"; Monroe Lathrop, Los Angeles "Tribune"; Grace Kingsley, Los Angeles "Times"; Lewis Sherwin, dramatic critic New York "Globe"; C. W. Pope, "Morning Telegraph"; Kenneth McGaffey, Lasky publicity department, and J. C. Jessen, Motion Picture News.

Horsley's Cub Comedy Brand May Become a "Bear"

President of Centaur Company Predicts Immediate Prosperity of One-Reel Laughmakers Produced by Him for Mutual and Released After August 5

THE last David Horsley production to go through the General Film program under the brand name of MinA Films is that released Thursday, August 5. After this release Mr. Horsley will no longer be associated with the MinA brand or with any other product marketed through the General.

Explaining his position and outlining his future plans, Mr. Horsley sent out the following statement through his Bayonne offices:

"While I was proud and gratified over the fact that I was enabled to release my MinA output through the General Film program, the first and only time an independent manufacturer obtained a distribution of his product through the licensed exchanges, I found that because of the multiplicity of reels offered that I could be afforded only a limited market.

"This, too, in spite of the fact that the MinA comedies, as originated by me, had set a new standard in comedy production and were in popular favor with exhibitors.

"For this reason I cancelled of my own volition the contract I held and entered into a new one with the Mutual Film Corporation, into which all of my producing strength is thrown. Through the Mutual I am assured a wider market for my releases that I could have hoped to obtain by my former arrangements. I regard the Mutual as the most important factor in the industry, and one that is becoming more powerful every day.

"I will continue the production of one-reel comedies for the Mutual under the brand name of Cub Comedies. These pictures will be directed by Milton H. Fahrney and will feature George Ovey, who has been called "the funniest man in America," both of whom were in a measure responsible for the success of my MinA releases.

"Whatever disposition is made of the brand name MinA after the release of August 5, I will have no association with it, or with any productions distributed through the General's offices after that date."

"We Have With Us Here Tonight—Sam Spedon"

Vitagraphers in Santa Monica Give Dance and Dinner in Honor of Publicity Head, Who Recently Left the New York Office to Attend the Convention

Los Angeles, Aug. 1.

MEMBERS of the Vitagraph company at Santa Monica gave a dancing and dinner party Friday evening in honor of Sam Spedon, manager of the publicity department of the Vitagraph organization, who is here for a stay of two weeks.

The early part of the evening was spent at the Ocean Park dancing pavilion, where special boxes were reserved for the photoplayers, and later a dinner was served at Sunset Inn, one of the popular cafes of the beach.

Among those present were: William S. Smith, Myrtle Gonzales, Otto Lederer, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Sturgeon, Daisy Smith, Ulysses S. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Vosburg, Clarence Heneki, Mr. and Mrs. Lon Densmore, Margaret Reid, Clara Toner, Ernest Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Smith, Jr., Anne Shafer, Doris Schroder, Jack Weatherby, George Hope, and Mr. and Mrs. William Duncan.

The welcome extended Mr. Spedon can be judged by the following lines from a Santa Monica paper:

To Golden State we welcome you
Your work, to us, is ever new,
All must agree that Printer's Ink
Into all minds will swiftly sink;
And as you e'er have sung our praise
For Santa Monica our hat we'll raise.
We see our pictures on the screen,
And to ourselves we'll say, I ween,
Speed on, Spedon.

JANE DARWELL ESCAPES SERIOUS INJURY

Maclyn Arbuckle's new picture at Bosworth, "The Reform Candidate," was delayed a day by an automobile accident which befell Jane Darwell, one of the principals in the cast.

While on her way to the Bosworth studio her new electric landaulet was hit by a big touring car going at a high rate of speed which tried to cross in front of her at a dangerous street crossing in Hollywood.

Though her car was wrecked, Miss Darwell escaped with a few bruises, and after a day's rest was sufficiently over the shock to start the Arbuckle picture.

Metro Outlines Scope for Next Quarter

Madame Petrova Becomes a Permanent and Exclusive Member of the Producing Forces, Scheduled for Appearance Once in Three Months—Bushman and Marguerite Snow Will Be Featured Once in Ten Weeks—Edmund Breese is Engaged as Star in Screen Versions of Service's Alaskan Poems

EMMY WEHLEN IN "WHEN A WOMAN LOVES" | GAIL KANE IN "HER GREAT MATCH" | FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN IN "THE SILENT VOICE" | EMILY STEVENS IN "DESTINY"

PRESIDENT RICHARD A. ROWLAND, of the Metro Pictures Corporation, after a four-day conference at Atlantic City, participated in by the eighteen exchangemen, composing the distributing forces of the organization, the heads of the five producing concerns whose products compose the Metro program, the official and executive staff of the central office and those of the directors and studio managers who could be spared from their work, announced that plans and arrangements were now complete for the forthcoming Metro quarter. After concentrating for many hours, the various heads had outlined a plan of progress and determined action which will more than sustain the enviable record of his company since its establishment five months ago.

Mr. Rowland makes the following engagements: Mme. Petrova is now a permanent and exclusive member of the Metro staff and will appear solely in productions of the Popular Plays and Players Company, of which L. Lawrence Weber is the acting head. Mme. Petrova will characterize the Metro program at various intervals, but as nearly as can be adjusted, once every three months. Her forthcoming feature will be "Vampire," a five-act dramatic concoction from her own scenario.

Francis X. Bushman and Marguerite Snow, permanent and long-term members of the Quality Pictures Corporation, headed by Fred J. Balshofer, will feature the Metro roster at intervals of every ten weeks. The next release in which these two estimable stars will be seen is "The Silent Voice," which Charles Frohman produced in its original form, with Otis Skinner in the principal part. This, the second Quality feature, will see the light of screen day early in September.

Mary Minter in "Stork's Nest"

Mary Miles Minter, whose work in "Always in the Way" called forth unusual and excellent comment and who is recognized in the different branches of amusement enterprise as one of the foremost actresses of her type and who was created a star of the speaking stage by reason of her work with the Farnums, in "The Littlest Rebel," is now a permanent and exclusive Metro star and will be seen on that program about every fifteen weeks.

Her next appearance will be in a most elaborate cinematization of the recently successful novel, "Stork's Nest," which is now in work at the Metro scenario department under the supervision of George D. Proctor, newly installed in the capacity of supervisor of scenarios.

Edmund Breese enjoys a rather peculiar distinction in the field of motography in that he has been engaged by the Metro Pictures Corporation for work in productions by the Popular Plays and Players of Robert W. Service's vivid poems of the Alaskan wilds. Mr. Breese scored such phenomenal success in "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" that L. Lawrence Weber purchased the entire Service collection from the publishing concern of Barse & Hopkins. "The Spell of the Yukon" will be the forthcoming Popular Plays and Players-Breese screen document.

Emily Stevens, niece of Minnie Maddern Fiske and the latest recruit to stardom of the legitimate drama, recent heroine of the remarkable success "Today" and lately seen in "Cora" on the screen, is under a five-year contract with the B. A. Rolfe Photoplay Corporation and at that concern's studio, Sixty-first street and Broadway, New York, is working with an all-star cast in a picturization of "Destiny," which, when completed, will prove a classical allegory, if the intentions of the producers materialize.

Ann Murdock, recently seen in "A Celebrated Case," is working in the final scenes of "A Royal Family," another Frohman production, while Hamilton Revelle is supporting Miss Stevens in her various screen efforts.

Ralph Herz, the inimitable comedian and actor, begins work August 18 on a big and spectacular production of "The Purple Lady," in which he will be supported by the dainty Lois Meredith, last seen as star of the Lasky-Belasco play "The Woman" and Bosworth's "Help Wanted." Mr. Herz will be compelled to divide his time between the Rolfe studio and the Maxine Elliott theatre, where he is at present playing the star role in "Hands Up."

Star of Savage Productions with Metro

Henry Kolker, star of numerous Henry W. Savage plays and the direct cause of the remarkable success of "The Great Name," which enjoyed wide popularity two years ago during its long run in New York, is completing the final stages of "The Bridge."

Emmy Wehlen is completing "When a Woman Loves," in which she has the support of Arthur Ashley and an all-select cast, while Francis X. Bushman and Marguerite Snow are working at the Hollywood studios of the Quality company on an eight-reel production of the famous historical play "Richard Carvel."

Mr. Rowland, while at Atlantic City, proferred a suggestion which the exchangemen and company heads grasped with such avidity that not even a standing vote was necessary. He fathered the wish that in future, when a prominent stage star was given the leading role in a picture, that a prominent screen star of acknowledged histrionic power be placed opposite, thus securing both screen and stage experience, with the two leading people able to suggest and aid the other as their work progresses.

Arthur Ashley working opposite Emmy Wehlen is rather an experiment. Mr. Ashley bears an enviable reputation as a diligent, ambitious screen star with a large following, while Miss Wehlen has been a stage star of more than the average following and standing for seven years.

At the conclusion of the Atlantic City gathering of Metro clans, a vote of confidence and thanks was extended Mr. Rowland and Joseph N. Engel, of the parent office, for their ardent attention to the affairs of the company and their determined effort since the inception of the enterprise, March 5 of this year.

FLORENCE ROCKWELL SIGNS WITH KNICKERBOCKER

Florence Rockwell has signed with Knickerbocker Star Features to appear in a three-reel release on the regular program of the General Film Company.

Miss Rockwell is one of the most widely known and versatile players on the American stage. She created the principal roles in Klaw and Erlanger's great successes, "The Round Up," "The Barrier" and "Mills of the Gods." She has played opposite

FLORENCE ROCKWELL

Henry Miller, Richard Mansfield and Robert Mantell in a wonderful variety of leading parts. Her Juliet and Ophelia, Nora in "A Doll's House," Hester Prynne in "The Scarlet Letter" and the heroine in the all star cast of "Fine Feathers" are noteworthy among her recent performances.

Miss Rockwell has been on the stage since childhood and is popular in every city in the United States. Her last appearance in New York was five weeks ago as a headliner at the Palace theatre, when she made a personal success in the dual role of a rich girl and a beggar girl in a sketch called "Her Awakening."

Miss Rockwell will appear in the release of September 1.

GASNIER, OF PATHE, RETURNS FROM VACATION

General Manager Gasnier, of Pathé, has just returned from a short vacation which he spent in company with twenty-five fellow members of the Pump Club, a social organization of well known Jersey City politicians.

The part went by motor cars from Jersey City to Lake George, where several days were spent in fishing and having a general good time.

Essanay Releases for August Are By Noted Authors

"The Woman Hater," by Chatfield-Taylor, Chicago Litterateur, Is a Three-Act Comedy, Featuring Edna Mayo—A. Rinehart, Rowland Ade and Wodehouse Are Listed

ESSANAY has an unusually strong list of releases for August, most of the photoplays having been written by authors of national prominence. Perhaps the most noted is the three act comedy drama, "The Woman Hater," written by the Chicago and Washington society man and litterateur, Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, author of "The Crimson Wing."

Henry B. Walthall takes the lead in this play with Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn supporting him. "The Cave on Thunder Cloud," in two acts, by Mary Roberts Rinehart"; "Business Rivals," and "Le Grand's Revenge," by Henry C. Rowland; "The Fable of the Tip and the Treasure" and "The Fable of the Roystering Blades," by George Ade and "Rule Sixty Three," by P. G. Wodehouse are among the other releases.

Essanay has made a specialty this summer of taking a large number of outdoor scenes. In this way it has been able both to secure realistic settings and artistic backgrounds for its pictures. Five separate companies have been established at different places throughout the country to take these scenes.

A new summer studio has just been established at Lake Zurich, Ill., an unusually picturesque spot. The first photoplay to be taken at this out door studio is "Rule Sixty Three," the play by P. G. Wodehouse, the well known magazine writer. Other summer studios have been established at "The Pines" and at "Starved Rock," Ill., while another company is touring through the East to take scenes along the Atlantic coast. The pictures taken in the Tennessee mountains have been completed and the studio relinquished after four months' work.

Essanay's corps of photographers has returned to Chicago after spending six weeks in the Canadian Rockies, taking scenic pictures.

Eight thousand feet of exceptionally beautiful scenic pictures was taken and will be released five hundred feet at a time twice a month.

They will be coupled with five hundred feet of animated cartoons, the "Dreamy Dud" series drawn by Wallace A. Carlson. The photographers took side trails from Banff, Lake Louise, Field, Glacier, Vancouver and Victoria to the tops of the mountains. Many of the pictures were taken in the snow clad peaks, far above the clouds.

The snow and cloud effects make wonderfully attractive and artistic pictures, especially the cloud scenes where the sun is setting just below them, turning the vapor into all the hues of the rainbow.

Pallas Pictures Make Debut Through Paramount

New Producing Company Will Feature Dustin Farnum and Maclyn Arbuckle in Big Screen Offerings Adapted to the Talents of Noted Players

PALLAS PICTURES, INC., is the name of the latest producing company to release through the Paramount Pictures Corporation and already the new concern has arranged to present, in big screen offerings, Dustin Farnum, one of the most popular idols of the stage and screen in this country, and Maclyn Arbuckle, another star of the stage, who has become a big favorite among patrons of motion pictures.

Dustin Farnum's career is too well known to be reprinted here. His many stage and film successes in such productions as "Captain Courtesy," "The Squaw Man," "Cameo Kirby," "The Virginian," and others too numerous to mention, have made him known in every town in the country. It is stated that Mr. Farnum will appear in at least four productions for the Pallas Pictures, two of which have already been decided upon, namely, the well known "Davy Crockett" and "The Gentleman from Indiana," by Booth Tarkington. "Dusty," as Mr. Farnum is popularly known, is now enjoying a vacation in the Maine Woods, but will leave shortly to commence work on his subjects for the Pallas Pictures.

Maclyn Arbuckle, also well known to the devotees of both the theatrical stage as well as the screen, is already at work at the Los Angeles studios of the concern on his latest motion picture subject, "The Reform Candidate," a comedy written by himself and Edgar A. Guest.

This production is an adaptation of Mr. Arbuckle's well known play of the same name which has met with unusual success. Mr. Arbuckle is the most popular creator of distinctly American types now on the stage as evidenced in his work in such triumphs as "The Round Up," "Why Smith Left Home," "Skipper and Company," "It's No Laughing Matter," "The Country Chairman," "The Circus Man," and others of equal prominence. "The Reform Candidate," like all of Mr. Arbuckle's plays and sketches, is notable for its delicate sentiment with homely logic, incisive wit and virile lines. It will be released on the Paramount program and several other big surprises are promised by Pallas Pictures, Inc., for the forthcoming months.

"SILVER THREADS" MAKES HIT ON POLI CIRCUIT

The K. and R. Company's six-reel photoplay "Silver Threads Among the Gold" is breaking records on the Poli circuit. Richard J. Jose appears in person. Last week in Springfield, Mass., people were turned away unable to gain admittance to the theatre.

The same state of affairs happened in New Haven, Connecticut and Worcester, Mass. Al Cross reports big returns from western Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh and the Exclusive Features, Inc., of Greater New York, show heavy bookings.

Sylvan Ithaca Is Idyll Spot for Busy Whartons

Studio of Producers for Pathe Is Ideally Located in Midst of the Finest Scenery in New York State—Forty Acres of Rugged Nature, Rocky Chasms, Plunging Cataracts, Whirling Rapids, Fathomless Pools, Great Trees and Profuse Vegetation, Make Region Unusual Background for Pictures

DURING the past year, the beautiful city of Ithaca, N. Y., and its surroundings have become very well known all over the United States through Pathe pictures made by Wharton, Inc., which has adopted the city as its own and in turn has been adopted by it. Quick to fall under the fascinating spell of the lakeside city when the Whartons saw an opportunity to acquire Renwick Park just outside Ithaca, they seized it and now make Pathe pictures under their own vine and fig tree.

Wharton, Inc., is now just a year old, but the growth of the plant and company during the past year prompts the thought that this is truly a very sturdy child and one of great promise. With the fine market which Wharton pictures obtain through the Pathe Exchange and with the high quality which is its boast the pictures always maintain, the future looks very bright for Ithaca's only producers.

When the Whartons left the Pathe studios in Jersey City last May with the "Romance of Elaine" company, the weather was hot and as they boarded the train they mopped their brows with a sigh of relief. "Won't it seem good, though, to get those lake breezes again and breathe that fine air away from hot sidewalks and humidity?" they asked one another. Anyone who visited their new property would ask the same question.

Situated at the foot of a deep, ice-cold lake, forty miles long, girt with high hills and reflecting a thousand vineyards in its blue waters, Renwick Park possesses every advantage in the way of convenience and excellence of nearby locations. There are forty acres of deep rocky chasms, waterfalls, rushing rapids, inky pools and fascinating eddies; quaint bridges, and buildings that look as though they had been picked up bodily from England's old Chester, France's ancient St. Malo, Germany's quaintest Strassburg, or Wyoming's roughest frontier town of bygone days.

THEODORE W. WHARTON J. WHITWORTH BUCK LEOPOLD D. WHARTON

And everywhere are roses, great trees, wild ferns and then more roses—a spot for a dreamer or a poet chosen to be the very busy little world of very busy picture makers.

Everything Is Complete

It is hard for one to turn his back on the beauties of nature to inspect the less interesting but more practical buildings which house the Wharton activities; a long studio building of hollow tile; another long building containing workshops; various outbuildings for storage; more shops; a magazine for explosives; boiler house; developing and dark rooms; a miniature theatre; bath and boat houses; a long pier and a flock of smaller docks; a wireless telegraph outfit—surely here is a very complete equipment for the making of quality pictures.

Recently J. Whitworth Buck, brother-in-law of the Whartons, became interested in their business, so much so that he severed a twenty years' connection with the wholesale drygoods firm of Ely and Walker of St. Louis and became one of the Wharton organization. The result has been a merger of experience in picture making and experience in commercial enterprise, a pretty sound combination for a motion picture producing company.

It is a genuinely happy organization that you find at Renwick Park—from the Italian gardener to the head of the organization. Everyone is ready to pitch in and help by doing anything needed in times of stress. All seem to take a real pleasure in their work—so much so that frequently the cashier finds on Saturday noon a half dozen persons have neglected to call for their pay envelope which sometimes lie in the safe for three or four days. Imagine a lot of men neglecting to call for their pay.

Ithaca and the surrounding towns have taken the Whartons to their hearts. Everything possible is done by the citizens to help and encourage the work. When the Pathe-Wharton pictures are shown on local screens the late comer cannot find standing room. Recently a procession of Wharton autos, carrying the "Elaine" company went to Syracuse and the crowds were so enthusiastic that the cars were compelled to stop. Citizens hopped on the running boards, the militia fired a salute and greatest wonder of all, a waiter in a local hotel refused tips from those of the company at his table saying that the honor of serving required no fee.

"ELAINE" ACTOR INJURED BY 25-FOOT DROP OVER CLIFF

Paul Everton, who is one of the "Romance of Elaine" company at Ithaca, is confined to his bed as the result of an accident incurred in filming a scene at the Triphammer Gorge.

The Pathé-Wharton actor fell over a cliff and suffered a painful injury to one of his legs. It was intended that he should fall at a place where there was only a six-foot drop, but he accidentally picked out the wrong spot and fell twenty-five feet instead.

ETHEL CLAYTON JOINS FIELDING COMPANY IN ARIZONA

Ethel Clayton, the Lubin leading lady, has gone to Phoenix, Ariz., accompanied by her brother, Donald Clayton, and Edward Earle, the camera man, to join Romaine Fielding's company in the Grand Canyon, Ariz., where William Vaughn Moody's play, "The Great Divide," will be filmed.

Miss Clayton was laden with flowers. Siegmund Lubin sent her a magnificent basket, and Ferdinand Singhi and Ira M. Lowry sent her forty-eight American Beauty roses.

Hitchock to Caper in Lubin Water-Wagon Farce

V-L-S-E Release for August Featuring the Noted Comedian, Entitled "The Ring-Tailed Rhinoceros," Reveals Adventures of Thirsty Backsliding Hero in Land of Purple Snakes

AN announcement has just been made by the V-L-S-E to the effect that it has added to its list of releases for the month of August a four-part farce comedy featuring Raymond Hitchcock, the noted comedian.

The name of this feature in which Mr. Hitchcock makes his first screen appearance is "The Ring Tailed Rhinoceros," produced by the Lubin company. It is doubtful if there is anybody anywhere who has not heard of Raymond Hitchcock, and in securing his services for the screen the Lubin company achieved a decided triumph.

"The Ring Tailed Rhinoceros" is a story that allows every latitude for Mr. Hitchcock's wonderful funmaking abilities, and in it this famous comedian and his one thousand and one laugh producing tricks have been recorded in their minutest detail.

The play itself is one of those grotesque creations which has a universal appeal. In it Mr. Hitchcock is seen in those fanciful situations which go to make a riotous farce comedy.

Mr. Hitchcock was funny on the stage, but it is said that he is one hundred per cent. more humorous on the screen. His wonderful personality is intensified and preserved in all its force in his first screen play.

Mr. Hitchcock is famous throughout the world, and in presenting him in films a star is added to picture play history that comes from the brightest collection in the theatrical firmament.

With Mr. Hitchcock playing the opposite role is Flora Zabelle, a national favorite on the speaking stage, who in private life is Mrs. Raymond Hitchcock, and like her husband, makes her first screen appearance in this Liberty Bell Feature.

The play evolves about the character played by Mr. Hitchcock. He is forbidden to make further advances to his fiancee unless he promises to quit his excessive drinking. He gives this promise and the betrothal takes place. Accidents will happen, however, and meeting a few friends Mr. Hitchcock falls off the water wagon. He gets in trouble with his fiancee's father and returning home in an inebriated condition his fiance's young brother searching for a "ring tailed rhinoceros" that the latter has been told is the cause of his sister's distress.

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK

Hitchcock starts to tells the youngster a story and they both fall asleep, during which Hitchcock has a wonderful dream of the terrible torments caused by the ring tailed rhinoceros and his group of animal friends. He is commissioned by the parents of a charming young princess who wonderfully resembles his fiancee to destroy this monster.

He starts out to slay the monster on an eight-legged horse and meets all sorts of adventures in the land of queerbeasts. He finally succeeds in slaying the ring tailed rhinoceros in the presence of the princess and her parents, thereby earning their gratitude and winning the fair princess for his wife.

He awakens from this dream and takes a solemn vow never to touch liquor again, and everthing ends happily.

"The Ring Tailed Rhinoceros" will be released on August 16.

Kleine's New Comedy Greeting Is "Hello, Bill"

Goodhue Farce Vehicle for First Appearance of Bickel and Watson on the Screen Is Near Completion—"The Green Cloak," with Irene Fenwick, Now in Production

"HELLO BILL," that well known, cheerful farce by W. M. Goodhue which was selected as the most fitting vehicle for the premier film appearance of Messrs, Bickel and Watson, is rapidly nearing completion.

For the past four weeks the George Kleine studios have been the scenes of much activity and much hard work in preparing the big comedy for the market.

"Hello Bill" gives promise of shattering all precedent in the matter of film comedy production. A cast has been engaged that would do credit to any feature, regardless of its size or character. Ben L. Taggart, one of the best known leading men on Broadway, will be seen in "Hello Bill," along with such familiar names as Ruby Hoffman, Snitz Edwards, Alma Hanlon, John Nicholson and Alfred Kepler. Aside from the twin stars, Bickel and Watson, "Hello Bill" will tell a clean-cut logical story without suggestion of slapstick or vulgarity. The scenario was carefully prepared from Goodhue's script and is said to offer extraordinary fun-making opportunities.

"The Green Cloak," one of Owen Davis' successful dramatic successes, is being filmed at the George Kleine studios with Irene Fenwick in the lead of Ruth McAllister. Miss Fenwick is supported by a selected cast, which include Richie Ling, Della Connor, Blanche Aimee, Roland Bottomley, William Anker, John Davidson, Anna Reader, Frank Belcher and Katherine Brook.

"The Green Cloak" is a dramatic subject of great force and should give Miss Fenwick splendid opportunities. The story verges on the melodramatic, contains much mystery and many tense, breathless moments.

Thomas A. Edison, Inc., announces that it has secured the rights to William Hamilton Osborne's famous novel "The Cat's Paw." Work on the big production is already under way with a carefully selected cast of Broadway players. The production will be released through the various offices of the Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service. The first Edison feature to be handled by the new service is Mrs. Fiske in "Vanity Fair," for release September 8.

COMEDY VEHICLE OF MARGARET ANGLIN FOR VITAGRAPH

The Vitagraph company will put in immediate picture production A. E. W. Mason's comedy, "Green Stockings," in which Margaret Anglin played the leading part with remarkable success for three years.

Eugene Mullin has just finished the picturization, which will make a feature picture in five parts.

EXHIBITOR SETS OFF SKYROCKET FOR "DIAMOND IN SKY"

MANAGER TAYLOR of the Mutual exchange in Omaha, Neb., tells of various methods he has heard of for advertising the picture, "The Diamond from the Sky." Every so often, every other night, an Iowa exhibitor sends up a large skyrocket that bursts high in the air and spouts forth diamond-shaped sparks. It is a dandy advertisement.

Another advertiser, in his newspaper advertisements, puts in a section of a picture at a time. After awhile, when all the sections can be printed, they may be pasted on cardboard and make a fine picture puzzle for the children.

Giving away $10,000 blank checks is a common practice by a number of middle western exhibitors. Enough of the checks paid for one admission. They were secured at stores with purchases.

SELIG CAMELS HELP CLUNE TO GET AWARD

JUDGES of the floral parade given in Los Angeles, under the auspices of the 1915 Entertainment Committee of the city, awarded the first prize to the Clune Theatre Company, lessees of the Auditorium Theatre and operators of two other houses in Los Angeles and three in nearby smaller cities.

Four camels from the Selig zoo were used as supposed motive power for the float of purple and white, but horses were needed as the ships of the desert were not accustomed to pulling. The float advertised "The Rosary," a Selig contribution to the V-L-S-E program, which was ru two weeks, and may be returned at an ear date for a third week.

"Since the Vitagraph Company announced its production of 'The Battle Cry of Peace' there has arisen a question on many sides as to the sincerity of the members of this company in advocating this move. One of the methods of testing our sincerity was by asking us whether we would be among those to volunteer should the necessity arise, and also it has been suggested that a law be passed making it necessary for those who are strongest for preparation be forced to be among the first to volunteer. For my associates and myself I desire now to go on record as being absolutely in favor of such a law, if it is considered that such means are necessary to enforce patriotism among the male population.

"One of the thrilling comparisons which the film makes is that of the number of aeroplanes which are in use in the various countries. According to statistics which are demonstrated in the picture, when the present conflict began in Europe France had 1,400 aeroplanes, Germany 1,000, Russia 800, Great Britain 400, Austria 400 and the United States only 23, and most of these of an obsolete type. Probably the reason why America is so far behind the other countries in aeroplanes is due to the fact that last year the board appointed by the Secretary of the Navy recommended an appropriation of $1,300,000 for this department, but Congress cut $300,000 off.

"Right here let me make clear the distinction between 'Preparedness FOR war and preparedness AGAINST war.' It is for the latter that we stand and are fighting, and it is this point which we desire to bring home to the American public. We are anxious to have our patriotism understood."

According to the present plans the picture will be shown to many public officials during the coming month.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

NELL CRAIG WANTED TO BE A SURGEON, BUT HEEDS CALL OF THE SCREEN

Nell Craig, one of Essanay's new leading women, has made a remarkable success in the role of Dominica, the leading character in a series of adventures written by Henry C. Rowland.

As the beautiful and accomplished young woman, who has turned thief for the love of adventure and excitement, she has brought out all the winning points of this character with a nicety hard to equal.

Her type of beauty fits the dashing style of the heroine of these photoplays and she carries out the reckless and daring deeds of Dominica with a complete sang froid.

Miss Craig was a Quaker girl by adoption, having lived in Philadelphia most of her life, although she was born at Princeton, N. J. After graduating at Pennington Seminary when seventeen, she had an inordinate ambition to become a surgeon, but she forgot her hopes when offered a part with the Orpheum stock company, because of her beauty and her rare voice.

After a year on the stage she entered into photoplay work. Although but twenty-three years of age, she had had five years' experience in stage and photoplay work when Essanay brought her to its Chicago studio to take leading parts.

DUNCAN IS CAST FOR KLEINE'S "MONEY MASTER"

Malcolm Duncan, the juvenile actor who contributed so largely to the success of George Kleine's film version of "The Spendthrift," by Porter Emerson Browne, and who is also a member of the all-star cast which interprets the forthcoming Kleine feature, "The Money Master," had long been considered among the truly "arrived" on the speaking stage before he made the acquaintance of Cooper-Hewitts and the clicking camera.

His first appearance on the professional stage was made under the auspices of the late Richard Mansfield, whom he supported for two seasons. Later on Mr. Duncan came under the management of Charles Frohman in the support of Virginia Harned. Then followed seven seasons with the Henry B. Harris forces. Shortly before his advent into the moving picture field, Mr. Duncan was leading man with Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske.

MALCOLM DUNCAN

Malcolm Duncan's work attracted the attention of the exhibitors and newspaper critics and completely won the hearts of the thousands of "fans" who flocked to see this Kleine success.

CHARLOTTE WALKER'S NEXT ROLE IS IN "OUT OF DARKNESS"

It has been decided by the Lasky Feature Play Company that the name of Charlotte Walker's new photoplay production, which will be released in September through the Paramount Pictures Corporation, will be entitled "Out of Darkness." Previously one or two other names had been selected, but "Out of Darkness" has been definitely settled upon.

It is an original photoplay in five parts written by Hector Turnbull, formerly dramatic critic of the New York "Tribune." This is in keeping with the policy of the Lasky literary department, of which William C. DeMille, the dramatist, is the head, for the members of this department to write original photoplays as well as to make adaptations from famous dramas and well known novels.

NICHOLSON TWO-REELER FOR SELIG ON REGULAR PROGRAM, AUG. 23

"The Girl with the Red Feather," a Selig special in two exciting reels, will be released in the regular service on Monday, August 23. The story was written by Meredith Nicholson, author of the famous novel "The House of a Thousand Candles."

It has to do with a supposedly prosaic bank president who becomes identified with a gang of thieves; saves the brother of the girl from the police; takes charge of the young ex-convict in charge of the girl and finally takes the young couple to his palatial home, where they are married by a bishop after a dinner party.

The story is crowded with thrills and suspense, and is an unusual release in every detail.

ALMA BELWIN, "IVORY SNUFF BOX," WORLD, WON FAME ON STAGE

Alma Belwin, who plays the part of Grace Ellicott in the William A. Brady photoplay, "The Ivory Snuff Box," the forthcoming World Film Corporation feature, made a name for herself on the legitimate stage at a first attempt, the result being that in a short space of time she has played leads in "The Fortune Hunter," "Passers-by," "The Five Frankforters," "The Third Party," and "The Revolt."

In the last named drama her work was seen by Director Maurice Tourneur, of World Film, and he promptly engaged her to play opposite Holbrook Blinn in "The Ivory Snuff Box."

THREE SCENES FROM "A LITTLE HERO," THE FIRST OF THE NEW HORSLEY "CUB" COMEDIES, TO BE DISTRIBUTED THROUGH THE MUTUAL —RELEASE DATE, AUGUST 19

M-IN-A COMEDIES CONTINUE ON GENERAL PROGRAM

Owing to a little uncertainty which has arisen in the minds of exhibitors because of recent announcements by an independent program, the manufacturer owning the M-in-A brand of comedies, released every Thursday on the General Film program, desires to announce that this brand of comedies will continue to be released as usual every Thursday.

The nature of these comedies has been, and will continue to be, such as will give the most that is possible in a one-reel production—clean, interesting comedies without a foot of padding.

The owners of this brand further desire to state that it is not their intention to discontinue this release on the General Film program.

"PATRIOT," VITAGRAPH, IS SET IN EARLY PERIOD OF OUR HISTORY

"The Patriot," William J. Hurlburt's interesting story, which is being produced by the Vitagraph company, under the direction of Theodore Marston, will employ scenes that go back to the time in early American history when the men wore beaver hats, swallotail coats and tight-fitting trousers and the women crinolines, contrasting with the coon skin caps and fringed coats of the pioneers, who blazed a hard-fought trail through the wilderness.

What is perhaps the best balanced cast yet seen in a Vitagraph Feature includes Charles Richman, Joseph Kilgour, Charles Kent, Arline Pretty, Rose Tapley and Bobby Connelly. "The Patriot," when completed, will be released as a Blue Ribbon Feature in six parts.

AUTHOR "HOUSE OF THOUSAND CANDLES" SEES IT ON SCREEN

Meredith Nicholson, the noted author, came all the way from his home at Indianapolis, Ind., on Friday, July 30, to view the recently completed Selig Red Seal Play, "The House of a Thousand Candles," based on his novel of the same title. A private home in Wheaton, Ill., was used as the "house" and the candlestick, to contain the "thousand candles" for the interior sets, were gathered from divers sources within the city of Chicago.

The production, in five reels, will be released through V-L-S-E on Friday, August 23.

Kalem Picture Exposes Gem Thefts in Big Hotels

DID you, after stopping at some prominent hotel, later discover that the valuable gem in your scarfpin had been mysteriously stolen and replaced with a worthless imitation? If you ever were numbered among the thousands of victims of an unusually clever crook who worked the country's largest hotels, you will find Kalem's, "The Substituted Jewel," one of the twelve weekly two-act "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel," of special interest.

As is well known, the various episodes of this series are based upon information given Kalem by some of the most representative hotels in the land. The thief in question met his Waterloo when he tried to ply his trade at the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago. Knowing that Kalem was searching for "Grand Hotel" material, A. S. Katz, who captured the thief, forwarded the story to the producers.

"The crook's efforts were first brought to our attention when one of our guests claimed that a tie-pin, which had never left his possession, except for the few days he stopped at our hotel, had been stolen; the valuable gems it contained replaced by imitations and the pin returned to the jewel tray from which it had been taken," said Mr. Katz.

"The substitution was discovered by the jeweler from whom he had purchased the pin. Sure enough, when the pin was examined by our experts, we found that the stones resembling the diamond and the cluster of emeralds were worthless."

TWO SCENES FROM "THE SUBSTITUTED JEWEL," LATEST EPISODE IN KALEM'S "MYSTERIES OF THE GRAND HOTEL" (August 18)

"We gave the matter our immediate attention," Mr. Katz went on. "After a long time, I discovered a young man guest who always seemed well supplied with money, was responsible for the thefts."

Using this material, Kalem produced a decidedly novel drama in "The Substituted Jewel." Regular service release, August 18.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

ALL STAR FEATURE DISTRIBUTORS EXTEND BUILDING

MANAGER E. H. EMMICK, of the All Star Feature Distributors, Los Angeles, exchange, will leave during the coming week for a two or three weeks' vacation which will be spent in the East. During his absence Leon Netter, of San Francisco, business manager of the All Star exchange at that city, will be in charge of the Los Angeles establishment.

Owing to the increased volume of business and films handled by the All Star Feature Distributors and the Golden Gate Film Exchange, which are combined in Los Angeles, it has been made necessary for the erection of a fireproof inspection room and vault in the rear of the premises occupied by the exchange. The members of the fire commission recommended this, which is in compliance with the most recent fire ordinance passed which has to do with the regulation of films.

Manager E. H. Emmick has been congratulated on every hand by film exchange and theatre men for the exceptional booking of Metro subjects during the past weeks when three constituted the programs of downtown first run houses. At the Majestic, a former legitimate theatre, "The High Road," a Rolfe production, was shown; "The Unbroken Road," by Life Photo, at Miller's, and "The Middleman," a Cosmofotofilm subject released by the Metro, at the Superba.

BALTIMORE EXCHANGES NOTIFY EXHIBITORS OF RENTAL PLAN

THE question of payment for film rentals was discussed by a number of the most prominent film men of Baltimore on Wednesday, July 28. As a result of this meeting exhibitors of this territory will be made to pay for their service in advance.

The following resolution was adopted by representatives of the various film exchanges:

"We, the undersigned representatives of the following film distributors, have agreed that beginning the week of August 16, 1915, and thereafter, all services for the current week must be paid for in advance. This includes film service of any character.

"The good accounts of long standing, as well as delinquents are included. There will be absolutely no exceptions."

Signatures were secured from practically all of the representatives attending the meeting. The film men got together as a result of an invitation extended by John A. Cunningham, manager of the Baltimore branch, Mutual Film Exchange. The exchanges represented were: Universal, General Film, Pathé Greater New York, Electric Theatre Supply Company, Braddenburg Film Service, North American Film Corporation, Kriterion Film and others. It is probable that the Washington film men will cooperate with the Baltimore exchanges and come in under the agreement.

BARTELSON TAKES KNOTT'S PLACE

W. E. KNOTT, Denver branch manager for the World Film Corporation, has been relieved by R. W. Bartelson, of Seattle.

Mr. Knott went to San Francisco as western division manager for the World people, from which point he will have charge of California, Washington, Oregon, Utah, Idaho, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado Wyoming and Montana.

MARLEY OFF ON AUTO TRIP SOON

C. J. MARLEY, manager of the Los Angeles Film Exchange Board of Trade, and Mrs. Marley, who is manager of the Liberty theatre, will leave soon for a vacation which will be spent in autoing over California and visiting the beauty spots.

COBE MAY LAUNCH NEW PROGRAM

ANDREW J. COBE, of the Alliance Film Corporation is in Los Angeles to spend two, three or more weeks, following a trip over the northern and western part of the country where he visited film exchanges releasing Alliance subjects.

Mr. Cobe would not divulge the purpose of his trip to the coast at this time, but stated that in all probability he would be in a position to make an announcement within a few days that would be of interest to the film companies generally.

During the short time Mr. Cobe has been there he has been in touch with producers and it is hinted that the announcement he promises will pertain to promised additional activity of the Alliance or a new releasing program.

BEST BUSINESS IN FIRST WEEK IN JULY IS COLONIAL'S RECORD

J. A. BRADLEY, manager of the Colonial Film exchange, branch of the Laemmle Film Service Company in Omaha, reported that the first week in July was the best his office ever had and prospects for the future are getting better.

PLANS FOR SEVEN STORY FIREPROOF FILM BUILDING IN BOSTON SUBMITTED TO BUILDING COMMISSION

DESPITE the fact that the state regulations and building and fire prevention officials are opposed to it, the plan for a central motion picture exchange building in Boston will not down. It will be remembered that the NEWS said recently that plans of New York interests for such a building had reached the point where officials of exchanges in Boston had been consulted, but that the fire prevention commissioner's regulations would not permit any building to be built for storage of films unless it complied with the regulations which restrict such a structure to three stories at the highest.

But now plans for a seven-story building have been drawn up and submitted to the building commission. At their office it was stated that the plans were being held in abeyance, pending receipt from the fire prevention commissioner of his decision as to what constitutes a legal fireproof vault for motion picture films in Massachusetts.

At the fire prevention commissioner's office it was further declared that the legal vault would have to be enclosed in eight-inch brick, six-inch concrete or some other material of that thickness which should be satisfactory to the officials.

There is another question, as to the ventilation of the vaults. The architects, Thayer and Marshall, of 89 Franklin street, have drawn for Albert E. Geiger, realty agent, of 87 Milk street, a set of plans which call for a seven-story building, on six of whose floors shall be eight vaults, each five by six feet.

The plans as first drawn provide each vault with a vent in one corner of the ceiling, opening into a common vent for all the vaults running along under a pitch roof to a general outlet. This arrangement, contend the architects, will take care of explosive gases to the elimination of danger.

But the officials believe this plan is not a good one. They insist that each vault shall be ventilated by a pipe arrangement to reduce the danger from explosion to a minimum.

At present the negotiations stand at this stage. The plans are in the hands of the building commission.

The New York interests are not ready to announce the names of the seven companies which, they say, are ready to take up the proposition.

The site considered is on Stuart street, near the center of the city, and therefore is much more convenient for the program-making exhibitor than the present scattered exchanges.

STANDARD AIMS TO REVIVE STATE RIGHTS MARKETING

WITH independent exchanges in every important territory placed in a position to offer a regular program of one, two and three reel subjects in addition to their feature offerings, a marked impetus to states rights buying and selling is promised for the near future.

The policy of the Standard Photoplay Distributors Inc., is one which encourages independence on the part of the exchanges handling its program. Every exchange which has signed the Standard contract—and almost every territory is now "tied up"—was an independent exchange, firmly established and operating upon its own capital. With the signing of the papers which gave them the Standard Program for their several territories these exchanges retained complete independence of the Standard Photoplay Distributors, Inc., and merely agreed to buy the Standard Program releases in exchange for the exclusive rights to them for their district.

These releases consist of one, two and three-reel productions—the output of ten different studios located in Flushing, L. I., Fort Lee, New Jersey, Yonkers, New York, Colorado Springs, Colo., New York City and Los Angeles, Cal.—forming a program of regular weekly releases.

This, the company believes, places a group of State rights buyers in the field who are perfectly equipped to hold the business of a large number of theaters and can choose their subjects according to the demands of the theater owners.

BOOM STRIKES MINING TOWNS IN ARIZONA

DURING the past week a number of Arizona exhibitors have visited Los Angeles exchanges, and they report that the business of theatres in mining camps and towns is greatly improving over a few weeks ago, owing to the opening of all mines and a full force of men being employed. In other cities and towns, however, the theatre men report that business is extremely bad and attendance at the theatre is very small owing to very unfavorable financial conditions of the people.

Among the exhibitors to visit Los Angeles during the past week were John Barncord, of the Lamar Theatre, and W. B. Leecraft of the Lyon Theatre, Phoenix; George Mock, of the New State Amusement Company, having theatres at Rey, Hayden and Sonora, Ariz.; Adolph Schutz, of Silver City, New Mexico, who is adding additional houses to his circuit, which now includes theatres at Hurley, Santa Rita, and Deming, New Mexico.

Stephen D. Brown, of the Columbia, Douglas, Ariz., was also a visitor, and contracted for the Mutual Master-Picture service for his houses.

17 EXCHANGES SECURED TO HANDLE FIRST STANDARD

AL LICHTMAN, of the Standard program, who is making a trip over the country in the interests of this new organization, spent several days of the past week in Los Angeles investigating film producing conditions and conferring with parties with regard to handling the Standard program there.

Announcement will be made in the next few days regarding who will handle these films in that part of the country. Mr. Lichtman stated that seventeen exchanges had been secured for the first release of twelve reels which will be made on August 30.

HUNT MILLER IS BACK IN THE INDUSTRY

HUNT MILLER, for many months manager of the Pittsburgh Photoplay Company Exchange in Ferry street, Pittsburgh, who later went with the Mutual program over to its Penn avenue office, is soon to be again in the film business in Pittsburgh.

He is interested in the Clark & Rowland interests and is to manage the new office of the Associated program which Clark and Rowland are preparing to run in that section. The company has opened offices in Fourth avenue, next door to the offices of the Big Four, and will soon be fully prepared to make bookings.

MAGNOR, PURCHASER OF RIGHTS TO "MELTING POT," IN LOS ANGELES

NAT A. MAGNOR, who conducts exchanges in Los Angeles and at San Francisco, is spending a week with the Los Angeles manager, H. E. White, and looking after the booking of recently purchased State rights subjects, including "The Melting Pot," in which Walker Whiteside is starred.

Mr. Magnor purchased the rights for California, Arizona, New Mexico and the Hawaiian Islands for this subject.

DRESNER ORGANIZING SCREEN CLUB

A. DRESNER, manager of the Kriterion Film Service, Indianapolis, one of the live wire exchange men of Indiana, is at work perfecting plans for the organization of a Screen Club, composed of exchangemen in Indianapolis and surrounding cities.

Mr. Dresner says he has received assurances from leading exchangemen in Indianapolis that they will join the organization and Dresner says he hopes to have the preliminary details of the organization worked out so that the first meeting may be held within the next month.

It is planned to have club rooms where the out-of-town exhibitors may be entertained and while the club will be of a social character, all matters of general interest to the exchangemen will be discussed.

The correspondent of MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be made the official honorary press member.

Mr. Dresner organized the Washington Screen Club and the Screen Club of Pittsburgh before going to Indianapolis.

"KENTUCKY DERBY" IS BOOKED FOR COUNTRY FAIRS

THE St. Louis branch of the World Film Corporation has uncovered a novel and probably hitherto unattempted line of sales attack by calling the attention of exhibitors to the appropriateness of the film "Kentucky Derby" as a booking for county fairs.

As the racing is almost an entertainment feature of prime importance at this gathering farsighted exhibitors are arranging to take advantage of the sports popularity by offering "Kentucky Derby" as a special incidentatl attraction.

FILM ACTIVITY IN KANSAS CITY IS NOT AFFECTED BY MIDSUMMER WEATHER

SIMON LIBROS, late assistant manager at the home office of the Picture Playhouse Film Company, has gone to Kansas City as the manager of the same concern.

Mr. Libros was prior to his New York connection with the firm in charge of the Pennsylvania office.

The Navajo Film and Supply Company is installing a complete projection room and repair department. Large quarters are occupied by this firm in the Gumbel building on the corner of Eighth and Walnut streets. It is here that Manager Charles J. Scherer intends to carry on a first class repair shop, in addition to having a projection room in which to show his subjects to prospective customers.

R. J. Churchill has become identified with the V-L-S-E office in Kansas City as roadman to look after Iowa and Nebraska. He has been with the various exchanges in that territory for the last three years.

Thomas S. Bradley has accepted a position as roadman with the Pathé exchange in Kansas City. He is a new man at the business but is expected to make good.

Olson Brothers, who conduct the Wichita Film and Supply Company, have given up their Kansas City office. Their business in the future will be conducted from the Wichita office.

Manager Libros, of the Picture Playhouse Film Company, has put a new man on the road. He is W. P. Cuff. That he is making good is evidenced by the business that he has sent in.

A number of shifts and changes have been made in the V-L-S-E in the Kansas City territory by Manager Pearson. He has put on H. J. Gilinsky as roadman for Oklahoma, Arkansas and Missouri. L. E. Schaeffer, who formerly covered this territory, has been sent to Denver to take charge of the office there. He succeeds Fred Solomon, who has gone to Cheyenne, Wyoming, to manage a theatre for Carl Ray. William Beckenstein is another roadman that has been put on by Manager Pearson.

Quarters have at last been secured by the World Film Corporation in Kansas City. The Ozark building, where many of the exchanges are located, will be their future home. Max Levey, local manager, is of the opinion that his firm will have some of the finest offices in the city.

MARION ELECTED PRESIDENT OF KALEM COMPANY

F. J. Marion has been elected Kalem director in the General Film Company. Mr. Marion was also elected president of the Kalem Company as the result of the death of President Samuel Long.

William Wright was elected secretary and treasurer of the Kalem Company.

"SILVER THREADS" PLAYS TO BIG BUSINESS IN CHICAGO

The K. and R. Film Company's production "Silver Threads Among the Gold" opened at the Ziegfeld theatre, Chicago, on July 31, and pleased a packed house.

Our Films May Dislodge Subsidized Opera Abroad

Lasky Believes European Governments Will Feel Too Poor to Help Singing Art on Former Scale and Public Must Turn to Cheaper Amusement

TO consummate arrangements which have been the subject of negotiations lasting over several months and which have a direct bearing on the future of the exploitation and distribution of American produced photoplays in Europe, Jesse L. Lasky, president of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, arrived in New York last Tuesday from Hollywood, Cal., where the studios of the Lasky company are situated.

Mr. Lasky was in the West for several months and the importance of the business conferences which will be carried on in New York during the next few weeks between Mr. Lasky, Samuel Goldfish, executive head of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and their associates is best explained by the fact that Mr. Lasky left the studios before the completion of the photoplays in which Geraldine Farrar is appearing as the star under the personal supervision and direction of Cecil B. DeMille.

The arrival of the president of the company in New York connects to some extent the departure for Europe two weeks ago of Carl Anderson, formerly business manager of the Lasky Feature Play Company, and Harry Kohn, who went abroad as representatives of the Paramount Pictures Corporation. The business connections between the Lasky Feature Play Company and the foreign distributors has been intimate.

With the end of the European War it is believed that a field consisting of 50,000,000 people will suddenly be thrown open to American manufactured photoplays.

"I doubt if American producers can over-estimate the bigness of the European field once the war is over," said Mr. Lasky. "Of course, motion pictures always have had a deep appeal to Europeans and the field has been a lucrative one to Americans—that is, it always was before the war started. For more than a year now there has been considerable curtailment, however, although in many sections not actually within the range of the war's devastating influence American photoplays have enjoyed considerable popularity.

"For many years it has been the custom in European countries for the respective governments to subsidize great popular entertainment. That has been the reason why it has been possible for so many cities of only moderate population to have opera.

"To what extent government subsidies in this direction will be possible following the war is somewhat questionable. But it is certain to assume that the photoplay will supply a great demand for cheap and good entertainment. I believe particularly that American photoplays of good, clean subjects and bright philosophy will have a particularly vital appeal because Europe already will have had too much of the other side of life during these long, trying months of struggle.

"On that account the Lasky Feature Play Company is keeping in mind at the present time this great market where millions are awaiting photoplays of the right sort.

"Long before her extraordinary success as a prima donna at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York Geraldine Farrar, although an American girl, was widely known in Europe. She came to New York from the Royal Opera at Berlin. It is not hard to understand, therefore, the numerous inquiries from foreign connections of the Lasky company and its business associates as to when Europe will see Miss Farrar on the screen."

Mr. Lasky will remain in New York some weeks before returning West.

Hazel Dawn Displays Unusual Dramatic Talent in Famous Players Release, "The Heart of Jennifer"

HAZEL DAWN, the charming young star formerly celebrated as the Pink Lady, and who since she abandoned the stage permanently to appear exclusively on the screen under the management of the Famous Players Film Company, has acquired international fame as a film favorite, displays an entirely new aspect of her versatile talent, in the next Famous Players production "The Heart of Jennifer," scheduled for release on the Paramount program, August 23.

Although her early screen successes presented her primarily as a comedienne, it is evident that the Famous Players detected unusual dramatic ability in their captivating star, for more recently they have selected strong, dramatic subjects as her vehicles.

As Clarissa, her last film impersonation, Miss Dawn illustrated a difficult dramatic-romantic role, and it is now apparent that the Famous Players have been developing her for just such a characterization as "The Heart of Jennifer" provides. This subject was especially written for Miss Dawn by Edith Barnard Delano, who is also the author of the Mary Pickford photoplay "Rags."

It is a story of a woman's strong love for her husband, which prompts her to place upon herself the guilt of the crime committed by his sister, in order that he may not know of the latter's disgrace. Unaware of the real facts, he spurns his wife, but when at last he learns of the true situation, and of the heroic courage with which she performed her sacrificial act, he returns to her with a greater love.

Miss Dawn's effective portrayal of Jennifer will create for her a place among the foremost dramatic stars.

"POTASH AND PERLMUTTER" ACTOR IS IN "SUNDAY" WORLD FILM

Fresh from London triumphs, where he has appeared in "Potash and Perlmutter" for the past two seasons, Charles Dickson, the actor-author playwright, appears in the recent George W. Lederer successful film drama, "Sunday."

While Shakespeare Sleeps Mantell Glides to Screen

Greatest American Exponent of Tragic Roles After Booth, Signed by Fox, Will Be Featured in Series of Modern Dramas

"I WOULD not go so far as to say that Shakespeare is dead, but he is in a deep sleep, and while in this cataleptic state, I have decided to keep abreast of the times, and therefore have gone into motion pictures. Unless an actor is a freak, or has something of a freakish nature to present, there is no place for him on the stage today. Robertson, Sothern, Bernhardt, Kings and Queens are now in the pictures, so why should I not go into them also?"

In these words, Robert Mantell, one of the greatest living exponents of

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT MANTELL, NEW FOX STARS, ON THE GROUNDS OF THEIR ESTATE AT RED BANK, N. J.

Shakespearean drama, summed up his reason for leaving the legitimate stage and Shakespearean roles to appear on the screen for William Fox, under a contract to be featured in a series of modern dramas.

This famous man, whose King Lear and Richard III, and a score of other heavy Shakespearean characters are known the world around, says:

"I have no fault to find with the public. They have supported me loyally these many years. But today there is no general public for the actor, no matter whether he be tragedian or some other type. The general public is now found in the motion picture houses. The last two seasons, pictures have come in so strongly that I found that I was not getting the same patronage that I did four or five years ago. The gallery was gone. When I began to note that, I saw the handwriting on the wall. There were times in the old days when I could always count on eight hundred or one thousand boys in the gallery. Recently, I played to as many as ten or twelve. Then we began to depend upon the schools and colleges for patronage, but they, too, began to slip away from us, at last conquered by the lure of the motion picture.

Within the past two years, there have been plenty of good dramatic plays that opened and then closed immediately, which would have run indefinitely ten years ago. The stage has stood still while the motion picture has gone on. The pictures are now occupying the center of the world's stage.

"They have come to be so great and are so good and so cheap, that we of the two dollar lot have either to retire or go in with them. I recall the days, not so far back, when it seemed as if all the automobiles in the cities where I was presenting Shakespearean roles were parked at the theatre where I was playing.

"But that day has gone. Few automobiles were seen around the theatre where I was playing during my last two seasons. Down the street you would see them parked around the motion picture theatre.

"Ten years ago, I would have despised even the thought of going into motion pictures. But today they have become so artistic; they have increased in the value of artistry at least one thousand per cent. The greatest people are going into them, and why should I not do so?"

Mr. Mantell discussed various phases of his many years' experiences in theatrical life.

"I'm as enthusiastic as a school boy," said he. "I can hardly wait to begin my work on the screen, and I wish to state that I am going to give the best that there is in me and still more, if it is possible to do so. I am thoroughly enthused by the pictures."

His charming and talented wife, Genevieve Hamper, who is remembered in the Shakespearean world as a great Juliet, has signed a contract with William Fox to work in pictures, and she, too, shares in every respect the ideas of her talented husband.

"Yes, we both saw the handwriting on the wall as regards legitimate drama and Shakespearean roles, and we saw for a long time back that pictures were fast getting to the center of the public stage, and that they were getting to be a permanent and lasting proposition, so we are both extremely enthusiastic about beginning our work," said the distinguished actress.

PERCY L. SMITH A VISITOR IN NEW YORK

Percy L. Smith, managing director of the Empire theatre, Montgomery, Ala., and well known as one of the livest exhibitors in the South, was a visitor to New York during the past week and called at the office of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS to pay his respects to the staff. Mr. Smith is an ardent booster for the NEWS, and was most complimentary in his remarks as to its policy and make-up.

While here Mr. Smith made his business headquarters at the offices of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company.

Copies of "Northwest Weekly," Conducted by ex-Newspaper Men and Releasing 500 Feet of Local Happenings Each Week, Deposited with Minnesota State Historical Society

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, Aug. 3.

WILLIAM A. LOCHREN, president of "The Northwest Weekly," together with Harold P. Brown, chief director, were in Chicago last week on business connected with this company.

"The Northwest Weekly," which has been in existence for fourteen weeks, is a novel example of the possibilities of motion pictures in the realm of journalism. Every Monday the principal happenings in Minnesota and the surrounding states are portrayed in five hundred feet of film. This release is proving most popular with the exhibitor in Montana, North and South Dakota, northern Iowa, northern Wisconsin and Minnesota. The success is largely due to the fact that all members of the concern are young and enthusiastic newspaper men of wide experience.

Mr. Lochren, who is the son of the late William Lochren, United States District Judge, was for years connected with the Minneapolis "Journal." Mr. Brown is best known in Chicago as the originator of the Chicago "Herald Movies." Connected with them in the capacity of general manager is Charles G. Branham, former city editor of the Duluth "News-Tribune," who, through his long newspaper training in this section of the country, is familiar with its journalistic possibilities. Fred C. Place, the news editor, received his early training with the Hearst newspapers and the Chicago "Tribune," and for the past few years has been head photographer for the Minneapolis "Journal."

All happenings of news value to this territory are photographed by camera men who are on the job whenever live news is breaking.

Many of the leading men in this territory have been photographed in their characteristic poses.

The Minnesota State Historical Society has requested that a print of each series be turned over to them for preservation so that they may have film record of the development of the history of the state.

Prints are also being placed in the St. Paul Library. This novel idea of recording visualized happenings was suggested when the head librarian requested that he be given a copy of the first series which showed the burning of the St. Paul Library.

Dallas Exhibitor Discharged in Sunday Opening Case; Clergy Indignant, Will Ask New Law

JUDGE W. L. CRAWFORD instructed a verdict of not guilty in the first trial of the so-called Sunday theater cases recently at Dallas, Texas.

County Attorney Lively concurred in the motion for an instructed verdict on the ground that the affidavit charged P. G. Cameron as proprietor of the Crystal, while the proof showed the concern was owned by a corporation.

Mr. Lively said the case was filed on the affidavit setting out that Cameron was proprietor and he did not discover the variance until the evidence was heard.

In ordering the verdict of not guilty Judge Crawford said that persons making affidavits should exert great care, reciting that the time of the court had been taken up practically the entire day and the county had been put to considerable expense.

The Rev. George W. Benn, who was present at the trial, said that if the Sunday shows are held illegal the law enforcement committee of the Council of Churches will join with others in asking that the next Legislature make some changes in the law.

Two panels of talesmen were summoned in order to obtain a jury for the first case. A number disqualified for service on the jury by stating that they either were in favor of Sunday shows or opposed to them in a way that might affect them as jurors.

Belief that Sunday picture shows are morally wrong was held not to disqualify a juror.

County Attorney Lively, who appeared in the case with Chief Assistant Arch Allen and Special Assistant Will Thornton, asked each man if he had any prejudice against the law closing motion picture shows on Sunday. A number said they did. One man stated that he had signed the petition for the Sunday show election and did not feel that he could vote for a conviction consistently.

George W. Achilles, by whom the picture shows complaints have been filed at the direction of the law enforcement committee, was requested to stand and talesmen were asked if they knew him personally.

The case called for trial was that against P. G. Cameron for operation of the Crystal Theater, July 4.

The motion to quash was overruled, Attorney Allen stated that they were ready for trial and filed the motion to quash merely to preserve their rights.

The Rev. Mr. Benn said in speaking of the appearance of the City Attorney in the case that it had been the desire of the committee to bring the case against the city, but that after consulting numerous attorneys it was found they could not do so. It was proposed to proceed against the city by injunction. Failing in that course, he said, they then adopted the method of filing complaints against the motion picture show proprietors.

ALTON, ILL., APPOINTS CITY CENSORS

Alton, Ill., now has a city board of motion picture censors and hereafter any pictures against which a protest is made will first be inspected by the board before it is shown. The board will only act when some citizen makes a complaint.

The board was appointed by the Mayor and consists of the Mayor, city clerk, chief of police and an alderman.

The board was first called upon to act when the picture "The Nigger," was billed for the Hippodrome in that town by Manager W. A. Sauvage. Mr. Sauvage agreed to having the committee see the picture and on the opening day "The Nigger," drew large audiences with the censoring committee present.

Motion Picture Show Not a Theatre, Says Texas Judge, and So Is Exempt from Sunday Law

THAT a moving picture show is not a theater is the opinion of Judge W. L. Davidson of the Court of Criminal Appeals at Austin, Texas, in a decision handed down in the case styled ex parte E. L. McLeod of Tarrant County, Texas. By the terms of the statute, he said, theaters run on Sunday are prohibited only when admission is charged.

The opinion in part is as follows:

"It was held by the majority of the court that 'contributions' as shown by the facts were 'admission fees' and therefore constituted what the statute inhibited, 'fees charged for admission,'" says the opinion. "It is conceded that the contributions have been entirely voluntary and a great many who attended the exhibition did not contribute anything. Charging a fee for admission is a demand, a condition precedent for attending the exhibition. Without its payment entry to the show is effectually barred. This is not so with reference to voluntary contributions. In the latter case the show was open to all who may desire to attend, and this without money and without price. Contributions made are voluntary and need not be paid. They are not demands, but in a sense generosity.

"This is too well understood by all church organizations and church attendants to admit of doubt or call for discussion. 'Receiving contributions' or 'taking up collections' is practically the only way revenue for church purposes is realized or obtained. It would strike the priest, preacher or layman as a novelty to assert that such contributions or collections constitute or is a demand of admission fee for attendance upon divine services or for the purpose of carrying on the great work of the Christian church of spreading the teaching of Christianity."

The opinion concludes: "Moving picture shows are not theatres, and I agree with the Legislature that there was no law against it in Texas, and it is only so by judicial legislation of my brethren making a moving picture show a theater, not by legislative act. It is no violation of law to exhibit moving picture shows on Sunday, whether there be charged an admission fee or not. The statute does not include nor attempt to include moving picture shows within its terms. Judgment ought to be reversed and prosecution dismissed."

CONTRIBUTION PLATE USED FOR SUNDAY OPENING IN INDIANA

The K. G. Garden at Rochester, Ind., will be open Sunday nights with a free show until cold weather comes. The show will start at 8.30 p. m. in order not to conflict with church services.

There will be a contribution plate at the door.

It has been found that this form of entertainment is not in conflict with the Indiana law. It remains to be seen how it is received by the public of Rochester, as this form of Sunday opening has not been very successful outside of Indianapolis.

BUILDING INSPECTOR IN LOUISVILLE ENFORCES LAW AGAINST CHURCHES

Several churches in Louisville which in the past have been showing motion pictures in connection with lectures and church entertainments have received notices from the city building inspector to the effect that it is unlawful to give a motion picture show in any building other than those that comply with the regulations relative to fire protection as provided for in the city building code.

The notice reads: "No motion picture show where inflammable films are used may be given in any theatre, assembly hall, church or school hall, or room, unless such place is constructed and equipped according to the requirements of the building code regarding motion picture theatres. Such theatres must be on the ground floor and front on a public way.

"There shall be no means of connection to any other room or building nor shall any other business be conducted in such theatres or halls. All exterior walls shall be of some incombustible material. The floor shall be fireproof. There shall be two five-foot exits in front and two five-foot exits in the rear. Exits shall open directly into a street, alley, or court yard."

There are several other provisions which make it impracticable for churches to give picture entertainments. The building inspector says he means to enforce the law and that any violations will be prosecuted.

CLEVELAND FORBIDS SHOWING OF EASTLAND HORROR

Director of Public Safety Benesch has issued an order that motion pictures of the Eastland disaster cannot be shown in Cleveland. Mr. Benesch is acting under personal orders from Mayor Baker. Chief of Police Rowe also has been ordered to see that none of the films are shown there. The police head will act, even if the Ohio Board of Censorship passes the picture. Several motion picture theatres advertised the films. Mayor Baker takes this stand:

"Such a disaster is horrible enough to read about without visualizing the scenes of anguish and distress before one's eyes. I have ordered the director of safety to use every means within his power to stop the showing of the Eastland holocaust pictures."

The Eastland formerly was an excursion steamer in service between Cleveland and Cedar Point. Clevelanders as a rule had condemned the boat, claiming that it was not seaworthy. It was anticipated that the pictures would prove a big drawing card in Cleveland, but it looks as if the harvest has been nipped in the bud.

GREENSBURG, IND., EXHIBITOR STOPS SUNDAY SHOWING

James Alcorn, of Greensburg, Ind., has given up his attempt to open his moving picture theatre on Sunday because of the storm of protest started by the Christian League. Alcorn made no public statement, but the Rev. J. Ed Murr and the Rev. Walter H. Reynolds, pastors of two churches in Greensburg, who were appointed at a protest meeting to call on Alcorn, made an announcement praising the reasonableness of Mr. Alcorn, and his willingness to agree to give up his attempt to run Sunday shows.

The city administration has refused to take a stand in the matter, and it is quite likely, if the door of the theatre had been opened, the performance would have been allowed to be given without legal protest. The advance notices were to the effect that the city council had given permission for the exhibition on Sunday, when the church people raised such a roar of protest, there was not a councilman who would admit that he had done anything of the sort.

3,800 CITIZENS FILE PROTEST AGAINST SUNDAY INTERFERENCE IN ALABAMA

Thirty-eight hundred citizens of Mobile county, Alabama, have filed with State Senator Harry T. Hartwell and the Mobile delegation to the House a protest against the passage of the proposed bill prohibiting amusements on Sunday.

This bill would take from the city governments the right to regulate amusements on Sunday. The petition will be laid before the House and Senate with the request that the wishes of the people be complied with.

Eighty per cent. of the professional and business men of Mobile signed the petition, although no effort to obtain signatures was made, the petitions being placed at cigar and newspaper stands throughout the city.

Petitions from Montgomery and Birmingham will be placed in the next few days. One of the arguments of those opposing the bill is that those who benefit from Sunday baseball games and motion picture shows are working people who can find amusement at no other time of the week.

SPOKANE CENSOR PRAISES "BIRTH OF A NATION"

"'The Birth of a Nation' is magnificent. It is the greatest film I have ever seen."

That is what City Commissioner Samuel Glasgow, municipal censor of theaters, reported on his return to Spokane from Seattle, whither he was sent by the city council to witness the Griffith spectacle and determine whether it should be exhibited in Spokane.

Colored clergymen of Spokane had presented a protest against the film to the city council, which prompted the censor's trip to the Coast, a distance of 400 miles.

"The negro people undoubtedly have cause for complaint," admitted the censor. "They are just as much entitled to object to certain scenes as the Irish and Jewish people have had on other plays and pictures sent here. But I do not believe the performance should be prevented.

"The scenes objected to are minor ones, but are essential to the play and could not well be eliminated. I investigated closely, however, and failed to find in Seattle a single instance of violence resulting from the picture."

"The Birth of a Nation" was bought for Seattle and Spokane by James Q. and Howard S. Clemmer, brothers, who booked it for five weeks in Seattle and three in Spokane. It is no secret that the film has not been drawing as well in the Coast city as was expected, and, if it does no better in Spokane the engagement may be cut to a fortnight and the picture taken onto the road for the odd week.

Lack of opposition in Seattle probably has had something to do with the attendance there and the tempest stirred up here should have the effect of materially helping the box office.

Albany Exhibitors and Officials at Deadlock Over Sunday Opening

THE fight to open film houses in Albany, N. Y., on Sundays is now on. The city officials are stubbornly fighting and the exhibitors, just as determined, say they will win. The city officials promise that the case will be taken to the highest court in the state before they will submit to having picture shows open Sundays.

All of the licenses issued in that city bear stamped upon them a provision that the license is issued with the distinct understanding that no shows will be given Sundays. This, the film men behind the campaign to open Sunday say is unconstitutional and there is no state law that can back it up. At any rate a fine legal fight is assured.

LeRoy H. Bender, manager of the Silent Moving Picture theater at Lark street and Sheridan avenue was arrested recently charged with keeping open in violation of a city ordinance. He immediately sued out a writ of habeas corpus which was dismissed and Bender released from custody by Justice G. D. B. Hasbrouck. He was then cited before Mayor Joseph W. Stevens to show cause why the license, which would have expired by limitation on August 1 should not be revoked.

The manager appeared and the license was revoked.

On Thursday last Bender, still running the place, was arrested for operating a moving picture house without a license. He again sued out a writ of habeas corpus which is returnable later. Briefs are to be submitted.

It is expected that the appeal from the determination of Justice Hasbrouck will be argued at the September term of the Appellate Division, Third Department, which meets at Saratoga. The Court of Appeals will probably get the case later. Albany city officials are already planning that in the event they are beaten in the courts to take the matter to the legislature and ask for some regulation.

On the outcome of the decision moving picture men of Albany are awaiting with no small interest.

A FISH STORY (NO REFLECTION IMPLIED) FROM THE RUBENSTEIN HATCHERIES

As a fish expert Arthur Ellery, of Thanhouser's purloins the pastry. In making "The Plugged Nickel," a Falstaff, he found that Phil Lonergan had written a scene in which a fish swallows the hoodoo coin. He rushed in to ask Lonergan how to do it, but Phil would not be annoyed; he was conveniently busy, and besides, he's a writer, not a magician, while directors are supposed to be everything. So Arthur got busy and discovered a fish that swallowed the nickel for him when it was dropped into a tank.

Peggy Burke, Florence La Badie and Harry Benham will be seen in "When the Fleet Sailed," a Thanhouser. This is the picture for which the Navy Department set aside the grape-juice edict, so that Morgan Jones could get in his villainous work; also, Director Sullivan became an admiral for the day he commanded the crew on the "Wyoming."

Morris Foster handed the Thanhouserites a surprise in a scene for "The Game," a drama of criminal life. He had to tackle Ray Johnston, a six-footer in a scrap, and Foster certainly proved to be a worthy antagonist.

EQUITABLE BUYS RIGHTS TO 5 ARMSTRONG PLAYS FOR WORLD RELEASE

The Equitable Motion Picture Corporation has purchased the motion picture rights of three plays by Paul Armstrong, which will be released as five-reel photoplays through the World Film Corporation.

"Blue Grass" will be the first Armstrong picture. It will be produced by Charles M. Seay, formerly with the Edison company, assisted by James Cunningham, the assistant to Isadore Bernstein, director general of the Equitable; Thomas Wise, star of "The Gentleman from Mississippi," will play "Colonel Taylor," the leading role.

He will be supported by Clara Whipple and George Soule Spencer, of the Equitable stock, Ray Tuckerman, John Boone, Bess Sankey and Tommie Mead. "A Romance of the Underworld" and "The Bludgeon" are the two other plays by Armstrong which will be produced later. The dramas are being adapted for screen use by Marc Edmund Jones, the Equitable scenario editor. The race scene in "Blue Grass" will be taken at the Saratoga race tracks, where the company will go to make part of the picture.

"MARKET PRICE OF LOVE," ESSANAY PLAY FOR 5 BEAUTY CONTEST WINNERS

Essanay has just concluded a prize scenario and beauty contest in conjunction with the Indiana "Daily Times." The winning scenario, "The Market Price of Love," now is being produced at the Chicago studios. The five girls who won the largest number of votes in the contest are all taking parts in the play.

None of them ever had any experience in photoplay work before, but after a short course of training at the Essanay studios, are doing remarkably well. The beauty of the quintette also goes far to "put them over" on the screen.

The leads and all the other parts, except those carried out by the five, are being taken by Essanay's experienced players.

VIEWS OF "EASTLAND" DISASTER IN SELIG "NEWS"

Exclusive views filmed of the "Eastland" disaster for the Hearst-Selig "News Pictorial" may be utilized in the investigation of the cause of the terrible catastrophe now under way in Chicago, Ill. The Hearst-Selig "News Pictorial" staff was on the scene of the disaster five minutes after the big passenger boat turned over. The motion pictures of the terrible disaster, and carrying an object lesson likely to prevent similar tragedies in the future, were ready for general release a few hours later.

A special film, showing motion picture scenes of the rescue of passengers from the ill-fated vessel, was in readiness by the Selig Polyscope Company and has been in great demand. Orders from all sections of the United States have been received for these special films.

The presentment of these pictures, it is believed, will be an impressive object lesson and aid in the preventing of similar accident in the future. The scenes presented herewith are exclusive and will probably figure importantly in the official investigations instituted by the United States Government and the city of Chicago, Ill.

ARTONE FILMS PLAYS IN HISTORIC OHIO SPOT

Put-in-Bay, O., Aug. 3.

The Artone Film Company has arrived at Put-in-Bay to film the play "I'm on My Way to Dublin Bay." This is a play in which a redcoat soldier of the British army takes a leading part.

A number of local residences have been fitted up for backgrounds and several houses now have thatched roofs over the shingles. The water front is said to resemble the water front about Dublin Bay. This is the harbor in which Perry put in after whipping the British fleet and sent his famous "We have met the enemy and they are ours" message.

Large numbers of visitors come to the Bay every summer and they are displaying great interest in the filming of the play; in fact, the crowds have been the greatest known in a number of years, as the film players are giving Put-in-Bay one of the greatest advertisements this place has ever known.

The Board of Trade here is making an effort to have the film players come here every year.

ANITA'S AUTO, EMULATING A GOAT, BUTTS VITAGRAPH STUDIO WALL

Anita Stewart, the Goddess, is the proud possessor of an electric coupe, which she has learned to handle like a veteran chauffeur. The only known casuality credited to her during the time when she was mastering its intricacies was a collision with a corner of one of the Vitagraph studios.

The studio, luckily, was the worst sufferer as a considerable portion of the stone work had to be replaced, while a dent in its dainty hub was the only damage done the car.

COURT VINDICATES "REGENERATION" AFTER ABSURD CHARGE

When William Sievers, manager of the New Grand Central theatre, at Grand and Lucas avenues, St. Louis, booked "The Island of Regeneration" for the week of July 25, he met with unexpected opposition from various individuals who sought to have the police stop the film from being run because of a bathing scene it contains.

When Mr. Sievers was notified that the bathing scene would have to be cut out before the film could be run, he filed suit in the Circuit Court to restrain the police from interfering with the production of the photoplay, and a temporary injunction was granted him.

The first showing of the film at the New Grand Central, at which fifty representative citizens were invited was a complete vindication for the moral tone of the picture. Many people came to Mr. Sievers and assured him that they did not see anything objectionable.

The result of the publicity given the picture made it of more than usual interest and the theatre played to packed houses all during the run.

LUBIN GETS WINNER OF BEAUTY PRIZE

Lubin, of Philadelphia, has captured a prize beauty in the person of little Edith Adele Pierce, who was the second most beautiful girl in America in a contest held at the San Francisco Fair.

Miss Peirce, who is only sixteen, is petite, with large brown eyes, a small mouth and silken, wavy brown hair.

EDITH ADELE PIERCE

Born in Syracuse, N. Y., she spent most of her youthful career in Philadelphia. For the last nine years she was on the vaudeville stage, and only recently joined the Lubin forces. Miss Peirce submitted her photograph to a committee of beauty experts, and won second prize.

Visit of "Woman Next Door" Is Pleasant Event

Advance Showing of Kleine Feature, Starring Irene Fenwick in Role of Gentle, Timid, Pathetic Heroine, Elicits Loud Praise from Film Men of Actress' Talent

FILM men privileged to witness advance showings of George Kleine's feature "The Woman Next Door" are loud in their praise of the work of Irene Fenwick in the role of Jenny Gay. This is Miss Fenwick's third picture following her premier appearance in "The Commuters" and later her splendid delineations of the spendthrift wife in "The Spendthrift."

Miss Fenwick, who saw a motion picture camera for the first time under George Kleine's direction in "The Commuters," has given one of the rarest and most beautiful examples of character portrayal in the history of film plays in her latest picture, "The Woman Next Door." The gentle, timid, pathetic figure of Jenny Gay, socially ostracized by the village folk and persecuted to the point of desperation, has given Miss Fenwick a role exactly suited to her temperament and remarkable talents.

"I studied picture work as earnestly as I ever studied a stage script," said Miss Fenwick in response to the congratulations that were showered upon her after a review of the first finished print. "Many things, little in themselves, but vital in the aggregate, constitute success or failure in this work. Little mannerisms, such as how to carry the head, move the hands, enter and exit properly are immense factors whose importance grows with me every day. On the speaking stage a gesture synchronizes with the voice and the two are blended into the emotion to be portrayed. It required some time for me to fully appreciate that, as constant stage rehearsals eventually make the combination an unconscious act."

Miss Fenwick has applied herself to picture work with vim and determination. She likes the silent drama and is one of the few stage stars who believes that there are other essentials to success than the ability to please people with the living presence. She has a wholesome respect for the camera and by taking advantage of every opportunity to see herself in film, has steadily improved.

Spedon, W. S. Smith and Sturgeon Hunt Site for Vitagraph Studio in Los Angeles

DIRECTOR of Publicity Sam Spedon, of the Vitagraph Company; W. S. Smith, manager of the Vitagraph studio, and R. S. Sturgeon, manager of production, have spent a busy week looking for a location for the new Vitagraph studio in Los Angeles or Hollywood.

No announcement of a settlement of the matter has been made. It is stated that in all probability the Selig Polyscope Company's Edendale studio, which was the first one built there by this company, may be purchased, and the Selig Company centralize its plant at the jungle zoo studio.

The Santa Monica studio of the Vitagraph Company is too small to permit of the making of pictures of the present day type, and the weather conditions at Santa Monica are such as to prevent production until late each morning.

The technical department of the Vitagraph studio at Santa Monica is now busily engaged in making sets and other equipment necessary for the filming of an adaptation from the Cyrus Townsend Brady story, "Sir Henry Morgan, Buccaneer." The script for this has been prepared by Jasper Ewing Brady, and the filming will be in charge of R. S. Sturgeon. The picture will consist of five or six reels.

"The Ebony Casket," is the title of a one-reel comedy being completed by the Vitagraph director, Ulysses Davis. The story for this revolves about the affections of a society woman for her pet angora cat, which during the photoplay dies. A stuffed cat was found for the finishing scenes, and then several days searching were necessary before a live one of the same appearance could be found.

The cast for this includes Myrtle Gonzalez, Ann Schafer, William Duncan and Al Vosburg. By the way, the cat of the play was named Cleopatra and the live one secured to play the part has a pedigree in which he is named Anthony.

"HEARTS OF BLUE RIDGE" IS SUNBONNET PLAY FOR MISS YOUNG

The next big feature to be produced by James Young for the World Film Corporation will be "The Heart of the Blue Ridge," starring Clara Kimball Young.

In this picture Miss Young will appear in the gingham gown and sunbonnet of the mountains. As in "Marrying Money," she will again have as her leading man Chester Barnett, who is known to many thousands of photo-playgoers. Robert Cummings will be entrusted with the part of the villain.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Los Angeles, August 1.

THE K. and D. Motion Picture Company is the name given the organization just formed by Kolb and Dill, the Weber and Fields of the West coast, where these two comedians are very well known and popular. William M. Kinsey, of San Francisco, is to be manager of the company, and production will probably be taken up in the Bay City. No definite statement has been given out as to releases or when studio activity will commence.

"The Barnstormers' Waterloo" is a one-reel comedy being produced by Fred Hornby, in which Bill Parsons and Russ Powell, of the extreme heavyweight class, are featured in the cast, which includes Rena Rogers, Constance Johnston, Katherine Griffith and others. The story is one of a theatrical company visiting a small town while finances were at a low ebb. The actors' troubles are numerous and of a very painful but comedy nature.

The William Seiter Dramatic Company, of the National studio, is finishing a two-reel subject entitled "Tangled Threads," in which Edward Sloman and Gill Woodward play the leading parts. Mr. Sloman was formerly with the Universal, and this is his first picture with the National.

Other additions to the staff of the National are Lamar Johnston, late of the Selig companies; Chester Lyons, of New York, and Dudley Burroughs, newspaper and magazine writer, recently of the New York "World," has been added to the scenario staff as assistant to A. W. Caldeway. Jack C. O'Brien, former Universal man, is also a member of the National staff.

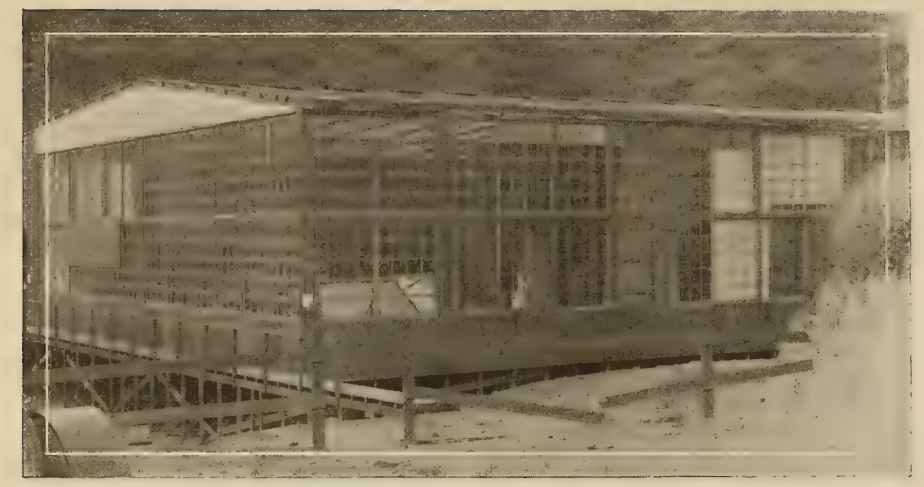
Bushman Company in Dynamite Scenes

The National has adopted the policy of making the subject whatever length the story requires. This will apply to their second feature production, "Captivating Mary Carstars," adapted from the novel of the same title by Sydnor Harrison, author of "Queed," which features Norma Talmadge and Bruce Mitchell. Allan Forrest appears as juvenile lead, Jack Livingston as the heavy, and Frank Brown.

BILL RUSSELL, WHITE HOPE OF THE "DIAMOND FROM THE SKY" COMPANY

The Francis X. Bushman-Quality Pictures Company spent a portion of last week at Pine Crest, where a number of dynamiting scenes were made for the coming release, "The Silent Voice." For these scenes a number of cameras were used, under the direction of W. F. Alder, who promised additional innovations in this picture.

Don Meaney, who has been with the Universal West coast studios since December, has been engaged by the Quality Pictures, and will have charge of the production department, commencing the first of the coming week. At the Universal, Mr. Meaney was first with the publicity department, but later served as business manager, and for the past few weeks has been assistant to Director General Henry McRae. Prior to this engagement he was with the Essanay company at Chicago and for several years managed the advertising and publicity.



ROSZIKA DOLLY (Griffith)

The Lasky company are justly entitled to the distinction of having built the largest set ever made for one scene. This was a replica of the Plaza de Toras in Seville, in which the bull fights of "Carmen" take place. This big set was necessary to show the entrance of the people to the amphitheatre where the bull fights took place, and also the entrance of the various "'dores" and the bulls. More than twenty-five tons of plaster paris were needed for this set, which was made from a set of four photographs of the original Plaza. The set was designed by Wilfred Buckland, head of the technical department, and made to conform with the building in every respect, plans being made to a half-inch scale. The set includes the various doors to the pit and is more than three hundred feet deep, and the center building is thirty-five feet high. All of the shields on the building were handmade and show the decaying of the buildings as the result of the years they have stood. The balconies in all instances were made practical and used during the making of the pictures.

Brian in MacGrath Adaptation

Lou Tellegen began work at the Lasky studio last week in the filming of "The Explorers," adapted from the Edward Morgan story of adventure in South Africa. The direction is in charge of George Melford, and Mr. Tellegen will be supported by Theodore Roberts, James Neil and others.

Donald Brian, of "Merry Widow" fame, is appearing in his second Lasky picture, "The Voice in the Fog," adapted from the play by Harold MacGrath. J. P. McGowan is in charge of the direction, and Adda Gleason will play opposite Mr. Brian.

The third Geraldine Farrar subject was taken up Monday upon the return of Miss Farrar from Coronado, where she enjoyed a ten days' vacation. No title has been given this subject, which will portray the career of the famous opera star and contains a heart-interest story. Elsie Jane Wilson has been especially engaged for this subject, and others in the cast will be Pedro de Cordoba and Wallace Reid.

Leon Kent, for the past eighteen months director for the Lubin, is a new member of the Universal City producing staff, and is now completing his first subject, "The Man in the Chair." This organization has been given the name of the Hobart Henley Company, and all productions will feature this player, who recently came to Universal City from the Imp studio in New York. Supporting Mr. Henley will be Grace Thompson, Ray Hamford, and Benjamin Wilson. "The Man in the Chair" is the first story Mr. Hemley has written for the screen, and the first in which he has taken part at Universal City.

For the Broadway Universal Star Feature, "The Long Chance," a five-reel Western subject being produced by E. J. LeSaint and featuring Frank Keenan, a very strong cast has been selected, which is composed of Messrs. Church, Blasing, Rogers, Newman, Berrill, Benson, and Misses Rosetta and Boughton.

The photoplay portrays the life of a gambler of a Western town, and shows the devotion of this rough man to his ideal contrasted with his apparent hardness toward all other matters. Throughout there is a pretty love theme in which he aids in bringing justice to the wife.

Entwhistle Blows Over to Universal

"The Finest Gold" is a heart-interest story wherein a miser is brought to appreciate the value of friends and relatives, the change in the old man's life being brought about by the resemblance of his son in his grandson when he gives up his gold for the golden curls of the boy. The scenario is by Ben Cohn, and the subject will be released as a Big U.

Harold Entwhistle, former producer for the California Motion Picture Corporation, where he made "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" and "Lovey Mary," has been added to the Universal City producing staff, and is now making his first subject of two reels, "The Surrender," which features Marie Walcamp and Joseph E. Singleton.

A two-reel story has been written about the life of a forest ranger and is being produced at Universal City for Rex brand release, under the title of "The King's Keeper," King being the name given the largest tree of the reserve.

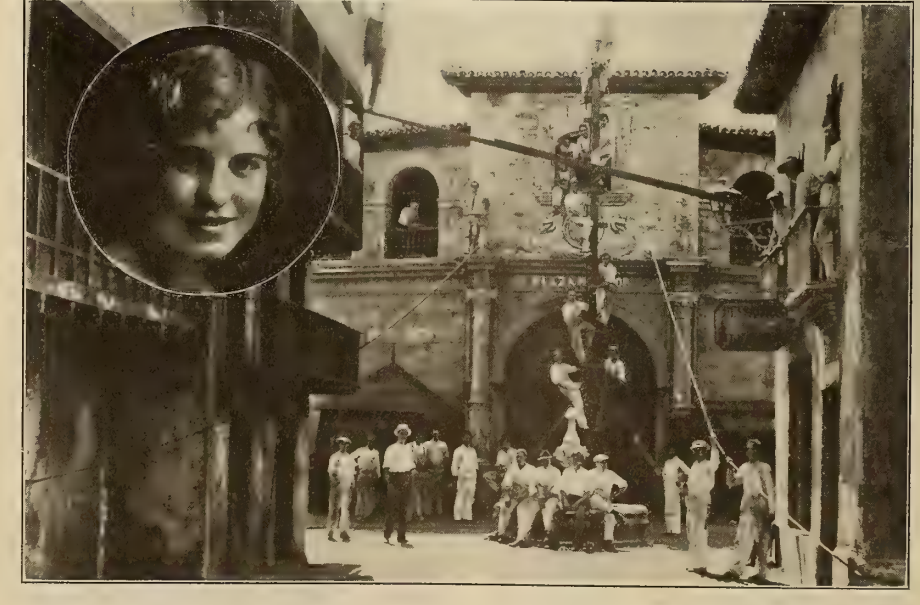
Arthur Shirley takes the name part, supported by Cleo Madison, Lon Chaney and M. K. Wilson. The scenario is by Nell Shipman. The story deals with the efforts of a mountain renegade and a disgruntled lover to cause the dismissal of the forest ranger.

At Lake Tahoe, California, the Victor company is making "The Code of the Mounted," wherein Jack Kerrigan appears as a private of the mounted police. This subject of three reels will portray the rough life in the trappers' village, combined with the romance of the young mounted police In the cast supporting Mr. Kerrigan are: Ethel Phillips, Norbert Myles, Wilma Wilkie, and Buck Connor.

McDonald Subject for Universal

One of the first subjects to be made by Norman McDonald for the Universal is entitled "Martin Lowe, Treasurer," wherein a trusted lodge brother is given the funds of the order to keep, and during the night they are taken from under his pillow, where he has placed them for safety, by a member of the household, who hides the money in the back yard for safe keeping.

This brings about a number of unpleasant complications, all of which are explained to the satisfaction of all concerned. In the cast are William Quinn in the name part, Agnes Vernon, Lydia Titus and Edwin Clark.



The Broadway Star Feature, "In Watt College," which features Mr. and Mrs. Carter DeHaven, has a very delightful story of college life of a comedy drama nature. The cast for this, besides the leads, includes Lois Morrison, Val Paul, Lule Warrenton and Dr. Frank Crane. Direction is in charge of William C. Dowlan.

The adaptation from the Augustus Thomas' play "Colorado," which features Hobart Bosworth, has been completed, and the scenario is now being prepared for the fourth Bosworth subject.

The Worthington company is making a three-reel subject, entitled "The Queen of Hearts." This pertains to the gambling of society and official people, with an international political intrigue. In the cast, besides the director, William Worthington, are Bernie Furry, Jack Welsh and Anna Little. It is reported that Miss Little will leave the Universal upon the completion of this subject.

Girl Saved in Nick of Time

Another of the series of short subjects, featuring Daddy Manly and Mother Benson, of the Universal staff, is being made this week by Director H. G. Stafford. The title of this is "Mary Anna" and portrays the misfortunes of a poor plaster figure maker and his family, who reside in the tenement district, and the evil intentions of the landlord with respect to the plaster maker's daughter, which are discovered by the father, but circumstances prevent the father from carrying out the deeds he first considered.

Hazel Buckham, who has been with the Victor company at Lake Tahoe, has returned to the Universal studio, and is playing in Big U releases.

Helen Ware is expected at Universal City in the near future, and scenario adapted from the Frances Hodgson Burnett story, "The Lass of Lowries," is being prepared by F. McGrew Willis.

Marshall Hageman, of Universal City producing staff, who is ensign of the naval reserve, served as host to eight hundred and sixty-nine 'midshipmen from U. S. S. "Annapolis," who visited the studios Tuesday of this week.

The largest fire scene staged by a company of the Los Angeles colony was that filmed for "In the Sunset Country," being produced by Burton King. The set destroyed consisted of a dance hall, saloon, and gambling place. This was built under the direction of Technical Director Lee Lawson, and the entire structure was destroyed by the flames while the players took part in the making of films. None were injured.

Louis Rouillion, director of the Mechanical Institute, of New York, and a member of the National Board of Censors, was a visitor at Los Angeles studios during the past week on a trip of inspection taken for the purpose of learning the actual conditions existing at studios as they relate to the productions.

Statesman's Story in Films

The well-known short story by John Hay, ex-Secretary of State, "The Blood Seedling," which has been reprinted a number of times in "Lippincott's Magazine," has been adapted for the screen by Emma Bell, and is being produced this week under the direction of Thomas Santchi, who also plays the principal part.

This will be completed in three reels. The story is laid in the central Illinois towns and covers the period from eighteen forty-two to eighteen sixty-two. It deals with the doctrine of Emanuel Swedenborg, writer of note and founder of the Swedenborg church. In the story the doctrine of this faith is used to discover a murderer. Others in the cast supporting Mr. Santchi are Leon Pearson, Thomas Bates, Roy Clark, George Larkin, Lafayette McKee, James Kackley and Marion Warner.

THE VITAGRAPH WESTERN STUDIOS AT SANTA MONICA, CAL.

The evil effects of society and its many freakish entertainments, all given in the hope of outdoing others, forms the basis for the three reel Selig subject, "Their Sinful Influence." This is a satire on present day conditions in which the ways of society nearly cause the downfall of a clergyman's daughter. Lloyd B. Carleton is in charge of the production, the cast of which is composed of Bessie Eyton, Lillian Hayward, Edith Johnson, Virginia Kirtley, Mr. Morris, Edward Peile and Edwin Wallup.

A two reel subject by W. C. Clifton, editor of the Selig scenario department, entitled "The Eternal Feminine" is being produced with a cast composed of Al Filson, Earl Fox, Joe King, Vivian Reed, and Viola Alberta. This is based upon the equal suffrage question, and gives the early history of the movement dating back to as early a period as the cliff dwellers and the cave man. Throughout is a comedy vein.

A two reel western Majestic subject, "The Kinship of Courage" is being produced by Director Francis Powers. This has a number of thrilling scenes of early day life on the frontier, one being that of W. E. Lawrence jumping from a galloping horse to the steps of a speeding train. Others in the cast are Walter Long and Francelia Billington.

"Faithful to the Finish," a Komic brand, serves to permit Fay to return as the dandy little stenog. This was her original role in Komic comedies. The usual Komic cast appears in this picture.

If It Were a "Wet" Town!

The rattlesnake which has been terrorizing the cameramen of the NYMP studio for the past several weeks has been captured. Robert Newheart, one of the photographers, having felt his snakeship with his hand while loading a magazine in the dark room, took a tight grip upon the snake. Newheart by the dim light of the ruby lamps could see the eyes of the snake, and his grip was just back of the head.

He carried it out, and a photograph was made as soon as he reached the outside. The snake is still alive and is being held in captivity with a view of using it in some production in the near future. Inceville itself is a dry town. The nearest cafe or bar is five miles distant.

The trend of feature production is most strikingly illustrated in the set now being made on the hundred acre plateau at Inceville, which will be used in a production now being made. Superlatives are necessary to correctly describe this mammoth set which will require more than ten car loads of lumber in the making, and it is estimated one hundred tons or more of plaster paris.

Triangle Release

When completed it will represent a mammoth city park surrounded by four blocks of buildings. Trolley cars will be in operation around two corners and pass on one side of the park. One building will be three hundred feet in length and have seventy steps up to its entrance, and the dome will rise to a height of one hundred and forty feet from the ground.

The magnitude of this setting is shown in the fact that workmen have now been engaged on it for the past two weeks, and it will not be ready for the camera until about the first of November. Thomas H. Ince is now supervising the making of interior scenes for this picture, and it is probable that his time will be taken up in the completion of this until the workmen have the exterior scenes completed.

One of the first subjects to be released as a NYMP production on the newly formed Triangle film corporation program is that featuring Bessie Barriscale, "The Man Who Found His Honor," which was made under the direction of Walter Edwards. The name part was taken by Lewis S. Stone. Miss Barriscale is now appearing in scenes for "The Golden Claw," an American society story being made by Reginald Barker.

"Between Men" is the working title given a partially western picture being made by, and featuring William S. Hart. In this the portrayer of the rugged westerner dons the clothes of a business man for many of the scenes of this picture. House Peters is appearing in this subject.

Orrin Johnson, the Broadway star, has completed one picture under the Ince banner, and is now working in the second entitled, "Whither Goest Thou." Mr. Johnson is supported by Rea Mitchell, who for the past eighteen months has been affiliated with the NYMP organization.

Jane Gray, former legitimate stage favorite, is one of the recent additions to the NYMP producing staff of Thomas H. Ince, and with William Desmond, late of the Oliver Morosco stock company in Los Angeles, is appearing in a story given the title of "Waifs." The scenario for this is an original one of J. G. Hawk of the Ince staff, and the direction is in charge of Scott Sidney.

NYMP Studio Completed

Willard Mack, actor, playwright and producer, appearing in his second Ince subject entitled, "Aloha Oe," has been unable to continue his work for the past week, owing to an injury sustained when he fell down the side of a mountain while erecting a scene in which he carried Enid Markey up the steep incline. This accident is delaying work on this production, and also one entitled "The Corner," in which Mr. Mack was to appear with George Faucet, the well known legitimate stage actor who has been engaged by Thomas H. Ince.

Mary Boland, former leading woman with John Drew, and Bruce McRae, popular footlight leading man, are expected to arrive at Inceville early in August for appearance in photoplays from original scenarios by C. Gardner Sullivan and J. G. Hawk.

What is considered the most perfectly appointed and equipped enclosed studio is now completed at the NYMP studio in the Santa Ynez canyon. It gives a stage space of approximately fifteen thousand square feet, and is so located as to have good sunlight throughout the day.

One of the most expensive fire scenes was enacted at Universal City this week for "Renunciation," the Broadway Feature in which Julia Dean appears. A gun fight in a western town, in which a bullet from one gun hits a box of matches igniting them, is the beginning of the conflagration, and the entire set is then consumed.

Wulze Now Directs Joker

Harry Wulze, former scenario writer for the Sterling and Keystone companies, has been placed in charge of the direction of the second Joker company, and began work this week. Bobbie Vernon, Eddie Boland and Jane Bermudy are appearing in the first picture.

The Al. Christie Nestor comedy company with Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, are spending this week at San Diego, where they are filming two stories, "Two Many Smiths" and "A Happy Honeymoon."

Cleo Madison has resigned from the Universal producing staff, where she has been leading woman for the past two years, and it is understood she will appear in World Film Corporation subjects. The resignation becomes effective early in August.

The Bosworth subject featuring Maclyn Arbuckle entitled "The Reformed Candidate," adapted from the well known vaudeville sketch in which this actor appeared on the big time circuits, has been finished at the Occidental Boulevard studio, and Mr. Arbuckle left this week for San Francisco. This is the first subject to be made by Frank Lloyd, now in charge of production.

Marjorie Rambeau Stars for Morosco

The next subject to be taken up here will be that by the Morosco company, with Marjorie Rambeau as star. The photoplay is now being prepared under the personal direction of Oliver Morosco, and production will be started the latter part of this week.

The Bosworth and Morosco companies have secured additional ground for studio purposes near the present studio at 201 Occidental Boulevard, and a warehouse and exterior stage with a floor space of ten thousand square feet is now being built. Another improvement being made at this studio is the installation of a new ventilation system for the laboratories which washes and dries the air entering the building, and gives a complete change of air every thirty seconds. The system installed is that manufactured by R. B. Gournsey and Company of Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Members of the D. W. Griffith and Mack Sennett producing forces staged a benefit Monday evening, July 26, at the Mason Opera House, Los Angeles, for the St. Catherine's Church. The program of vaudeville was arranged by Charles L. Gill and George Seigmann of the Griffith studio. Roger Armstrong of the Keystone, and Charley Murray the "Hogan" of Keystone films was stage director.

Among those who took part in the program were: Harry McCoy, Ford Sterling, Mabel Normand, Raymond Hitchcock, Fred Mace, Bob Albright, Roscoe Arbuckle and Chas. Murray of the Keystone, and Peter Strong, Tom Wilson, Chas. L. Gill, Grant Churchill, Lloyd Ingram, Elsie De Wolfe, and Wilfred Lucas of the Griffith studios.

Impersonate Blanche Sweet

The Lasky studio during the past week received messages from newspapers at Spokane, Washington, inquiring as to whether Blanche Sweet was still with the Lasky company and if she was in Los Angeles at that time. Newspapers from that city brought out the fact that a woman resembling Blanche Sweet and another with the appearance of Fay Tincher had registered at the Davenport Hotel under the names of Blanche Sweet and Fay Tincher and were taking part in an act at the Pantages Theatre, entitled "Stars of the Movies." The Lasky studio publicity department lost no time in assuring the newspapers that the vaudeville people were impostors.

Dorothy Davenport, in private life Mrs. Wallace Reid, has been engaged by the Lasky company to play opposite Lou Tellegan in "The Explorers." It is probable that she will be retained in the Lasky stock.

WEAK SPOTS IN A STRONG BUSINESS---XXIII

Mack Sennett, Director General of Keystone Film Company, Says That There Is Nothing Wrong with the Industry—It Has "Grown From a Small Shop Into a Business Colossus" in a Few Years—"This Is an Epoch of Good Films, or No Films at All"—A Word About the Value of Conventions

WHAT'S wrong with the motion picture business? Nothing, from the standpoint of the producer. If anything is wrong with it we should certainly pack our grips and start a general hegira for fields anew," says Mack Sennett, Director General of the Keystone Film Company.

"The motion picture industry, which has grown in a few years from a small shop into a business colossus, is now in full enjoyment of the most prosperous era of its existence—and this in spite of world conflagrations and consequent stagnation of all other industries aside from steel mills and munition factories.

"But, to stretch a point, the only thing I imagine to be wrong with the business is the lack of understanding between the producer and the exhibitor. As producers we recognize that the sole method by which we can achieve the most far-reaching results is to place ourselves in direct touch with the exhibitor.

"The exhibitor is the one person who, above everyone else, knows the trend of the public mind as regards the class of films particularly in demand.

"Without his advice and assistance the producer is left in the dark to grope his way through the intricate mazes of film subject matter, putting out his money in a lavish manner on multi-reel screen features and otherwise worrying himself through a period of uncertainty until the picture is given its premiere and success or failure at the hands of public opinion.

Producer and Exhibitor Pay Heed

"This is a matter to which both the producer and exhibitor should give their urgent attention to the end that great good must redound to both sides of the business.

More esprit de corps is necessary; more association of ideas and suggestions. I should emphasize that the motion picture exhibitor must have some say as to the type of picture he desires to place before his patrons.

"So far the producer has had full sway in this all-important phase of the industry and now that the motion picture has passed the embryo stage and is prophesied as a permanent institution it is high time for exhibitors and producers to get together on this one moot question and thus settle its status for the future.

"This is no new point at issue. Months ago a very prominent eastern exhibitor introduced it during a casual conversation, saying in part:

"'To me it is beyond all understanding why you producers go on making pictures year in and year out without in the least consulting the wishes of us exhibitors. Some day the tide will turn and the exhibitors will reverse matters by telling the producers what they desire in the line of up-to-date films.'

"That day has about arrived, in my estimation. Our friends, the exhibitors, doubtless are endowed with sufficient mental acumen to know the wants of the people who patronize their theaters. We know from experience that one bad film among several good ones has about the same effect on the public as one bad egg among eleven good ones has on a housewife.

Epoch of Good Films

"This is an epoch of good films, or no films at all. Public opinion is unalterably fixed on this question, and it behooves the producer as well as the exhibitor to be well informed on the signs of the times.

"A few years back saw the reign of the cheap film with its poor construction and general drawbacks. It thrived because the film business was sailing along unpiloted; because the picture theater was more or less a novelty and not regularly patronized as it is today. Moreover, the public had not been educated to better pictures and was satisfied, at that time, with what was to be had.

"A great evolution has since taken place. Brains and competition have overruled the cheap film, substituting in its stead the more expensive film, together with its wonderful artistry of production and more universal scope as regards plot and motif.

"That the expensive film is a success beyond all question of doubt is proved by the tremendous patronage which has come to motion pictures within the past two years.

"We should be satisfied with this unprecedented advance of the industry from practical chaos into the foremost amusement institution of the world, but we are not. We wish to advance still further to the goal of greater accomplishment, but we cannot do this without the help of the exhibitor who is the speaking trumpet for the public.

"Therefore, I say, get in touch with the exhibitors, you producers. Listen to what they have to say on matters pertinent to the industry; sift it down and knead it into something of digestible interest to the world at large.

Value of Conventions

"Motion picture exhibitor conventions are all right in their place. I attended the Fifth Annual Convention held at San Francisco recently and was delighted because of the fact that I came before a lot of representative American exhibitors for the first time and made their acquaintance.

"But there should be more than these mere convention associations if we are to foment a more friendly spirit between both sides of the industry. As producers we should invite our clients to keep in closer touch with us; we should let them know that we are open to suggestion at all times and that criticism of a censorious nature will be received with the same spirit as that of the commendable type.

"Our main object is to furnish the exhibitor with the best films possible even at a much greater expense to us than heretofore. It is to our interest to do so, for although we are not charging the exhibitor beyond his needs for any certain film we are deriving a greater margin of profit by increased patronage—in fact, by producing really good pictures, at big expense, we are encouraging the world to patronize the motion picture theater, and this is the goal to which the producer should aspire if he is to remain a top notcher in the industry."

MANY LOS ANGELES THEATRES CHANGE HANDS

Los Angeles, August 1.

Los Angeles suburban theatre managers and others of small towns in this vicinity are now complaining more than ever regarding business conditions, and never before were there so many changes being made in the ownership or leases of theatres. The policy advocated—that of long runs—may be substituted by one daily change of ownership. One instance is reported where a theatre changed hands six times in two weeks. This is the maximum speed so far reported, but there are a number of instances in which houses have been bought and sold during an evening's performance.

Film exchangemen report they are now becoming expert in the juggling of bad checks, and there seems to be a very unusual amount of these now circulated by theatre men, all of which is attributed to the poor business of the theatres.

It is predicted that fully 20 per cent. of the small theatres in and about Los Angeles will close within the next month or two if conditions are not bettered. To a degree the poor business is attributed to the theatre patrons being on a vacation and spending their Sundays at the beaches and other resorts.

WESTERN LUBIN GOES TO CORONADO

The Western Lubin Company left Los Angeles last week for the new studio at Coronado, across the bay from San Diego. At this place Captain Melville has constructed a large studio where military pictures will be made in which soldiers and naval reserves stationed at San Diego will take part.

Those in the company are L. C. Shumway, Melvin Mayo, Jay Morley, George Rouph and Helen Eddie, and will be accompanied by L. J. La Mothe, scenario writer. Captain Melville will in all probability have charge of the direction.

"HUMAN CARGOES" WORTH SALVAGE FROM STORMY FILM SEA

"Human Cargoes," in production by Walter McNamara, for the Equitable Motion Picture Company, promises to be quite as strong and interesting as "Traffic in Souls" and "Ireland a Nation," the two former photo dramas written and produced by the author which attracted such widespread attention when they appeared.

Robert T. Haines, the distinguished actor, appears in the leading role of Bill Madden. Bess Sankey, a California girl, who is making her first appearance in eastern pictures after three years as a star in "The Traffic," does exceptional work in support of Mr. Haines, as does Isabelle McGregor, who played last season in "Our Wives" and "A Pair of Sixes."

World Votes Selznick Words of Praise in Report

Committee Expresses Confidence in Future of the Company Under His Guidance and Publishes Figures, $329,025.08, to Show Profits for the Year Through His Efforts

THE executive committee of the World Film Corporation, headed by Milton C. Work, of Philadelphia, and including George B. Cox, George A. Huhn, Jules E. Brulatour, Joseph L. Rhinock, Briton N. Busch, has given to Lewis J. Selznick, its vice-president and general manager, strong commendation for his services to the company. In its report the committee said, "With the assured continuance of the services of Lewis J. Selznick as its vice-president and general manager, the possibilities of the World Film Corporation are now most potential."

The letter in detail sent to the stockholders of the World Film is in part as follows:

"This covers the first year of the operations of the World Film Corporation and its producing companies, of which it owns all the capital stock. The figures show that the total profits were $329,025.08, practically all of which was earned during the second half of the year. It is obvious that it requires considerable time to place in running order an organization so complex; it is, therefore, most gratifying that all expenses were met during the first six months, and that each monthly report during the second half of the year improved upon its predecessor.

"The World has allowed the sum of $371,279.34 and the Peerless $80,264.65 for depreciation. The Peerless has not figured as of any value properties used in a completed picture which may be utilized in future plays, with great resultant saving in cost of production. The earnings of the World and the companies owned by it are now upon a basis of over $500,000 per year, and with the present line of business should steadily increase. The World will not, however, limit itself to the character of business carried on during its initial year. Contracts for foreign operations have been concluded, and the returns from this new field are just beginning to come in. These contracts are for pictures previously used in this country. From them the World, during its next fiscal year, will receive a minimum net profit of $200,000. As soon as business conditions abroad become normal this amount is sure to be greatly increased.

A number of other new features, including a weekly release of high-grade comedies and a weekly news service are about to be introduced."

The most important, however, of the recent extensions of the World is a contract concluded within the past few weeks with the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, a $3,000,000 company, recently formed, with the financial backing of Messrs. Ladenburg, Thalman and Company, of New York, and managed by some of the most able film men in the country.

For a period of ten years the Equitable will release through the World one feature and one comedy per week, the World to receive a handsome percentage of the gross receipts as compensation for the services of its distributing organization. This contract means that the World, without any risk on its part, and without appreciably increasing its overhead, has acquired a new department which is sure to add materially to its profits.

In accordance with the understanding reached at the time of the making of the contract, Lewis J. Selznick, general manager of the World has been made vice-president and advisory director of the Equitable.

This assures complete harmony between the two corporations.

Speaking Stars Make "Louder Noise" in Silent Drama

Not Long Ago They Were Inclined to Stand Off With Lofty Feeling Toward What Was Compassionately Designated the "Movies"—But, Shssh! It's Different Now

IT was only a short time ago as time is reckoned, since the stars of the stage spurned the advances of the motion picture manufacturers. Considering the "movies," as they contemptuously termed the film drama, a cheap and entirely ephemeral form of amusement they thought acting in them as beneath their dignity and preferred thirty week contracts at $200 to fifty-two weeks playing in pictures at larger figures.

Today what a difference! One by one, at first apologetically but now boldly to the sound of figurative trumpets, the great names of the stage have gone over to the silent drama.

Several things have contributed to this change in feeling upon the part of the pampered favorites of the stage. The first is that the photoplay art has become so elevated that it stands on equal footing with that of the stage.

Indeed an infinite variety of effects may be obtained before the camera which are impossible to the theatrical producer. The "vision," double exposure, actual outdoor scenery instead of painted canvas, the quick shifting from scene to scene, are some of them. With great authors writing the scenarios and great directors producing the pictures they have become a medium of amusement appealing to every one, high and low, so that the old time contempt of the stage star has of necessity died a natural death.

Secondly, the last two theatrical seasons in drama, musical comedy and vaudeville have been the reverse of brilliant. Failing to secure profitable engagements on the stage, Broadway favorites have not merely welcomed the picture producers with open arms, but of their own accord have sought engagements in pictures. A picture engagement is now coveted above all things—it means high salaries for the big names, no road work except short trips to new "locations" and a vaster audience than could ever be hoped for on the stage.

Here is a list of popular stage favorites recently secured by Pathé, which illustrates the trend:

Edwin Arden, Richard Carle, William Courtleigh, Jr., Clifton Crawford, Arnold Daly, Frederic de Belleville, Katherine Brown-Decker, William Elliott, Max Figman, Wm. Riley Hatch, Gail Kane, Sheldon Lewis, Lillian Lorraine, Fania Marinoff, Bruce McRae, Bliss Milford, Lotia Robertson, Jessie Ralph and Melville Stewart.

Just one of those famous names attached to a photoplay two years ago would have made a sensation and yet the house of Pathé calmly announces now that other big stars will be signed in the near future.

FREE PICTURES IN ST. LOUIS WILL NOT COMPETE WITH EXHIBITORS

The Theatre Managers' and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, of St. Louis, appointed a committee to confer with Mayor Kiel and Park Commissioner Cunliff in an effort to have the free motion pictures eliminated from the summer program of the park department.

Mr. Cunliff informed the committee that he could not eliminate the free pictures, as the board of aldermen had set aside money for them, and the contracts could not be broken. The committee, which was headed by J. William Deubach, manager of the Nebraska airdome, at Park and Nebraska avenues, obtained the promise of the park commissioner that the free motion picture exhibitions would be held only in the really congested sections of the city, where there are few motion picture theatres, and where the people are too poor to go to the theatres.

"COTTON KING" WITH JULIA HAY A NEAR RELEASE FOR WORLD

World Film will shortly release the William A. Brady photo-drama "The Cotton King," in which George Nash plays the lead, with, as his opposite, Julia Hay. As its name implies, the story treats of the cotton business in some of its aspects.

There is an attempted corner on the New York Stock Exchange; and then down South the burning of a cotton mill and many other incidents illustrate the romance and tragedy of the South's great industry.

A PERSONAL TALK TO EXHIBITORS

by

ADOLPH ZUKOR

At this time, when exhibitors are asked to consider the many extravagant claims of new feature producers, and when predictions are offered instead of productions, I would like to review with you the events of the past three years in the feature branch of the film industry, to see whether such an analysis of conditions cannot indicate to you the course to insure the prosperity and success of YOUR theatre.

When, three years ago, we created the policy of presenting the famous plays and celebrated stars of the legitimate stage on the screen, we dedicated our activities and energies to the principle of artistic achievement first, and commercial success second. To this precept we have adhered throughout the entire existence of our organization, establishing a standard of merit that was then unprecedented, and that today, in the belief of the trade, is still unsurpassed.

The wide adoption of the policy for which the Famous Players Film Co. was organized is sufficient evidence of the basic success of recognized stage favorites and dramatic successes on the screen. BUT--as is being daily proven, it requires more than a star or play to produce a meritorious feature subject. In order to remove every uncertainty from the maintenance of a consistent standard, we have for every moment since our entrance into the producing world, striven to perfect such an organization as to make lasting success a natural result.

Under the able producing management of Daniel Frohman and that genius of the screen, Edwin S. Porter, together with the dramatic mastery of Hugh Ford, and the efficient assistance of their directorial corps, we have created feature history and an uninterrupted standard that is today accepted throughout the world as the criterion of all feature merit.

Never resting content upon our past laurels, we have gathered the greatest constellation of stage and screen favorites ever assembled under one banner, including Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Hazel Dawn, Pauline Frederick, Marie Doro, and John Barrymore, players who by their charm, talents and power, have added prestige to the motion picture.

Today, when competition in the exhibiting branch of the industry is more severe than it has ever been, it is necessary not only for your success but for your continued existence to exert the greatest care in the selection of your feature program. There are many possible feature programs, but only one certain one--The Paramount Program.

After one year of Paramount Success, we are gratified that the principles of merit, service and co-operation to which that organization and its allied producers are pledged, have met with responsive appreciation from exhibitors throughout the country. Now, at the inception of the second Paramount Year, we are making diligent plans to surpass in every manner the value and distinction of last year's program.

We do not ask you to base your faith in our merit upon promises, but upon our achievements! Turn to the next page, look over the list of our past and future releases, and book the Paramount Program on the certainty of absolute merit, instead of mere predictions and possibilities.

presents for the first quarter of the second year a program absolutely without parallel.

Any exhibitor who is interested in his own future should compare what the Paramount offers with any other productions on the market—

Then, to learn how steadily Paramount Producers have advanced, compare the releases of the first quarter of our first year with the releases of the first quarter of our second year.

A year ago we took the first steps ever taken to establish a quality program and to develop high grade business. The trend of the whole industry since then has turned in our direction. The success of our methods is convincing proof of their rightness. We shall continue with these methods.

That our producers are now able to offer so magnificent a program for the coming quarter with no increase in price of service has been due to the loyal support of the exhibitor. With this continued support for the future we shall be in position to make our offerings even better from quarter to quarter—which means better business for the exhibitor.

Another point!—

Not only have we the greatest plays, the best productions and the world famous stars of the theatrical profession, but—

Paramount
Pictures are the cleanest—the pictures that appeal to the desirable class of patrons everywhere.

PARAMOUNT PROGRAM

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By George D. Proctor

THE Mutual Film Corporation is to no small extent the cynosure of all eyes these days. The Mutual is the most recent of the three concerns distributing a full program to be blessed or cursed with a multiplicity of rumors concerning its past, present and future standing. The recent change in officers and directorate at the last election naturally furnished a fitting peg on which to hang rumors.

So what John Cecil Graham, who signs himself J.C. Graham, has to say on the subject is illuminatingly important. It is well nigh superfluous to tell who J. C. Graham is. He has made the country from coast to coast for several years. He knows the best hotels in both Portlands, as well as in Detroit and New Orleans and intermediary stations. Organizations and exchanges are his specialties, as witness his time spent previously with the Mutual and with the Universal.

"J. C." is now with the Mutual, an exchange owning and operating corporation, as assistant to the president, John R. Freuler, and the most active executive next to Mr. Freuler himself. While Mr. Graham has not yet had time to commit to memory the names of every man in every office he has his finger on the pulse of the Mutual, and especially is familiar with the work of girding up the loins of the company against the future. Further Mr. Graham is a valuable man from whom to get information, as he is painfully truthful, even though the truth is not pleasant for him or the listener.

But right now the truth about the Mutual is painful to nobody.

"You may say that the Mutual has several big deals completed, signed, sealed and delivered by which it will be ready by the first of September to deliver a program second to none in the business, a carefully selected, well balanced mixed program containing everything from split reel cartoons and educationals up to four and five reel features," said Mr. Graham. "I don't want to tell our new contracts, because it is a little premature yet, but they really exist.

"I can say, though, that the number of comedies will be increased, among other things. Edwin Thanhouser will make two Falstaffs a week instead of one. The American Film Company will make an additional Beauty comedy weekly. David Horsley will furnish a comedy a week. The title will be "Cub Comedy—It's a Bear." These will feature George Ovey, whose work in MinA Films greatly increased the sales of that brand. The new Falstaffs will feature an English knockabout comedian, a real pantomime artist.

"Two and three reel features will be released to be known as Mutual Banner Features. The Mutual Masterpictures department will be continued to handle four and five reel features. New brands will be added, including Banner, Mustang and Rodeo. Old Mutual manufacturers, such as Mr. Hutchinson and Mr. Thanhouser, will have additional films to make and new companies will be taken in. Several startling changes will take place, and we are now fully prepared to let them come, for the Mutual now stands prepared to go ahead, no matter what happens when the present contracts expire late in August."

Without quoting Mr. Graham any further one or two other significant statements are in order. A formal announcement has been made that the pictures hitherto known as Knickerbocker Star Features, three reelers, will be seen on the Mutual program. The Knickerbocker folks do not confirm the statement. You can figure that out for yourself.

Whatever the case may be in that situation, it is safe to presume that at least one other established company will join the Mutual program.

The Horsley contract is a very fine one; its terms coming as near to guaranteeing good pictures as ink can come. One thing is certain. The Mutual will give Mr. Horsley an income big enough to enable him to make good pictures and still make a profit. This in itself, should please Mr. Horsley—also Chester Beecroft, his general manager, who was a mighty busy boy for the few weeks immediately proceeding the signing of the contract.

One moment please, to change the subject. Now that a week has arrived without any conspicuous announcement of new film companies, it is a good time to spring a glittering generality without anyone taking the foolish assumption that he is the target.

Why in the name of suffering humanity is it that all new companies issue a statement like this?

"We are going to make good pictures. Quality first will be our motto. No one before has ever conceived this idea, but we have at last determined to reform the whole industry and make good pictures regardless of expense.

"We are going to help the exhibitor. Our heart is so big that we simply want to help him because we are such good fellows. We are going to give him better paper, better heralds and better advertising helps than any other company has ever done.

"We will submit these questions right to the exchanges for an answer. If the exchanges don't like a picture we'll cut the producer off our list. If they don't like paper we'll order new. We are absolutely at the service of the exhibitor."

Oh, the many times the waste basket has yawned when this sort of stuff comes in.

Now that this policy is hereby decried. Far from it. It is the only possible policy. It is the best policy. But why does every budding concern feel itself a 1915 Christopher Columbus when it "discovers" long established facts?

Quien sabe?

Now that our own Selig tourists, with William A. Johnston among them, are back from the Pacific Coast, kind words are coming in about the writing persons out there who furnish the connecting link between the producing activities of California and the public prints—in other words, the press agents.

Press agentry can be raised to a fine art. The kind of man who sends out news stuff, who regards things with the eye of a reporter on assignment and who writes with the interest of the publication to whom the stuff is submitted as much at heart as if he were a reporter on that publication, is valuable both to the company which hires him and to the publications which get his stuff.

On this honor list the following names be enrolled:

Kenneth McGaffey, of the Jesse Lasky studios; Kenneth O'Hara, of the New York Motion Picture Corporation studios; M. F. Jonas, publicity manager of Universal City, and Ford Beebe of the same department; E. W. Heuston, who represents Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett; Kief, who is with "The Birth of a Nation," and last, but not least, Bennie Zeidman, the one time "Bennie from Lubinville," who is at the Reliance and Majestic studios.

Then there is the king of them all, our own J. C. Jessen.

The services these men render are really invaluable from a publicity standpoint. Time was when the West Coast publicity matter as disseminated in New York was only such material as could be gleaned by the New York men from looking over the pictures before release date and boosting the wonderful feats shown in such and such a picture which will be released on such and such a date.

But, with the entry of high class men on the Pacific Coast, real publicity matter, printable and readable, is now obtainable. For this relief many thanks.

The best little banqueter in the business, without pressing one's memory too hard, is the American Correspondent Film Company, which recently showed its "The Battle and Fall of Przemysl" (pronounce it to suit yourself) to the writing persons.

Then came the "eats" winding up with ice cream, cigars (three brands) grape juice, lemonade and, whisper it, champagne. It was Friday, too.

To round off the encomiums, let it be said that the picture is a very meritorious one.

Paul Gulick, who press agents it by and large for the Universal, was the host recently at an extended trip to New Rochelle, when he autoed a crowd over to see "gentlemanly Jack" Harvey, the director, pull off some stunts at Cedar Cliff Inn, rain or no rain. It rained.

At three o'clock, just before the sun rises, the party, en route for home, extended a helping hand to Julia Swayne Gordon, the Vitagraph "adventuress," who had been left a refugee owing to the horrible cruelty of New Haven time tables. She filled the remaining seat in the tonneau and made everybody happy.

Carl Anderson reports by post card from London where he is busy for Paramount.

A new Paramount producing company is Pallas Pictures, Inc. Dustin Farnum and Maclyn Arbuckle will be two of the first players presented.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

Percy L. Smith, one of the most progressive exhibitors in Montgomery, Ala., owner of the new Empire, was in town for a few days.

J. E. Golden, of the Overland Feature Company, came down from Albany to buy features.

CHANGES OF THE WEEK

J. Searle Dawley, who left Famous Players to organize Dyreda, is back with Famous Players. He will first direct Marguerite Clark in "Helene of the North."

Allen Farnham is now the Lubin art director, the technical man.

Lubin will produce a five reel war play by Louis Reeves Harrison.

Ray Smallwood will direct Ethel Grandin (Mrs. Smallwood) in the coming George Kleine pictures.

Edgar Davenport will play a lead in "The Salamander" for B. S. Moss.

Leon Bamberger, exchange manager, leaves the Washington World Film office, to join V-L-S-E.

Little Mary Anderson, Vitagraph player, has left for California to take the place of Margaret Gibson, playing leads with the West Coast company.

PRESIDENTIAL TIMBER VISITS SELIG ZOO

William Hale Thompson, Mayor of Chicago, Ill., and possible candidate for President in the next campaign, recently made a trip to the West Coast. On his way he enjoyed a visit with Tom Mix, the intrepid cowboy-actor of the Selig Polyscope Company, at Las Vegas, New Mexico, and visited the famous Selig jungle-zoo at Los Angeles, Cal.

Young Wife Role for Miss McCoy in "June Friday"

Edison Star Featured in Favorite Part in Play Written for Her by Lee Arthur, Dramatist Who Produced Many Other Successful Vehicles for Actress

IN "June Friday," one of the best feature plays which the dramatist, Lee Arthur, has been writing for Edison, exclusively, Gertrude McCoy finds herself again in a role particularly suited to her talents—the young wife. But before she arrives at that phase of the character she is required to play something of a novelty—and a trying one—that of mother to herself, in the opening of the drama.

Perhaps not in some time has Miss McCoy been enabled to display her range so well as in "June Friday." For, at the outset, peaked and careworn, the wife of a drug fiend, she looks every bit of that pitiful character.

Yet in but a few minutes, on the screen, she appears as the care-free innocent country girl, buoyant with the lively spirits of seventeen.

In the domestic drama, Miss McCoy has scored some of her best successes, notably in the picturization of Mrs. Fiske's great stage play, "In Spite of All," where she was also cast for the wife and gave a spirited interpretation.

Miss McCoy has played in several of Lee Arthur's dramas, especially written for her. "Greater Than Art" was one of such, while Miss McCoy's own play, "Through Turbulent Waters," afforded her splendid material for emotional visualization of an unusual nature.

Few actresses of the screen work with such untiring earnestness as does Miss McCoy. Time and again, at the studio, she will so wear herself out that frequent rests become necessary. And, despite her frail strength, nothing can daunt her in necessary feats of life risking or acts calling for pure grit. For instance, while in "June Friday" she lay on the beach, cast up as dead, in the excitement of the villagers coming upon the suicide, one of the men stepped on her arm and stood on it all during the scene, inflicting a painful bruise.

Yet, watch the picture ever so closely, one cannot detect the faintest movement on the part of Miss McCoy, who will do anything, bear anything, rather than injure a scene "taking."

Actress Toys with Surly Lioness for Selig Thrills

Kathlyn Williams Enters Den of Wild Beasts for Animal Sub-Plot to Appealing Love Story in "Strange Case of Talmai Lind," a Diamond Special Three-Reeler

"THE Clause in the Constitution," a Selig Diamond Special in three reels, will be released in regular service on Thursday, August 19. This unusual production upholds the Selig Diamond Special standard by a strong story, an all-star cast of players, beautiful photography and a succession of gripping climaxes.

On Thursday, August 26, "The Strange Case of Talmai Lind," a Selig Diamond Special in three reels will be released in regular service. This Selig Diamond Special is particularly noteworthy for the reason that Kathlyn Williams, one of the world's most popular motion picture actresses not only stars in this production but was the author of the plot.

Exhibitors and their patrons will be delighted to welcome Miss Williams back to a jungle-zoo wild animal pictureplay. In "The Strange Case of Talmai Lind," Miss Williams again toys with the wild beasts of the jungle in her own fearless way. She enters the den of an African lioness at the risk of her life in order to provide thrills for the audiences. There is an appealing love story running through this most unusual plot which also possesses that unusual ending so much to be desired. Miss Williams is supported by a carefully selected company of players. "The Strange Case of Talmai Lind," is certain to be popular for both the plot and the action is strictly out of the ordinary.

TWO FALSTAFFS A WEEK AFTER AUGUST 16

Beginning with Monday, August 16, and every Monday thereafter, Falstaff comedies will be released at the rate of two single reelers weekly instead of one, as heretofore. This announcement means much at this time, when comedy is concededly the most difficult branch of production.

When Mr. Thanhouser launched the Falstaff comedy brand it was with a very definite policy in view. This was to build a consistent reliable product of the kind of comedy that will not wear out. That he has succeeded in this is proven when the market demands the doubling of the output.

JOHN LEHNBERG INJURED IN CHIMNEY-TOP SCENE

The Standard Oil Company has a supply station right behind the Thanhouser studio. From it towers a two hundred-foot chimney flue, and a few weeks ago some bricks fell from the crater of it, leaving a hole and necessitating repairs by an expert. A man was brought from Chicago, and when he had made fast his scaffolding on the dizzy height, Harris Gordon and John Lehnberg climbed up to do a scene for a Thanhouser release, "The Revenge of the Steeple-Jack."

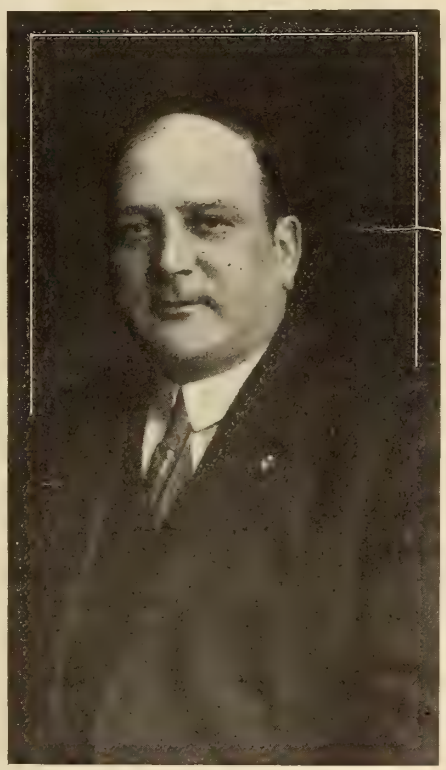
In the course of the action there is a scuffle and to the horror of Director Sullivan and Mignon Anderson, waiting below, Lehnberg was seen to trip and fall. Gordon was paralyzed with fright and reached for him desperately, but it was unnecessary, for the falling man's foot caught on a plank and only his great strength in using it for leverage enabled him to pull himself back to safety. He sustained severely wrenched ligaments.

It is this story, by Lloyd Lonergan, which was featured for a week in serial illustrations in the New York "Evening World."

SUIT OVER LOCAL FILM IN OHIO ENDS IN AUCTION

A film entitled "The Princess Visits Ashtabula" will be sold at auction on September 2 at Ashtabula, Ohio, a city close to Cleveland. The picture was taken by Gulett & Harris. J. R. Freeman, manager of the Lyric Theatre, Ashtabula, is suing Gulett & Harris, alleging that he paid them $100 for the exclusive exhibition of the film in the north end of Ashtabula, but that they did not keep their promise. Freeman attached the film, which is valued at $25.

"SLAVEY STUDENT," EDISON, SHOWS PRETTY BOARDING SCHOOL GIRLS



"The Slavey Student," a forthcoming Edison feature, by Lee Arthur, in which Viola Dana is starred in the title role, might just as well have been called "The Slavey Actress," if the labors involved in its production are considered.

Miss Dana and the company were worked all night last Thursday and again all night Monday night to gain stage facilities. The all night work was considered necessary by Director John H. Collins in order to get the floor of the entire Edison studio, without interrupting the production of other Edison plays.

In one set a large dormitory, filled with girls in night-time attire and battling with pillows, gives the play a "follies" touch, especially as particular care was taken to have it a boarding school of exceptionally pretty girls. Other large sets were the ballroom scene and "breakneck" basketball games in a gymnasium with two girl teams.

SPERO, FORMER PRESIDENT OF CROWN CITY, IS WITH THE NEW KRITERION

A prime mover in the formation of the new Kriterion sales corporation which succeeds and owns all the assets of the Kriterion Film Corporation, is Morris E. Spero.

MORRIS E. SPERO

Mr. Spero was formerly president and general manager of the Crown City Film Manufacturing Company, of Pasadena, Cal., which made the Paragon dramas and Thistle comedies for the former Kriterion program.

Immediately the latter got into troublous waters Mr. Spero came on to New York and has stuck to the ship ever since. He has fought hard for reorganization, and is optimistic over the new Kriterion sales corporation with Messrs. Newman and Sonneborn at its head.

Mr. Spero returns this week to California where he will produce a number of regular weekly releases for the new Kriterion program. Also he will be glad to see his family, including a baby son who was five weeks old when he left for New York and who is now five months older.

HORSLEY ARRIVES IN LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, Aug. 1.

David Horsley arrived in Los Angeles Saturday from the east and found preparations already begun for the establishment of additional producing companies that will make pictures for Mutual release, according to a recent contract made by Mr. Horsley while in the east.

One of the first to be taken up will be "Beauty and the Beasts." An attractive leading woman will be secured to appear as the beauty, and the six black maned African lions of the Bostock collection now owned by Mr. Horsley will appear in the scenes. The animals are now being especially trained for this production.

Following advertisements placed in Los Angeles papers for actors, actresses, directors, cameramen and technical workers, there has been a line in front of the employment office for the past several mornings. No people are being engaged at this time, but applications are being received and filed for future reference.

Ernest Shipman, known throughout the film circles of the United States and Mexico, now affiliated with the David Horsley organization in Los Angeles, sends the NEWS' west coast office a story of a certain scenario writer (dare you to guess the name) swimming five miles each day. We pass this story along and guarantee to be able to show any skeptic the lake the scenario writer referred to swam in.

VITAGRAPH GETS RIGHTS TO ROBERTSON'S "MASTERS OF MEN"

The Vitagraph company has secured for immediate production in pictures, an original story by Robert Edgren entitled "Black Caesar," and the late Morgan Robertson's wonderfully virile book story, "Masters of Men."

Both stories are masterpieces of fiction and crowded with the thrilling action that is the life of a photodramatic msaterpiece. Carefully selected casts, picked from the flower of the Vitagraph stock company, will enact the principal roles in each of the features, which are destined to be representative Vitagraph features.

A BEAUTIFUL SCENE FROM PATHE'S LATEST FEATURE, "THE RIGHTED WRONG"

PATHE EMPLOYEE RECEIVES WAR MEDAL IN FRANCE

Maurice Astier, a young Frenchman employed as electrician at the Bound Brook factory of Pathé Frères, who was summoned to fight for France when the war broke out, has been promoted to the rank of sergeant, and awarded a medal for valor under trying conditions. The news has just been received by his sister, also employed in the Pathé factory.

Young Astier is in the telegraph corps and successfully repaired a broken line while under a fearful fire of shrapnel from the Germans, not far away. The general in command of the division mentioned his name in general orders and pinned the medal on the young hero's breast with his own hands.

Blackton Lashes Autocratic "Legitimate" Managers

Commodore Issues Statement Excoriating Men Guilty of Insufferable Presumption in Attempting to Prevent Their Stars From Appearing in Film Drama

IN a formal announcement made by Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph company, the exact position that the moving picture companies have taken in the controversy between the theatrical managers and the moving picture men is outlined.

"The position which theatrical managers have taken, it seems to me, is untenable," said Commodore Blackton. "In speaking for this company the largest in the motion picture field, I desire to say that it has never been our object to secure any of the so-called stars of the theatrical firmament.

"Our policy has been to develop our own stars, as, for instance, in the case of Anita Stewart, Lillian Walker, Earle Williams, Edith Storey, Antonio Moreno and numerous others. These stars are known to the entire population of this country, whereas those stars of the theatrical firmament are known to comparatively few—only those who can afford to pay two dollars to see a production.

"How many people in towns of 25,000, 50,000, 75,000 or even 100,000 are familiar with the so-called Broadway stars? Yet every one of them could identify on the street any of the moving picture players. They know them, they are in intimate touch with them, they know their characteristics, their likes, their dislikes—there is very little that escapes them.

"Incidentally part of the motion picture public is recruited from those who one day in the month are able to pay the two dollars to see a theatrical production.

"The stand taken by some of the theatrical managers that they will not maintain their contracts with stars who appear in moving pictures will not affect the progress of the one form of amusement that has so far outstripped the others that this last cry is merely a dying gasp on the part of the managers who maintain a position that for years has been a burden and has been more of a restraint than it has been a help. I do not like to charge the theatrical managers with bad faith, but I do say that in order to restrain the stars from appearing in the moving pictures, they are not only standing in their own way, but are attempting to deprive the public of what legitimately is theirs. That they were in the wrong is clearly seen by the fact that we, today, are able to secure the highest possible price for our efforts, whereas they are having considerable difficulty in disposing of their tickets at cut prices.

"Those stars who care to enter the moving picture field will readily find an opening that will so enhance their popularity that where today they are known to perhaps, and this is a broad estimate, ten million people of our hundred million population, six months from now in moving pictures they will be known to a daily audience of fifteen million people.

"Such stars as Robert Edeson, Charles Richman and Frank Daniels, known for years to Broadway audiences, are today far more widely known to motion picture audiences."

Raver Is Hot on the Trail of "Cabiria" Pirates

"Dupers," with Offices in New York City, Operate in Latin-America and Agent for Itala in This Country, Places Matter in Hands of Detectives

"DUPERS" of "Cabiria" are to be run down and punished, is the advice from Harry Raver's office of the Itala Film Company.

Rumors of duping have reached Mr. Raver's ears from several sources, and while no infringements have been perpetrated some damage has been done in several unsold countries on account of rights being offered without authority at ridiculously low figures by so-called film exporters, having offices in New York.

One instance of this damage was an attempt by a well-known pirate having a small office in the Fortieth street section to sell the rights for "Cabiria" in Brazil. As is usual in the Latin-American, there are but one or two buyers in each country, and these men are careful to determine whether or not the firm offering an important film is authorized to do so. A buyer in Brazil, who has been an Itala customer for years, received a quotation from the New York "exporter," which was about half the price fixed by the Itala office, and he became suspicious. A cable to Torino brought the advice that Harry R. Raver was in charge of the American Itala Company, and the only New York agent.

Torino cabled Mr. Raver to investigate the attempted piracy, and the latter immediately placed the matter in the hands of a competent detective agency, which is diligently at work on the case.

When interviewed on the matter, Mr. Raver indicated little alarm, and said he had taken the steps suggested only to satisfy his Torino people, as he did not believe any intelligent person would be foolish enough to invest his money in an unauthorized film, particularly when but a few straggling territories remained open, and these surrounded by old and trusted agents of the company, fully armed with authority and unlimited capital to prosecute infringers. Nor did he think even a most reckless pirate would take the long chance necessary to effect a sale in view of the certain prosecution to follow.

California League Re-Elects Officers, Except One

West Coast Branch Selects Los Angeles for Its Convention City Next Year—Will Be First State Exposition—Ball on Large Scale Planned

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

San Francisco, Aug. 1.

THE annual convention of the California State Exhibitors' League was held in connection with the national convention when officers for the ensuing year were elected and Los Angeles was selected as the meeting place for the organization in September, 1916.

At this meeting all present officers of the state organization with the exception of W. H. Hilts, national vice-president, of San Diego, were present, including H. L. Beach, Berkeley, president; A. P. Tugwell, Los Angeles, vice-president; R. L. Marks, San Francisco, secretary; C. L. Merhten, Oakland, treasurer, and H. C. Schmidt, Palo Alto, chosen as sergeant-at-arms.

The election resulted as follows: A. P. Tugwell, president; H. C. Schmidt, vice-president; C. L. Merhten, treasurer; A. Goldberg, San Francisco, sergeant-at-arms. The convention decided that the secretary should reside in the same city as the president and gave to the newly elected officer the power to select the secretary, and Mr. Tugwell named M. Lustig.

At this meeting plans were made for a ball and first state exposition to be held in connection with the convention. This suggestion was made by W. A. Cory, interested in several theatres with his brother, M. E. Cory, and who is now associated with the San Francisco-California Film Exchange, distributing Universal subjects. As outlined at the meeting, it will be the aim of the organization to interest all manufacturers in this convention, and by giving a ball will no doubt be successful in raising a goodly sum for the treasury of the organization.

FLANNERY IS NOW IN V-L-S-E PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT

P. J. Flannery, until recently with the New York "Review," is now connected with the publicity department of the Big Four.

Mr. Flannery was with the "Review" for the past five years, and previous to that was connected with the Brooklyn "Daily Eagle." While with the "Review" he conducted its motion picture section.

LINCOLN PLAY BY CHAPIN POPULAR IN BOSTON

Boston, August 3.

Announcement that Benjamin Chapin was to appear in his cycle of Lincoln plays has been received with enthusiasm in Boston. The Lincoln impersonator has always been a favorite in the Hub, and it is a foregone conclusion that the Lincoln films will go strong in that city.

In regard to them the dramatic critic of one of the Boston dailies said:

"The field of biography has thus far been only browsed in by the film folks. This Chapin announcement appears to herald many fine picture excursions into the lives of great men, excursions which cannot but prove of marked educational benefit."

The writer recalls approaching Gen. O. O. Howard, at that time one of the few surviving Civil war generals, at the close of a Lincoln lecture in Burlington, Vt. It was the writer's intention to get the general's personal opinion of Chapin's work, given direct by this man who had known the real Lincoln. But General Howard coulld not answer the question; his eyes were filled with tears.

WALLING FEATURED IN "ON THE 5:15"

Roy Walling, who made many friends in Detroit during a stock engagement that covered a period of two years at the Avenue theatre, is featured in a screen version of "On the 5.15"—that Jerome H. Remick song story of a commuter's troubles. The film, which runs about 12 minutes, was made by the Artone Film Company.

The writer of the scenario has followed the story closely and has told it well. All of the latent comedy situations are brought out forcefully. Will H. Gregory, who is producing manager of the Artone Film Company, was identified with the Frohman and Belasco forces for a number of years.

The Artone Film Company is a new enterprise in Detroit. They have erected a commodious out-door studio and have an excellent office and studio organization. The officers of the company are as follows: President, Willard H. Goodfellow, Detroit; vice-president, Louis R. Jennings, New York; second vice-president, August Froebel, St. Louis; treasurer, William C. Canfield; secretary, Francis Reno, Detroit.

Federal Directors Seek Locations in Adirondacks

WILL REX and Al Day, two of the directors of the Federal Film Company, left this week for a tour of the New England States and the Adirondack Mountains. Their purpose is to seek locations for forthcoming films, as the Federal Company will spare no expense in getting correct surroundings for their pictures. Mr. Rex, who is producing all the dramas for this concern, has in mind several scenarios requiring mountain scenery and rural types, and on this trip will make all arrangements. Mr. Ray is contemplating the filming of several rural comedies, and should he find the locations necessary he will bring his company of comedians from New York for an indefinite stay. For the past two months these directors have been working day and night, and have on hand several completed films which will be released on the Associated Program beginning August 16.

The first comedy release will be "Love & Installments," featuring Al Ray and Ned Kennedy. The title of the premier dramatic offering has not as yet been decided, but the second will be "When Death Intervened," which Director Rex and company filmed in Colorado. In this picture appear Will Rex, who plays the heavy lead, and Margaret Harmon, a stage favorite, who, it is predicted, will create a sensation in the silent drama.

Rex, who is but twenty-two, has the distinction of being the youngest dramatic director in the world. Besides producing he also writes practically all his own scripts, and plays heavy lead in a majority of them. His character make-ups are a revelation. The Federal Company seems to place its faith in young men, for besides Rex, Al Ray, the comedy director, is but twenty. A brilliant future is planned for these two youths. The trip which they are taking is being made by motorcycle, each being the possessor of specially built Indian machines, which are said to compare favorably with the fastest machines in the country.

CALIFORNIA MANAGER APPEALS FROM "HYPOCRITES" DECISION

Manager C. H. Keipp, of the Berry Grand Theatre, Whittier, Cal., whose license was recently revoked by the city trustees because of showing "Hypocrites" against the recommendation of the village censors, has appealed the case to the Superior Court of Los Angeles, where Judge Shank of Department Six issued a temporary injunction restraining the trustees from enforcing their ruling until a filing of the case was announced.

In the hearing before the Superior Court the trustees of Whittier and members of the censor board were severely criticised by Judge Shank because of the ordinance passed with regard to censoring motion pictures. This provided that there should be no fighting or love making in films, together with numerous other restrictions, and the court spoke of it as a "child-like composition."

McDONALD FILM ORGANIZES FOR $50,000 AND BEGINS PRODUCTION

The Barry McDonald Film Company, recently incorporated in the State of New York with a capital of $50,000, is one of the latest concerns added to the list of producers. The offices of the company are located at 105 West Fortieth street, New York City. The officers of the organization are: R. B. Vanderhoop, president; Anna F. McDonald, of Greenwich, Conn., vice-president, and Arthur McCurten, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Work has already commenced on the production of a feature which is said to represent an investment of $15,000.

KATHLYN WILLIAMS ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED IN HAWAII ISLANDS

"The Kathlyn Williams Association," recently formed by the soldier boys of Schofield Barracks, Oahu, H. T., in honor of their favorite motion picture actress, has grown in membership to 849. The clubhouse occupied by "The Kathlyn Williams Association" was built entirely by Uncle Sam's soldiers. In the clubhouse proper only pictures of the Selig star actress are permitted, according to official statement.

Miss Williams, recognizing the honor that has been accorded her, recently forwarded a number of autographed photographs to Schofield Barracks. A letter has been received stating that these photographs have been framed and now the "boys in blue" are requesting Miss Williams to write them a short letter which will also be framed and hung in the clubrooms of "The Kathlyn Williams Association."

Charming Kathlyn Williams, it is expected, will graciously accede to this latest request. The picture herewith presented shows the president and vice-president of "The Kathlyn Williams Association" together with the honorary members.

WIZARD MAGIC CHANGES OLD HALL INTO NEW STUDIO

The Wizard Film Corporation began work this week at its new studios, Fifty-second street and Eighth avenue, New York City. The company has leased a large assembly hall, which has been renovated into a perfectly equipped studio. The floor space is large enough to hold eight sets at once, and a large covered tank has been built into the floor. The walls are forty-five feet high, with a gallery running around them. This will make it possible to have the dressing rooms above the floor giving more space for work.

The two Wizard companies of comedians, one which features "Bobbie" Burns and "Walt" Stull in the "Pokes and Jabbs" series, and the one directed by Jerold Hevener, featuring well-known comedy stars, are working at the new studio, and also in the country around Yonkers, leaving the Speedway Inn on Dyckman street, where they have headquarters, on the mornings when they take exteriors.

Burns and Stull, "Pokes and Jabbs," will start a second pretty bathing girl picture in the near future. "Mashers and Splashers." Their first comedy, featuring diving girls, was a great success, and has been showing at the Palace theatre.

NIELSEN SOON READY TO MAKE "OLD GLORY" ANNOUNCEMENT

Important developments in the releasing of "Old Glory," the five-reel patriotic picture of F. O. Nielson, 611 Schiller Building, Chicago, are soon to be disclosed by the company controlling the subject.

F. O. Nielsen's announcement will be of interest to all exhibitors on the lookout for a picture appealing at this time to the patriotic sympathies of the public.

The company has prepared striking and handsome four-color posters, three and six sheets, distinctive heralds, and attractive photographs for lobby display.

WORLD FILM MAKES "THE CODE OF THE MOUNTAINS"

World Film Corporation will shortly present Mollie King in a photoplay entitled, "The Code of the Mountains." This is a story of Kentucky life by Charles Neville Buck, the well known dramatist of those parts whose books and plays have won him a considerable reputation.

The photoplay will be directed by J. H. Thornby, an experienced motion picture producer, who in his selection of locations in Kentucky, will be personally assisted by the author, Charles Neville Buck.

TRADE SHOWING OF "WOMAN NEXT DOOR" ON AUGUST 17

Following his usual custom of giving exhibitors a chance to witness initial reviews of his productions George Kleine will project his latest feature "The Woman Next Door" with Irene Fenwick, at the Candler theatre, Tuesday morning, August 17. The performance will commence at 10:30 sharp. Exhibitors and their friends are invited.

"The Woman Next Door" is scheduled for release through the Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service September 1.

WELL-KNOWN BOOKS AND PLAYS IN 3-REEL LENGTH FOR BIOGRAPH

As a basis for the stories of their reel productions, released in the regular service every other Wednesday, the Biograph Company is pinning its faith to adaptations of famous books and plays.

There are two reasons for this plan. The first is the abundance of photoplay material to be found in the best works of famous authors and stage successes; the second reason is to offer the exhibitors an opportunity to profit by all the previous advertising of the books and plays.

Contrary to the general practice of extending such adaptations to five reels, these producers are cutting the productions to three reels for continuity of action.

Two three-reel Biographs released to date are "Under Two Flags," Ouida's celebrated novel; and "Jane Eyre," the greatest story of Charlotte Bronté.

"East Lynne," an adaptation of the stage success, will be released on August 18. "Dora," Lord Tennyson's immortal poem as dramatized by Charles Reade, follows on September first. "The Soul of Pierre," by Georges Ohnet is in preparation.

TERRISS PRODUCING FOR PLAYHOUSE; CAREFUL OF DETAIL

Tom Terriss, as a producer of moving picture plays in which he plays the principal roles, bids fair to equal his great success on the speaking stage as a portrayer of roles from Dickens' novels. For the Shuberts he produced Dickens' "Chimes" and "The Mystery of Edwin Drood." The latter play has been prononced as of equal rank with Dante's "Inferno" and "Quo Vadis' in its comprehensiveness and accuracy of detail and in its delicacy of interpretation.

Mr. Terriss is now producing and appearing in photoplays in his own company. The Terriss Film Corporation, with studios at Yonkers, N. Y. The plays are released through the exchange offices known as The Picture Playhouse Film Corporation.

CUNNINGHAM JOINS BERNSTEIN AT EQUITABLE

James B. Cunningham, associated with the motion picture industry for years, and recently connected with Frank Crane at the Peerless studio, has been engaged by the Equitable as first assistant director to Isadore Bernstein, the general director of the company.

Mr. Cunningham worked with Mr. Bernstein in the last picture the general director made before he left for California several years ago. He played the lead in "The Vagabond," which Mr. Bernstein directed. It is an interesting coincidence that Mr. Cunningham should be assisting Mr. Bernstein in making the first picture for the Equitable, since his return from the west. "Life's Crucible" is its name.

Mr. Cunningham started as a newspaper man in Lexington, Kentucky. He was interested in the stage and left daily work to become a property man. He went through the varying stages to leading man. He was Pathé's leading man for a time, and was with the Republic Company. For the last seven years he has been in and out of pictures, and has done a great deal of scenario writing.

AMERICA'S MILLIONAIRE THEATRE IS THE MAJESTIC

Featured on the front page of the August 7 issue of the "Big Four Family," the private house organ published by the V-L-S-E for the exclusive use of the Big Four employees, is an article on the Majestic theatre in Detroit, Mich., owned and controlled by about fifty men who represent over sixty millions of dollars. These men set forth their aims and intentions as regards this theatre, in a four-page pamphlet recently distributed to their patrons. They point out, that the object of the theatre is to present to the people of Detroit the cleanest and best picture plays; those a whole family can see and enjoy. No expense will be spared they say to make the Majestic theatre the leading feature show house not only of Detroit but of the entire country.

The fact that V-L-S-E features are the only ones showing at the Majestic, and that every production is exhibited for a solid week, is a monumental testimonial to the keen judgment and producing skill of the Big Four.

7,000 CROWD SAVIN ROCK THEATRE TO SEE EARLE WILLIAMS

When hundreds of merry-makers on Independence Day saw Sarle Williams, the lead in the Vitagraph serial, "The Goddess," march into the Orpheum theatre, Savin Rock, West Haven, Conn., grip in hand, they made haste to read the banners outside announcing that the star was to appear in person, and then crowded into the mammoth playhouse.

They filled all of the thirteen hundred seats and occupying standing room to the very outer door.

It is estimated that during the afternoon and evening, at four performances, between 6,500 and 7,000 people saw and heard Mr. Williams.

S. A. DeWaltoff, manager of the theatre, made himself popular last week by throwing open the Strand, another Savin Rock house under his control, to a thousand newsboys who were the guests of the local dailies at a monster picnic.

HODUPP REPORTS LARGE PATHE BOOKINGS IN CHICAGO

V. H. Hodupp, who left Rochester, N. Y., June 1, to assume the management of the Pathé Chicago exchange, reports a remarkable increase in business for Pathé pictures.

The office on the sixth floor of the Maller's building is working night and day to keep abreast of the steadily increasing bookings.

"IVORY SNUFF BOX" IS WORLD DETECTIVE FILM

The World Film production, "The Ivory Snuff Box," is a thrilling detective story, in contrast to the usual features that are produced under Maurice Tourneur's direction. Holbrook Blinn is the star, and will be seen as a detective who has to do special secret service work for one of the foreign gentlemen.

ANOTHER PLAY OF EPIC SWEEP FROM GRIFFITH

D. W. Griffith, the master producer, has just decided upon his next multiple reel feature to follow "The Birth of a Nation." Its title is to be "The Mother and the Law." He is now at the Griffith headquarters, the Reliance-Majestic studios in Hollywood, Los Angeles, California. He is in the midst of preparations for the filming of "The Mother and the Law."

The plot and the theme other than as indicated in the title have not been announced but will be made known later. Mr. Griffith has, however, selected his cast. Prominent among the Griffith players who are to appear before the camera in "The Mother and the Law" are Mae Marsh, the Griffith actress who will be remembered as Florence Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation;" Robert Harron, who has appeared in the Griffith features, "The Battle of the Sexes," "Judith of Bethula," "The Escape," "The Avenged Conscience" and "Home Sweet Home;" Miriam Cooper, who has a prominent role in "The Birth of a Nation," and Mary Alden, remembered for the performance of the mulatto in "The Birth of a Nation" and as the mother in "The Battle of the Sexes."

MURPHY'S EXPERIENCE WITH AUTOS

Fred B. Murphy once in a while plays in bad luck. Fortune always smiles on his work for the United Film service exchange in Boston, but when he goes into the automobile field that's something else again, as Mawruss would say, and Fred has just bought an American car; now he's under the weather. He gets around to his office in the morning, but the afternoon sees him resting at home.

"WHEN LOVE IS MOCKED"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

FROM every standpoint this three reel Diamond Special deserves a high place among meritorious features. A story of the French novel type supplies an excellent plot which is not only intensely interesting and well developed, but also entirely plausible.

Foreign atmosphere is injected into all the scenes, particularly those laid in the little fishing village on the coast of France. The scenery is beautiful and very well photographed and the settings, such as the interior of the fisherman's cottage and the dance on the village green, show close attention to detail.

Eugene Pallette in the role of the young Adonis of the fishing village and Anna Luther as La Glou, the beautiful but morally unscrupulous Parisian wife, most ably interpret the leading roles. But praise also belongs to the rest of the cast, particularly Lillian Hayward as the fisherman's mother, and Lotta Grimes as Yvonne, the fisherman's sweetheart.

Piqued at her husband because of his refusal to buy an expensive bracelet, La Glou runs away to the seashore where she meets a fisherman who is happily bethrothed to Yvonne, a charming but simple girl whom he has known and loved since their childhood.

La Glou attracted by the young fisherman's splendid physique, deliberately sets out to ensnare him with her charms. He becomes hopelessly infatuated with her and entirely forgetting his little sweetheart, stays with her at her villa for several days.

Later when her husband arrives, seeking forgiveness, she scornfully throws over the sailor lad. In desperation he jumps off a high cliff. Nearly dead, he is found by his mother, who with Yvonne nurses him back to life. Some time after La Glou in the city remembers her fisherman and decides to return to him. She is met at the door of the cabin by the old mother, who offers to row her to the island where she tells La Glou her son is.

The mother, fearing that her son may again be ensnared by this woman's charms, batters a hole in the bottom of the boat, and as that sinks beneath the waves after a struggle, she exclaims: "You took him from me once, but you shall never have him again."

LARGE BOOKINGS FOR "THE PRINCESS OF INDIA"

ARTHUR LANGAN, president and managing director, Sun Photoplay, Inc., Candler Building Annex, New York City, reports satisfactory reception of the latest feature of the company, "The Princess of India," by the exchangemen.

The picture is full of action and the photography has called forth encomiums for its clearness. The president of the company expects large booking in the near future.

LUBIN PLAY ON WAR SITUATION IS PLANNED

LOUIS REEVES HARRISON has written an as yet unnamed five-reel masterplay, which Lubin will produce at once as a special feature. The play deals in a big way with the present war situation and is pregnant with things vital to today.

"THE EXILE OF BAR-K RANCH"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THE narrow hypocrisy of a small Western community is contrasted in this picture with the generous sacrifice made by a cowboy to right a wrong committed by his murdered friend.

The film opens with a realistic and well enacted bar-room brawl in which Burt saves Dave from a drunken Mexican known as Tex, thereby incurring the deadly enmity of Tex.

Burt is in love with the pretty daughter of Bar-K ranch. He learns that their marriage must be hastened to save his sweetheart's honor, but as he is returning with the marriage license, the revengeful Tex shoots him in the back. Before he dies he scribbles a note on the marriage license asking Dave to make good with Millie, the girl whom he (Burt) has wronged.

Millie's secret, however, is discovered before Dave receives the note and she is turned adrift from her father's home. Later Dave runs across the disgraced mother and her baby and defends them from the scorn of his neighbors.

When he discovers that the mother is Millie, the girl referred to in his friend's dying request, he sacrifices his own sweetheart in order to marry her.

An excellent cast including Vivian Rich, Roy Stewart, Jack Richardson, Louise Lester, Charles Newton, Walter Spencer and Jimsy Maye enact this drama.

O'CONNOR, WITH LITTLE HAIR, CAST FOR BALD-HEADED WALLINGFORD IN PATHE RELEASE

EDWARD O'CONNOR, the comedian who is well known in farce, extravaganza, comic opera and vaudeville, has been engaged for the Pathé series, "The New Adventures of Wallingford," now being made by the Whartons at Ithaca, N. Y. Mr. O'Connor will play "Onion Jones," one of the leading characters in the story.

While Mr. O'Connor is somewhat bald, the character calls for total absence of hair. In consequence the Ithaca barbers are getting rich from the almost daily hair cuts the comedian is compelled to have and his little remaining hair shows signs of getting discouraged and giving up in disgust the fight to grow.

WISCONSIN FILM INCORPORATED AT $10,000

THE Wisconsin Film Corporation, with a capital of $10,000, has just been organized in Milwaukee for the purpose of exhibiting "The Birth of a Nation" in Wisconsin. It has purchased the state rights in this great photoplay from the Epoch Producing Company, of New York.

The officers are R. E. Aitken, president; H. A. Sherman, vice-president and general manager, and W. S. Griswold, secretary and treasurer and attorney.

The offices of the company are with Mr. Griswold at 1409 Majestic Building. Bookings are being made for exhibitions of the picture in other cities in the state after it leaves the Davidson theatre, where it is running with marked success.

"THE PUPPET CROWN"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ONCE again has a most delightful of all romances been revived for presentation in "The Puppet Crown." The imaginary kingdom of Europe, the old and feeble-minded king, his scheming advisors, his pretty daughter, and the young millionaire from America. What more romantic ingredients than these for a charming love story? None, indeed, and "The Puppet Crown" substantially justifies this statement by delighting and thrilling from first to last.

But let it not be considered that the picture is ordinary because of its familiar theme. It is stamped with the customary artistic finish with which the Lasky company has made its name synonymous by past productions. The action has been laid in ideal settings, both real and natural. Every scene has been materially beautified, even to a greater extent by faultless camera work.

"QUICK! IN THE KING'S ROOM!"

Merely to mention the name of Harold MacGrath is guarantee sufficient of the story's delightful romantic tenor. Its situations alternating between the purely gladsome and the pathetic make one truly glad that such a talented author has permitted his work to be reincarnated on the celluloid.

In such a picture much depends on the casting of the principal parts, in particular those of the lovers. In these roles Ina Claire and Carlyle Blackwell equally divide the histrionic honors of the film. Equipped both in appearance and personality for their respective parts, Miss Claire and Mr. Blackwell share largely in the final success of the visualized story.

Others are Christian Lynton, Cleo Ridgely, Horace Carpenter, John Abraham, George Gebhardt, Tom Forman and Marjorie Daw. All have adapted themselves to their roles with pleasing efficiency. To our mind there seems to be no shadow of doubt as to whether the offering will succeed or not. It has been handled so that it cannot help but please.

Exhibitors would do well to follow the musical program arranged by the management of the Broadway theatre, New York, where "The Puppet Crown" received its first public showing, for it was most assuredly appropriate and significant.

"A CIGARETTE—THAT'S ALL"

(Gold Seal-Universal—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS picture is remarkable for its originality of theme and its excellent treatment. It was prepared for the screen by Lois Weber from a story by Helena Evans, published in "The Black Cat."

The drama unfolds in a smooth and interesting manner, and so utterly unpretending is the body of the action that the denouement is thus made doubly powerful. The dramatic force of the climax cannot easily be overestimated, and this together with the unusual entertainment provided by the rest of the story unite in causing the picture to be ranked as a two reel feature of great power and novelty.

An intelligent business man, an unbeliever in hypnotic influence, is persuaded by a Hindu to purchase a pair of magic spectacles which will enable him to see through all varieties of matter. Using the glasses he discovers that all his office force, including his partner, employ treacherous business methods, and are continually duping him behind his back.

Utterly disgusted by this discovery he turns to his wife, but she also proves faithless through the magic spectacles. He sees his best friend call on her, place his cigarette on the mantle and embrace her.

Amazed by these revelations he investigates the affairs of his office and finds them sound. Then he laughs the whole thing off and admits that he has been under the supernatural influence of the hypnotist. He goes home to tell his wife the joke, she laughs at him for allowing his better judgment to be eclipsed by the East Indian's mental power. But while he is telling his story he sees the cigarette which in his vision he saw his friend place on the mantle. He turns to his wife and her terror at once reveals her guilt. The power of the Hindu had in one instance revealed the truth.

The cast is equal to all the occasions that arise. Phillips Smalley appears as the business man, Rupert Julian as the hypnotist, and Maud George as the wife.

"THE RUNAWAY WIFE"

(Kalem—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

STEWART BAIRD is featured as the artist in this "Broadway Favorites" production of McKee Rankin's play which has been famous for a quarter of a century or more. Justina Wayne plays opposite him as his wife, her blonde beauty making a good foil for Baird.

Eastman, the artist, goes blind through overwork. Through the machinations of Hester, his sister-in-law, Alice, the wife, marries Vane, a broker, believing her husband dead. Fourteen years later Arthur, the son, takes his father abroad to an eye specialist. There the son meets his mother. At a reception Eastman meets his wife. She falls unconscious at the sight.

THE DISCOVERY

Eastman's eyesight is restored by an operation. Vane is killed in a steeplechase.

Hester's villiany is finally exposed and husband and wife reunited.

Lovers of melodrama will surely like this picture. It is a mistake to underate the commercial value of melodrama. The grand old thrillers of the stage are still good and more than half of the Broadway successes of last year were melodramas.

The thrill is the thing and tense situations please most audiences.

Stewart Baird and Justina Wayne acquit themselves well. Others in the cast are Otto Kruger, Orlando Daly, Helen Mulhuland, Maud Granger and August Balfour.

"THE BATTLE AND FALL OF PRZEMYSL"

(American Correspondent Film Company—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

JUST at present when the strenuous activities of the German and Austro-Hungarian armies are ever before the public eye, such a picture as the feature in hand will by no means come amiss. And incidentally we have seen practically all the European pictures on the market, but none that can compare favorably with the views set forward in these four thousand feet of film.

The picture deals mainly with the siege and recapture of Przemysl by the Teutonic allies. A. K. Dawson, the representative of the American Correspondent Film Company, was at all times in touch with various branches of the Austro-Hungarian and German troops while they moved on the famous stronghold, always ready with his camera and, too, with his courage.

Mr. Dawson has given us such a wide variety of scenes that an appalling idea of the monstrous proportions of modern international strife is embodied in the picture. Dynamiting bridges, construction work, advances, hospital services, bombardments, charges, aeroplane reconnoiters, and the deadly effects of war are all vividly shown. Added to this we have two scenes exhibiting a cavalry and an infantry charge, and during both, shells can be seen bursting near the soldiers.

All these scenes and a lot more giving interesting and pathetic details of army life combine to make the picture long to be remembered. It is an exhaustive study of modern military methods—a strong appeal for peace.

On the other hand, views are given of prominent generals of the army inspecting their troops, encouraging them before going into battle. And one scene showing the huge number of Russians that were made prisoners in the recapture of Przemysl is particularly significant of the magnitude of the European war.

The greater number of the pictures are enhanced by clear photography. Some of them are not so good, but this by no means deters the interest, and anyone who realizes under what conditions they were procured can readily pardon any slight fault in photography.

Any exhibitor who desires actual scenes relative to the war, some of real fighting, can book this feature and be absolutely certain that it will prove a valuable attraction.

A lecture has been compiled by Edward Lyell Fox, to be read, if one so desires, while the picture is on the screen.

"BOLD EMMETT, IRELAND'S MARTYR"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

ONE of the series that Sidney Olcott produced for Lubin on the soil of old Erin herself. In this picture, Olcott takes the triple role of athor, director and leading actor, which adds much to the interest that the play will excite.

The stormy days when Robert Emmett tried in vain to free Ireland from her yoke are vividly portrayed in a series of beautiful scenes full of heart throbs.

The story tells how Con Daly, loving Nora Doyle, is also a devoted lover of his country. Emmett is a friend of them all and gets assistance from the family to further his plans. Once, when there is a riot, Major Kirk, an English officer, desperately wounded, is nursed back to health by Nora and Con. The major shows his gratitude by obtaining a pardon for the lovers at the eleventh hour, when they are sentenced to be hung for attempting to bring on a revolution.

An exciting incident is the cutting of the rope, already around

THE TRIAL

Con's neck, by a friend, who performs this daring feat from a neighboring tree top, before the pardon arrives. Emmett escapes this time by climbing up a chimney.

Besides Olcott as Con, Valentine Grant is seen as Nora. Jack Melville is Robert Emmett. Laurens Santley is Nora's mother. P. H. O'Malley is Major Kirk. Robert Rivers takes Feely.

"A BUNCH OF KEYS"

(V-L-S-E—Essanay—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE consensus of opinion seems to be that Charles Hoyt's stage farce from which this picture production is adapted was the laughing hit of the day. But leaving its more or less illustrious predecessor out of the question, disregarding the fact whether it was good or bad, "A Bunch of Keys" can not justly claim the definition of "excrutiatingly funny" or "sidesplitting," as presented on the film.

Insofar as Essanay has given the market some praiseworthy comedies in past releases, for example, "The Slim Princess" on the V-L-S-E program, and the George Ade single reel comedies as well, we are more than surprised to discover that the picture in hand embodies few of the comedy moments so essential to a humorous feature.

For five reels we gaze on the antics of eight or ten principals, three feminine heirs to a country hotel, their three lovers, the lawyer and the lumbering woman who loves him. In their efforts to decide who shall come into possession of the hotel they entirely neglect the fact that they may each take a thrid of the property. This little piece of intelligence dawns upon them in the finale and terminates their many ridiculous feuds.

While the lawyer and one of the lovers are attempting to put the hotel on a running basis, comical possibilities have been offered these two players and their support. And laughs are invoked in a few instances. The Ethiopian furnishing the motive power for the elevator by turning a crank in the cellar, the escape and the wild chase after the pig indulged in by all and Grimes driving his horse and wagon in through the front door presents a series of comical incidents.

The scenario could have been handled to better purpose, as it gives one the impression that there are at present too many stories within one. They don't all transpire at once but follow one another.

The cast is headed by John Slavin as Grimes, while others are William Burress, June Keith, Charlotte Mineau, Leota Chrider, William Castelet, Royal Douglas and Fred Wyatt.

"ASHES OF INSPIRATION"

(Biograph—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS number is worthy of note chiefly because of several pretty seaside locations well photographed in the bargain. Besides being most artistic they are realistic. They are supposed to represent the water front of a French town and convey the desired results to a remarkable degree of accuracy.

The story is of a strong heart-interest sort that will hold the spectator at practically every point, despite the fact that it is far from being original.

An artist leaves his extravagant wife and child and seeks inspiration for his work in Europe. In a small town he meets a young girl who falls desperately in love with him. This so enrages her lover that he plans to kill his rival. The girl's father attempts to stop him and in a scuffle is killed by the accidental discharge of the weapon.

He flees from his pursuers in a boat which overturns, but drowns before help can reach him. And then the girl thinking the artist will marry her is terribly disappointed when he tells her of his wife and child in America. He returns where duty calls him, but his heart remains with the girl on the other side of the sea.

The cast is composed of a group of players, all of whom appear to good advantage in their respective parts. Jose Reuben, Claire McDowell, Kenneth Davenport, Elaine Hume and Raymond Nye are the principals.

"HEARTS ABLAZE"

(Vitagraph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

AGAIN has Eugene Mullin incorporated a story of great strength in this three reel drama. While it bears a close resemblance to a much larger feature which recently played on Broadway, Mr. Mullin's offering carries a swiftly moving theme, typified by convincing situations.

At present the picture stands in need of improvements, which can easily be introduced. Most important of all will be the addition of a subtitle or two in the first part of the picture, making clear the relationship of the various characters as they are brought on the screen. In its present condition one is obliged to wait until the picture is nearly half over, before being informed of this most essential fact.

A few small details that the critical will single out should have been better attended to by Director Lorimer Johnston. One is led to believe by the names that the action transpires in Italy, but the atmosphere scents strongly of this country. A few of the properties could have been better; a backdrop displays country scenery, but the exterior shows a courtyard and a stonewall innocently betrays artifice.

MAJERONI PERFORMS HIS DAUGHTER'S WEDDING CEREMONY

But if the suggested titles are added "Hearts Ablaze" will provide very good entertainment. Valeria is a young girl brought up to believe that she is the daughter of Count Minolfi when in reality she is the child of Malvini, who became a monk when the count ran away with his wife.

Valeria falls in love with Mario, a young liberalist. The count forces her to disclose her lover's plans against the kingdom. Betrayed, Mario demands of Valeria the reason of her deceit. The count interferes and in the resulting struggle is killed by the discharge of a gun. Mario flees and Valeria is accused of the crime, but her lover returns and proves that the death was accidental. Following this Malvini confesses to the king the despicable character of the count and the ending leaves all happy.

Julia Swayne Gordon plays Valeria very well, save for the fact that in the closeups she appears older than she is supposed to be. Leo Delaney is Mario, while L. Rogers Lytton as the count, Charles Wellesley as Malvini and Frank Currier as the king complete the cast of principals.

"THE STOLEN VOICE"

(World Film—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

PAUL McALLISTER, author of this most novel production, is evidently possessed of an imagination that soars to great heights; so high, in fact, does it soar at times that we are inclined to doubt the credibility of some of this story's situations. But believable or not as the case may be, "The Stolen Voice" as a whole is a most thrilling drama.

It concerns a vaudeville singer who, because he has won the love of a certain Belle Borden away from her admirer, a hypnotist, is deprived of his voice by this same gentleman. When his finances are sadly depleted he turns to the motion picture. He becomes exceedingly popular and with the death of the hypnotist regains his voice, so enabling him to offer himself in marriage to his leading lady.

The marvelous hypnotic power exercised by the heavy is apt to strike one as untrue or impossible, but outside of this the story develops in a pleasantly convincing style. It contains many incidents of a sort that thrill by their human qualities and others that thrill because of their sensationalism.

The trying moment on the stage when the singer loses his voice, his meeting with his one-time protege, now a picture director, and the discovery that he can again use his voice belong to the first class, while his rescue of his leading lady from a watery death and his splendid fight while acting in a picture are the best of the other variety of thrills.

As for the comedy element of the film there is much of that also; in fact, suspense and light action have been properly combined throughout. The photography and scenes complement the action in a correspondingly good manner.

In the role of the singer Robert Warwick plays with his customary power and feeling, while Frances Nelson appears to good advantage as his leading lady, a one-time shop girl. Bertram Marburgh plays the director, while Violet Horner as Belle and Giorgio Majeroni as the hypnotist complete the cast. Frank Crane produced the picture, and from all appearances it should receive a large share of success.

MACKENZIE WILL PRODUCE PATHE'S "MARY'S LAMB"

PATHE announces that Richard Carle's famous play "Mary's Lamb" which will feature Richard Carle himself and be put out as one of the new Gold Rooster plays, has been given to Donald Mackenzie to produce.

Mr. Mackenzie will start work upon it within the next few days on the completion of his work upon "The Galloper," Richard Harding Davis' play, now being filmed in the Pathé studios.

LUBIN'S "DEAD LETTER" IS FOR AUGUST 17

THROUGH error the advertisement of this week's Lubin release contains "A Midnight Mix-Up," to be released August 17.

Instead, the release for that date is a split reel, "The Dead Letter," a comedy, and "Persistent Dalton," a cartoon comedy.

"THE INGRATE"

(Victory—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS picture of European society is a good specimen of emotional drama, free from the ranting and over-acting so often thought necessary in such pieces. The work is natural throughout, the settings attractive and the photography splendid. Henny Porten is featured, and she lends a grace and natural charm to the story which gives her personality a distinct appeal to the sympathy.

The story revolves around the gambling debts and marital faithlessness of Sir Henry Belmont. In order to save his honor, his wife, Lady Grace, portrayed by Miss Porten, attempts to borrow the $4,500 which he must pay on the following day, and, being unable to do this, she steals the money from a woman friend.

Her previous appeal to her husband's creditor results in unpleasant advances on his part, and the charge that her husband is no longer true to her. Following up the suspicion sown in this way, Lady Grace learns that his guilty companion is the same woman from whom she has stolen the money.

There is, however, a man who from afar truly worhsips Lady Grace, and his testimonial to her real character is to challenge the insulting creditor to a duel when he learns of the advances. Her champion is hit, but is saved from death when the bullet strikes a picture of Lady Grace which he carries in his pocket, just over his heart.

Later he is the unwilling companion of the wife when she trails her husband to the home of the false friend, and finds the two in an embarrasing situation. Overcome with the ingratitude of her husband, Lady Grace reproaches him by telling of her theft for his sake, and the miserable Sir Henry and his companion turn the knowledge of her crime against her in order to save themselves. She is driven from the house, but finds happiness with her true worshipper after she is freed of the profligate baronet.

Both interiors and exteriors have been chosen carefully, and there is a harmonious consistency about the whole production which is convincing. The action is rapid and free from constraint. The lighting is brilliant and the director seems to have used long vistas of perspective wherever possible, giving unusual depth and atmosphere to all the scenes.

KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURES REMAIN ON GENERAL PROGRAM

THE Licensed Manufacturing Company, owning the Knickerbocker Star Feature brand of three-reelers, has made formal announcement to the effect that this brand will be continued on the General Film Company's regular program as usual, every other Wednesday.

The company owning the Knickerbocker brand further states that it never had any intention of releasing on any program other than the General Film Company's and that any statement to the contrary may be regarded as entirely unauthorized and contrary to the facts.

"THE CAVE ON THUNDER CLOUD"

(Essanay—Two Acts)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THE million readers of Mary Roberts Rhinehardt's "Tish" stories in "The Saturday Evening Post" will welcome the news that the first of this series has been filmed and will appear on August 14 under the title "The Cave on Thunder Cloud." Nothing of the delicious humor of the story has been lost in the film version.

Camille D'Arcy plays the strongwilled but kindhearted "Tish" with much realism, not in the least over-doing the part of this eccentric but lovable old lady. Marian Skinner and Louise Crolius are equally good as Aggie and Lizzie, Tish's old maid friends. The rest of the cast, particularly Edmund F. Cobb as Edward Donald, a young club man, are well chosen.

The mountain regions of Tennessee furnish very appropriate backgrounds for the story, which deals with the adventures of Tish, Aggie and Lizzie on a walking expedition. A diminutive but at times very stubborn donkey is laden down with the thousand and one things which the old ladies deem necessary for their comfort.

In a cave on Thunder Cloud they run across Edward Donald, a young club man, who, in carrying out a wager, has just robbed a train. Thinking that he is a detective on the trail of some railroad bandits, they aid him in eluding the real detectives who have run him down.

For their gullibility they are locked in the county jail until Tish's nephew, learning of their predicament, and also of the wager, goes forward to square matters.

LICHTMAN AND WARNER DISPOSE OF STANDARD PROGRAM TERRITORY

WITH the news that the Kriterion Film Exchanges of Kansas City and St. Louis have secured the Standard program for their territories comes the announcement from the Standard Photoplay Distributors, Inc., that Vice-President and General Manager Al Lichtman and Secretary and Treasurer H. M. Warner of that company have closed contracts for every territory they have had time to visit in their sudden trip to the different exchange centers of the middle west.

The Boston Photoplay Company was quick to secure the regular weekly single and multiple releases of the Standard program for New England, while Pittsburgh went to H. A. Lande, Philadelphia to Harry Schwalbe, Chicago to the General Feature Film Company, of which William Hershberg is the moving spirit; Minneapolis to W. L. Merrill, and Cleveland, Cincinnati and Detroit to H. Charnas, of the Standard Film Service Company. Four valuable territories in addition to those already announced are practically closed.

"SHADOWS FROM THE PAST"

(Edison—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THE first reel is devoted to laying the groundwork of the story.

Arthur Barton, a young soldier, whom Mary Fitz Allen loves, flees the country after nearly killing a man who misused Mary's name. In his absence a baby is born to Mary at the home of an old servant, the matter being kept a secret. Mary's mother persuades her to marry Lord Lester, a man past middle age. Mary is doubly deceived, for her mother tells her that the baby is dead and also keeps from her a letter from Barton.

Fifteen years later Mary is in love with her husband. Jardon, a discarded suitor, finds a letter which bares Mary's past and determines to use it to make her come to him. After a stormy scene Mary goes home. Jardon is shot and killed by Babbette, his mistress, who is jealous. Mary's letter clutched in the dead man's hand apparently fastens the crime upon Mary. But Babbette confesses the murder and Lord Lester forgives his wife, so all ends well.

Mabel Trunelle, Bigelow Cooper and Marc MacDermott give finished performances as Mary, Lord Lester and Jardon, respectively. They are as accomplished a trio of picture players as can be found. Helen Strickland plays Mary's mother.

"EAST LYNNE"

(Biograph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

FOR many years thousands have been thrilled and moved to tears by "East Lynne," but it is doubtful if the famous old play ever had a more attractive presentation than it has in this new Biograph film. The atmosphere of the ancestral estates of England has been created admirably, and no one would suspect that the action he is looking upon really took place in California. Brilliant interiors, sunny bits of garden and the wide sweep of the seashore are the settings in which a capable cast carry out the story of love and tragedy.

In condensing the play into three reels, much of the original version has necessarily been omitted, but nothing which would enhance the production in the eyes of the audience has been lost.

WARNED TO SECRECY

There are no unnecessary incidents lugged in, and the tale is told directly and clearly with an appeal which is certain not to miss fire.

Louise Vale portrays the hapless daughter of Lord Mount Severn with great naturalness. She has found excellent assistance in Gretchen Hartman, Kate Bruce, Franklin Ritchie, Hector Sarno, Laura La Varnie, and Edward Cecil, while Alan Hale's Levison is a polished villain of the most approved type. There is no great central situation, but the dramatic happenings are distributed evenly along so as to hold the interest throughout the whole three reels.

There are evidences of great care on the part of the producers, which is backed by conscientious work on the part of the cast

"RAGS"

(Famous Players—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

THE effectiveness of "screen personality" in an actress is wonderfully exemplified in Mary Pickford's rendition of the character of Rags. Dusty overalls, a miner's old shirt, unkempt hair, and absence of everything feminine in dress could not prevent this elusive quality from making itself felt in her appearance in "Rags."

Many of the scenes depend upon the acting solely for "putting them across," and the star rendered each scene with peculiar impressiveness. A glance, a slight turn of the head, the merest movement of the body conveyed to the audience the exact meaning intended by the scenario writer.

RAGS' DEFENCE ROUTS THE BARROOM

Mary Pickford's acting in this subject is so fine it may be said without exaggeration that the episodes in which she appears would be wholly intelligible if no sub-titles had been employed to carry on the action of the story.

One incident may suffice for an illustration. When the unsophisticated frontier girl is kissed the first time in her life, Mary Pickford expresses first complete amazement at the significance of the hero's action. Gradually the light of comprehension dawns upon the heroine, and a few minutes after the daring young man disappears around the bend of the road, in puzzlement over her dazed wonder at his aggressive attention, a smile of understanding—and delight—spreads over her features.

Impulsively the pleased child of nature turns and runs half way down the road in pursuit of the young man for another lesson in the new game, opening so many delectable possibilities for relieving the tedium of idle hours in the wilderness. But she stops abruptly. An innate feeling of maidenly modesty suddenly warns the girl to suppress all demonstration of her budding affection, and her face instantly becomes a mask for the tumult of her heart.

A bank employee, engaged to the daughter of an official of the institution, is found short in his accounts, but for her sake is allowed to leave town without prosecution. The man marries the girl just before the couple leave town for the west, where in a mining community he proves by his shiftlessness how unworthy he is of the girl. After two years she dies, leaving the husband a girl child to bring up in an atmosphere of drunken laziness.

In growing up the poor girl fights against the influences of an environment anything but fit for her native refinement.

"THE POWER OF PRAYER"

(Lubin—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

LAYING stress as it does on the direct answer to fervent prayer, this picture will make a strong appeal to those of deep orthodox convictions, while the free thinkers will be inclined to scoff at so naive a moral as is here presented.

L. C. Shumway is so often cast as the good young clergyman that he must play the part in his sleep. At all events, he is always good in the role, his part here as Rev. Dr. Scott being no exception. Melvin Mayo has good scope in the strong part of Andrew Morgan, the atheistical financier, who is converted at last.

The story tells how Madeline Wilson has to give up her young sweetheart because Morgan will only save her father from ruin if the girl marries him. The wife cannot inspire her husband with faith. Neither his son's birth, nor Madeline's death, nor all the efforts of the clergyman friend have any effect on the hard man, until his boy, a little later, falls desperately ill.

Everything that money can provide failing, the minister persuades Morgan to pray. As in answer, a chemist comes at that moment with a serum which cures the dying boy. The father then shows his change of heart by kissing the clergyman's cross George Routh, Velma Whitman, Robert Gray, Lyle Phillips and others are in the cast.

"THE NAVAL BATTLE OF THE BLACK SEA"

(Pathé News No. 62)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

WHAT probably is the best naval war scene, or series of scenes, of the present European war, is presented here. There are about eight hundred feet of master photography, exceptionally clear and full of detail. The photographer was stationed on the flagship of the Russian squadron, and the entire battle, from the departure of the fleet at sunrise, to the attack on Sebastopol and the defending Turkish fleet, is shown in great detail.

The sunrise effect as the fleet weighs anchor is especially brilliant, and cameraman is to be congratulated on having secured such an effective picture.

Among the most notable scenes of the battle are the firing of the big guns on the battleships—the flash of the guns is plainly to be seen amid the cloud of smoke—the sinking of one of the Turkish battleships, her surrender, the lowering of the Turkish flag and the raising of the Russian emblem, the admiral, the Czar and his staff.

"POKES AND JABS IN CLOVER"

(Wizard-World—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ALTHOUGH the title says "Pokes and Jabs," Jabs is conspicuous only by his absence in this slapstick number. Pokes is the main gentleman. He appears in his usual ridiculous makeup and affects the same idiotic mannerisms.

All the action takes place on a farm, and while the plot is reminiscent of many others, there are several original touches that, combined with the queer antics of Pokes, lend it an air of unconventionality.

Pokes' private box car lands him in an unfamiliar town, very much in need of food and amusement. He raises havoc by clothing himself in the garments of a scarecrow.

It is a very good slapstick comedy, exhibiting nothing of a vulgar sort and pleases with much that is humorous.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"Her Hidden Life." (Biograph. Mon., Aug. 9.)—Ruth Warren hides the fact that she is a cabaret singer, from her fiancee. He finds her out. Ashamed, she is about to commit suicide when her mother dissuades her from the deed. Then her sweetheart shows up, won back to her by her devotion to her mother. Ruth Warren and Charles King are the leads. William J. Butler is the cabaret proprietor, and Mrs. Wright is Ruth's mother. Herbert Barrington is the sweetheart's friend. George E. Rheems directed.

"The Law of Love." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., Aug. 10)—Stanley and Mildred wed secretly. He leaves her suddenly to go to the deathbed of his mother. While he is away, her father, misunderstanding the circumstances, takes Mildred away. Stanley becomes a clergyman, and later is reunited with Mildred through their little daughter. Joe Ruben and Madge Kirby play the leads. Charles Mailes is the girl's father, and little Zoe Bech is the daughter. Produced by J. Farrell MacDonald.

"Stronger Than Love." (Biograph. Thurs., Aug. 12.)—First love is stronger than second love, according to the theme of this picture. Gaston marries a girl art student, with whom he had been dividing his living expenses, although he had become engaged to a wealthy girl. Isabel Rea and Frank Newburg are the art students. Ilean Hume is the wealthy girl, and Charles Bennett is her father. George Morgan directed.

"The Little Slavey." (Biograph. Sat., Aug. 14.)—Love of the little slavey reforms a thief. A fellow criminal tries to fasten a robbery upon the first, but the little slavey exposes the plot. Then comes the happy marriage. Irma Dawkins has the appealing character part of the little slavey. Jack Mulhall is the reformed criminal, and Gus Pixley the hardened offender. Adila Comer and Charles Bennet have character parts. Directed by Edward Morrison.

"Not Much Force." (Edison. Wed., Aug. 4.)—A rural police comedy. The chief's wife is finally appointed policewoman, and makes the chief scrub the floor of the jail while she mounts guard.

"Not Wanted." (Edison. Sat., Aug. 7.)—The story of a little boy whose mother made him feel he was not wanted. But he saved the baby when the house took fire, and so re-established himself in the mother's affection. Langdon West is fine as the boy. Herbert Prior and Gladys Leslie are the parents.

"Food for Kings and Riley." (Edison. Wed., Aug. 11.)—The newly rich Riley wants corned beef and cabbage. His wife, with social aspirations, won't tolerate it. One day she tracks him to a poor neighborhood, and finds him heartily tucking away corned beef and cabbage cooked by a "widder woman." His wife also finds her daughter there, very much in love with the "widder woman's" handsome and promising son. So they all go home to Riley's for corned beef and cabbage. William Wadsworth, Mabel Dwight, Jean Dumar, Guido Colucci, Marie La Manna and Raymond McKee are the players. Will Louis directed.

"The Cave on Thunder Cloud." (Essanay. Two reels. Sat., Aug. 14.)—An interesting comedy-drama in which a young girl and her two old maid companions are accused of holding up a train when in reality the real culprit is a clubman who did the job on a bet. In the cast are Camille D'Arcy, Marian Skinner, Louise Crolius, Edmund F. Cobb and Eugene Acker.

"The Happy House." (Essanay. Mon., Aug. 9.)—A simple yet appealing drama in which a girl debating whether to marry her poor but ambitious suitor is convinced that such is the right course by a dream.

"When My Lady Smiles." (Essanay. Three reels. Tues., Aug. 10.)—The mother whose son has eloped with a girl toward whom she is antagonistic, disowns him. She refuses to accept the girl as her daughter-in-law until she discovers the hardship that her selfishness has caused the young couple. In this drama, which demands interest despite its apparent conventionality. Ruth Stonehouse and Richard Taber play the featured roles. Edward T. Lowe, Jr., prepared the scenario.

"The Fable of the Tip and the Treasure." (Essanay. Wed., Aug. 11.)—Another of the George Ade fables in slang transferred to the screen, retaining all the humor of the original writing. Roger goes to hunt his grandfather's hidden treasure and finds instead a wife, which he mistakes for the treasure. Moral: Keep on digging and you will find something. The usual cast appears.

"The Bell Hop." (Essanay, Thurs., Aug. 12.)—A hotel fracas portraying the strenuous adventures of a bellhop while attempting to do his duty. Ben Turpin and Victor Potel are the principal actors in this funny one, which ought to go over anywhere.

"The Riddle of the Rings." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., Aug. 11.)—Fourth of the series of "Grand Hotel Mysteries." The picture is elaborately set, and full of action. The characters, most of which have appeared in the earlier pictures of the series, are types from real life. A woman guest reports the loss of several valuable rings, and a manicurist and a waiter are both suspected

The manicurist clears herself, and Mrs. Weed drops her charge when the hotel management gives her a check to make good her loss. The suspicious detectives discover the guest has "flim-flammed" the hotel, and the missing gems are found cleverly hidden in her own room. Ollie Kirkby, Frank Jonasson, Thomas Lingham, Muriel Ruth, William H. West, Martin Sais and True Boardman compose the cast.

"The Limited's Peril." (Kalem. Sat., Aug. 14.)—This picture is another episode in the "Hazards of Helen Railroad" series, and is well supplied with thrills. After a desperate battle with train wreckers, in which she rolls down a bridge embankment, Helen (Helen Holmes) escapes across a drawbridge and removes a charge of dynamite placed on the tracks, just in time to save the limited from destruction. She also frees Wharton, the detective, from the desperadoes, who are finally blown to bits by their own dynamite blast.

"The Country Girl." (Kalem. Fri., Aug. 13.)—Charming Alice Joyce is again seen as a farmer's daughter, who is saved from the wiles of an itinerant showman who attempts to lure her from her home. This is an Alice Joyce reissue, in which the Kalem star is seen at her best.

"The Winning Wash." (Kalem. Tues, Aug. 10.)—Ham and Bud actually go looking for work, and to their dismay, find it. It is in a Chinese laundry, where, while washing a white vest, Ham finds a roll of money. After numerous tribulations they escape with it, only to run into the arms of a policeman. Ethel Teare is an attractive support to Bud Duncah and Lloyd V. Hamilton. J. Clifford and H. Griffith are also in the cast.

"Ham at the Beach." (Kalem. Tues., Aug. 17.)—Ham and Bud visit a short resort. Ham steals a gambler's roll and departs with Fifi, a lady from the tent show. Ham is alone in Fifi's dressing room when the call comes for her to go on. He does a female impersonation, is discovered and thrown out neck and crop. A chase follows, which takes the comedians off the end of a long pier into the big drink.

"The Great Lone Land." (Lubin. Mon., Aug. 9.)—A different western story of peril, wifely devotion, motherly sacrifice, in a word—of much heart interest—is here produced by the Arizona Lubin company.

Romaine Fielding wrote and produced this picture, also taking the lead as Neal Cameron, the engineer who marries the railroad magnate's daughter (Vinnie Burns) in opposition to the father's wishes.

The young couple's devotion, their adventures when poverty forces them to become prospectors, the peril in "the great lone land" when their baby innocently wastes the scanty supply of precious water, the final rescue by, and reconciliation with the father, the discovery by Neal of the ore which makes him rich—are all thrillingly portrayed.

"Relentless Dalton." (Lubin. Split reel, with "Horrible Hyde." Tues., Aug. 10.)—The pursuit by the relentless Dalton of the terribly suffering heroine, the marvelous valor of the dauntless hero in her behalf, and their wonderful adventures are shown in the usual cartoon fashion of exaggeration by Vincent Whitman.

"Horrible Hyde." (Lubin. Split reel, with "Relentless Dalton." Tues., Aug. 10.)—An actor owing a landlady a board bill, frightens her off by dressing the part of Hyde with big false teeth in his room. (As if any real theatrical landlady would let any such little thing phase her). When this timid dame sees her backward actor at the theatre taking the other role of Dr. Jekyll, the game is all off. She does all sorts of things, even taking the false teeth away from Reginald.

Jerold Hevener takes this part, also directing. Eva Bell is the landlady. Epes Sargent wrote the scenario.

"The Deception." (Lubin. Fri., Aug. 13.)—Not altogether new, albeit interesting, is the plot of this one reel drama by Shannon Fife. Three in the cast are all that the action calls for. These three are all stars: Ethel Clayton, Thurston Hall and Walter Hitchcock. The directing was done by Joseph Kaufman.

The story shows scenes of love, jealousy, passion and revenge, which are supposed to happen to Henry Wharton, his wife Frances, and his friend Burton. In reality they form the incidents of a story Wharton is writing.

"Her Romeo." (Lubin. Sat., Aug 14.)—Billie Reeves as a travesty of Romeo is a funny sight. Because Bess, his sweetheart, is super-romantic, Bill must needs dress as Romeo when he comes to call. Bill does as he is bid, but his chauffeur does not, thereby causing the trouble.

When the father of Bess sees the fraudulent Romeo he pumps him full of bird shot. Bill runs for his car, but the car has vanished. In his mad flight he falls foul of another Romeo, being pursued for his atrocious acting. The two get mixed up and Bill gets the worst of it, until rescued by the belated car and chauffeur. No more Romeos for Bill. Mae Hotely, Gene Walker and Charles Griffith are the support.

"What Did He Whisper?" (Vitagraph. Mon., Aug. 9.)—The finale of this comedy number made a big hit at the Vitagraph theatre. Under an assumed name a husband, long separated from his wife, courts her. Another woman claims him as her husband, but by whispering a word to his real wife he evidently proves beyond a doubt that he is her husband. And what did he whisper? That's the question and also the comedy. It was made by the western company.

"Life's Yesterdays." (Vitagraph. Two reels. Tues., Aug. 10.)—Influenced by an adventuress a doctor contracts the drug habit. He becomes careless and gives a child the wrong medicine, causing its death. To atone for this he exiles himself in a leper colony for the rest of his life. A strong subject, with Julia Swayne Gordon and Leo Delany.

"His Fairy Godmother." (Vitagraph. Wed., Aug. 11.)—Jones has a dream of delivering a speech and in the midst of it his dress suit vanishes and he finds himself talking in pajamas, to his great horror. This ought to be a big success with the admirers of Wally Van and his company who appear in this funny one written by Mabel Burgess.

"His Bunkie." (Vitagraph. Thurs., Aug. 12.)—A military drama of unusual interest because of the presence of actual United States troops. The picture was made in Texas. There is a love story as well which makes the picture interesting from a romantic standpoint, too. Darwin Karr, Eleanor Woodruff and Ned Finley are featured.

"A Keyboard Strategy" (Vitagraph. Fri., Aug. 13.)—This is a very delightful little comedy with Lillian Walker and Evart Overton enacting the roles of the lovers. The hotel stenographer attracts the eye of a traveling man, with the result that a flirtation goes on, he dictating his thoughts to the girl. And they marry.

"Heavy Villains." (Vitagraph. Three reels. Sat., Aug. 14.)—A comedy of errors and misunderstanding, with William Shea, Flora Finch, Kate Price and Hughie Mack interpreting the important parts in their usual burlesque way. The scenario was prepared by William H. Ostrander and produced by George D. Baker.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"The Broken Coin." (Universal Special. Eighth Episode. Two reels.)—The comedy element predominates in this instalment, and while little action of material account takes place, the interest is well sustained by several humorous incidents and a thrilling escape in an automobile, effected by Kitty. To date the serial has relied quite a bit more on its funny scenes than on dramatic ones, although the thrills have been numerous.

"Judy Forgot." (Broadway Universal Feature. Five reels. Mon., Aug. 9.)—Reviewed at length in issue of August 7.

"Dan Cupid-Fixer." (Nestor. Mon., Aug. 9.)—Father selects an old maid with money for his daughter-in-law to be, but the son objects and elopes with a manicure girl. Much commotion takes place in the manicure shop. This is a very fair Nestor written by George Cochrane, and produced by Horace Davey, with a cast including Jack Dillon, Neal Burns, Laura Oakley and Billie Rhodes.

"A Cigarette—That's All." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., Aug. 10.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Where Happiness Dwells." (Big U. Tues., Aug. 10.)—A man and a woman equally tired of city convention seek romance, and find it in each other in the wilds of the mountains. The most striking feature of this subject is its delightful scenery. The story is fairly interesting, and Ben Cohn, the author, has varied the monotony with a few original situations toward the end. Adele Lane and Edward Sloman are the principals. The latter appears with indifferent success as hero.

To Frisco Via the Cartoon Route. (Imp. Tues., Aug. 10.—An interesting reel comprised of some actual views of the West, together with several drawings by Hy Mayer. Some of the scenes would have had a better effect if they had been longer.

"Married on Credit." (L-Ko. Wed., Aug. 11.)—This really has some funny situations in it, and will register a success with the lovers of slapstick comedy. Neither of the rivals have money, and both get half way through the wedding ceremony before they go in search of it. Billy Ritchie and Louise Orth are featured.

"His Beloved Violin." (Big U. Two reels. Thurs., Aug. 12.)—A very nice picture featuring Murdock MacQuarrie in the title and character part, although it is not so strong as some of his previous subjects. The subject is noticeable for its lack of love element, and also the fact that no heavy of any consequence is introduced.

The old violinist just manages to eke out an existence with his granddaughter's assistance. She is employed as maid in the house of a society lady. When the lady gives a concert at her home and employs the services of a noted violinist, the old man listens and looks on through the window.

What is his surprise to discover that the entertainer is one of his former pupils, and so the story ends happily. Frank MacQuarrie appears as the other musician. while Miss Condray is the girl. H. G. Stafford prepared the scenario.

"The Elephant Circus." (Powers. Split reel. Thurs., Aug. 12.)—A vaudevile act portraying several stunts of three trained elephants. It is interesting, although nothing startling is performed. A Ditmar's educational closes the reel.

"Driven by Fate." (Imp. Three reels. Fri., Aug. 13.)—This subject deals with the hereditary yearning of an actress' daughter for the stage. She runs away form her adopted parents, but their son, her lover, succeeds in finding her in a low music hall.

Jack Adolphi, the director, has treated this old story story in a manner that lays particular stress on the comedy moments in the picture. Few situations of dramatic force appear. The picture will offer fair entertainment. Violet Mersereau and William Garwood are in the leading roles. Florence Crawford and Tammany Young are also in the cast.

"Lost—Three Teeth." (Nestor Fri., Aug. 13.)—Just before her wedding the bride loses her false teeth, and naturally great commotion is the result until they are discovered. An average Nestor, with Ed Lyons and Victoria Forde leading the cast. The situations are liable to strike many as uproarious.

"Chasing the Limited." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Aug. 14.)—A railroad story written by Julius Furthman, and produced by Henry McRae. The station agent saving the President's special puts the usual climax on the love story. It is an entertaining two reeler well worked up to a denouement that creates a thrill. Marie Walcamp and Wellington A. Playter play the leads supported by the usual Bison cast.

"Haunting Winds." (Powers. Sat., Aug 14.)—The moaning winds forever haunt the man who killed another accidentally, until he discovers that the dead man was a bank robber. This drama, although it is somewhat weakly motivated, has been effectively produced by Carl M. Le Viness, with Sydney Ayres and Doris Pawn in the leading parts

The scenes are good, while the swaying treetops and banging doors, illustrating the effect of the wind, create a fine air of suspense.

"A Dip in the Water." (Joker. Sat., Aug. 14.)—One of the Badger-Curtis comedies, unusual in mirth-provoking qualities. William Franey again performs a marvelous stunt in eating an entire box of chocolates to the great astonishment of Gale Henry. The story concerns the rivalry of a bachelor and a widower for the hand of an old maid. In its course many humorous situations are introduced. Max Asher, Lillian Peacock and Milburn Moranti are also in the cast.

"Mountain Justice." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., Aug. 15.)—A moonshiner yarn which does away with the intruding importance of the revenue officer. The substance of the plot is that one of the mountaineers, seeing his partner terribly mistreat his wife, becomes so enraged at the indignity that he turns him over to the law. There is gorgeous mountain scenery in this, while the originality of the story and the good acting united to make the picture very desirable. Joe De Grasse produced it from a scenario by Julius Furthman, while Elsie Jane Wilson, Lon Chaney, Arthur Shirely and Grace Thompson play the leads.

"In the Grip of the Law." (Laemmle. Sun., Aug. 15.)—One of Frank Lloyd's very good dramas which he wrote and produced. A girl of the seashore believes she has found her ideal in a city man who stays at her mother's boarding house. But her lover shatters the ideal as well as winning a large reward by showing the man and his companion up as smugglers.

Olive Fuller Golden and Millard Wilson play the leads in this fine number. The scenes and photography are exceedingly good.

"Love on an Empty Stomach." (L-Ko. Sun., Aug. 15.)—Two tramps acclaim themseles motion picture actors, and, on the strength of this, attempt to win the hand of a young maiden. There is much fighting, kicking and the like in this subject. Hank Mann is featured, and is good for a number of hearty laughs.

"Animated Weekly, No 178." (Wed., Aug. 4.)—Scenes connected with the electrocution of Charles Becker; the Liberty Bell at the fair; a good canoe race at Asbury Park, N. J.; the largest locomotive in the world; and the trial trip of a new kind of motor boat, are the most interesting events of this number.

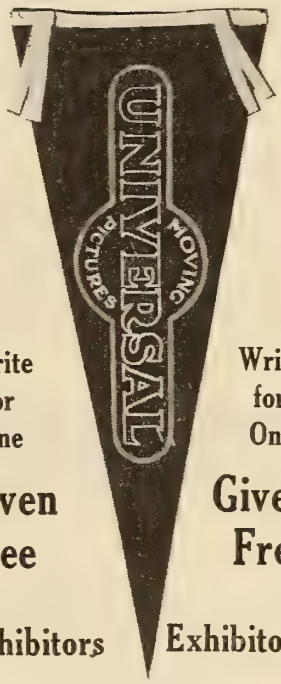
MUTUAL PROGRAM

"The Ceremonial Turquoise." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., Aug. 7.)—The murder of a New York jeweler is laid to his partner, who is arrested. His sweetheart believes him innocent, and starting an investigation of her own, finds that the only thing missing from the store is an immense turquoise.

This she traces to New Mexico, where it was once a sacred stone of an Indian tribe. She is captured by the Indians, but is released after an attack by the sheriff's posse, in which the chief, an educated man, is mortally wounded.

Before his death the chief confesses the murder, explaining that he sought only to regain the stone, without which the prayers for rain by his people were unavailing. The locations are excellently chosen, and the scenic effects splendid. Eric Von Ritzau, Charles West, Irene Hunt, Dark Cloud, Eagle Eye and Philip Gastroack, compose the cast.

"Big Jim's Heart." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., Aug. 8.)—An interesting drama of love and crime in the Far West, elaborately produced by John B. O'Brien. Spurned by the daughter of his friend, Big Jim, the sheriff, has his jealousy aroused when he sees Elsie's love bestowed on a young express rider.



When a half-breed is found murdered, and suspicion points to the successful lover, the sheriff has his revenge. He suppresses the death-hour confession of the real murderer, until the victim is led out to execution. With the rope around the young man's neck, the sheriff's big heart asserts itself, and he halts the execution while the real story is told.

Eagle Eye gives an excellent portrayal of a half-breed Indian, and Teddy Sampson is charming as Elsie. Others in the cast are Charles Clary, F. A. Turner, Everett Flynn and William A. Lowery.

"Father Love." (Komic. Sun., Aug. 8.) Satire is the keenest form of comedy, and this is one reel of delightful satire, making in all one of the really funny pictures of the season. Feminism is raised to the nth power, and all the positions, from husband and club manager, to kitchen slave are reversed.

Fay Tincher is featured as a dashing chauffeur, who seeks to elope with the neglected husband but whose plans are checked by the strength of "father love." The scenic effects are striking, and able support is given by Frank Darien, Chester Withey and Olga Grey. The producer, Edward Dillon, has made a great success of this picture.

"Jimmy on the Job." (Beauty. Tues., Aug. 10.)—This comedy drama contains both laughs and thrills. The former are supplied by the experiences of a hayseed in a city natatorium chaperoned by his jealous wife, while the thrills are furnished by an exciting auto chase and a subsequent fight. The farmer and his wife are rescued from some city "con" men by a young automobile salesman while he is demonstrating his car to a pretty prospectie buyer.

"Comrades Three." (American. Wed., Aug. 11.)—A boy escaped from an orphan asylum, a young man masquerading as a tramp and a girl in man's attire, who has fled from her home in the tenement district, run across one another, thus supplying the title

The young man saves the girl from the insults of a band of real hobos at the expense of being severely beaten. The girl nurses his wounds and with the little orphan boy they return to the young man's home where everything ends happily. Ed Coxen and Winifred Greenwood are the principals.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"The Romance of Elaine, No. 33." (Pathe. Two reels.)—"The Searchlight Gun," is the title of this chapter of Elaine's thrilling experiences. The weapon, the invention of the mysterious professor, is sent to Elaine, anonymously, and she finds it of the greatest service in protecting herself from the gang of foreign agents who are at work mining New York harbor.

A bomb is prepared for her by the gang, and when they find she has discovered it prematurely and taken it to Prof. Arnold, on board his yacht, they attempt to destroy the party by a torpedo fired from a submarine. The torpedo goes true to its mark, and the yacht is blown to bits, but Elaine and her companions have previously gotten away in a launch. An explosion, which blows a pursuing automobile over a lofty cliff is one of the thrills with which this chapter is crowded.

"Pathe News, No. 61." (Pathe.)—Parades and winners at the Monmouth County Horse Show, Long Branch; comedy at the outing of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; the Tiddle-de-wink, a unique, 19-foot motor boat, travelling at sixty miles an hour on the Sound, off Stamford; the suppression of abbreviated bathing suits at Atlantic City; striking war pictures, showing the French-Moorish Zouaves in their sandbag trenches, and Lord Kitchener reviewing crack regiments in London; the launch of a submarine, built for Great Britain, at Quincy, Mass

"Amateur Night." (Starlight.)—Heine and Louie get in over their depth when they take up a course at Prof. Punch's gymnasium, and are matched up for a wrestling bout. In the general fight which follows the discovery of their incapacity, the gymnasium is thoroughly wrecked, and Heinie and Louie are glad to escape with such of their clothes as they can find and dress themselves in the forest. James Aubrey and Walter Kendig play the leading parts.

"The Old Ile de France," and "Native Venders of Calcutta." (Pathe. Split reel.)—The former is a collection of beautiful color pictures taken along the line of the German advance on Paris last summer. The cathedrals of Beauvais and Senlis, the chateau of Pierrefonds, and striking landscapes show the beauties of the land before the hand of war was laid upon it, and pictures taken after the German tide had been swept back show the ruin left in its wake. On the same reel are lively scenes in the busiest streets of Calcutta, the whole making an attractive and interesting reel.

"Soaking the Clothes." (Phunphilms.)—This release is unusually liberal with its laughs. Two youths deposit their "rolls" with a more sedate friend before going out to see the town, and the guardian sews the money up in the lining of his coat. Needing currency in a hurry, the two return, and finding their friend asleep, seize his clothes and pawn them. The discovery of the loss of the money starts an exciting chase, which ends in its final recovery.

"Pathe News, No. 60."—Scenes connected with the Eastland disaster; Pathe's American fashions; war news; and exposition scenes are the main events of this reel.

"Pathe News, No. 61."—There is an unusual number of good scenes concerning the European war in this number, besides several domestic events of interest.

LATE GENERAL FILM REVIEWS

"The Face in the Mirror." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., Aug. 9.)—A drama of intense interest, showing how a clever society crook after impersonating an absent guest at a reception, is caught by the husband while he is robbing the hostess in her bed-room. The thief tries to compromise the wife, but after a struggle with her husband, his true identity is discovered. A good cast is headed by Stella Razeto, Lamar Johnstone and Joe King.

"The Gold Dust and the Squaw." (Selig. Tues., Aug. 10.)—An interesting and photographically perfect western picture which contains the exciting rescue of a girl who has fallen off a steep cliff. A treacherous partner, who attempts to steal the gold taken from a rich claim, meets his just death.

"When Love is Mocked." (Selig. Three reels. Tues., Aug. 12.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"The Orang-Outang." (Selig. Sat., Aug. 14.)—An exciting story with a punch made unusually interesting by the acting of a very human orang-outang. The plot hinges upon the murder of which the orang-outang is apparently guilty. The blame is placed upon the orang-outang's master until the real murderer, a third person, confesses and the mystery is cleared up. Edith Johnson is seen in this picture.

CENTRAL FILM SELLS 86 PRINTS OF EASTLAND DISASTER

Chicago, Aug. 3.

THE Chicago "Tribune" pictures of the Eastland disaster are being booked independent of the Chicago "Tribune" weekly through the Central Film Company. One thousand feet of film has been selected from the pictures taken by the "Tribune" cameramen, who were on the scene fifteen minutes after the Eastland, with its twenty-five hundred passengers, capsized at a dock in the Chicago river.

The photography of this film is most clear, which, considering the fact that the pictures were taken during a drizzling rain, is quite remarkable. The film selected to make up this one thousand-foot reel shows the rescue work in taking the victims from the wrecked hull; the dragging of the Chicago river for bodies; the enormous crowds gathered on the bridges and in the streets; the loading of the bodies on ambulances improvised from delivery trucks; pictures of some of the survivors; the lines of relatives and friends stretching for many blocks from the second regiment armory, used as a morgue.

The proceeds from these pictures will be donated to a fund which is being raised to aid those affected by the Eastland disaster. Mr. Spanuth, manager of the Central Film Company, reports that two days after the announcement of these pictures, he had received two thousand telegrams from exhibitors and had sold eighty-six prints outright.

MARY PICKFORD PREPARES FOR ROLE OF "MADAM BUTTERFLY"

THAT Mary Pickford will create her own interpretation of the famous role of Cio-Cio-San in "Madame Butterfly" for the Famous Players Film Company is one of the most interesting artistic announcements that has been recently made.

Miss Pickford has engaged a Japanese companion, that she may familiarize herself with every mannerism and feature of Japanese as a preliminary to undertaking the life role of the little Geisha girl.

CHAPIN as LINCOLN

LINCOLN, the great American, beloved idol of all the world, whose life was a moving picture of pulsating melodrama, mystery, excitement, love, pathos, comedy, offers more food for pictures than any scenario that ever came from the most fertile brain of men.

How Lincoln can be made to pay your expenses and your profits during the coming year, that is what you may find out by sending off the attached coupon, which entitles you to a copy of the most unusual document ever written on the subject of moving pictures.

It is a big, beautifully illustrated book of many pages, full of suggestions that will make money for you whether or not you contract for the Lincoln Cycle,—new thoughts, new merchandising ideas, new money-making plans, and, in addition, the most convincing argument for a series of pictures that has yet been put before you.

It is founded on logic, based on sentiment, proven by experience and guaranteed by men who know moving pictures, who know America, who know Lincoln, who know Benjamin Chapin, who know the big exhibitors of keen judgment, who already have said they are going to carry the Lincoln Cycle.

Notice

Bayonne, N. J., August 4th, 1915.

After the release of August 5th neither David Horsley or the Centaur Film Co. will be in any way connected with the brand of comedy known and advertised as MinA, or with any release on the licensed program.

To secure a wider and more active market the contract whereby the Centaur product was released through the General Film Co. has been voluntarily cancelled, and a new agreement entered into with the Mutual Film Corporation.

The comedies originated by the Centaur Film Co. set a new standard and achieved whirlwind popularity. They will be continued under the brand name of Cub Comedies, with Milton H. Fahrney director, and George Ovey comedian. To this established strength will be added the facilities of the new Horsley studios in Los Angeles, the wonderful Horsley double exposure camera, specially prepared scripts by Francis Worcester Doughty, author of over twelve hundred stories, the Bostock Animals and a new array of talent.

Cub Comedies, together with all other David Horsley productions will, from this date forward, be released through the Mutual Film Corporation.

Announcement

Owing to a little uncertainty which has arisen in the minds of Exhibitors because of recent announcements by an independent program, the licensed manufacturer owning the M-in-A Brand of comedies released Every Thursday on the General Film Program, desires to announce that this brand of comedies will continue to be released as usual every Thursday on the licensed program.

The nature of these comedies has been, and will continue to be, such as will give the most that is possible in a one-reel production—clean, interesting comedies without a foot of padding.

The owners of this brand further desire to state that it was never their intention to discontinue this release on the General Film Program.

4 Acts of Unusual Power

"Shadows From The Past"

Scenario and Direction by Richard Ridgley

We need do no shouting about "Shadows From The Past"—we shall leave that to Exhibitors. With its truly remarkable strength of heart appeal, its perfect cast, the high artistry of its presentation and the power that comes only from perfect characterization carrying a worthy message, "Shadows From The Past" will give giant impetus to Edison prestige in Features.

This drama joins that high standard set by "The Stoning." "Shadows From The Past" is powerful because it quickens and binds the sympathies by the vivid truthfulness with which it depicts the painfully bitter life of a scarred soul constantly terrorized by an avenging nemesis who gloatingly seeks her secret. Mabel Trunnelle, as the erring sweetheart, the mother in secret, the hunted, faithful wife, displays new and even greater powers, while Marc MacDermott, as the cast-off lover seeking revenge, sets a high character criterion in villainous finesse. With Bigelow Cooper, Nellie Grant, Helen Strickland, George Wright, Jessie Stevens, and Leonie Flugrath. Friday, August 20th.

The 1916 Model Motiograph Is Giving Wonderful Results

Just one glance at the projected picture or a careful inspection of the machine will convince any unbiased Exhibitor that he should install a LATE MODEL MOTIOGRAPH.

The SLIDING DISC CONNECTION, which attaches the Framer to the Mechanism, is as solid as a rock and so simple that framer can be removed in ten seconds.

With the EXTRA BALANCE WHEEL on Cam Shaft and with proper lubrication, wear is reduced to a minimum.

St. Petersburg, Fla., July 22, 1915.

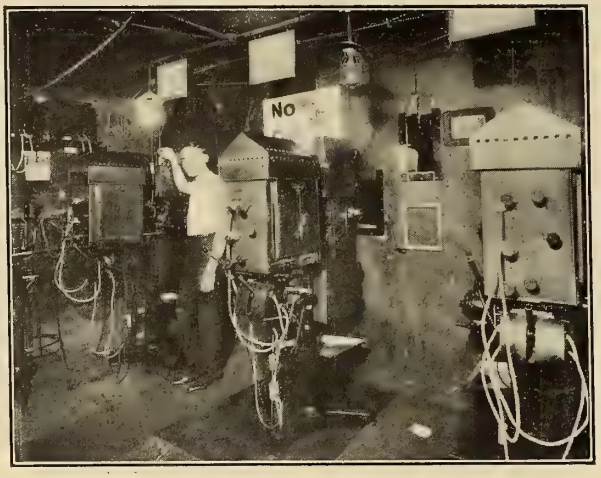
The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

I want to call your attention to the fact that the proprietor of the Rex Theatre purchased, through the Tampa Photo & Art Supply Co., two MOTIOGRAPHS, and am glad to say that the machines are the best I ever saw, and they are doing the best work that a machine of any kind can do.

After the first night's run with these machines the patrons came to the manager and wanted to know what had been done to make such a sudden change in the pictures as they had been improved one hundred per cent., and the manager informed them that he had just put in two brand new machines of the very best make. "Well," replied one of the patrons, "They must be the best for the change they have made in the pictures."

I am glad to say that I have had no trouble in any way with the new machines and they are running as fine as any machine can be made to run. Am delighted with the improvements that have been made.



Yours truly,
BOB GILLOOLEY,
Operator, The Rex Theatre.

Dear Sir:

I am sending you under separate cover, photograph of the operating room at the Star Theatre, and which I have no doubt will interest you.

These three Simplex Machines shown in the photograph have been in operation since July 24th, 1914, and have used them continually for twenty-four hours every day since then (this Theatre is open all night), without a single stop from any cause whatever; during this time the upkeep of these machines has been less than $3.00, which I know cannot be equalled by any other machine manufactured.

Trusting that the above information will be of interest to you and which I will be only too glad to confirm at any time, I remain,

Yours very truly,

Everything for Theatre, Exchange and Studio

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

Copyright, 1915, by J. H. Hallberg

19—Taking for granted that you have assured yourself about adjustment of the rotating, light interrupting shutter and that the lamp-house and arc-lamp are adjusted properly to give a uniform field of light on the screen when the lamp-house is opposite the aperture plate. What would be your next move?

Ans.—I would fasten the lamp-house carriage to the frame of the machine and then push the lamp-house over so that it will come opposite the stereopticon lens. On some of the machines two rods are provided on which the lamp-house base slides when it is pushed over opposite the stereo lens.

On other types of machines the entire lamp-house and base is fastened on a hinged casting in such a manner that instead of the base sliding the entire lamp-house with base swings over to a position opposite the stereopticon lens. The stereopticon lens may be of either of the single glass type mounted in a ring shaped holder, or with some make machines there is furnished a single glass or a double glass lens in the regular stereopticon jacket.

19 A—After the lamp-house has been pushed over opposite the stereo lens what would be your method of procedure in order to properly adjust the stereo lens?

Ans.—I would strike the arc in the lamp-house, leaving the arc adjustment exactly as it was when the lamp-house was opposite the aperture plate on the M. P. machine. After the arc has settled down, I would move the stereo lens back and forth on the rod provided for this purpose, keeping in mind that the screw adjustment for the jacket or for the entire carriage which moves the stereo supporting rod must be in the centre of its adjustment.

After a sharp outline of the slide carrier has been obtained on the screen the supporting fittings for the stereo lens may have to be moved slightly to one side or to the other or up and down in order that the outline of the stereo opening will come in exactly the same position on the screen as does the image of the aperture plate.

All lamp-house supports are provided with stops or adjustments by which the sideways movement of the lamp-house may be limited, that is, increased or decreased. Under some conditions it may become necessary to make quite a difference in the sideways position of the lamp-house in order to properly focus and centre the outline of the slide carrier on the screen.

19 B—When in the foregoing described manner a rough adjustment of the stereopticon attachment has been obtained what should be done?

Ans.—Insert preferably a non-breakable slide made of mica or metal in the slide carrier or have an old glass slide at hand and insert same in the slide carrier, then by means of the screw adjustment, on the jacket of the stereopticon lens or for the adjustment of the stereopticon holder carriage, make the fine adjustment of the lens to secure an absolutely clear and sharp image on the screen.

19 C—Have you met with difficulties in securing adjustment of the stereopticon lens when maintaining a fixed position for the lamp-house, that is, a fixed back and forth position.

Ans.—Yes, it often happens when a perfect field of light is obtained on the screen by proper adjustment of the lamp-house and the lamp within, relative to the aperture plate, that when moving the lamp-house over opposite the stereo lens the stereopticon lens comes just opposite the light interrupting shutter in front of the motion picture lens.

In a case of this kind the single glass stereo lens mounted in a narrow ring-support occupying not much over three-quarters of an inch in width is the most desirable type of stereo lens to use. With this lens it is possible to do without alteration in the position of the lamp house, but instead the front light interrupting shutter may be moved slightly back or forth on its shaft.

Always keep in mind to move the shutter in towards the lens if there is sufficient clearance on that side without danger of the shutter striking the M. P. lens tube when it is focused in its most forward position.

The double glass or a single glass stereo lens, the ordinary quarter or half size stereopticon lens jacket occupies a space of as much as four inches in length. With these it may not be possible to move the shutter on the shaft in front of the mechanism so as to give clearance.

In a case of this kind it becomes necessary to compromise on the back and forth position of the lamp-house, maybe by moving it back or forward relative to the M. P. aperture plate so that when the lamp-house is moved over opposite the stereo lens the lens will clear the light interrupting front shutter.

You understand that this is not the most perfect arrangement, but it is necessary to resort to this change in the adjustment and to sacrifice in the uniformity of illumination on the M. P. screen when, through the referred to peculiar circumstances, the stereopticon lens cannot be put in the most desirable position to clear the front shutter.

J. H. Hallberg.

GOOD PROJECTION MARRED BY WEATHER CONDITION

THE telephone was ringing a vigorous signal in the operating room. Out in front the house was packed with a Saturday's matinee audience. The chief operator taking down the telephone receiver, recognized the voice and knew it to be the manager.

There were some pointed questions asked him what had gone wrong with the projection. There was something wrong with the screen picture. In the operating room the fact had been known from a time shortly after a comedy reel started to pass through the projector. There remained on the upper reel some two hundred feet of film.

To remedy the cause for this defective projection would require too long an interruption and the operating forces decided it was better to continue through with the reel.

The manager was of the opposite idea. The seconds were passing as rapidly as the feet of film through the machine, while all of this was going on, and the reel finished much to the relief of both persons at the phones.

The day before the weather had been a balmy, warm day in weather conditions. This afternoon a change in weather conditions had brought about a cold, foggy atmosphere. During such weather it is not unusual to have moisture condensation on the interior surfaces of the two condensing lenses.

Especially so when there has not been time to gradually warm up these lenses, and, in other cases, where the lens mounting is not properly ventilated.

The condensing lenses were not the seat of trouble this time. The unusual had happened. The condensation was on the interior surfaces of the objective lenses where no ventilation is provided. Hence, the time it would have taken to open the barrel to free the heated air and why the operator continued through with the comedy reel. With another class of picture, this defective projection would have been too serious a matter to continue. Stopping the projection would be the only thing for the reputation of the house.

In northern climates operators cannot be too careful in guarding against moisture condensing on any of the lenses. As also with condensation on slides.

The thing to do is always make it a point to gradually warm up the lamphouse, condensing lenses, as also in this case of an actual happening where this condensation took place in the lens barrel of the objective lens, to either open the mounting or allow the rays of light to pass through these lenses and let them receive some heat in this way.

Before threading in a film, let the light be projected, as in the usual manner, only have the shutter blade in a position to shut off the light from continuing on to the screen. Within a short time the optical system will have warmed up without forming the "dew-point" to cause this moisture condensation.

Glass is a very poor conductor of heat and will not absorb nor radiate heat as quickly as the air. Any confined air in lens mountings will absorb heat through the metal and become heated before the inner surfaces of the lenses will have become equally heated.

Unless sufficient time is given to allow for the slower heating of the glass, the dew-point forms and condensation follows from natural causes.

PREMIUM WAR RAGES AMONG PITTSBURGH EXHIBITORS

THERE is a war on among some of the exhibitors in the Pittsburgh section and before the war ends there might be a few less motion picture theatres. It has all been brought about by the fact that some of the proprietors are trying their best to get all of the patronage for their houses and do not want the other fellow to get any money out of the game.

One of the motion picture houses here a few months ago started giving a set of dishes away each week. Then things began to happen. Another of the motion picture theatres then announced that once a week it would give $100.00 away in gold. Another theatre not to be outdone by any of them, announced that it would give a Ford machine away each month and it was thought that the trouble was over for the time being.

But not so. Competition is the life of trade, they figured, and overlooked the fact that it could also be ruinous to the life of trade.

The latest thing in prizes now offered is a house and lot for the holder of the lucky number at another motion picture theatre here and what will be given next no one knows.

It is an outrage, to say the least, and has done more harm to the motion picture business here, as only the ones giving prizes away get the patrons and even at that the amounts given away do not come in by way of profits.

In several instances the motion picture theatre proprietors are running their places for the public and are overlooking the fact that while they are getting so generous they are not making any money for themselves.

SEVENTY-SECOND STREET PLAYHOUSE A FLOURISHING EAST SIDE THEATRE

ONE of the most flourishing neighborhood houses on the east side of Manhattan Island, New York City, is the Seventy-second Street Playhouse, located on Seventy-second street, between First and Second avenues.

It is a moderate-sized theatre, seating seven hundred, with a ten and fifteen cents admission price and using Universal, World Film Service, and "The Goddess," the Vitagraph serial, as an extra attraction.

Douglas Faulkner, the manager, has, during the fifteen months of his direction of the theatre, increased its popularity and attendance until it compares favorably with any theatre of its size on the East Side. Music is one of the features of the Seventy-second Street Theatre, and this is only one of the numerous ways in which Mr. Faulkner contrives to make his live-wire managership felt.

INCANDESCENTS AS WHITE ROSES IN LOBBY DISPLAY ARE USED IN TEXAS THEATRE

LOBBY displays have a strong tendency to make new patrons, as proved by many progressive exhibitors.

The Old Mill Theatre in Dallas, Texas, has employed many unique ideas in lobby display for years past, and through them this playhouse has builded a reputation that extends throughout the South.

When showing the V-L-S-E feature, Viola Allen in "The White Sister," the front of the house was covered with an electrical display that, when lighted, converted each bulb into a brilliant white rose. The effect was beautiful.

POSTERS A-PLENTY AND ABUNDANT ELECTRIC DISPLAYS DRAW PATRONS IN CROWDS

THAT exhibitors should strongly advertise their features is proved by the volume of business done by the Portola theatre in San Francisco, where capacity audiences are the rule all day and every day.

The weekly reservations of this theatre for its Big Four features include 54-sheet stands, one hundred 24-sheet stands, half and quarter-page newspaper advertisements and numerous six, three and one-sheet posters, as well as an abundance of electrical displays.

THE MORE INTENSE A LIGHT, THE DARKER IS THE SHADOW WHICH IT CASTS

FROM this axiom in the laws of light a deduction can readily be formed that in order to have the facial expression brought out to the fullest value in the projected picture there should not be used too intense a light in its projection.

A little experimentation along these lines of obtaining the correct light value in the projected picture is well worth one's time. Procure an adjustable rheostat of generous size and capacity to give an over intense illumination. Then vary this light in all degrees of intensity and compare the results. Not once, but repeat these experiments, making sure an error in judgment of the light value does not take part.

The order of the present day is for better pictures. Better posed pictures. Better negatives. Then the positives, and last, the projected picture. Unless due care is given in the projection of the finished positive film, all the care and refinements given by the directors, actors, cameraman, negative developers and others will not be given the audience.

Taking the other classes of public performances, what do we find. After an author has written his play, the composer his music, these are studied and rehearsals are gone through with before the public is invited to witness the performance. Then why not be it required to do something in this way of a rehearsal with the projection? It is the actor or artist interpreting the author's ideas for the public's approval. It is only just that all in the positive film be given to its fullest value on the screen and its the duty of the projecting forces to do this. There are just only two conditions of things the operator can control—LIGHT VALUE and SPEED—in interpreting the author's ideas. It is to be surmised most operators do not fully appreciate the importance of these two factors in getting the most out of a film.

DEFINITION AND HISTORY OF THE ELECTRIC ARC

THE electric arc is the phenomenon of light and heat occurring when an electric current persists in maintaining itself across an opening made in its circuit. When of short duration and of disruptive character it is known as a spark, the term ARC being used to designate a continued discharge across a bridge of conducting vapor.

The spark was first observed by Volta in 1800, in which year, too, Sir Humphry Davy discovered the particularly bright spark between charcoal points separated in air or under liquids, and exhibited it before the Royal Institution with the aid of a battery of 150 elements. It was not until 1808 that Davy, with a battery of 2,000 elements, was able to exhibit the first true arc, an extended flame nearly four inches long, before the Royal Institution. This discharge was maintained between horizontal charcoal points, and owing to the current of heated air which is created, assumed a bow or arch shape, hence its name of "arc."

The intense brilliancy and whiteness of this light resulted in wide-spread efforts to utilize it practically. A great improvement followed when Foucault introduced in 1843 carbons made of gas-coke to replace the charcoal pencils of Davy's. Another step was when Grove used the salts of sodium and potassium to steady and increase the length of the arc. Many attempts were made to further adopt this new light to practical use, but the cost of electrical energy generated by means of batteries was so high no commercial success was accomplished until the advent of the dynamo had been developed.

BAXTER, JR., manager of the Lyceum theatre, Spring City, Utah, announces that his new house will have a seating capacity of four hundred and will be equipped with Power's 6-A machines, and when completed will be modern and up-to-the-minute in every respect. The theatre represents an investment of $8,000.

EXHIBITORS IN CHICAGO SECTION INVESTIGATING MOTIOGRAPH MERITS

THE Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company is still working overtime in an effort to supply the demand for the 1916 model Motiograph.

Exhibitors from the Chicago section of the country are making special trips to Chicago to view its demonstration.

J. E. ROBIN, PROJECTION EXPERT, NOW GENERAL MANAGER OF SALES FOR BAIRD PROJECTOR

JOSEPH E. ROBIN, for a number of years widely known as a projection expert and sales manager, particularly in connection with the Simplex machine, joined the business staff of the Baird Moving Picture Machine Company, of 24 East Twenty-third street, New York, on August 2, as general manager of sales.

From an apprentice stage electrician, Mr. Robin has worked himself to high positions as electrical engineer and projection specialist. Besides having a high technical knowledge of electricity, chemistry and mechanics, he has a personality that ingratiates him wherever he travels and makes many friends for the company he represents.

JOSEPH E. ROBIN

In his boyhood Robin was an electrical prodigy. He had a journeyman's knowledge at twelve, but was obliged to take his first job as an apprentice, which was as a stage electrician at the Bon Ton theatre in Salt Lake City in 1893. He later held many jobs as stage electrician in many cities. This naturally brought him in touch with the motion picture machine when it was first introduced in the American theatres. Becoming a motion picture operator was only a step and he has been connected with that branch for fifteen years.

Robin first was a Biograph operator; then with Lumiere; later with Pathé and finally with the Edison Company. Then he was appointed projection expert for Kinemacolor, which was just becoming known.

When the Simplex projector was introduced, early in 1912, Mr. Robin joined that company as special representative and toured the United States and Canada for the next three years.

Since leaving Simplex he has been at the San Francisco Exposition, where he was appointed advisory engineer to the Director of Works and supervised the many projection outfits on the grounds.

Mr. Robin has compiled many standard tables on projection, particularly the elaborate Simplex table. He is also a member of the I. A. T. S. E.

LIKES PICTURES SO WELL HE SEEKS THEATRE AFTER THE SHOW

A BURGLAR was discovered hiding under the stairs in the rear of the Novelty theatre, at 3530 Easton avenue, St. Louis, by William West, a private watchman, on the night of July 28. West captured the man and was taking him to a nearby patrol box when he was suddenly tripped by the burglar, who fled.

Fifteen dollars worth of jewelry was found under the stairs recently, that had been stolen, and it is believed that the man was the thief who had come to get the jewelry.

SOCIETY BEAUTY WILL SING IN MASK AT BUFFALO THEATRE

MISS BUFFALO is the name given a very beautiful and mysterious local girl who Manager Schlesinger announces will sing at the Palace theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., beginning Monday, August 9.

Mr. Schlesinger says her identity will not be disclosed and that she will sing in a mask. It is rumored that she is a popular society girl.

Questions Answered

Repairing Equipment

Here Mr. Hallberg will answer all the questions you send in—no matter how simple or difficult.

SIZE ON LENSE FOR 70-FOOT SHOW

S. & B. Hawkeye, Ia.—We have a Power's 6-A machine and at present we are throwing our picture about 55 foot, but in the near future we are going to occupy a new building where the projection distance will be 70 feet. Kindly notify through the News if we will need a new lens, and if so, the kind we will need.

Ans.—In the absence of information from you as to the size picture which you are now throwing, and the size picture you wish to throw at the new distance, it is impossible to give you the correct size of lens.

A Standard size picture is slightly over 9 feet high by 12 feet wide, and at 55 feet you would, for this size picture, use about a four-inch E. F. lens. To make this same size picture at your new distance of 70 feet you would require a 5¼-inch E. F. lens.

In order not to delay you, in case you intend to make the change very soon, I may give you the following lens sizes for a 70-foot distance.

Six-inch lens at 70 feet makes picture about 7 feet high by 10½ feet wide.

Five and three-quarter-inch lens at 70 feet makes picture about 8.3 feet high by 11 feet wide.

Five and a half-inch lens at 70 feet makes picture about 8.7 feet high by 11.6 feet wide.

Five and a quarter-inch lens at 70 feet makes picture about 9 feet high by 12 feet wide.

Five-inch lens at 70 feet makes picture about 9.6 feet high by 12.8 feet wide.

Four and three-quarter-inch lens at 70 feet makes picture about 10 feet high by 13.4 feet wide.

Four and a half-inch lens at 70 feet makes picture about 10.6 feet high by 14.11 feet wide.

Four and a quarter-inch lens at 70 feet makes picture about 11.2 feet high by 14.11 feet wide.

Four-inch lens at 70 feet makes picture about 11.10 feet high by 15.10 feet wide.

You will note that the 11 by 15 picture made by the 4-inch lens at 70 feet is about as large a picture as can be recommended for an ordinary theatre, seating up to 1,000 people. If the theatre is very narrow and the ceiling is low, a smaller picture will of course have to be used.

When ordering lenses remember the above figures are for the M. P. lens, and all you have to do is to state that you desire to have the stereo lens to match.

If you have time, write again and state just what size picture you now have and what size picture you wish to project at the new distance. Then I will give you exact figures.

MOTOR WITH EDISON B MODEL

H. O. B., Markle, Ind.—I have an Edison Underwriters Model B machine. Can I put a motor on same with good results? Please give size of motor.

Ans.—Any good electric motor, perferably one provided with a speed controller which at full normal speed is capable of delivering ⅛ H. P., can be used for driving an Edison machine.

Operators have applied a motor for driving the Edison model B machine by putting a pulley on the outside of the small pulley which drives the take-up belt. This pulley can be made by any mechanic and fastened onto the take-up pulley on the mechanism. Be sure the pulley extends out far enough so that it will clear the light interrupting shutter.

The pulley should be about five inches in diameter, and should be made for a round belt and could be directly driven from a motor having adjustable speed control like the Kimble motor, if your current is alternating, or by any standard make motor provided with a groove pulley and speed controller if your current is direct.

You want to make sure, however, that the Underwriters will not make any objection to the use of motor drive on your Edison machine, as the application of such a device might invalidate your insurance, because the Edison model B machine is not approved by the underwriters for motor drive. You understand, of course, that the motor should be so placed that in framing the mechanism up and down the belt will remain tight in all positions of the framing lever. This is a matter for your operator or local mechanic to take care of.

MACHINES FOR TWO-WING SHUTTERS

H. M. J., Roselle Park, N. J.—In your issue of July 24, J. H. Hallberg describes under heading Motion Picture Projection Simplified, a two-wing shutter, and claims very perfect results can be obtained with this two-wing shutter when it is speeded up on specially designed machines, that run this shutter 50 per cent. faster.

I believe that he is right, but would like very much to see a machine operating under these conditions. I beg to ask if you will answer through your column what machines are specially designed for using a two-wing shutter running at this speed.

Ans.—The two-wing shutter operating at 50 per cent. faster than normal speed with D. C. at the arc is one of the features of the Baird projector. The Baird projector can be seen at the office of C. R. Baird & Co., 24 East Twenty-third street, New York City, or at various dealers throughout the country who are handling the machine.

CONDENSER COMBINATION WITH MOTIOGRAPH

C. W., Columbus, Kans.—I would like you to advise me through the projection department, what condenser combination I should use with a Motiograph machine using 40 amperes D. C., four-inch E. F. lens with a throw of 55 feet.

How far should the condensers be from the aperture plate of the machine? I expect to use Meniscus Bi Convex condensers.

Ans.—For the conditions which you specify I would recommend two 6½-inch focus condensers spaced approximately 3/16 of an inch apart. The distance from the condenser mount to the aperture should be as short as possible and still permitting you to cover the aperture fully. By a few experiments with the film gate open and your crater properly formed you can readily discover the best position for the condensing lenses relative to the aperture and the arc relative to the condensing lenses.

When you order your Meniscus Bi Convex condenser combination specify that you wish the focus of the combination to be equal to two 6½-inch plano convex condensers placed in a mount approximately 3/16 of an inch apart.

FEASTER MACHINES INSTALLED IN MANY THEATRES

THE Feaster non-rewind device is being installed in many theatres and studios in New York City and elsewhere. The first installation of this great time and labor saving magazine on the Pacific coast will be in the Lasky studios, at Hollywood, California, which follows as a direct result of the exhibit of Byron Chandler, Inc., at the National Convention.

NEW GLOVE THEATRE, SEATING 1,400, HANDSOMELY DECORATED

THE New Glove theatre, named appropriately after the town in which it is situated, Gloversville, N. Y., which is now operated under the management of Cady and Dartch, is one of the finest photoplay houses in the central part of the state.

The theatre has a seating capacity of 1,400. The building is fireproof and has thirteen exits. The auditorium is handsomely decorated and lighted by the indirect system. The aisles are broad and richly carpeted. The ceiling and wall decorative scheme consists of old ivory and a delicate shade of brown, with high lights trimmed with gold.

Wide upholstered opera chairs contribute to the comfort of the patrons. Lady ushers show the patrons to their seats, while matrons are in attendance to administer to the wants of the feminine patronage.

Up-to-date heating and ventilating systems have been installed, so that the theatre will be sufficiently warm in winter and kept at a cool even temperature in summer.

In the operating booth are two Powers 6-A motor-driven machines, and a Martin rotary converter furnishes light and power for the apparatus.

A five-piece orchestra plays the musical accompaniment to the pictures. The management has inaugurated a policy of presenting only high grade films for the patrons of the theatre.

S. P. Whiting is the house manager of the New Glove. Mr. Whiting began his theatrical career as usher of Smith's theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. Since then he has been connected with various amusement enterprises, and was one of the designers of the Titanic disaster electrical spectacular production, which became very successful wherever put on exhibition. Mr. Whiting was also connected with the J. B. Morris family theatre circuit in the capacity of general manager.

30 THEATRES IN TRENTON RUNNING THROUGH SUMMER

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Trenton, N. J., August 3.

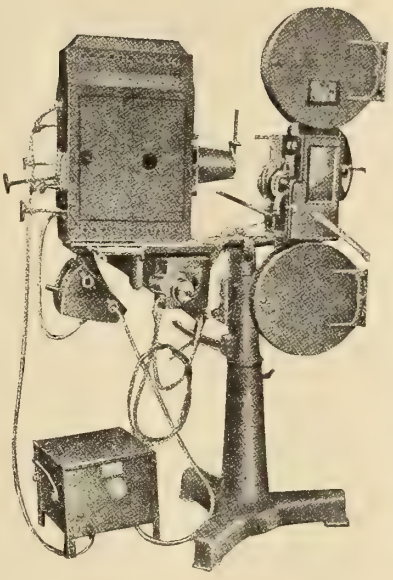
ALL of the motion picture houses here, approximately thirty, are running throughout the summer season for the first time in years. Heretofore nearly one-half of the theatres have been in the habit of displaying the time-worn sign "Will Open Early in August."

The direct cause of the open-all-year policy is not so much due to an increase of screen fans as it is to the efforts of the managers to hold on to their regular patrons.

Because of the keen rivalry among the picture house owners the 103,000 inhabitants of this city are enjoying the highest priced feature films at the usual commercial film prices.

The Paramount program leads in the field for popularity here and the State Street theatre, which offers this feature, is doing a record business notwithstanding the heated season. The William Fox features come next at the Trent. The Pathé romance of "Elaine," started here recently, packs the various theatres that offer this attraction. "The Goddess," of the Vitagraph program, has made a ten strike. The several houses that are now offering this serial are well patronized.

The Taylor opera house, realizing the importance of the photoplay features, has added two-reel special features, including the Charles Chaplin series, in addition to the Keith vaudeville show.



NEW YORK BRANCH PLANS CARNIVAL AT BRIGHTON BEACH ON AUGUST 21

AN enthusiastic and largely attended meeting of the general committee of the New York Motion Picture Exhibitors League, having in charge the big Carnival and Field Day for August 21 at Brighton Beach, was held recently at the league headquarters.

Brighton Beach Hotel was determined upon as the place to have the shore dinner, and in the midst of a report of one committee someone interrupted and made a motion that every man in the room dig down in his pocket and produce a definite sum of money for preliminary expenses. All those present immediately produced.

A ways and means committee empowered to get into rapid fire action, consisting of Samuel Trigger, chairman ex-officio, Louis Blumenthal, Lee Ochs, Elias Mayer, and Isaac Hartstall, was appointed and got on the job forthwith.

NEWS OF THE PENNSYLVANIA PHOTOPLAY THEATRES

MANY improvements are being made at the Coliseum theatre at New Castle, Pa., this month and when the house opens the latter part of August it will be one of the prettiest as well as most modern in that section of Pennsylvania.

Messrs. Hanitch and Robins, who are managers of the theatre, stated that the theatre would be finished in white and gold both inside and out. The management will also install new chairs so that the house will be more comfortable for their patrons and also will be able to accommodate larger audiences.

Other up to the minute improvements will be made to the theatre and when it is completed it will be more in keeping with the style that these two able managers desire to keep their houses.

Beechview, a suburb of Pittsburgh, is to have a new thetre. John Kahler has secured title to the George H. Hobson holding of 60 by 100 feet in Beechview avenue. It is said a new theatre is to be erected on the property and when it is completed it will be one of the best small theatres in the South Hills section of Pittsburgh.

Longview's $50,000 opera house, located at Longview, Texas, said to be the finest in Northeast Texas, was opened with a special feature picture show night of July 29. Mayor Rodenheim delivered a short address and was loudly cheered as he praised the Longview spirit, especially of F. T. Rembert who built the opera house. The building has a cooling plant for summer and heating plant for winter. It is equipped with everything necessary to make a modern play house. A large crowd was present at the opening performance.

SEVERAL THEATRES IN BUFFALO CHANGE MANAGEMENT

Special to Motion Picture News

Buffalo, N. Y., August 3.

EDWARD L. HYMAN, assistant manager of the Strand theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., is enjoying a much earned vacation at Crystal Beach, Ontario, Canada.

Leon Schlesinger, former manager of the Strand theatre, Toronto, Canada, is now manager of the Palace theatre, Buffalo. The Palace has recently changed its policy of showing features and is using the General regular program. It is believed, however, that the policy will revert to features in the fall. At present there are four changes a week.

Joe Schuchert and Art Smith are now in control of both the Central Park and Premier theatres, Buffalo. These houses are both in the Central Park district and are enjoying good business.

Lionel Edel has been meeting with unusual success as manager of the Flash theatre, in Tonawanda, N. Y.

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL FACTORY IS READY TO FILL ORDERS FOR NEW MODEL

THE Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, makers of the Motiograph, had an elaborate display of the 1916 model at the national convention held at San Francisco. The Western representative, Edward H. Kemp, had complete charge of the booth and decorations, the booth being draped in black velvet and the lettering done in gold.

Mr. Kemp reports that all machines consigned to him were sold during the convention and orders taken for a number of others to be shipped direct from the factory. The interest shown by the film manufacturers and exhibitors more than fulfilled his expectations and he was given the privilege of running the official film.

Since the close of the convention the factory states that they have received quite a number of wires to ship machines to film manufacturers which was due to the exhibit at the convention and especially to the projection which the Motiograph produced in the miniature theatre on the convention floor. The factory is now working overtime and hopes to fill orders on this new model machine promptly.

CENTRAL FILM SUPPLIES DECORATIONS FOR MOVIE INN

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, August 3.

THREE months ago the art photo and display department under the direction of the Central Film Company, of Chicago, was started by Edward Rosenberg to supply exhibitors in the Middle Western States with lobby pictures and display frames, manufactured by the Kraus Manufacturing Company, of New York.

The very attractive decorations both of the Movie Inn and the lobby of the Studebaker theatre were supplied by this company. Mr. Rosenberg states that there is a great demand for artistic lobby decorations among the Western exhibitors and that their business has been steadily growing, even during the summer months.

MOTION PICTURE PARTIES ARE NOW THE FAD

THE recent popular fad of giving motion picture parties has caused the owners of the Royal theatre at 1028 Main street, Kansas City, Mo., to remodel the house.

More than ten thousand dollars will be spent in putting in a mezzanine floor for the benefit of those society members who desire to give parties. The work is being done at night after each performance.

There will be loges seating 175 persons. The floor will be covered with a velvet carpet.

Frank L. Newman, manager, said that when the improvements are made the Royal will be one of the finest theatres in the west.

A marble entrance is to be built for the floor.

FEWER NEW ENGLAND THEATRES CLOSED THAN AT FORMER PERIODS

THERE are fewer theatres closed in the New England district at present than is the case usually this time of year. And there are more theatres in process of construction than usual. In addition to those already mentioned from time to time in the "News," these other houses are being built for fall openings: One in Inman square, Somerville; one in Harvard square, Somerville; in Southbridge; in Webster; one each in New Haven and New Bedford, by the Olympia interests in Boston, and one in Concord, N. H.

The Strand theatre on Center street in Jamaica Plain, Mass., has closed to reopen with an improved show in early September.

ATTRACTING PATRONAGE BY PROFUSE LIGHTING

THE Lyric, 1017 Sixteenth street, Denver, is one of the most attractive theatres in the city. The theatre is said to have more candle power light per square foot than any building west of the Mississippi River. Its appearance at night is very striking, the large electric sign composed of the letters in the name Lyric making a brilliant display of illumination.

The dimensions of the house are 25 by 100, and the structure was rebuilt in 1914. Fresh air has been amply provided for in the installation and adequate exhaust fans and roof ventilators. The theatre has a seating capacity of 355, and the chairs were supplied by the Centennial School Supply Company. A Power's 6-A projection machine shows the pictures in a seventy-six feet throw. An ordinary white screen is in use.

The decorative scheme is pleasing in effect, consisting of an oatmeal tan paper as a background for red panels. A Wilton carpet conveys an impression of "hominess." The draperies consist of a superior quality of velours. Cork runways in the aisles deaden the sound of incoming and outgoing crowds.

The management has installed a three-piece orchestra, consisting of a piano, 'cello and violin. The musical equipment is augmented by a Wurlitzer, style C, organ.

Wrightman and Megahan, the owners and managers, are using the General Film service, and give from ten to twelve shows a day. The admission price is five cents, afternoon and evening. Four reels are shown at each five-cent run. Ten people are employed by the management. The theatre is located in the business center, and it is estimated that 40,000 persons pass the door of the Lyric daily. A neat display of lobby frames catch the eyes of pedestrians.

BRIDGEPORT THEATRE OWNER WILL ENLARGE CHAIN

PLANS to expand his present circuit of moving picture and vaudeville theatres, to include a chain of amusement places extending from coast to coast, and taking in several of the largest cities in the country, are in course of completion by Frank A. Keeney, owner and manager of the Empire theatre on Main street, Bridgeport, Conn., by Labor Day, the present circuit of 12 theatres controlled by Mr. Keeney, and including houses in Baltimore, Brooklyn, Newark, Birmingham, Bridgeport,, New Britain and Long Island City, will be increased to a total of 25 theatres.

Manager George Greene, of the Empire, stated that the plans for the expansion of the business of the movie magnate were in an embryonic state as yet, but that with the advent of September, in all probability the theatres under Mr. Keeney's control would number approximately 25 and would include large cities in various parts of the country.

ATLANTA'S STRAND UNDERGOES CHANGES WITH DE BRULER IN CHARGE

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Atlanta, Ga., August 3.

THE management of the Strand, one of Atlanta's newest and most splendidly appointed theatres, has been placed in the hands of Ralph DeBruler, who has assumed charge and already has shown his handiwork in a number of important changes.

Mr. DeBruler is one of the South's best known exhibitors and already is widely known in Atlanta, having managed the Montgomery here most successfully for over a year.

One of the most important changes Mr. DeBruler has inaugurated is the installation of an orchestra of eight skilled musicians, all soloists. The music now is one of the big features of the Strand's program and is rapidly adding to the popularity of the theatre.

Just as much care is given in the selection of the music as in the selection of pictures, with the result that the public has grown to know that a treat is in store in the way of good music at all times.

Mr. DeBruler is booking Fox, Metro and Mutual master pictures for the Strand, the business of which, since he assumed control, has made him one of the most optimistic exhibitors in this section.

STATE STREET, CHICAGO, WILL HAVE ANOTHER MOTION PICTURE THEATRE

STATE street, Chicago, is to have a new motion picture theatre.

Kernott & Beck, who heretofore have devoted their attentions to the restaurant business, are said to be behind the project.

It is understood the firm has acquired from Bishop & Co. the leasehold estate on the property at 6 South State street for a consideration said to have been $75,000.

Although the building at this address bears a sign that it will be removed after August 1, none of the persons directly interested would discuss the proposition. It was learned, however, that the site would be improved with a new motion picture theatre.

NEW ALAMO THEATRE OPENS IN NASHVILLE

THE Park theatre, at Grace and Meridian streets, Nashville, is now under the management of F. H. Brazil. He has taken over the lease on this house and is offering the Universal program.

The new Alamo theatre at Nashville opened last week. This house is located in Church street between Fourth and Fifth avenues.

It has a seating capacity of several hundred and the seats are arranged so that the audience faces the entrance.

$85,000 THEATRE WILL BE ERECTED IN CHICAGO

A MOVING picture theatre will be erected on the northwest corner of Division street and Washtenaw avenue, Chicago, by Fred Becklenberg. The theatre itself will seat 740 and the building, which will also contain four stores and a number of flats, will cost $85,000. Thomas R. Bishop is the architect. The lot measures 100 x 122 feet.

ANOTHER $100,000 HOUSE FOR DENVER

PLANS have been drawn for another modern film house to be erected in Denver at a cost of $100,000, and is to occupy the present site of the Lyric theatre on Sixteenth street, just opposite the Tabor Grand.

The entrance to the new theatre will be on Sixteenth street. The present theatre site will be augmented by the addition of two adjoining lots.

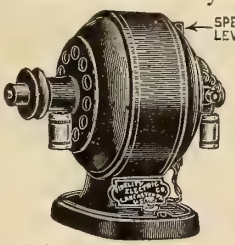
In architecture the building is to embrace all the most modern innovations in the building of film houses. It will be different from any film theatre in Denver, it is said, and will have many unique features, similar to those of the Strand, now nearing completion.

SHYMANSKI VISITS CHICAGO TO EXAMINE MOTIOGRAPH

W. E. SHYMANSKI, of the Marathon theatre stores of Wausau, Wis., was in Chicago last week to look over the 1916 Motiograph, and to make arrangements to receive a shipment of them.

Mr. Shymanski says that conditions in the Wausau section are better this summer than they have been in years. The theatres in this part of the country all seem to be making money and many of them are being re-modeled and enlarged.

46 CEILING FANS KEEP THEATRE COOL AS AN AIRDOME



THE Olympia theatre, at 1422 Market street, St. Louis, has had installed forty-six ceiling fans, by the manager, Charles Skourras, who wanted to compete with the airdome by keeping his theatre cool and fresh and well ventilated. The large audiences at the Olympia have well repaid him for his thought and care for the comfort of his patrons.

SINGERS IN INDIANAPOLIS CHANGE THEATRES

McDONALD and Sherwood, piano harmonists and singers, formerly at the Alhambra theatre, Indianapolis, where their music was one of the features of the program, are now playing and singing at the Crystal theatre, in North Illinois street, Indianapolis.

THE KINETO ADVERTISING CLOCK

Best Invention of the Age

Designed to meet a long felt want in furnishing theatres an attractive time-piece that could be seen at all times by the entire audience. The clock, although part of a machine which occupies less than two cubic feet of space, reflects the time on an aluminum screen with a dial from three to six feet in diameter. In addition, there are EIGHT ADS, each ad appearing for a period of three minutes and changing automatically.

The most dignified and high class clock that has ever been offered.

The scenic effect of the invisible clock, reflecting the time on the screen is a decided and distinct attraction and greatly adds to the theatre's interior equipment. WRITE OR WIRE AT ONCE FOR FULL PARTICULARS.

Directory of New Theatres

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres throughout the country. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, and this department fails to record the fact, kindly communicate it at once for publication.

CALIFORNIA.

THE theatre at Ninth and Georgia streets, Los Angeles, eight hundred seats, which has been dark for the past several weeks, has been leased by Messrs. Foley and Stoltz, and was opened recently with a feature program.

O. H. Menette, owner of the Queen theatre, Vermont avenue and Jefferson streets, Los Angeles, has remodeled the house and redecorated and opened with a feature program three days a week, and four days of regular program. The house was formerly leased to several parties all of whom made more or less of a failure of the business.

C. M. Dubois, owner of the Symphony theatre, 608 South Broadway, Los Angeles, has succeeded Harry Seebeck as manager. No change will be made in the policy of the house, which has seven hundred seats and makes a feature of good musical programs. A regular general program will continue at this house.

"Pop" Fisher, known along the coast as the father of musical comedies, who brought the first beauty chorus to the coast, has purchased the Optic theatre at 536 South Main street of Irving Auger, and took possession this week.

George Morrison has purchased the Wilshire theatre at second street and Western avenue, Los Angeles.

A very elaborate eight hundred-seat theatre is being constructed at Pine and Fourth streets, Long Beach, which will be under the management of Archie Levy, former coast vaudeville theatre manager. The house will be opened within the next few weeks with a policy of feature programs. Two Powers 6-A projection machines with motor generators have been purchased for this theatre through the Los Angeles General Film Exchange.

S. H. Friedlander, well known theatre man of the West coast who formerly managed legitimate stage houses in Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles, has leased the Empire theatre, an eight hundred seat house in the residence district on Pico near Alvarado street, Los Angeles.

He has changed the policy of the house and will run feature programs exclusively, changing every other day. He is issuing a very attractive lot of advertising matter, and is receiving a very satisfactory patronage from people of the vicinity.

Henry Cornfeld, owner and manager of the Strand theatre at Fifty-fourth street and Vermont avenue, Los Angeles, has purchased a thirty-five hundred dollar Fotoplayer which is being installed in the house. The theatre re-opened Wednesday evening, August 3, when a special musical program was given under the direction of the manufacturers who had representatives there from their San Francisco offices. For this event Manager Cornfeld his issued very tasty engraved invitations to all regular patrons of the theatre, and it promises to be one of the biggest events in the life of this suburban section in Los Angeles.

W. B. Curtis, known in theatrical circles as the original Samuel of Posen, who has been living a life of retirement from the stage on his orange ranch north of Los Angeles, has leased the opera house at Oxnard and is having it refurnished and remodeled, and will soon open with a program of feature productions. The theatre will have a seating capacity of nine hundred.

The Mason theatre, a modern house with eight hundred seats, at Anaheim, has been sold by Louis Bedding to Max Hartfield, and Mr. Bedding has purchased the Colonial theatre of six hundred and fifty seats of C. E. Hudson at Orange, California.

Fred Lorelli, manager of the New Victory at Oxnard, California, who has been using regular Universal program, was in the city last week and made contract for all Broadway star attractions for this house. The first Universal Broadway star feature to be shown in Los Angeles is booked for Miller's theatre, junction of Ninth and Main streets, for the coming week, and Managers Dan Markowitz and Dave Bushon of the local Universal exchange will give Manager Miller every cooperation possible to make this a big success. The Weber-Smalley subject, "Scandal" is to be shown and a special musical program is being arranged.

INDIANA.

The Lyric theatre, Indianapolis, which has been running feature photoplays during the summer, closed August 1 while decorators redecorate the theatre, previous to the opening of the popular vaudeville season.

The Lyric theatre at Connersville, Ind., has been re-opened after being closed for ten days while a ventilating system was being installed and the theatre completely overhauled. A new ticket booth and large brass bound bill boards have been added.

Miss Katherine Siler is cashier and George B. Thompson, Jr., is assistant manager of the Family theatre at Lafayette now.

The Auditorium picture garden at Connersville, made up in Japanese garden style, has been opened and much favorable comment has been made on the appearance of the garden.

Sam Carlton and Cecil Sawyer have taken over the lease on Blinn theatre at Frankfort, Ind., from Mufford and Lankebrake, who have been in charge of the theatre since it was built ten years ago. The new managers will do business under the firm name of the Carlton Company.

My Show, at Rochester, Ind., has been bought by Ray Blauser, of Kewanna, Mich. Blauser will take charge of the theatre at once and has announced he will continue running the serials which have been shown at the theatre heretofore.

Many changes are being made in the interior of The Why Not theatre at Greenfield, Ind., by Manager White. The orchestra pit is being enlarged to accommodate twenty musicians.

Emil Iron of Lafayette, has opened a moving picture at Rossville, Ind. His pictures failed to arrive in time for the first show in the afternoon, but arrived just before time for the night show.

Andrew Greener has sold the Princess theatre at Huntingburg to R. T. Megibben. Mr. Megibben and Mr. Greener opened the Princess two years ago, but later Megibben went to Cleveland, Miss., where he opened a theatre called the Princess. He will use a licensed service from the General Film Company of St. Louis. Two features will be shown each week.

A new Power's 6-A machine is being installed in the opera house at Franklin, Ind., and the operator's booth is being lowered. O. I. Demaree, manager of the theatre, has announced that a new screen will be installed later.

KANSAS

H. P. Wareham of Manhattan, is spending between fifteen and twenty thousand dollars in remodeling the opera house for a picture theatre. First class features will be run when he opens for business some time the early part of September.

T. M. Henneberry is the new manager for J. W. Wendel, at Junction City. Mr. Henneberry took charge on Monday, July 26.

The Belldorf at Independence, will be opened by V. L. Wagner in the very near future.

A new house has been opened at Chanute, by W. B. Emrich a road man for the Fox Film Corporation of Kansas City. The house will be managed by Mrs. Emrich.

Joseph Hickey has opened a new house at Ellis. It has a seating capacity of six hundred.

MISSOURI

The Twelfth street theatre in Kansas City, owned by the Standard Amusement Company, was damaged by fire on the night of Tuesday, July 20. The damage was slight, the fire being confined to the fourth floor. The house was closed but one day.

The Alamo theatre at Thirty-fifth and Main streets, in Kansas City is now a five cent house. Formerly features were shown here for ten cents.

B. R. Parker has purchased the Linwood Gardens from Hunt and Gaskell. This is an airdome that made good last summer and is situated on Linwood and Prospect, Kansas City.

The Merit theatre at Thirty-first and Main streets, Kansas City, has been purchased by F. L. Wallin from W. G. Jones. W. L. Gleason, an old time manager, will take charge of the house for Mr. Jones.

J. T. Coleman purchased the Dale theatre at Twenty-fourth and Troost avenue, Kansas City, from A. W. Bennett.

The Roanoke theatre, at Thirty-ninth and Summit avenue, Kansas City, has been sold by J. T. Wilson to C. H. Green of the Helzberg Amusement Company of Kansas City, Kansas. The name of the house has been changed to the Barrymore and the intentions of the new management is to run features at five cents.

Stock of eight St. Louis theatres was sold at auction on July 24, 10,012 shares, with a par valuation of $54,860 brought only $2,000. The stock had been pledged to Harry Koplar by the Vaudeville Theatre Construction Company as collateral security for two notes for $5,400. The theatres represented and the amount of their stock sold were: the Shenandoah, 240 shares; King's, 3,000 shares; Marshfield, 500 shares; Montgomery, 1,529 shares; Novelty, 1,000 shares; Mikado, 2,904 shares; Gravois, 439 shares, and the Cherokee, 400 shares. The Shenandoah stock was valued at $25 par, and that of the other theatres at $5 par.

William Goldman bought the stock of the Shenandoah, King's, Marshfield and Novelty, bidding $950. The remainder of the stock went to A. F. Forster for $1,050.

After several months' trial of an all picture and high class feature bill Scherrer Brothers have leased the Mikado theatre, at 5951 Easton avenue, St. Louis, for a term of six years at an annual rental of $33,000, from the Hagerman-Fitzsimmons Realty Company, which has constructed and control a chain of high class theatres, including the Shenandoah, a $75,000 structure at Grand and Shenandoah avenues, and the Park, a theatre which cost $100,000 to build, at Delmar and Hamilton avenues.

Scherrer Brothers have been in the amusement business for a number of years.

The Casino theatre, at 1620 Market street, St. Louis, is being rebuilt and altered by John Karzin, owner and manager of the house. Fifty feet will be added to the length of the theatre and twenty-five feet to the width in the new addition. As the theatre entrance is only twenty-five feet wide, the theatre when completed will have a sort of L shaped auditorium. The seating capacity will be increased to 900, with a new balcony which will contain 268 chairs. The front of the theatre will be of white enameled brick, with a canopy that will extend out over the pavement.

The Casino will be the largest motion picture house on Market street after the alterations are finished, and will be ready to open when the airdome season closes. Mr. Karzin owns and operates the Royal theatre also, just across the street from the Casino, and a big airdome at Eighteenth and Chestnut streets, besides being president of the McKinley Amusement Company, that operates the Majestic theatre, 1024 Franklin avnue.

NEW YORK

The New Fourteenth Street Theatre, Inc., has filed plans for a one-story moving picture house, which it plans to build on the plot, 52 by 103.3, on the north side of Fourteenth street, New York City, 157 feet west of Second avenue. The cost is estimated by Architect L. F. J. Weiher at $40,000.

The interior of the two three-story apartment houses with stores at 614 and 616 Ninth avenue, New York City, is to be replaced by an auditorium and balcony for a moving picture theatre for William Yoost, of Rockaway Park, L. I., as owner. Samuel Levingson, architect, has estimated the cost of making the change at $8,500.

G. A. Pfortner has sold for the Havemeyer Estate a plot on the south side of East One Hundred and Sixty-seventh street, from Webster avenue to Brook avenue, to the Wardwin Company, which will improve the property with stores and a moving picture house.

Elmer Crowningshield, proprietor of Scenic Temple, Glens Falls, has purchased another moving picture house, having closed a deal whereby he becomes the owner of The Casino theatre in Burlington, Vt., one of the largest and most desirably situated playhouses in that city. He will take possession at once.

NEW JERSEY

Plans have been filed with Building Inspector John D. Castles, of Kearny, for a motion picture theatre to be erected at 23 and 25 Kearny avenue, Kearny. The building is to be erected by William Bardsley and is to cost $10,000.

Messrs. Hoagland and Green opened their new theatre on Church street, Oxford, July 24.

Mr. Hinter, of Pen Argyl, has leased the downtown picture theatre at Hackettstown.

OHIO

Edward Hornick has bought the Dreamland theatre, Xenia, Ohio, from H. L. Binder, who has been running the theatre on Saturday nights only, in connection with his other theatre, the Orpheum. Mr. Hornick will have the house open every night. The theatre has been completely overhauled and renovated and the state fire marshal has given the house his approval, stating that the Dreamland is fireproof. A simplex machine and a new piano have been installed.

Cleveland is to have two new motion picture theatres. Applications for building permits have been filed for the houses, one to cost $25,000 and the other $10,000. M. A. Pawlowski will erect the $25,000 picture house at Cedar avenue and East Seventy-fifth street. This theatre, which will be housed in a store, office and apartment building, will have a frontage of 50 feet and depth of 193 feet. It will have one thousand seats.

A one story picture house will be built at 11507 Miles avenue by J. T. Profant. It will seat five hundred persons.

OKLAHOMA

J. E. Feeney, of Okmulgee has purchased an interest in the Cozy theatre from Mr. Moellendick.

McCarthy and Rothstein have purchased from Carl Gregg, the Wonderland theatre at Tulsa.

The Yale and Odeon theatres at Bartlesville have been sold by L. W. Brophy to J. G. Swanson. Mr. Swanson now controls all the theatres in Tulsa.

PENNSYLVANIA

Another big deal is on with the Clark and Rowland Company in Pittsburgh. This time a valuable piece of property is the attraction for this company of theatre owners. The Oakland natatorium has been on the market for some time and it was not until the Clark and Rowland interest saw that it would be an easy task to change it from a swimming pool to a theatre.

This property is in one of the best sections in the Oakland district. It is a large brick and stone building four stories high and is an ideal spot for the motion picture business.

The specifications for the new theatre calls for the lowering of the first floor of the building so as to make it possible for persons to enter the theatre without going up several steps, as at present. The length of the building is 128 feet and it is 68 feet wide. This work is to be started shortly and will be rushed through so as to have the new theatre open in September.

WISCONSIN

The National Amusement Company of this city is planning to erect a new photoplay theatre on National avenue, between First avenue and Grove stree, Milwaukee. The house when completed will seat 800, and it is expected to cost close to $20,000. A first run General and feature program will be shown at the new house. Edward Trinz is president of the National Amusement Company, and Henry Trinz is secretary and treasurer. This company is at present operating the Columbia Avenue and Vitagraph theatres in this city.

Plans are being prepared by Architect F. W. Andree for the erection of a photoplay theatre to be built on the corner of Twenty-seventh and State streets, Milwaukee. The house when complete will cost about $25,000. The theatre is to be of reinforced concrete brick and tile construction, two stories and basement, vapor heating and fan ventilating system.

DEAGAN CALLIOPE ON AUTO DRAWS CROWDS

ADVERTISING that is cheap, yet efficient, has ever been a vexing problem for the exhibitors, especially the state rights man.

W. R. Hart, of "Vera Cruz Feature Film" fame, however, recently hit upon a scheme that has brought some wonderful results—a method that is so thoroughly cheap, simple and effective that it was immediately adopted by several others.

Briefly it is as follows:

Upon arriving in the communty where he is to exhibit during the afternoon and evening, Mr. Hart engages an automobile, and places in it a Deagan electric unaphone or calliope—a new instrument which is manufactured by the J. C. Deagan firm of Chicago. With banners announcing feature attractions, he then drives about the community while a pianist holds keyboard in lap and plays as car progresses.

In this manner his message is brought to every man, woman and child, rich and poor alike, throughout every foot of the route. The appeal is direct, spectacular and pleasure-giving. It never fails and is never forgoten.

Recently a nationally known advertising manager remarked: "This is the next stage in the evolution of advertising—an appeal to two senses instead of one—to the ear as well as the eyes; there's no escaping a message so delivered."

In quality the tone of the unaphone is a peculiar combination of pipe organ, "vox humana" and calliope. It is remarkably clear, brilliant and penetrating, with amazing volume for so small an instrument. The tone is wonderfully exhilarating, and has the effect of bringing everybody to the street a considerable distance in advance, usually creating as much excitement as did the old-time circus steam calliope.

Added to the above is its ridiculously low price and low maintenance cost, which latter is practically nothing.

Nor is there any reason why this method is not just as efficacious for the exhibitor who is permanently located and who isn't playing to capacity. Especially is this true in view of the three-fold purpose of the instrument; viz., for street work, lobby concerts and as a pit attraction.

SHEA'S HIPPODROME INSTALLS ORCHESTRA IN PIT ON STAGE

SHEA'S Hippodrome, Buffalo, N. Y., has recently installed a new stage setting which is most attractive, representing a roof garden in New York. The orchestra of fifteen men is installed in a large pit on the stage. Herman E. Schultz is conducting the orchestra.

Milton Blanckstein, of Toronto, Can., is now leading the orchestra at the Elmwood theatre, Buffalo.

Mr. Blanckstein renders solos on the violin every Sunday, which are greatly appreciated.

$30,000 THEATRE FOR WALLACE, IDAHO

PLANS have been drawn by Architect L. R. Stritesky, of Spokane, for a $30,000 picture theatre to be built at Fifth and Cedar streets in Wallace, Idaho, for Dr. J. E. St. Jean and H. F. Samuels.

Work will begin at once. The theatre site is 50 by 100 feet. The house will be two stories high and it will seat 700.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

THEME PLAYING AS USED AND ABUSED

THERE has been much discussion as to the use of themes in playing pictures, many advocating the repetition of certain numbers throughout the entire picture, giving as their authority the works of certain operatic composers and writers of classics, who have at times carried a certain motive through their entire compositions.

In most of such instances the motive is carried throughout for the purpose of popularizing such themes, hoping thereby to make the composition in its entirety universally known.

The instances when the above is necessary to the thought or meaning of the work are in the minority.

The picture theatre being a place wherein pictures should be made popular, I cannot fathom the idea of a repetition of the same musical number in a performance of one or two hours.

There was a time when the music in the picture theatre was considered only for the purpose of breaking the monotonous silence, while today it must be entertaining.

Themes Set to Characters

Some claim themes should be set to characters, following the characters throughout the picture with the same theme, while others claim that the setting of one theme to all action of similar seriousness is the more appropriate.

To illustrate, we will say that the female lead is a love-sick maiden and we select Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" as her theme, and knowing that such a lead is on the screen fifty per cent. of the time we might well say "The Fates preserve Mendelssohn's 'Spring Song.'"

We might call Schumann's "Traumerei" a number with a positive pathetic appeal and use it at all times when screen action is of a pathetic character, could we hope that the audience would enjoy its third or fourth repetition in one hour?

My experience has proven that both of the aforementioned methods are the abuses of theme playing.

These ideas originate from methods used in setting music to the spoken drama, for which a few themes are used at different times throughout the performance. We must not forget that the success of the spoken drama depends upon the lines spoken, the action simply supplementing these lines and the music used as an inspiration to the performer not necessarily to entertain the audience.

You can rest assured that no stage director would allow the music to detract from the stage by either very good or poor music.

Creation of New Methods Necessary

It is obvious that we should cease following old and obsolete ideas in picture music and create new methods and means for the picture theatre, which is a new form of entertainment and certainly new to music.

Themes will beautify a picture when legitimately or intelligently used. Not fifty per cent. of the pictures require or suggest themes and many of these make their use impossible without an inharmonious break in the music, which is certainly annoying to the lover of good music.

Themes in picture playing should be suggested by the screen action and repeated only when the development of the picture plot or story requires a repetition of such suggestion.

To illustrate, we can take the Metro feature, "Always in the Way." The Chas. K. Harris song "Always in the Way" is a theme positively suggested at the opening of the picture, again in the first reel when the child hears the stepmother reading the words and again in the last reel when the child, now grown, sees a copy of the song and is reminded of the past. This action leads up to the climax of the picture. Were this number played more frequently the theme as well as the suggestion would be lost, becoming tiresome to hear if for no other reason.

Still another illustration which I heard admirably worked out at the Strand theatre, New York City, can be found in the setting of the Paramount release "The Pretty Sister of José." In the second reel a character playing the violin is introduced. As this action is pertinent to the picture and runs throughout, a theme should be used and repeated for similar action twice in the fourth reel and for closing the picture.

Character Color and Screen Action

In the second reel immediately after the introduction of the violinist, the male lead, a toreador, is introduced, for which the "Toreador Song" from "Carmen" is suggested, both in character color as well as screen action, its repetition at the bull fight in the fifth reel being appropriate for the same reasons. "The Toreador" song from "Carmen," suggesting march tempo, makes the number more valuable at the points mentioned.

Themes and their repetition, when used at picture suggestion, will not only make such picture action more impressive, but will give the performance that finesse which we should all strive for.

When themes are used they should be memorized numbers, or a separate copy of the number set at the proper place in the score. When memorized numbers are used there is a grave danger of cheapening the musical program.

The direction "Go back to No. —" is a very unsatisfactory method for setting music for pictures and the surest way of having your program musically ruined.

If your theme is worth anything at all to the picture or your musical program, it is worth buying in duplicate as required.

When performances are rehearsed in advance memorizing is possible and practical.

Use of Melodramatic Music

When melodramatic music is required, such as agitatos, hurries, misteriosos or dr. plaintive numbers, the same number can be used throughout the picture, each suggestion being similar. A number when so used should be put aside and not again used for a week or more.

We should not confuse the melodramatic and the theme, for the melodramatic is illustrative while the theme is a matter of inspiration.

WARNER, FATHER OF WARNER BROTHERS, INSTALLS BARTOLA

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, Aug. 3.

D. WARNER, owner of the Niles Opera House, Niles, Ohio, is entirely remodeling his theatre, equipping it with a new entrance, new scenery and a Bartola Grand instrument.

Mr. Warner is the father of the Warner Brothers of the Standard program, which service he uses in conjunction with Paramount and Metro features.

"DIAMOND FROM SKY" MUSIC

MUSIC "Like a Diamond from the Sky," published by the Cadillac Music Company, 1416 Broadway, New York City, has been received. The number is composed by Leo Wood and Leo Bennett, inspired by the American Film Company's serial release "A Diamond from the Sky." The title page contains a cut of Lottie Pickford.

Music Plots for "Chalice of Courage" and "Girl from His Town"

THE two plots here given are pictures wherein the musical requirements are distinctly different. The American feature, "The Girl from His Town," is of light tuneful character. Much of the action takes place in the theatre at which points the music is suggested by screen action. The paramount feature in the picture is its beautiful sets; the music should consequently be equally beautiful and sweet. The V-L-S-E feature, "The Chalice of Courage," is a serious and heavy drama requiring that the music should be heavy and dramatic. As it is a high tension picture, the music should endeavor to maintain the tension of seriousness throughout, releaving its monotony at the points designated by Inter.

American Feature, "The Girl from His Town," four reels. Projection time one hour. Released by Mutual Film Company August 5.

31.	Waltz Lento (Leg.)	"Sphinx" (Chappell and Co.)	To end.

NOTES FOR "CHALICE OF COURAGE."—In this picture all numbers must be serious and numbers that play on the senses of the hearer. The intermezzos must not be lively or common; not being positively needed they are used to break the monotony of the other slow, heavy numbers.

No. 2, "Home, Sweet Home" should be played in waltz time and added to No. 1. Nos. 3, 18 and 30 are all slow, serious numbers, very legato, with a romantic appeal. No. 5 must be a waltz with a slow introduction. No. 7, a slow number; should be in minor key with sustained theme. No. 8, a very slow waltz in minor key. Nos. 12, 15, 23 and 31, all slow legato waltzes, not necessarily in minor keys. Nos. 10 and 21 can be slow 6/8 numbers. Nos. 13, 22, 24 and 26 must be very slow legato numbers with agitated movement in minor key if possible. Nos. 18 and 20 are slow numbers, not necessarily in minor key. Nos. 4, 6, 9, 11, 14 and 25 must be classy 2/4 or 4/4 intermezzos, not slow, yet not fast.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Frank H. Anderson, Venice, Cal.—Received your letter and your music suggestions for the Vitagraph feature, "The Island of Regeneration." Having never seen the picture I cannot judge the value of the music to the picture. As a musical program it could not be better. I cannot publish it, as you have failed to give playing instructions, such as cues to start or stop the numbers. Send us another with proper instructions for playing.

A. S. B., San Francisco, Cal.—We found many interesting points in the copy of letter you send us, which we have noted with extreme care. Your letter would prove that you have made a thorough study of picture music, spending some time in musical research. There are few books of value to the picture player, other than those containing melodramatic music, a study of which is essential to picture playing.

The way a number is played has a great bearing on its value for picture playing. Many waltzes in minor keys can be played with a positive plaintive appeal. Discussion, such as your letter contains, will be the means of making picture music what we feel it should be, viz., "the highest achievement in the art of music."

R. E. L., Utica, N. Y.—As we are only informed on the musical in pictures, we can only answer questions pertaining to music and the picture.

M. G. B., Brooklyn, N. Y.—All of the questions you ask will be answered in the articles appearing in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

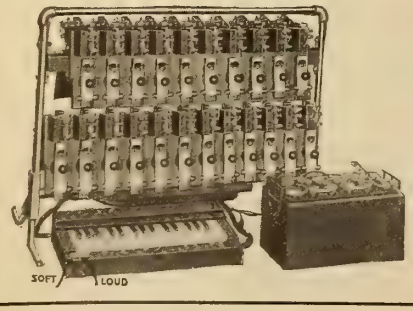
The placing of a number is purely a matter of personal inspiration. The time or tempo of the number is only the means whereby we select numbers with the view of testing their seriousness.

Tone or tune has no bearing, unless in its entirety it expresses a certain appeal. Buying numbers as to their title has been a very costly experiment in many cases. Simply allow yourself to relax, then play a number. If after playing it a few times it does not inspire you, it remains a neutral number to you. That does not conclusively mean that another will not be able to use it as a number of positive appeal. Few players use the same musical interpretation for the same number.

FLEISCHMAN AND GOLDREYER ADD ANOTHER THEATRE

MAURICE L. FLEISCHMAN and Charles A. Goldreyer, owners of the University, the Garden, the Seventh avenue and the Fictorioum theatres, New York City, have leased for a long term of years the theatre and roof garden in course of construction at St. Nicholas avenue and 185th street, New York.

The theatre will have a capacity of 1,300 in the roof garden and 1,300 in the covered house. The success of the managers with the other theatres insures prosperity for the latest addition to their picture theatres.



The structure will cost $150,000.

National Advertising Campaign

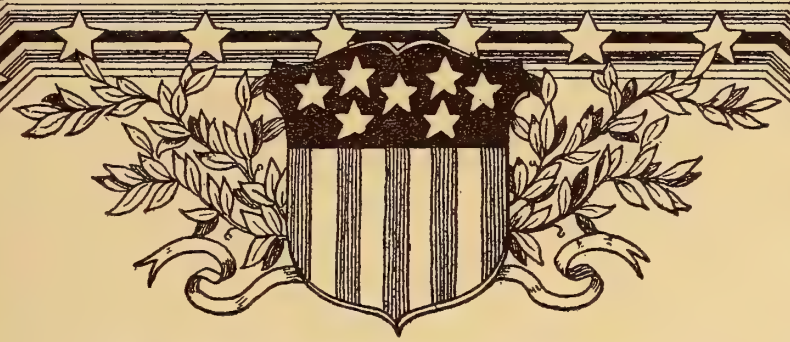
Early in September we shall launch the greatest advertising campaign ever attempted in the film industry.

Once each week a goodly sized Paramount advertisement will appear in each of the following newspapers.

Boston Post	Seattle Times
New York Times	Detroit Free Press
Washington Star	Minneapolis Journal
Atlanta Constitution	Dallas
New Orleans Item	Salt Lake City Telegram
Pittsburg Gazette-Times	Kansas City Star
Cleveland Plain Dealer	St. Paul Dispatch & Pioneer Press
Chicago Tribune	Baltimore American
St. Louis Post-Dispatch	Providence Bulletin
Denver Post	Buffalo News
Los Angeles Times	Omaha World-Herald
San Francisco Chronicle	Philadelphia Bulletin
Portland Oregonian	Memphis Commercial Appeal

Note carefully these dailies—the biggest in the country—they will carry exclusively the announcement of Paramount.

None of these papers will exploit in any manner the plans of any other motion picture concern, notwithstanding statements to the contrary that have been circulated.



Besides these mediums we shall use each month

Saturday Evening Post	Ladies' World
Ladies' Home Journal	American Sunday Monthly Magazine
Woman's Home Companion

An aggregate of many millions of readers daily!

The Paramount exhibitor should connect his theatre with this campaign and so derive the greatest benefit from it.

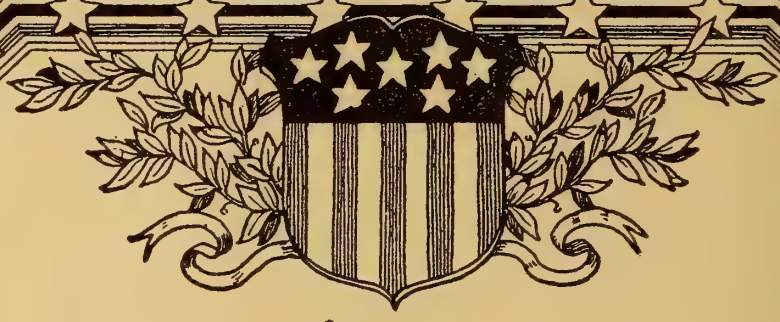
NEW YORK, N.Y.

ONCE in a generation or so a book finds its way into history. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was a book of this kind. By crystallizing the scattered elements of a great problem it moved a nation.

Today there is another problem no less vital to our country's welfare than the one that inspired Harriett Beecher Stowe. Slavery threatened our unity; today our very existence is threatened by our defenselessness.

The solution of the one involved us in war; the solution of the other will prevent war.

To bring this great problem home to the millions of American people J. Stuart Blackton conceived a great idea.



Pioneer in the field of motion pictures, recognized as the great authority on motion pictures, one of the heads of a great motion picture industry—he saw an opportunity to utilize the great and hitherto unused power of motion pictures to help toward the solution of this national problem.

To carry out this idea he produced a wonderful picture; from it he has written a wonderful book.

He took the facts and statistics contained in Hudson Maxim's "Defenseless America" and around them weaved an absorbing story. With the unlimited resources of the Vitagraph Company of America at his command he translated this story into motion pictures. The result is "The Battle Cry of Peace."

"The Battle Cry of Peace" is the first motion picture to be used to exploit an important, nation-wide propaganda. Its object is to bring to the notice of the greatest number of people in the shortest possible time the defenselessness of our country; not only to make the American people realize our condition as a nation, but to show them also the consequences to which this condition may lead, and finally to show them how to remedy this condition.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" is a call to arms—not for war but for PEACE. It will be shown in motion pictures theatres, schools, colleges and churches throughout the length and breadth of this country. It will arouse in the heart of every American citizen a realization of his strict accountability to his country in time of need.

Viola Dana

In a photoplay in which she is at her best—happy, innocent girlhood

3-ACT FEATURE COMEDY-DRAMA

Written especially for this charming artist by the celebrated playwright, Lee Arthur

"The Slavey Student"

In this play, vibrant with the sweet, wholesome life and love of school days, Viola Dana's own winsome personality and ability were never better evidenced. It is such a play that lingers like a pleasant memory, delightfully refreshing to your patrons who have wearied of this procession of morbid and "blood and thunder" stuff.

The slavey student is none other than the gentle artist, Viola Dana, and if we may believe what a great many Exhibitors are telling us of their own accord, that "little" is a lot. Ably supported by the popular Pat O'Malley. Yet there is plenty of plot heart interest to bind the attention. Directed by John H. Collins who directs so well the drama of the home. "The actress who scored on two Continents"

In the Four-Act BROADWAY FAVORITES Feature Production

THE BARNSTORMERS

A Story of Theatrical Life

Released in Regular Service, Monday, August 23d

Miss Tannehill is one of the few American actresses whose fame is international. As the result of her work in "Broadway Jones," at George M. Cohan's Theatre, this star was sent to London, where she repeated her American success when the play was presented at the Theatre Royal. Her other London vehicles included "The Fortune Hunter," at the Queen's Theatre, and "Sealed Orders," at the Drury Lane. Returning to this country, Miss Tannehill scored in "Snobs," presented at the Hudson Theatre, and in "A Pair of Sixes," the play which nightly filled the Longacre Theatre last season. The charming star enacts the role of Nell Lavelle, a soubrette, in this powerful drama of the stage.

"A Bunch of Keys" Provokes Explosive Laughter, Says Critic

Here is what a leading photoplay critic says of Essanay's five-act comedy, "A Bunch of Keys," written by Charles Hoyt.

"'A Bunch of Keys' had a prolonged stage success.

"Its humorous incidents made ardent admirers yell themselves hoarse.

"Hoyt never permitted vulgarity or indelicacies in his plays.

"Essanay's film adaptation has the true Hoyt atmosphere.

"For me the five reels evoked explosive laughter.

"It will keep the spectator in a mirthful state of mind.

"It will provoke boisterous merriment.

"To the excellent assignment of the characters in the cast is attributed much of the mirth.

"William Burress, John Slavin, June Keith and William Castelet, in the leads, form a strong quartet.

"Another strong point that will commend this Essanay production to favor is the care devoted to settings."

The Swivel Chair in New York

THERE is a good deal of talk of co-operation with the exhibitor these days.

On the surface this doesn't mean anything. There has been a lot of such talk in the past.

THE present statements, however, ring true; and they indicate action, not mere talk. They come directly from prominent producers. They follow investigative trips by the producers into the exhibition field; and they give as a reason for co-operation the plain logical fact that manufacturing success can come only through exhibitor success.

IT is an excellent idea for the manufacturer to get out into the field—the exhibitor field.

The oftener the better—for him and for the exhibitor. If he cannot go, and often that is impossible, he should send a man as good as himself.

NEW YORK is a very bad point from which to view the big and little avenues of the picture industry. In fact, it is no point at all. The oftener one can get out of New York the better his knowledge of picture conditions.

Out in Los Angeles they say: "We have production here; in New York you have politics." Which is quite largely true.

And still true is the exhibitors' insistent statement: "You cannot make and book pictures and map policies from a swivel chair in New York."

THE exhibitor has a good many complaints, some of which are unintelligent and some unjust—depending, of course, upon what kind of an exhibitor he is. But most exhibitor complaints are just and intelligent, and practically all of these may be reduced to a single basis, namely, lack of co-operation and of understanding upon the part of the manufacturer.

TO begin with, there are scarcely two picture theatres in this country quite the same from every standpoint. Just as every town and city differ one from another, so do the theatre audiences differ everywhere.

You cannot therefore, with New York as a vantage point, theorize and form rules for picture theatres as a body. Far from it.

You cannot even group them by territories and by populations and by other theoretical divisions. There is only one way you can deal with them fairly and successfully, and that is, individually.

TWO towns or two city districts may be the same in population, yet the theatre-going people in one for various reasons may outnumber the other ten to one. The price the exhibitor can charge for admission and the price he can pay for pictures and the kind of pictures he can best run are determined and only determined by the diverse local conditions he is up against.

These conditions should be known by the manufacturers. They can be known through an efficient field force. They must be known if a genuine understanding between manufacturers and exhibitor is to exist.

AS to the business value of close co-operation between manufacturer and exhibitor, there is no argument.

It isn't a matter for essays, preachments, interviews. It isn't subject-matter for the manufacturer to cajole the exhibitor with—with promises and sweet words.

IT'S plain business—money-making business. The more the manufacturer helps the exhibitor the more the manufacturer helps himself.

It is merely a matter of helping the exhibitor to sell more pictures to the public, so that the exhibitor will buy more pictures from the manufacturer. It is merely an extension of the manufacturer's selling effort through the exhibitor and to the public.

CO-OPERATION with the retailer—in this industry the exhibitor is the retailer—is the very foundation of every business.

It is one of the big business laws which rule every merchandising industry and which will rule the picture industry as certainly as day follows night.

CO-OPERATION means, mostly, two things: Good pictures and good service. The latter is just as important as good pictures.

Good service means largely advertising help. The basis of the exhibition business is his advertising to the public, and in this advertising he is and always will be dependent upon the maker and distributor of pictures.

It is only natural that he will identify himself with the firm that not only gives him good pictures, but helps him resell these pictures to the public.

And it is also only natural the firm which gives this service will be successful where others fail.

How the Ohio Press Regards the Ohio Censors

BEHIND the movement for a referendum vote on the state censorship law which the exhibitors of Ohio have set in motion, the newspapers of the state are lining up with encouraging promptitude.

On the opposite page we have reproduced the appeal to the people which is appearing in newspapers all over Ohio. This is in the form of an advertisement, the expense being pooled by the united theatres of each city.

BELOW we give an editorial which the Canton, Ohio, Daily News has devoted to the all too-familiar question of censorship.

There is a lesson in this campaign for the exhibitors of Pennsylvania and Kansas. It will pay them to watch developments in Ohio and prepare to profit by the outcome.

This is the able "Censoring of The Censors" rendered by the Canton News:

"NOTHING about the moving picture business today needs censorship so much as the state board of censors itself. It ought to be censored out of existence, if it can not be censored into some form which will give it some real value and prevent it from being a nuisance.

"Ohio has no state censorship of any other form of art. It does not censor paintings, or statuary, or books or the spoken drama. Why should it censor the silent drama?

"JONES writes a novel. It is frank and daring. It sells in the hundreds of thousands. Smith dramatizes it. The play runs a thousand and one nights in New York and then five or six traveling companies spread it over the entire country. Brown films it and the state board of censors cuts out the climaxes and makes the moving picture taste like oyster soup made out of peas, with the oysters left out.

"Why?

"THIS is why. The moving picture has been a new thing, has been an infant. Novels and the spoken drama are adults. Children have to be corrected, the world seems to think, and perhaps they often deserve it. Perhaps the moving picture in its infancy deserved sometimes to be spanked or sent to bed supperless.

"But—the moving picture is grown up, now. It is a big business. It is conducted upon as high a plane as any other business. There is no reason for censoring moving pictures that can not be applied to books or plays. The melodrama villain can do his worst and the state of Ohio keeps mum. Not so the moving picture.

"CENSORS are a mistake as a general thing, anyway; for example, the war censors of Europe.

"The public is the real censor. Does the moving picture business now need any other? Can not the national board of censorship and the cities themselves through their police power, handle the moving picture as well as they can handle any other agency, and compel it to conform to the requirements of public good and public morality?

"THE state board of censorship's chief value is its value to politicians as a branch of the big plum tree. People, chosen not for any supernatural fitness but because they have a political pull, tell you what you shall and shall not see on the moving picture screen. You never saw them, and perhaps you would not think much of their judgment. Yet they have a power over one of your most important recreations that no other body has over any other recreation. It will be worth Ohio's while to ask herself whether the need for them has not passed.

"The revolver and the cowboy and the thug have almost disappeared from moving pictures. The moving picture is on as high a plane today as any other form of stage art.

"NO one will plead for objectionable pictures. The public performance of anything objectionable ought to be and must be prohibited. Objectionable moving pictures must be prohibited. But the point is that the producers themselves are leading in this censorship, and that the right results in all likelihood can be obtained without a state board, which does not seem properly to fit into the scheme of things."

The Turning-Point In the Fight Against Censorship

THAT the "Secret Orchard" decision of the Court of Common Pleas in Philadelphia marks the turning point in the motion picture's fight to rid itself of the censorship incubus, is a conclusion hard to resist.

It may be premature to say this with assurance. But, at all events, the date of the decision deserves recognition as the "Independence Day" of the motion picture industry.

If the producers themselves had been allowed to pick the picture upon which the censors should dash themselves to pieces, no film better constructed to expose their censorial stupidity and utter ignorance of even their own business could have been found than "The Secret Orchard."

Some of the testimony given by members of the censor board verged upon the ridiculous. Had there even been a standard of fitness by which a censor could be appointed to office, they would have been convinced of incompetency out of their own mouths.

This sort of censorship needs little or no opposition. It is killing itself by its own excesses and extravagances. As long as the censors are what they are, the industry can afford to watch, wait and, at the proper time, strike—and strike hard!

THIS IS THE WAY IN WHICH THE BEST OHIO EXHIBITORS ARE FIGHTING CENSORSHIP—WHAT WOULD HAPPEN IF YOU DID THE SAME THING?

Utter Ignorance Marks the Man or Woman Who Believes that He or She Believes in the Censorship of Motion Pictures

Thousands have signed the Motion Picture Referendum Petition -- Have You?

The censorship of Photo Plays is a new variety of legislative persecution which if permitted to continue by the public will deprive the 2,000,000 or more motion picture devotees in Ohio of the pleasure of seeing some of the most wonderful and stupendous Photo-play productions ever conceived.

Many of the finest Photo-play Dramas produced in the past decade have been and are being shown in other cities in other states—but the people of Canton and the entire state of Ohio will not have the opportunity of seeing them.
Why?

Because—the arrogant, narrow-minded and suspicious prejudiced methods of the Ohio State Board of Censors have made it impossible for any theater in Ohio to exhibit these superb Photo-plays.

"But these masterpieces are suggestive," say the Ohio State Board of Censors.
Not So.

If they were do you believe the Censor Boards in other states would allow them exhibited?

No indeed they are not suggestive.

But—the Ohio State Board of Motion Picture Censors in their total disregard of the wishes, the rights, of the millions who want to see the best Photo-plays produced and which Ohio Exhibitors want to show

ABSOLUTELY REFUSE TO PERMIT THESE BEAUTIFUL PICTURES TO BE SHOWN IN ANY THEATER IN OHIO.

No Motion Picture Exhibitor in Canton Would Insult His Patrons by Exhibiting a Suggestive Film.

He Knows his patrons would resent it as a wanton insult to their intelligence.

He Knows his patrons would resent it as a wanton insult to more nor less than Business Suicide.

Being human he does not want to commit suicide—business or any other kind.

But—

He does want to give his patrons the best Photo-plays obtainable and is constantly straining every nerve to obtain the latest and most successful motion picture dramas.

But—

His hands are tied—figuratively speaking—by the narrow-minded who are attempting to dictate which Photo-plays shall or shall not be seen and enjoyed by Canton Movie Fans.

If you are willing to permit others to think for you don't sign this petition,

But—

If you desire to exercise your rights as a free born and free thinking American Citizen then sign the Petition when presented.

The following theaters will have copies of this Petition for your convenience.

How Much Longer are You Going to Permit This Injustice to Continue

Would you allow three people (The Ohio Censor Board for instance) to dictate to you—

The school to which you should send your child;
The books which you should read;
The newspaper for which you should subscribe;
The pattern of the suit you should wear;
Those whom you should choose as friends?

NO.
Most emphatically no.
Well then—why permit an impertinent nuisance, drunk with power, masquerading as a Board of Censors to continue to cut, slash and mutilate beautiful picture dramas and eliminate the most interesting and vital parts; thereby destroying the entire effect of the master mind which conceived the scenario?

You Can Help Abolish This Evil by Signing the Motion Picture Censor Referendum Petition

Petitions are being circulated among the lovers of the Silent Drama in every county, city and town in the state of Ohio. Representative newspapers and magazines in every section of the country ridicule the idea of Motion Picture Censorship by State and Local Censor Boards.

The Saturday Evening Post, one of the most conservative and certainly the most widely known and influential magazine published in its issue of July 24 editorially condemns the idea of State and Local Censor Boards.

A SPECIMEN OF THE APPEAL THE THEATRES OF THE BUCKEYE STATE ARE MAKING TO THE VOTERS THROUGH THE DAILY NEWSPAPERS

DESMOND AND JANE GREY CAST FOR INCE FEATURE "WAIFS"

William Desmond and Jane Grey, "legitimate" favorites, have been cast to appear in an Ince slum feature entitled, "Waifs." The two have been having considerable trouble during the week because of the kind of clothes it was necessary for them to wear for these parts.

Miss Grey is a "moll" of the Bowery, and matinee idol, Desmond, is interpreting the part of a tough of the underworld.

WILLIAM DESMOND

The pair look like beggars, and they get a laugh whenever they are seen by any of the players who recognize them, but the best joke of it all is that Miss Grey brought all of her elaborate wardrobe to Inceville to be used in pictures, and as yet it has not been unpacked.

Plimpton Leaves Edison; Succeeded by McChesney

New Manager Has Been With the Company Nearly Thirteen Years, Beginning With the Company in a Minor Capacity—Takes Charge of Bedford Park Branch at Once

THE surprise of the week in film circles was the announcement of the resignation of Horace G. Plimpton as studio manager, Edison, a position which he had held for about six years.

When Mr. Plimpton tendered his resignation to C. H. Wilson, vice-president and general manager of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Mr. Wilson was greatly surprised and accepted it very reluctantly.

LEONARD McCHESNEY

Since Mr. Plimpton's connection with the Edison company, the advancement of motion pictures has been quite as wonderful as an Arabian Nights' story.

As his resignation was to take effect as early as possible, Leonard W. McChesney, manager of the Edison motion picture division, who has been stationed at Orange, N. J., will take charge of the Edison studio in Bedford Park, New York City, immediately.

Mr. McChesney contemplates no radical changes of studio policy during his regime, and, except for the change of head, the studio promises to go on as usual, the company devoting itself to its present three reels, alternating with a four-reel weekly; with a one-reel Wednesday and Saturday —all released through the General Film Company, and the production of special longer plays, to be released soon under the name of Kleine-Edison Features, the first of which will be Mrs. Fiske in her famous "Vanity Fair."

There is every indication that the stock stars, who have so long been with Edison, and who alone have figured in the features which lately have been exciting such favorable comment, will be retained.

Mr. McChesney's career is quite remarkable and is in itself a reflection of the rapid growth of the motion picture. For though still a young man, he has in thirteen years worked himself up from a minor position to manager.

HORACE G. PLIMPTON

Except for a comparatively short time spent as advertising manager of the General Film Company, his entire experience has been with the Edison organization, dating from the time he was in the advertising department, then stationed in Chambers street, New York City.

He rose steadily till he became assistant advertising manager of the Thomas A. Edison, Inc. His next promotion was to that of sales manager of the motion picture department, in July, 1913. Recently the vast Edison enterprises were divided into "divisions" so as to give each more of a separate organization and individual management.

It was then that Mr. McChesney became manager of the motion picture division which he has held ever since.

J. N. Naulty Is Made General Manager of Triangle

Joins Griffith, Ince and Sennett Forces, in Charge of "Marketing of the Product"—Move Is Considered Significant by Film Men

THE most important change in the line-up of the Mutual Film Corporation since the annual election came this week when J. N. Naulty, formerly vice-president and general manager of the Mutual, and a vital factor in the great success of that organization, resigned to become general manager of the Triangle, the new giant among the feature companies.

When it became known that Mr. Naulty would have authority in the conduct of the Triangle organization second only to its president, Harry E. Aitken, the men intimately acquainted with film conditions were willing to concede that the Triangle had taken an important step toward sure success.

With David W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett producing pictures for the Triangle, and with J. N. Naulty in charge of the marketing of the product, the combination impresses the film world as strong and a tribute to the organizing ability of H. E. Aitken.

Mr. Naulty, during his regime at the Mutual, was in active charge of the chain of branch offices maintained by that organization, and his branch managers gave him their unqualified support. His successful experience, capacity for management and his ability to inspire loyalty in his subordinates will undoubtedly mean much to the future success of Triangle Film Corporation.

Mr. Naulty left on a brief motor trip on Tuesday and will begin his duties on next Monday with temporary headquarters at 71 West Twenty-third street, New York City.

Court Overrules Censors in Pennsylvania

State Board Refuses to Pass "The Secret Orchard" and Lasky Appeals Case to Court of Common Pleas, Where Judge Paterson Sustains Contention of the Company's Attorney That Picture Should Be Allowed an Unhampered Showing—First Instance of an Appeal Taken to the Courts in the History of the State

Special to Motion Picture News

Philadelphia, Aug. 11.

UNDOUBTEDLY the most important ruling as regards the official censorship of motion picture films and photoplays within the history of the industry in the past year was that which was rendered last Monday in Philadelphia by Judge Paterson, of the Court of Common Pleas in an action of appeal over a decision of the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture exhibitors in the "Secret Orchard" case.

The picture, of which Blanche Sweet is the star and the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, Inc., the producers, was passed and approved without any suggestion of correction by the National Board of Censors. It was announced for release through the Paramount Picture Corporation on August 9.

In the previous week at the regular private showing for the Pennsylvania Censors, the picture was rejected. Under the law of 1915 the re-exhibition was ordered and again the "Secret Orchard" was barred from Pennsylvania. Judge Paterson reversed their decision.

For the first time in the history of the Pennsylvania Board of the State, an appeal was taken to the courts. Morris Wolf, of Messrs. Stern and Wolf, of Philadelphia, counsel for the Famous Players Exchange of Philadelphia, and Arthur S. Friend, of Wise and Lichtenstein, New York, counsel for the Lasky Feature Play Company, appeared for the appelants in the appeal hearing.

Film in Court as Evidence

Not least of the unusual features of the case and one which attracted great interest in Philadelphia, was the fact that the photoplay was brought to court as a witness in its own behalf.

Judge Paterson moved his court room to the Common Counsel Chamber in the City Hall, where a screen was erected and a camera installed. More than fifty employees of the City Hall, Philadelphia newspaper men and the Philadelphia censors were present. Those of the Pennsylvania board who attended were the chairman, J. Lewis Breitinger, Dr. Ellis Oberholtzer, Secretary of the Board and Mrs. Edward F. Nivers. The board is appointed by the governor.

In the darkened room, a long thin ray of light flashed the "Secret Orchard" on the screen. Judge Paterson in a chair sat apart from the rest of the gathering. At the conclusion of the picture, by William C. De Mille, from the play by Channing Pollock, based on the novel by Alice and Egerton Castle, there was a smothered effort to applaud the beautiful presentation. Judge Paterson thereupon called the court to order and heard testimony.

It was the contention of Mr. Wolf, as attorney for the exchange, that under the moving picture law of Pennsylvania, 1915, his clients were justified in seeking an appeal from what they believe to be an unjust ruling of the censors.

The law, he said, placed the power of appeal with the court of Common Pleas, but did not specifically state in what manner the appeals should be taken. Opposed to this was the attorney for the censors, Special Deputy Attorney General Smyth, who argued that the case be dismissed, first, on the grounds of improper form of appeal, and, second, that the appeal was not taken in the proper court. Both these requests were overruled by the court.

Channing Pollock a Witness

Mr. Wolf thereupon introduced as witnesses Channing Pollock, the author of the play, which had a long run at the Lyric theatre, Philadelphia, in 1907, from which the picturization was made. After considerable opposition the attorney introduced into the record the full story of the photoplay as he had seen it on the screen; John C. Ashurst, assistant librarian of the Philadelphia Public Library, who declared that the book, "The Secret Orchard," was on the shelf at the main library at Thirteenth and Locust streets and in four of the branches and that it had had popular circulation since 1901, when it was first published.

The argument quickly narrowed itself to the consideration only of the film and the story it told as shown in the court room. Judge Paterson agreed that his jurisdiction in the case was similar to that of the Board of Censors under the law. This was highly important. Substantially, the story on the film as told by Mr. Pollock and a part of the record is as follows:

"Diane, whose mother was a favorite of the Parisian underworld, was taken by her mother to a convent when a child to escape the environment of her parent. Later she gets the invitation of a school girl friend, to visit her at the seashore, where she succumbs to the fascinations of the Duke of Cluny, a married man, whose wife believes explicitly in his faithfulness.

"Diane later is adopted by the Duchess of Cluny, neither being aware of the relationship of the one-time lover and the Duke. Recognition follows and the girl in refusing marriage to a young man whom she really loves, exposes the Duke's deception.

"The Duke is killed in a duel which follows and the story ends with the hope that some day Diane and her sweetheart will be married." As Mr. Pollock explained, the whole story may be summed up in the few words "The Wages of Sin Are Death."

At the previous exhibitions of the film before the censors they had not objected in series of specific scenes, but to the story of the picture itself; their right to pass upon the entire theme of a production was questioned by Judge Paterson, who declared that so far as he could interpret the law, their power rested only in the regulation of the actual scenes shown on the screen.

Asked If Taboo Was Put on Classics

The censors' point of view was more clearly brought out when Dr. Oberholtzer took the stand and said that the board had seen so many pictures with the theme of abduction that the board believed the time had come to put the hawk on these things. Judge Paterson asked him if he would taboo "David Copperfield," "Oliver Twist," "Faust," the story of which, Judge Paterson said, was practically identical with that of the "Secret Orchard," whether also he would allow the picturization of "Les Miserables," in fact, some of the greatest works of literature in the world's history.

Dr. Oberholtzer replied that in these cases, no doubt, some leniency would be shown by the board, to which the judge replied: "By what means have you to know but what great genius may be found in youth instead of proved in old age." Dr. Oberholtzer had no reply to make to this argument. He said, further, that the "Secret Orchard" picture throughout was so beautifully shown that to the spectator the theme of seduction never left one's mind. On this account, he said, its possible harm to young girls of Pennsylvania was the more probable. He said also that in the first scene there was a picture of a house of prostitution and that he strenuously objected to a child seeing such a scene. Mr. Pollock, on the contrary, denied any intention on the part of either Mr. and Mrs. Castle or himself, as dramatist, to portray any such scene.

The court asked Dr. Oberholtzer if he saw any other part of the photoplay other than the first scene to which he could object and the censor was forced to reply that he could not. One of the amazing statements of the censor was that they were not concerned with literature or the stage, because neither literature nor the stage came under the statutes of Pennsylvania, whereas motion pictures were regulated by state act.

Praises "Secret Orchard"

As the photoplay was announced for release on the very day of the hearing, Judge Paterson asked the parties concerned if they were willing to receive an immediate opinion. Both sides agreed. He therefore said:

"On the whole, I think 'The Secret Orchard' is beautifully done. Certainly we can take no exception to the splendid acting. I will permit 'The Secret Orchard' to be shown in the State of Pennsylvania if the producers will eliminate the first scene showing the revels in the home of Diane's mother. This elimination will in no way harm the story, which is, on the whole, a very wholesome one and I believe teaches a good moral truth.

"That is my opinion of 'Secret Orchard.' Furthermore, I do not believe it is within the power of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors to pass upon a theme of a play, as that would involve them in intricate difficulties. I think their duties should rest solely in passing on the actual picture shown."

Picture To Be Shown At Once

The picture, "The Secret Orchard," will be shown at the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, next Monday for the whole week. This week the Paramount release there is the Lasky production, Fanny Ward in the "Marriage of Kitty."

Stanley V. Mastbaum, proprietor of the Stanley theatre, issued a statement in which he said:

"Judge Paterson brought this point out today. He asked a member of the board what he objected to in the picture. The member replied that he disapproved of the story. But Judge Paterson held that was not enough to condemn the whole film.

"The judge found only the one scene, 'the flash,' as it is known in the theatrical parlance, objectionable. Therefore he ordered its elimination. This was perfectly fair and proper. It is not fair to condemn an entire photoplay because one film is believed objectionable or because the trend of the story displeases the censors."

Other Resorts to Court Are Likely

Now that the film interests have demonstrated that an appeal to the courts will help their cause, much speculation is rife as to the course to be taken by "Essanay," who are also suffering from a rejected film.

The picture in question is "The Blindness of Virtue," released on the V-L-S-E program for July 19. This picture has been passed by the National Board of Censors and played all over the country with great success, but the Pennsylvania censors said it was a sex play and as such was tabooed.

Mr. Hebrew, local manager of V-L-S-E, said he had received no information as yet if any action would be taken.

One serious objection of the censors to this picture was that in their opinion a mother should not tell her daughters about questions of sex and life.

37 THEATRES IN NEW ORLEANS TAKE LOCAL NEWS FILM

Thirty-seven suburban houses in New Orleans have bid for the opening film of the "Times-Picayune-World Weekly," which will show five hundred feet of local news and a like number of feet of news from all over the world. It is said that strong competition has developed among Canal street houses for the film.

The first film will be shown next Sunday, and it's a safe prediction that it will be a pronounced success. Last year an amateur company endeavored to give New Orleans a local film weekly, but the photography was so poor that the project was soon abandoned.

Broadway Sky Yields Bright Star to Thanhouser

New Rochelle Stock Company Gets Winifred Kingston, English Actress, Leading Woman with William Hawtry—Made a Hit in This Country in Frohman's "Hypocrites"

WITH the addition of another reel a week to the output of the New Rochelle organization, Edwin Thanhouser has once more shot an arrow at the Broadway sky and brought down a star of magnitude to add to his stock company. This time it is Winnifred Kingston. She will be best remembered in America for her work in "The Servant in the House," and in the all star production of "Thais"; then as the leading woman with William Hawtry and Cyril Scott.

WINIFRED KINGSTON

Miss Kingston has been in this country only six years, but her triumphs in London won her quick favor with American managers. There she held forth in leading roles at the Scala theatre for several seasons and it was about then that she created her sensation by her work in "Hypocrites" under Charles Frohman. When the management of Hilda Trevelyan, known as "The Maude Adams of England" searched Europe for an understudy for her, they signed Miss Kingston up for the honor as soon as they saw her.

In the films her work is not new to picture lovers. Under the Paramount trade mark she has played the leads in "Elixir of Youth," "Soldiers of Fortune," "Squaw Man," "Brewster's Millions," "Trail Divides," "Call of the North," "Capt. Courtesy," "Love Route."

Miss Kingston still retains some of the broad accent which we here call "Londonish." Though born in England and trained in Scotland and France she loves America and Americans. In joining the Thanhouser organization Miss Kingston takes up an association which she describes as the "Nearest to the legitimate atmosphere that the films afford."

Ohio Holds Fate of Pictures, Says Herrington

Head of the National Association Declares If the People of That State Decide Against Censorship the Exhibitors' Fight There and Elsewhere Will Be Won

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Cleveland, August 11.

OHIO is to decide the fate of state boards of censors, according to Fred. J. Herrington, national president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, who stopped off here on his way to his home in Pittsburgh from the exhibitors' convention at San Francisco. Mr. Herrington's views are as follows:

"State censorship would be a joke if it were not so tragic and so directly in conflict with American ideas of democracy and independence.

"Through the referendum the exhibitors are to make their national fight against ludicrous interference with personal liberty and against a system which assuredly will lead to serious political graft unless nipped in the bud.

"Ohio is the birthplace and hotbed of the most objectionable features of motion picture censorship. Ohio also is the state which produced the leaders for the national fight against a system which is making our pictures puny and threatens to make censorship a means to political ends.

"If the people of Ohio say they will not have a board of censors the national fight will be won. Other states soon will find means to follow the lead of Ohio."

Mr. Herrington pointed out that the general code gives the authorities all the protection needed against improper pictures.

Cleveland Local No. 1 has issued a circular setting forth all the arguments used for and against censorship, which says: "The law we ask to be repealed openly confesses the fact that the censors play politics, for they wrote into the law that they have the power to revoke the license of any film, even after they have passed the same."

Copies of the circular will go to every motion picture theatre in Ohio.

Local members of the referendum committee assert that feeling against the censors is running so high against the censors' attitude there would be no difficulty in securing ten times the required number of signatures to the petitions. A notice is flashed on the screens of all Cleveland motion picture theatres at every show, in which the audience is asked to express its stand either for or against censorship. The request that the petition at the door be signed finds response at every show.

The Cleveland "Press" has just awarded ten prizes to its readers. They were asked to state why they favored or were against censorship, and hundreds of letters poured in on the newspaper. About 99 per cent. of the writers were against censorship, most of the writers maintaining that the motion picture theatre patrons were intelligent enough to do their own censoring and did not need three persons at Columbus to say what they should see on the screen.

Censor Vandals Active in Kansas Terror Reign

State Board Threatens to Close Theatres Showing Uncensored Pictures—Doubtful if Small Number of Censors Could Find Time to Pass on the Thousands of Feet Daily Shipped from Other Localities—Attorney General Declares He Will Have, if Necessary, Houses in All Counties Watched

Special to Motion Picture News

Kansas City, August 11.

S. M. BREWSTER, attorney general of Kansas, on August 15, is expected to issue instructions to the various county attorneys to close those motion picture theatres that show films that have not been passed by the Kansas State Censor Board, according to W. D. Ross, state moving picture censor. It is also threatened that if the shows continue to show uncensored films men will be employed by the state to cover the different counties and keep watch on the theatres so that there will be no chance for an uncensored film to get by.

It is strictly up to the exhibitor to have his films censored, for the law is directed against him and not against the exchanges or distributors of films.

If all of the exchanges in Kansas City stand pat and throw the burden of the censorship onto the exhibitor, he is going to feel the burden of this extra ten cents a reel and work out a way for the burden to be thrown onto the public by increasing the admission price. When the overloaded public feels this they are going to vote out or have an amendment passed that will reduce this heavy expense.

This law never received the proper thought before its passage. If it had it would never have been passed because no right-minded legislator is going to pass a measure that is going to put a heavy unnecessary tax upon his constituents.

Old Film Censored

The big talk now by Censor Ross is that the exchanges and distributors have been since April 12, compelled to have all their old films censored. That is the films that were in use in the state before the law went into effect.

It has been shown that he and his two assistants would have something like 2,200 reels of old films to censor in addition to the new ones that are going into the state each week.

He says that he will add to his force of censors so that he can rush this work through. If all these films were sent in to be censored it would enrich the state of Kansas about $5,000, in addition to giving the express companies a big business transporting films from Kansas City to Topeka and return. In addition to all this the hiring of theatres in Topeka in which to show the films to the censors. Then again it would mean that some theatres would have to close if these 2,200 reels were taken out of service.

The papers of Kansas are taking up the question of censorship as it is done in Kansas, and they are finding that it is but another step until the newspaper publishers will have to submit their papers to censors before they can be sent out, just the same as the film people are compelled to do. This may be a little far fetched, but looking at it straight in the face, it looks that way.

Where the morals of a state are placed in the hands of two or three people there is going to be a great deal of agitation against it because the people will not stand for it. Our forefathers never knew of such a thing as censorship and their morals were pretty good without it, or this country today would not be one of the greatest in the world.

There is no doubt but that when the public is aroused over this censorship question as they surely will be, there will not be much of the censorship law left after the next election.

Copy of Notice

The following is a copy of the notice sent to the exhibitors, by State Moving Picture Censor W. D. Ross, and which is going to cause some of the picture shows in the state to close their doors, because there are some exhibitors in the State of Kansas who are going to fight this unjust tax and fight it hard.

Topeka, August 3, 1915.

To Moving Picture Exhibitors:

I have been advised, indeed have been furnished with letters showing that certain film distributors are claiming that they cannot furnish censored films and are defending themselves on the alleged grounds that all films in the state cannot be censored at once and on the claim that the censorship board is not able to censor even the films now being presented to it.

In this connection I wish to say that it has been and is now the fault of the distributors if they are unable to furnish censored films. As a matter of fact, the film exchanges have had since April 12 to get their films censored; but, as you yourself have doubtless had evidence, most of the exchanges have been presenting only their new films for censorship. Not only is this true, but the statement that the censorship board is not able to censor all films now being presented is absolutely false; for the board has thus far not only been able to censor all films the same day they are presented, but could handle more. Furthermore, additional help is available whenever needed.

Moreover, at the time the censorship law was begun on April 12, the film exchanges were warned to send in as rapidly as possible their old as well as their new films. From this you will observe that they have had more than three months in which to get into position to furnish exhibitors censored films. During this time exhibitors have not been interfered with, because the state realized that all films could not be censored at once.

But it would seem three months' time should have been sufficient for the exchanges to have gotten into a position where they could furnish censored films. There are, however, some distributors who have been sending in their old as well as their new stuff, and I would suggest that if you are unable to get satisfactory assurance and service in the matter of censorship from the firm with which you are doing business you try to find some exchange that is in a position to enable you to comply with the law without having even temporarily to close your place of business.

Complete lists of censored pictures will be sent from this office on request.

Cordially yours,

W. D. ROSS,
State Supt. of Public Instruction,
State Moving Picture Censor.

After reading this letter it can readily be seen that if all the exchanges would refuse to send in their old films for censor and ship them to the exhibitor with the statement that it was strictly up to him to have them censored, it would cause that exhibitor to protest because he would know that he could not get censored films from any exchange that serves Kansas.

This is not the only tax that will have to be borne by the exhibitor in Kansas. He has state and city license which amounts to something like $200 a year and when an additional $200 or $300 is thrown on his shoulders he is going to find some way out. And the way out in this case seems to be by way of public opinion and the legislators.

TWO "BEAUTY" RELEASES A WEEK FROM NOW ON

Hereafter the American Film Company will release two of its American "Beauty" films each week. Heretofore one release has been made weekly. The decision to make two releases each week has just been reached. "Love and Labor" is the title of the extra film, which will be released August 14.

"Love and Labor" is a comedy drama, featuring John Steppling and Beatrice Van. It is highly amusing.

Exhibitors will hail with delight the announcement that hereafter there are to be two "Beauty" releases each week. This brand of the American Film Company output always has enjoyed wide popularity.

NEILAN LEAVES WEST COAST FOR FAMOUS PLAYERS IN EAST

Marshall Neilan, who has been directing the series of comedies entitled "The Chronicles of Bloom Center" for Selig release, has resigned and his week departed for New York City where he will be affiliated with the Famous Players Company in the capacity of director and leading man.

Mr. Neilan during his stay with Selig completed five two-reel comedy subjects of the series.

DESIGNER OF WOMEN'S CLOTHES TO PASS ON NYMP GOWNS

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, August 9.

Thomas H. Ince started something new this week when he engaged Melville Ellis, a well known designer of women's fashionable wearing apparel, to give expert advice with regard to styles of the future in order that actresses in NYMP productions be gowned to perfection.

Mr. Ellis will be stationed in New York, and from that point he will forward to the Inceville studio daily reports of his findings, giving descriptions of designs and patterns that will be most popular.

It is the intention of Mr. Ince to prevent any unfavorable criticism on the part of the public with regard to the gowns worn by his actresses. This is an entirely new department for a motion picture company, and no doubt one that will be followed by other companies.

Annette Kellerman Rests Before Work in Fox Film

Actress Prefers Screen Drama to Stage—Outdoor Life Gives More Variety—Pictures Give Her Broader Scope Than the "Legitimate"

ANNETTE KELLERMANN, who is shortly to appear in a tremendous spectacular production which is to be produced by William Fox, declares that she has become fascinated with moving picture work and hopes to continue in it.

In an interview she says that she prefers to work in one big and really worth while picture every year or so, than to attempt to do a lot of short ones.

"So many stage stars have suffered in pictures because they were being paid by the week, and the managers were obliged to economize and rush the picture through in three or four weeks," said Miss Kellermann.

Continuing she said: "About my new picture in which I am to appear for Mr. Fox, I was sure when I agreed to make it that everything would be all right, because I worked with Herbert Brenon before, and I think that there is no one quite like him for taking pains and getting results. Then, too, I talked with Mr. Fox and I feel assured that the work is going to be a pleasure."

ANNETTE KELLERMANN

Referring to her liking for pictures Miss Kellermann said: "I love picture work. It's outdoor work means a change of atmosphere and there is little rehearsing. Moving pictures have given me a broader scope than anything I have yet done on the stage. On the stage I appear for a few minutes and do a few stunts, but in the pictures I have all out doors to work in, and plenty of chance to do my best work. I used to go to a theatre and watch myself in my first picture. It was a strange and interesting sensation to think that I was entertaining a big audience, yet could get up and go home whenever I pleased and not stop the performance."

Miss Kellermann is a very domesticated young woman. The interviewer found her in her Long Island home baking bread and cake.

"I love to cook," said she. "Why, one evening last week I prepared dinner for eight people."

Miss Kellermann is resting preparatory to starting work on the big Fox Feature production that will be produced by Herbert Brenon. More than two hundred persons will take part in it and the cost will be tremendous, as it will take from three to five months to film it—perhaps longer.

The entire party will cruise in tropical seas about the Island of Jamaica in order to find the proper setting and secure the atmosphere that Mr. Brenon desires to interpolate in the finished production. It is expected that the work will start within the next three weeks.

Irene Fenwick Comes to Rescue of Kleine Director

Picks the "Most Suitable" Stage Door as Local Color for a Scene in "The Woman Next Door," with Regular Attendant of the Sacred Portal in Action

"DEAR ME," signed pretty little Miss Fenwick, during a conference with George Kleine and her director relative to the making of a scene in "The Woman Next Door." "There seems to be an awful lot of bother about a little scene showing me walk out of a stage door."

"It's not so unimportant as you think," admonished the director. "Remember that you're supposed to be a famous actress leaving the stage door of the theatre where you are starring. This fellow Lake comes up to the doorkeeper, tips him and asks that he take in his card. In your dressing room you refuse to see him and later you exit from the stage door with Lake in the background observing you intently. And," added the director, "I'll be switched if I can think of a stage door in New York where we can get the sun and all the rest of it."

RITCHIE LING IN "THE WOMAN NEXT DOOR" (KLEINE)

The blue eyes of the star of "The Song of Songs" widened with inspiration.

"Am I or am I not the leading woman of 'The Song of Songs' at the Eltinge theatre?"

This was readily agreed.

"Then," continued Miss Fenwick, "why not use the Eltinge stage door? I am an actress in real life as well as in the film play and there's nothing like good local color."

The director blushed sufficiently to appease Miss Fenwick's wrath. "By jove, you're right," he confessed. "I never thought of it."

So accordingly it was arranged to make the scene during the last week of Miss Fenwick's engagement in "The Song of Songs." A banner was made bearing her film-play name which replaced the correct one on the iron canopy of the theatre. Crowds leaving an afternoon performance were taken, after which Miss Fenwick herself was photographed leaving the stage door just as she has done in real life since the opening of the Eltinge engagement.

"TIPPERARY" COMPOSER TO PREPARE MUSIC FOR TRIANGLE SUBJECTS

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Aug. 9.

Jean Swartz and Harry Williams, well known song composers whose hits include, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" and others, have been engaged by Mack Sennett, managing director of the Keystone corner of the Triangle Film Corporation, and they will prepare special music for each film.

The engagement of these two is to be permanent, and they will prepare the music as the scenes are made, working in cooperation with Hampton Del Ruth, scenario editor, and his assistants, William Campbell and Clarence Badger.

"Selling Advertising to Sell Film" Is V-L-S-E Slogan

Greater Returns in Patronage Is Possible Only by Wide Use of Impressive Publicity—Object Now Is to Attract People from Far and Near Instead of Depending Upon Those Who Pass the Door of the Theatre—Public Is Willing to Pay More for Good Features

THE principal feature in the selling plans of the Big Four, draws attention to a really remarkable condition that exists in the exhibition end of the motion picture industry. This condition is pointed out in the V-L-S-E advice to its representatives in the field, in the slogan—"Sell advertising to sell film."

A comparatively small percentage of the exhibitors of the country, yet realize the value to them in the proper publicizing of the features exhibited in their theatres.

In most cases exhibitors book a feature and are then content with the display of a few posters outside of the theatre, and the arrangement of a few frames in the lobby, entirely overlooking the fact that if they book strong features, they can attract many patrons that do not pass the theatre.

The Big Four point out that during the eighteen odd years of progress, the bulk of the improvement in the art, has been made by them. Practically all the advancement in pictures, is in the productions themselves. They have grown better in story, photography, motif, and motion, and with each forward step, they have grown more expensive to produce.

This latter item: the cost of production, must be taken into consideration by the exhibitors. The public has been educated to expect great things of the silent drama, and if the manufacturer is to continue to produce high class picture plays, he must be reimbursed for his investments by receiving a fair rental for his films.

In other words, exhibitors, if they want the best the market affords, must pay a fitting price for their features; and, to do this, they must adopt more advanced methods of conducting their theatres.

Need of Attracting Greater Patronage

The advancement in exhibiting circles, has been confined almost entirely to the building of better theatres, with better appointments, and greater conveniences for the patrons; but the matter of attracting greater patronage has been almost entirely overlooked.

The day has gone by when a theatre may depend upon the people who pass its doors or who live in its immediate neighborhood. At that time, a few banners and a couple of lobby stands were all sufficient. Today the exhibitor must advertise his shows more extensively if he expects to continue to run a profitable business.

Through the newspapers he can advise every prospective patron of his film offerings, and if he has the class of pictures they want, people will come from far and near to view them. Every theatre will find newspapers and billboard advertising very profitable investments, provided only, the program they offer is of such quality that the people attracted will not be disappointed.

The motion picture art, has reached a state of great dignity, and in offering their productions to the exhibitor, the Big Four state that they will stand on their merits alone, but advise their exhibitors, almost to the point of insistency, that the V-L-S-E productions must be advertised in order to attract the maximum amount of business.

They point out, that meritorious features will bring increased patronage at increased prices if the public knows where and when they are being exhibited. They claim that the people attracted through this advertising will become part of a wonderful advertising force working gratis in the interest of the theatre showing their subjects.

Proper Display Important

The V-L-S-E points out, that it is neither profitable to the exhibitor, nor the manufacturer, to expend large sums of money producing big, forceful picture plays, if they are to be presented in the same inconspicuous manner as the less important one and two reel subjects. It does not pay either the exhibitor or the manufacturer to take a big powerful picture and put it in the theatre, merely for the passerby or the regular patron of the theatre to see.

The claim is made, and it has already been demonstrated by the Big Four in many sections of the country, that patrons will not only be attracted from distant points to a theatre showing the V-L-S-E subjects, but that these patrons are willing to pay an increase in admission prices.

The life of any business depends upon the new customers it creates, and the big, meritorious feature is vital to the industry in that it creates new patronage. If the big feature is used merely in the nature of a souvenir to the regular patrons of a theatre, it is not serving its mission or returning the proper financial reward to the exhibitor.

The big feature has a distinct duty to perform. That duty is the promotion of new business, and while it is promoting that new business, it will return increased profits to the theatre where it is properly advertised and presented.

The film manufacturer, to continue to produce the high-grade, expensive picture plays now demanded by the public, must receive rentals commensurate with their increased cost. This money must come from the exhibitor, and the exhibitor in turn must receive it from the public, and to do this, he must attract greater patronage at better prices, through advertising the superior features offered in his theatre.

The public demands good pictures, and the public has always been found willing to pay for what it demands. It is with this in mind that the Big Four have adopted the selling slogan—"Sell advertising to sell film."

Every exhibitor who takes the Big Four service, is urged for the mutual good of himself and the V-L-S-E to advertise to the limit, each and every one of his Big Four offerings.

Essanay Adds Another 3-Reeler to Weekly Program

Quality Will Not Be Sacrificed in This Increased Production, Declares President Spoor, Whose Company Is Striving for a Well Balanced List of Successes

ESSANAY has again boosted its program by adding another three-reel drama each week. Beginning with September 1, it discontinues its one-act drama, released on Monday, and substitutes the three-reel photoplay.

The weekly program thus consists of two three-reel dramas, a two-reel drama, a George Ade Fable alternating with an animated cartoon and scenic release, a one-reel Western drama, featuring G. M. Anderson and Marguerite Clayton and a one-reel Western comedy. This makes a total of eleven reels each week, exclusive of the Chaplin comedies and the multiple reel features on the V-L-S-E program.

Essanay has steadily been growing away from the one reel photoplay in its Eastern productions, it being President George K. Spoor's aim, in this class of play, to get more finished productions.

"While we are increasing the number of reels," said Mr. Spoor, "it is because the kind of plays we now are producing demand it. I am absolutely opposed to any padding and would not for a moment permit the presentation of a play in two or more reels that could be presented in one.

"I have found that in line with our policy of buying only stories and books of well-known authors there is an intrinsic worth in these works that makes more than one reel necessary. We are making a specialty of producing works of high literary merit, plays with a vital issue at stake, with more intricate action and well-rounded plots.

"We are continuing our Western dramas in one reel because these plays are in a distinct class of themselves and original with G. M. Anderson. They contain the breezy style of the great out-of-doors with rapid and thrilling action. They have been found specially adapted to the present footage as Mr. Anderson created them, and are so satisfactory that no change is contemplated.

"We are striving for a well-balanced and varied program and in the Eastern plays there is another characteristic that enters into the productions. In these we are presenting problems or vital issues of a complicated life. I do not necessarily mean they are all problem plays in the common use of the term, but plays that carry issues that human beings are constantly called upon to face.

"The public now is demanding better photoplays, plays that while highly entertaining have a truly artistic value, and it is our aim to keep in step with the advanced demands."

CHARACTERISTIC MOMENTS IN THREE OF THE MOST RECENT PRODUCTIONS OF THE LASKY STUDIOS

"THE MARRIAGE OF KITTY" THE FIGHT SCENE IN "CARMEN" "THE SECRET ORCHARD"

RAINBOW IS NEW BRAND FOR STANDARD PROGRAM

O. E. Goebels, Santa Paula studio in Southern California, is to be the home of a new company of players appearing weekly in the Standard program in two part dramas.

Willis Robards, who recently made a hurried trip from Santa Paula to New York, has returned to the former city and will oversee the staging of the new brand which is to be known as the Rainbow. Through Mr. Robards, President and General Manager O. E. Goebel, of the producing company, has organized a group of screen players which includes Lillian Hamilton and Frederick Church.

John of the Ince Trio Begins Equitable Subject

"The Cowardly Way," Five Reels, Which He Recently Started, Will Be Released Through the World Film—Took Technical Staff With Him to New Position

JOHN INCE, the second of the trio of famous Ince brothers, arrived at the Equitable studio last week from Philadelphia, where he has been associated with Lubin for several years, and began directing "The Cowardly Way," the first five-reel picture which will produce for the Equitable, to be released on the World Film program.

Mr. Ince brought with him his own technical staff, the members of which have been with him at Lubin for the past three years and upon whom Mr. Ince declares he has come to rely for absolute co-operation in his work.

They are Ed. Hopins, manager of the old Arch street theatre in Philadelphia, technical director; William Black, photographer, and Joe Boyle, Mr. Ince's assistant. When Isadore Bernstein, general director of the Equitable Company, leaves for California in several months, when the company opens up its Western studio, Mr. Ince will be the head director of the New York studio.

John Ince, like his brothers, Tom and Ralph Ince, was on the stage all his life before going into the pictures. He started in 1888 with Henry E. Dixey, beginning at the very bottom of the theatrical ladder and working up—just as he believes every real actor has to do. His wide experience in life as well as on the stage makes him a motion picture director of unusual insight into human nature and into life.

He believes that it is only the people who have struggled and suffered and have met life's problems can really act, so in the psychological and sociological pictures he will produce for the Equitable, he will take great care in choosing his casts.

Mr. Ince is not a believer in "types"—that is, he does not believe that experienced people can succeed in a picture just because they are of a particular type. He thinks that they become self-conscious because of their inexperience and therefore kill their "type" before the camera.

The cast of "The Cowardly Way" will be as follows: Florence Reed, Ben Southard, Orlo Lea, William Cahill, Fred Tidmarsch and Ben Hendricks. The drama was written by Marc Edmund Jones.

Selig Claims Screen's Youngest Leading Lady

Little Grace Darmond, on Visit to Studios in Chicago Two Years Ago Out of Curiosity, Has Made An Enviable Reputation for Screen Work

THE Selig Polyscope Company claims the possession of the youngest leading lady in the world. Less than two years ago, Little Grace Darmond with girl friends from Chicago's North Side visited the Selig studios in curiosity. Miss Darmond remained to score world-wide success as leading lady for such stage artists as Tyrone Power, Otis Harlan and Harry Mestayer.

Today, Miss Darmond has not yet reached her eighteenth milestone, but she is known in all parts of the world where the motion pictures are enjoyed.

She starred in "The Millionaire Baby," "The House of a Thousand Candles," "A Black Sheep," and other Selig Red Seal Plays.

Miss Darmond is as clever with the pen as she is in the motion pictures. She recently completed a story entitled "How I Became a Movie Star." The Selig company will soon release this feature, illustrated with late portraits of Miss Darmond, as the fourth article in "Filmland Experiences."

The other articles in this series were written by Kathlyn Williams, Harry Mestayer and Tyrone Power.

Thousands of newspapers and magazines have published these articles. Tyrone Power's assertion that "motion picture screens will ultimately be stretched between the pillars of every church" has used argumentation pro and con, some agreeing with Mr. Power and others taking exceptions to his statement.

These feature articles, devoid of exaggeration and faithfully produced as written by the Selig stars, are issued free to newspapers either in mats, plates, or proofs. Exhibitors are appreciating the worth of these feature stories and are urging their home editors to use them. It is said that little urging is necessary after live newspapermen have once read the stories.

Grace Darmond's story will have a particular appeal to women and girls, as she gives some good advice to "movie struck" damsels.

POLICY OF MAJESTIC IN DETROIT OUTLINED IN "BIG FOUR FAMILY"

The policy of the Majestic Theatre, in Detroit, is cited in the latest issue of the "Big Four Family," as a keen testimonial to the merits of the V-L-S-E program. "The Confidence of Men of Millions," is the title of the leading article, by Charles J. Giegerich, setting forth that this treatre, established and operated by a group of millionaires, confines itself to the Big Four features.

There is also a page illustrations of the Dallas branch office of the exchange, and a night photograph, showing the crowds attracted to a showing of "Graustark" at the Modern Theatre, in Boston.

EASTERN FILM GETS RIGHTS TO 3 CAPE COD STORIES

The Eastern Film Corporation, of Providence, R. I., has closed a contract with the A. S. Barnes Company for three of Joseph C. Lincoln's celebrated Cape Cod stories: "Mr. Pratt," "The Old Home House" and "Partners of the Tide."

The producing company plans to erect a special studio in a picturesque location on Cape Cod and to make three feature films of unusual quality.

FILM NEWS FROM EUROPEAN CAPITALS

"Photoplay Without Words," a Universal, Draws Patronage by Prize Offer for Title—"The Great Sarah" Will Be Seen in "Jeanne Dore," a Success of the "Legitimate" Stage Last Year—Charles Chaplin Subjects Make Big Hit with French Audiences—Italian Professor Invents Revolutionary Projection Machine

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Paris, Aug. 2.

AN enormous business has been done at a great many Kinema theatres in Paris in the last three weeks with a film called "Photoplay Without Words." The reason of the special attraction of this film lies in the offer made by the Universal Film Company to give fifty dollars to the person who will find the appropriate title for this film, and of course Kinema managers are booming the offer of fifty dollars. I feel sure the Universal will never have to pay the price, not in France in any case, as the people watch the film, and forget all about the title.

I have had the pleasure of seeing and have had a long chat with Madame Sarah Bernhardt since her operation. She looks wonderfully well and is beginning to take short walks to get used to her wooden leg. Madame received me most cordially and told me of her future arrangements:

She is to come to Paris at the beginning of August to be filmed in her last production "Jeanne Doré," which made a big success in Paris. The world's rights of this film have been secured by Mr. Tippett for the Universal Film Company in New York.

In September she is to appear again for two weeks at Stoll's Coliseum in London, and from there she sails for the States, where she is booked again for an extensive tour. Madame Sarah Bernhardt presented me with a photograph taken a fortnight ago at Bordeaux.

The great Kay Bee film called "The Wrath of the Gods," was bought last week by a wealthy gentleman in Paris who is going to show it at one of the finest Paris theatres. Arrangements are also made to show this great picture at all the leading theatres in France and the colonies.

Genuine War Topicals Obtainable

I was surprised to hear from an American gentleman who came over on business, that he had great difficulties in securing "genuine and official war topicals." This, as I was in position to show him, was the easiest and simplest thing to do. Any American firm wishing to get the original and official war topicals which are published every week with the permission of the French military authorities, can get them at 65c. the meter (over 3 feet).

The biggest success ever obtained by an American comic film in France is no doubt the one published of Charles Chaplin by the Western Import Company. Nearly every Kinema theatre in Paris shows this clever artist and the audiences get a real good laugh.

I met the Russian representative of the Trans-Atlantic Film Company in Paris the other day. As he is an Italian, I would not have been surprised to see him on his way home to his native country to take up arms against Germany. "No," he said, "I was not called away from Moscow by my country, but by Mr. Tippett, the manager of the firm."

As in France last year, Kinema business in Italy has come to an absolute standstill within the last three weeks. All film manufactories have closed their doors, as nearly every man between 19 and 38 years of age has had to leave for the front.

Here are a few I know who went

Italian Professor Invents Projector

I hear that Nelson Viganego, a celebrated professor of Genoa, has invented a new apparatus called "Kinospectre," which is to revolutionize the present system of projection.

Good films are still in great demand just now in France. French production is very small, and the Italian films have not been available during the past fortnight.

The big serial film of the Universal "Black Box" is soon to be shown in Paris. I hear that this picture has created quite a sensation in London. G. KACZKA.

WAR FAILS TO HOLD BACK ENGLISH FILM TRADE

London, August 2.

ENGLISH film producers, renters and exhibitors are congratulating themselves on the fact that although the war has been in progress now twelve months, the cinematograph industry has suffered none of the adverse effects which at first were contemplated.

Another producing company has made its debut—M. L. B. (Michaelson Lloyd British) Productions—and they intend to manufacture multiple reel dramas of society life. From the Motograph Company, of London, may in the future be expected some good modern dramas, sentimental comedies and child plays, manuscripts for which are being asked. Now that the English film producing firms have successfully established themselves there are opportunities for enterprising American agents to secure the rights for America.

Only this week the Yorkshire Cine Company, Ltd., of 30 Gerrard street, London, W., states that they were open to offers of representation in America, and would be pleased to give the best attention to any responsible firms. Arthur Bridger, formerly of the Selig Polyscope Company and the Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Ltd., has joined the staff of the Yorkshire Cine Company.

The demand for farce comedy, such as that of the standard of the Chaplin productions, continues unabated, and it has been computed that Chaplin's screen performances in Great Britain number 4,500 a day, giving an idea of the irresistible funmaker's popularity. The craze for war drama has subsided considerably, and lurid productions no longer find a place in the programs of the better class houses. Pathe Freres, who are retiring from the renting side of the business at an early date, are hoping to achieve for their new serial, "The Exploits of Elaine," success such as has never been attained by any other production in the same category.

Kinema Interviews

A. E. Wagner, of Thomas A. Edison, Ltd., for the States, in order to discuss with his firm arrangements concerning future activities of the English branch, and G. U. Stephenson, of the advertising department of the Trans-Atlantic Company, have returned to America.

"Kinema Interviews with Popular People" is a series of films which is a novelty, and no doubt will excite considerable interest both in England and abroad. The first introduces us to Ella Retford at home, and the second will enable cinemagoers to make the acquaintance of Vesta Tilley. The experiment is being watched with interest.

A resolution has been passed by the General Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, expressing the opinion that it is essential to the existence of the exhibitor that the open market for films be maintained, and further that manufacturers and renters on their part should assist the exhibitor to the extent of their power in order to maintain the open market.

There has been a slight manifestation of feeling against the increasing number of exclusives which are being put on the market, and it has been remarked to me only a few days ago that "exclusives are exclusive only in price."

Among the most recent productions of the English studios which are ready for export at the present writing are the following:

"The Beggar Girl's Wedding" (British Empire Films). A five-reel drama recapitulating the well-known stage play. The intense dramatic situations are enhanced by the realistic settings which include scenes on the Thames Embankment and in the shade of St. Paul's Cathedral.

"One on Ikey" (Bamfoth). Four hundred and twenty-three feet of drollery, being a mimic highway robbery.

"A Midnight Fantasy" (Yorkshire Cine Company). Drama of 855 feet featuring an exciting duel scene, and showing how a dream turned a young man from his gambling habits.

"His Little Lordship" (Regal Film Co.). Drama. Round the plot which centres on the designs of poachers on the estate of the lord of the manor, there are some excellent scenes of life in a gipsy encampment.

"Grip" (B. & C.). A charming romance revealing original incident. The hero endures years of suffering to execute a cruel revenge, only to find when the opportunity comes he has not the heart to take advantage of it.

"The Man Who Stayed at Home" (Hepworth drama). A skillfully handled subject dealing with a theme such as the title suggests, and affording scope for satirical and comic situations.

"Her One Redeeming Feature" (M. L. B.). One thousand and thirteen feet of melodrama, showing how a young man is ensnared by a daring adventuress.

"Asphyxiating Gases" (Kineto). A 570-foot topical demonstrating the uses of the latest horror of modern warfare.

"Miss Vesta Tilley" (Yorkshire Cine Company, Ltd.). One of the Kinema Interviews with popular people series exhibiting the vaudeville star among the flowers in her garden, aboard her motor launch and at her beautiful villa on the River Thames.

HARRIS WRITES SONGS FOR "SCHOOL BELLS"

Charles K. Harris has written a new song, "School Bells," to go with the five reel feature motion picture by the same name, which is being produced at the Kinemacolor studios in Whitestone, by Perry N. Vekroff, and which will be released through the World Film.

Waves "Old Glory" to Rally Public for Preparedness

Rudolph, in Discussing Pictures of F. O. Neilsen, States That General Wood at Private Showing Expressed Enthusiasm Over Its Possibilities for Arousing Sentiment

ARMED with testimonials from such men as Secretary Garrison, Secretary Daniels, Rear Admiral Benson, U. S. N., General Leonard Wood and General Hugh Scott, U. S. A., F. O. Nielsen of Chicago, and W. H. Rudolph, his Eastern representative, have commenced the exploitation of "Guarding Old Glory," as a tremendous film argument for preparedness on the part of the United States. The five reels of scenes in the navy and army, showing all branches of both services at work, and comparing them with those of foreign nations, greatly to the disadvantage of this country, have called forth the commendation of the highest officials of the army and navy, and all have urged the public exhibition of the pictures as the best means of waking the people up to actual conditions.

"In fact," said Mr. Rudolph in discussing the film at his New York office, 220 West Forty-second street, this week, "it was at the suggestion of General Wood that the pictures are being brought out in this form now. General Wood had a private view of 'Old Glory' at Governor's Island and was enthusiastic over their possibilities in bringing about a sentiment for greater preparedness.

"The pictures were Mr. Neilsen's own idea, and were taken under his direction from the patriotic motive of showing Americans just what their army and navy are. Views of artillery, infantry, cavalry, coast defense artillery, engineering work were taken at the various army posts, and scenes on board ship, showing the manning and firing of the big guns, target practice work, steaming drills and manoeuvres have been made while the battleships were in action.

"There is no play or story, or anything of a dramatic nature woven about these pictures. They are merely the army and navy as they are, with titles to explain everything and enable the public to make a comparison and see just where we would stand in case trouble came. For instance, there are only twelve of the standard three-inch field pieces in the hands of the regular army east of the Mississippi River.

"There are not enough torpedoes on hand to provide one round for the tubes on destroyers, submarines and battleships. These facts are not known to the public. People don't realize just what shape we are in.

"We show a fine specimen of a United States battleship. It is well-manned, and no doubt could destroy any foreign battleship of its own class, but it is sixteen years old, and an enemy ship to be in its own class must be at least sixteen years old. Our artillery parades bravely through the streets, drawn by fine teams of horses, and cheered by the thousands, but we show that the modern efficient artillery corps does not use horses, but motor tractors. Germany taught the world that autos must be used and we must wake up to the necessity of improving the branch of our service.

"These pictures have been finished just at the psychological moment. The talk of preparedness is growing as the war clouds thicken, and we are glad to be able to help along the work in this manner."

Brewers Pull Long Faces Over Inroads of Pictures

Thirst Quenching Purveyors of San Francisco Take Alarm at Ebbing Saloon Statistics, Attributed to Healthful Amusement of Film Houses

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

San Francisco, August 9.

BREWERY interests have been complaining for a long time that moving pictures have been making serious inroads in their business, by affording attractive gathering places outside of saloons, and the idea was recently conceived at San Francisco of installing moving picture equipment in saloons and giving patrons free entertainments with drinks.

Backed by one of the leading breweries of the city a Greek saloon man applied to the local board of police commissioners for a permit to conduct a combined saloon and moving picture theater in the Howard and Third street district, a section of the city much frequented by those seeking employment, and the home of many foreigners.

One of the exhibitors who has a house in this section, and who is a loyal member of the Exhibitors' League of San Francisco heard of the proposition, and when the matter was brought up before the police commissioners many of the leading exhibitors of the city were on hand to protest against the granting of such a license.

The matter was put over for a week, and then was postponed again and again, evidently with the idea of tiring the exhibitors out. Finally, however, Mayor Rolph expressed his disapproval of such a combination of interests, and, frightened by the threat of exhibitors to make the liquor question a leading one from their standpoint at the coming State-wide election, the brewers decided to withdraw their support from the proposition and a liquor and restaurant license was awarded instead of a liquor and moving picture permit.

Exhibitors are unanimous in their belief that such a combination of interests as this would prove to be a serious detriment to their business and would undo much of the good work that has been accomplished during the past few years in placing moving pictures on a high plane.

BORDERMAN'S DESCENDANT IN "BLUE GRASS" WORLD FILM

John Boone, who is playing the role of Kelly in "Blue Grass," which is being produced by the Equitable for the World Film, is a great grandson of Daniel Boone, having been brought up in the South.

He is of course familiar with the race track, and in this Southern photodrama, taken from Paul Armstrong's play, he does excellent work as a character of the tracks.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. SPECIAL ORGAN AND SOLOIST FOR "ROSARY"

AFTER heralding the coming of the V-L-S-E feature, "The Rosary," with a large amount of advanced advertising in the newspapers and on the billboards, Manager O'Neil, of the Palace theatre, in Manchester, N. H., caused a special set of scenery to be built, representing a choir chancel, and engaged Mme. Eckert, soloist from the Boston Opera House, and John Foley, another well-known singer, in addition to the "sanctuary" choir of twenty voices.

For the musical accompaniment, Mr. O'Neil installed a special organ.

This proper staging of the feature photoplay caused a furor that resulted in most gratifying financial returns to the Palace theatre.

PUBLIC WILL PAY FOR GOOD PICTURES

"JUST to show that the public is ready to pay for good pictures," said V. P. Whitaker, assistant to George Mann of the Paramount program, "one needs only to glance at the Columbia threatre, Washington, D. C. During the very hottest season, when the musical comedy closed because it could not pay, we put in a Paramount program and have been able to make money on prices ranging from ten cents to a quarter.

"At first we made weekly runs and now we have mid-week changes. The public knows what it wants and the public is discriminating. Some said it was folly to start a new theatre in summer, but we have made good and we are satisfied."

"SCANDAL" INFLUENCES WOMAN TO URGE FORMATION OF ANTI-SCANDAL CLUB

THE feature "Scandal," which will be presented by Manager James H. Jackson at the Savoy, Atlanta, Ga., next week, made such an impression at a recent exhibition that an Atlanta woman has proposed the organization of an Anti-Scandal Club. In a letter to a local newspaper she offers the following pledge:

"I and my household solemnly pledge to speak only the good we hear about people. If we can speak no good, we will speak no evil."

The purpose of her proposed club, she says is "To make the world better and life easier to live."

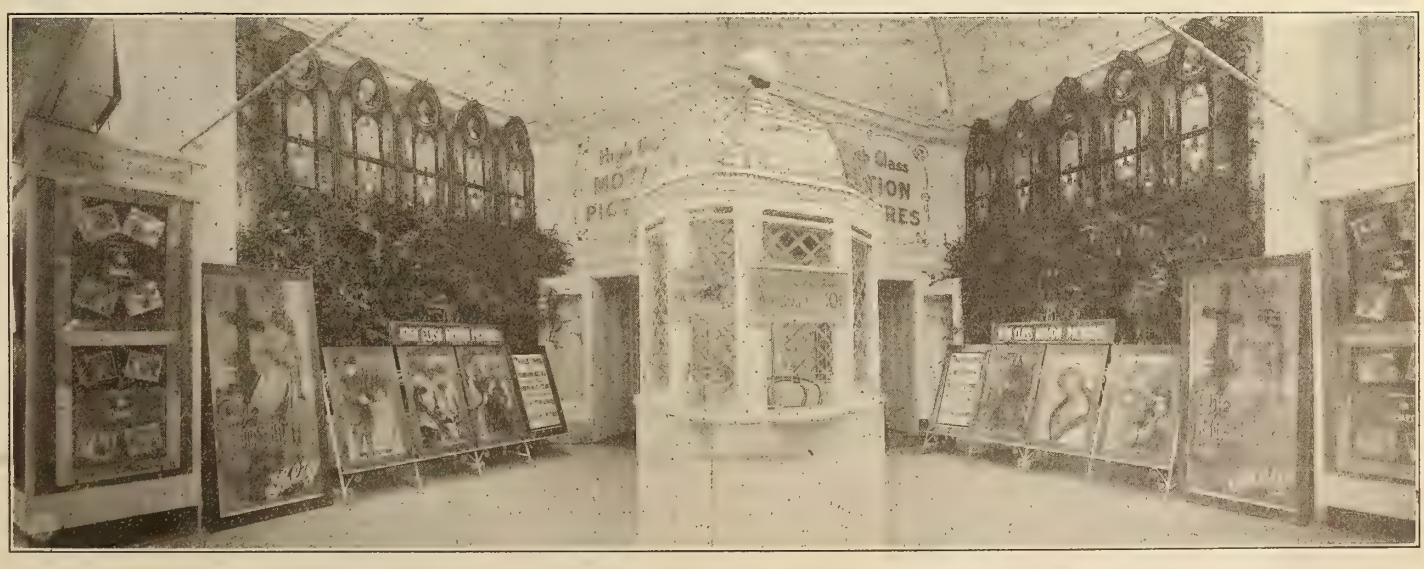
CHAPLIN CONTEST IS AMATEURS' CHANCE TO IMPERSONATE COMEDIAN

A CHARLIE CHAPLIN Contest, in addition to the regular show, was offered by the management of Keith's theatre, Louisville, Ky., the past week. Many amateur impersonators of the comedian participated, and cash prizes were awarded the winners, who were determined by the audience. The contest drew a good house.

GOOD PICTURES KNOCK THE HOT WEATHER JINX

"WE have been able to keep quality, admission price, and length of program during the hot weather," commented Arthur Robb, house manager of Tom Moore's Garden. "More than this, we have been able to keep a steady patronage.

"The V-L-S-E features have been big drawing cards. The same may be said of Moore's Strand, with its capacity of two thousand. Sometimes I wonder if the population of the city has diminished much. The secret is in standardizing your house, and then your patrons know what to expect and where to go for it."



"HAMLET" NEEDS NO ADVERTISING

THE door receipts at the Modern theater on Washington street, Boston, were swelled the last three days of the week by the Knickerbocker Star feature, "Hamlet," recently.

Although no special advertising of the film was done, the second day's showing brought more people than the first.

CHAPLIN BALLOONS FOR CHILDREN

THE Royal theatre, Bellevue, Ohio, recently gave a Chaplin balloon to every child accompanied by an adult. Premiums are given to patrons who buy a dollar's worth of tickets, as the envelopes are classed as coupons for which the premiums are given.

Canton Turns Light on Censor Evil to Wake Public

Leading Exhibitors of Ohio City Form Fund to Defray Expenses of Advertising in Daily Papers Calling Attention to Referendum Petitions

Special to Motion Picture News

Canton, O., August 11.

MOTION picture exhibitors of this locality began recently and now are assiduously prosecuting a campaign to acquaint the public generally with the evils of state motion picture censorship.

In connection with this campaign, leading exhibitors of this city banded together to form a fund to defray expenses of advertising in the daily newspapers. Full-page advertisements were designed and run calling attention to the referendum petitions displayed on tables in the lobby of each theatre.

Patrons of the theatres were urged to sign these petitions which will give the voter at large a chance to vote his sentiments on the legislature-made censorship law.

Delegations of exhibitors called on the publishers of the newspapers to which the advertisement had been tendered and asked their editorial co-operation to secure a popular vote on the censorship law.

This work has and is producing satisfying results. Thousands of signatures have been obtained for the petitions and one influential daily newspaper here has editorially taken up the fight while others are handling the campaign of the exhibitors as news matter.

Copies of the recent "Saturday Evening Post" editorial against motion picture censorship have been displayed prominently in theatre lobbies. Leaflets of printed matter discussing the censorship problem have been printed by the joint committee of exhibitors and passed out to theater patrons.

This campaign against censorship has completely eradicated what little lack of co-operation existed here among the exhibitors, and the unity of action has shown conclusively that the public is capable of understanding the motion picture problems and is ready to listen to the exhibitors when they talk together.

Sentiment in this district, brought to the surface by the activities of the exhibitors and the newspapers, is strongly against censorship, and since the inauguration of this anti-censorship campaign, indications point to a large vote here for the repeal of the state censor law.

The "Daily News," of this city, in a recent editorial, assailed the action of Mayor Charles Stolberg and Safety Director Rufus Kunkle in ordering off the local screens of the Eastland pictures. This newspaper advocated the election of Stolberg and has steadfastly supported him during his administration on all other matters.

Crane Wilbur and Mills Enter Ince Fold for NYMP

Studio Will Be Equipped with Larger Electric Plant—This Addition to Its Facilities Will Make Night Production Possible

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Aug. 9.

CRANE WILBUR, referred to as the hero of a thousand thrillers, and the Romeo of a thousand romances of motion pictures, and Frank Mills, popular Broadway leading man, are two who have just been contracted by Thomas H. Ince for appearance in NYMP productions. Mr. Mills has already arrived at the studio, and is now appearing in support of Bessie Barriscale in "The Golden Claw," under the direction of Reginald Barker. The heavy for this subject is taken by Wedgewood Newell. For this production a number of artists have been secured to prepare massive oil paintings which will be used in the elaborate sets of the new production.

This is a society drama, and these paintings will be used as a part of the interior decorations of one of New York's Fifth Avenue homes. For this a number of large rugs, tapestries and other expensive adornments have been secured. This set requires half of the new glass studio which is seventy-five by one hundred and twenty-five feet.

Mr. Wilbur will leave the east within a few days coming direct to Inceville to fulfill the long term contract. Just what production he will appear in first has not been announced, but it is understood that the script for this will be written by Mr. Ince and C. Gardner Sullivan.

The NYMP studio is to be equipped with a much larger electric light plant, the company having purchased an entire plant from a nearby city when it was replaced by water power. This will make it possible for production to continue throughout all kinds of weather, and day as well as night.

The power equipment necessary for this will consist of two three-cylinder engines each of one hundred and twenty-five horsepower, two thirty-five kilowatt generators and all accessories. The capacity of the equipment will be two thousand twenty-five watt lamps or twenty twenty-five amps studio lamps of fifty thousand candle power each.

Eight Weeks to a Picture Is California Quality Policy

With Inaugurated Policy of Six Multiples in Next Twelve Months, Western Company Decides Upon Two-Month Period for Avoidance of Slipshod Work Feature Production

FOLLOWING immediately upon their production of "Salvation Nell," just completed and scheduled for release September 1, the California Motion Picture Corporation settled upon a definite policy of issuing six master productions during the coming twelve months.

An official of the corporation recently announced the details of the California Quality plan as follows:

"We feel certain that in 'Salvation Nell' we have nearly reached the acme of producing perfection and have consequently set it as a standard below which none of our future pictures are to fall. We have formulated our policy upon a quality rather than a quantity basis. We contemplate giving on an average of at least eight weeks to each of our future features. This will allow us ample time for careful and studied direction and the most minute attention to the all important item of detail.

"The time has clearly come, we believe when each individual production must stand on its own merit, and the trade mark of either producing or releasing company will not be enough of itself to insure success.

"Our policy henceforward is to produce pictures carefully and with deliberation, our intention being to set a standard rather than to try to live to one already promulgated by some one else in the industry."

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

WASHINGTON, D. C., PLANS TO INAUGURATE RULES FOR EXCHANGE AND EXHIBITORS

THE time has come when the exchangemen must "get together" in Washington, D. C. There has been too much selfishness, too much individual gain, too much "don't care" for the other exchangeman. Just so long as any individual exchange manager was adding theatres to his list he cared little what had happened or what might happen to the other exchangeman.

Co-operation is now found necessary and the cause of this co-operation is financial honesty on the part of careless and unscrupulous managers. Such managers, it must be admitted, are not those who have grown up with the industry nor those who are business men, but chiefly men who, believing that they can reap a quick profit in the motion picture exhibiting business, and that the industry is a gold mine which needs little or no effort to gather in the gold, have leaped into the exhibiting end ill-equipped financially.

Finding themselves soon in a hole and not knowing or caring how to get out they have allowed bills and promises to run to such amounts that the exchangemen must call a halt to such practices.

The only solution to this difficulty seems to be co-operation with a reasonable set of business rules to cover contracts made with exhibitors. This is what some of the Washington exhibitors are endeavoring to accomplish. Some of the suggestions offered is that no exchangeman will take on an exhibitor who is still in debt to the previous exchange; that whenever a protested check is received the next show will be expressed C. O. D. with full bill due; that certain advance charges will be necessary on all contracts; and that the financial standing of an exhibitor will be a known fact to all exchanges.

"The honest business exhibitor will have no objections to keeping business rules, for he will be upholding and raising the standing of his own end of the motion picture industry," remarked an exchangeman.

When inquiring into this condition among the Washington, D. C., exchanges it was not uncommon for the manager of the exchange to say, "Here's a bunch of protested checks now," as he pulled from a pigeonhole a batch of papers. Henry E. Freidman, whose business abilities above all else won him his present position as manager of the World Film Corporation, is thoroughly in favor of co-operative business rules for the exchangemen.

The local office of the Fox Film Corporation has already guarded against the unscrupulous manager by a contract for a certain advance payment for rental of films which must be approved by the home office before the permanent contract is issued.

"I have found no kicking on the part of the desirable exhibitors in signing these contracts in my territory," remarked J. P. Anderson. "It is simply businesslike and just to both parties."

"The exchangeman has been very easy in financial matters with the exhibitor in the past," remarked J. L. Yates, of the Universal. "He must now protect himself and the best way to accomplish this is to pull altogether."

GUZMAN LEAVES BOSTON FOR KLEINE OFFICE IN NEW YORK

A NUMBER of important changes in the personnel of the selling organization of the Kleine forces occurred last week. In the New York territory two additions to the traveling staff, in Edgar Healy and Edward F. Guzman, were made.

Mr. Guzman comes from George Kleine's Boston office to New York. Foster Moore, who was associated with the Kleine selling force during the organization of its offices two years ago, has returned to the fold, taking the vacancy in the New York office made by the promotion of H. A. Bugie, to the Philadelphia office.

FOX'S TRIANGULAR FLYING SQUADRON WEDGES ITS WAY ACROSS COUNTRY TO BIG SALES VICTORY

THE Flying Squadron, consisting of William Alexander, special representative for William Fox, and his two aides, William Bernstein and Jerome Abrams, have spent the past week in Detroit. While there they located new business in all directions and wherever they called they were given a most cordial reception.

Exhibitors have awakened to the great possibilities of Fox films. Managers of Detroit theatres have told the NEWS correspondent that their patrons ask when they are going to show Fox films.

"The Flying Squadron" on a transcontinental trip, is working in conjunction with the various branch offices of the company. Mr. Alexander remains at the office while his assistants work in the immediate territory.

Mr. Alexander told the MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative they have done a phenomenal business since the "brigade of reserves" left New York.

Wherever they called they found exhibitors waiting for the opportunity to sign up for Fox films. He said that Detroit is the only city he knows of where a suburban house (referring to the Majestic theatre at Woodward and Willis avenues) gets the top prices of fifty cents. He also said that Detroit was the only city in the country between New York and Chicago that had five theatres playing weekly attractions. These houses are the Majestic, Washington, Broadway-Strand, Family and Liberty, all playing feature films exclusively.

Asked whether he thought there would ever be a scarcity of stories to be filmed, Mr. Alexander said, "Absolutely not. Didn't people write books and stories centuries ago. Why won't they continue to write them? There will always be writers and there will always be film drama authors. There is no scarcity of plays and no scarcity of musical composers.

Why should there be a scarcity of film scenario writers? If anything, the scenarios of the future will be better than they have ever been.

"Pictures will be better produced; the photography will be better, and the people portraying the different characters will be better suited to their parts. I see a bigger future than ever for the moving picture industry. I don't mean to say that a man can take a camera, a few screen actors, a scenario and go out and produce a subject that will be a success. But concerns, like the Fox Film Corporation, which spare no expense in every department and which are constantly studying and working new things will always remain in the front ranks."

V-L-S-E TRIPLES BRANCHES SINCE APRIL

THE photograps recently taken by the executive offices of the V-L-S-E have already gone into the archives of that company, as records of the past, for with the varnish hardly dry on the office partitions, it has already been necessary to start work on tearing them down to enlarge the quarters.

The business of the Big Four has gone forward with such gigantic strides that almost the entire seventh floor of the Big Mecca Building, New York City, is insufficient to accommodate the working forecs of the main office, and the rearrange now being made is designed to give temporary relief.

Since the inauguration of the V-L-S-E last April, the number of its branches has been more than tripled.

The capacity business being done by each office, indicates that even the present number of branches will have to be increased.

FORM PEERLESS FOR BIG FEATURES IN NEW ORLEANS

PAUL L. FORD, Elmer B. Smith and Meyer Simmonds, three of the best known men in the southern territory, have formed the Peerless Feature Film Company of Louisiana, an independent concern which is going after only big features to market in Louisiana and neighboring states. At present the company has headquarters at 832 Common street, New Orleans, jointly with the United Film Service of Louisiana, of which Mr. Ford, the president of the new concern, is manager.

Mr. Ford is also an officer in the newly organized exchange men's club. Mr. Smith is known as former manager of Mutual in several southern cities, and Mr. Simmonds recently was manager of the New Orleans office of the Apex Feature Film Company. The latter has just returned from a trip to New York, and, as assistant manager for the Peerless, laid in a supply of exceptional features, including some of D. W. Griffith Master-Pictures.

The Peerless will market "Cabiria" throughout Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, Mississippi and Florida; and "After the Ball," "The Escape" and "The Avenger" in most of the states mentioned.

Merton W. Lawrence, who has successfully handled "Zudora" and "The Million Dollar Mystery," has been named traveling representative of the new company.

"We're independent," Mr. Ford announced, "and we're going to handle anything that looks good to us; but the picture must contain exceptional merit and be a feature. As independents, we can have the pick of the market."

SWEIGERT GETS GOLD ROOSTER FOR PATHE BUSINESS

CARL SWEIGERT, one of the Philadelphia Pathé staff was the recipient the other day of a solid gold rooster from his firm. The handsome trinket is to be used as a watch charm and was sent for the record amount of business obtained through the efforts of Mr. Sweigert in the recent Pathé testimonial contest.

Herbert Given, who manages the Paramount releases for Philadelphia, feels that the Board of Censors acted unjustly in refusing to pass the latest Lasky release "The Secret Orchard" in Pennsylvania. The action of the court is looked for with much interest.

The Metropolitan Booking Office announce some important releases during the next week. Reviews of the best will appear in a future issue of the NEWS.

J. S. Hebrew, manager of V-L-S-E reports a big demand for "The Climbers," the latest Lubin release on the Big Four program. Another Lubin that is being looked forward to with much expectancy is "The Ringtailed Rhinoceros," scheduled for August 16.

MORRIS MADE MANAGER OF WORLD IN CLEVELAND

SAMUEL E. MORRIS, owner of the Home and Crown theaters, and formerly president of Cleveland Local No. 1, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, has been appointed manager of the Cleveland branch of the World Film Corporation.

Walter H. Kulp, who has been manager of the Cleveland office of the World, has joined the Fox Film Corporation forces as road salesman.

QUIMBY, DENVER MANAGER, HAS BEEN FILM MAN SEVEN YEARS

F. C. Quimby, manager of the Pathé exchange in Denver, Colorado, entered the film business in 1908, when he built the Isis Theatre in Missoula, Montana. In 1910 he went to Spokane to manage the Empire Theatre there, but went back to Missoula in 1911 to build the Empress Theatre at a cost of $12,000.

He sold the Empress in 1912, and from then on until some eight months ago managed offices for the World Film and later with the Mutual. He then became Denver and Salt Lake manager for Pathé. The Pathé business in his territory has increased to such an extent that the offices will soon be moved to 1708 Milton street, where he has rented a ground floor office 125x25 feet.

F. C. QUIMBY

This is in the heart of the business section and has every modern convenience, including a splendid exhibition room and big display windows. Six months ago the Denver Pathé office had four employees, but now has thirteen—a lucky number in this instance. Mr. Quimby is at present installing a large concrete film vault of the most modern type.

The Salt Lake office, which is also under his management, will be moved to 328 East Second street, South, where it will also have all modern improvements. The office force there has also been increased.

WORLD ISSUES LOCAL WEEKLY IN ST. LOUIS

J. W. COTTER, manager of the Kriterion Film Exchange, at 3217 Locust street, announces that his office has contracted to distribute the Standard Photoplay service of New York, in St. Louis and surrounding territory.

As a result of a dinner on August 1, S. W. Hatch, manager of the V-L-S-E Exchange, at 3630 Olive street, St. Louis, was taken seriously ill with ptomaine poisoning. J. A. Noehrn, his assistant in the exchange, was with him at dinner, and ate of the mushrooms, which is supposed to have been the cause of Mr. Hatch's illness, but Mr. Noehrn was not affected. Mr. Hatch is recovering.

The World Film Corporation, 3626 Olive street, is distributing a new local weekly news film. The St. Louis "Times," a daily evening paper, has joined the National "News Weekly" service, which is composed of twenty-five newspapers in twenty-five cities, and the local film will be known as the "St. Louis Times World Weekly," which will be distributed through the World Film office under the management of E. W. Dustin. August 9 is the first release date.

Local films are popular in St. Louis theatres, and should bring good attendance wherever shown.

WILLIAM FOX VISITS WASHINGTON EXCHANGE

WILLIAM FOX, president of the Fox Film Corporation, gave Washington, D. C., the honor of a visit the other day and somewhat surprised the local exchange manager, Col. J. P. Anderson, as visiting an exchangeman is entirely out of the order of things for Mr. Fox.

Taken unawares, there was no time for putting the house in order, so the president met Washington affairs just as they were, and he expressed himself as thoroughly satisfied with the management of things. The coming, visit, and departure of Mr. Fox was all so quiet that Washington film circles were not aware of its visitors until it was all over.

"That's the way I like an official to do," remarked Col. Anderson. "I want him to catch us in our every-day clothes and to see us in the midst of work.

"It is the best way to discover what an office is doing."

STATE RIGHT OWNERS OF "NATION" IN CALIFORNIA BOOK ON COMMISSION BASIS

MIKE ROSENBERG, who recently sold the State rights for "The Spoilers," "The Christian," and other films which he held for Minnesota and adjoining States, is in Los Angeles for a few weeks, investigating productions that are now being made with a view of purchasing State rights on subjects.

"The Birth of a Nation" is now being booked to all the small town theatres in southern California on a commission basis by the State rights owners, and in all instances a part of the contract is that the film is to be shown at twenty-five, fifty and seventy-five cents.

EHRGOTT MAKES TRIP THROUGH WESTERN MAINE

A. L. Ehrgott, manager of the General Film Company's Bangor, Maine, office, has returned from a business trip to the western part of Maine, calling on managers in Lewiston, Rumford, Livermore Falls and Farmington.

He took on two new accounts and increased another one. At Rumford Manager Walters, who gets an admission fee of fifteen cents at his theatre, told him that this is the best summer business he has ever had, and that he had found the same conditions elsewhere. The manager at Farmington had the same good report to make.

$500 Bonus for Balboa-Harvey Director of "Neal"

September 15 Is Date Set for Money-Winning Day—Work on the Eighth Installment Is Now Under Way—First Release Is Fixed for August 23

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, August 9.

THE Balboa-Harry Harvey Company filming the Balboa-Pathé serial, "Neal of the Navy" is now taking up work on the eighth installment. The first release for this is set for August 23.

Featured in this production are Lillian Lorraine and William Courtleigh, Jr. Primarily the picture shows life in the American Navy, and the company has letters from Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, addressed to all naval officers instructing that the company be permitted to make all scenes on boats and at naval stations that may be desired which do not conflict with the general orders now in force pertaining to pictures that would expose secrets of the navy.

The naval station at Mare Island at San Francisco and such boats as the U. S. S. "Maryland" and "Farragut" have served for settings. At San Francisco during the past week a sham battle was staged in the bay in front of the Exposition grounds for scenes in this picture.

A number of modern army rifles were needed for a scene, and Lieutenant Hodson, of the U. S. S. "Maryland," loaned the Balboa Company a case of the guns taken from the hold of the ship, which heretofore had not been unpacked since coming from the arsenal. In addition all men were fitted with belts, bayonets and knapsacks.

The story for this serial written by William Hamilton Osborne is based upon a grant issued by Joseph Bonaparte, King of Spain in 1809, for the Island of Cinnabar to a man named Illington. In a sea disaster Illington is lost and the grant and map showing the location of the island is now held by the fathers of the Santa Maria Mission in Southern California for Illington's heirs.

The serial opens with Captain Hardin of the tramp steamer "Princess" rescuing people following the Mt. Pelee eruption on Martinique. The "Princess" is wrecked, and the supposed sole survivors are Annette Illington, eight years old, who possesses the grant and map; Neal, the eight-year-old son of Captain Hardin; Welcher, son of the mate on the "Princess," and Mrs. Hardin, who adopts Annette and the Welcher boy. They come to America and reside in a seafaring town, where Neal becomes a member of the life-saving staff.

Inspired by praise from a naval officer, he attempts to pass the Annapolis examination, but by trickery on the part of Welcher, also a candidate for scholarship, he is denied the privilege of entering examination papers.

For a time he aids Federal officers in apprehending smugglers, and ultimately enters the navy as a gunner, from which position he is rapidly advanced.

William Courtleigh appears as Neal, Lillian Lorraine as Annette, Charles Dudley as Welcher, Edward J. Brady as Hernandez, who is set upon securing the grants, Lucy Blake as Inez, and Henry Stanley as Ponto, a Chinese tool of Hernandez. An ape-like man who becomes wild from accident and life on a desert island is taken by William Conklin. Every effort is being made to complete this serial by September 15, and if this is accomplished Director Harry Harvey will receive a bonus of five hundred dollars. He has completed the first half of the serial in six weeks, and has six weeks to film the other seven two-reel releases.

He has the co-operation of everyone of the studio, including President Horkheimer, Business Manager Normand Manning, players and technical people.

Kind Fortune Boosts Stage Struck Girl to Stardom in "The Masked Dancer," Kalem Feature

ANNA ORR, the dainty little danseuse who scored so great a success with Raymond Hitchcock in "The Beauty Doctor," at the Astor theatre, is the latest of the stars of the legitimate stage to appear in Kalem's "Broadway Favorites" features. Miss Orr's vehicle is the powerful three-act drama, "The Masked Dancer."

Humorists have long delighted in poking fun at the stage-struck individuals who shine in local amateur theatricals. The fact remains, however, that some of the foremost stars of the stage first displayed their embryonic talents in amateur performances.

Miss Orr's career furnishes a case in point. When earnestly informed by her friends out in Piqua, Ohio, some seven years ago, that she ought to go on the stage, Miss Orr took them at their word and commenced looking at once for an engagement.

Fortune was kind and the stage-struck girl soon made her appearance as a member of the "Girl at the Helm" company, which played at the La Salle theatre, Chicago. As the charming danseuse laughingly declared recently, her career since that time has been almost monotonously successful.

It is her originality and grace which have made Miss Orr so popular. Her work is utterly unlike that of any other danseuse upon the stage. In fact, her efforts proved so pleasing to New Yorkers, that she remained with "The Beauty Shop" company for two seasons. Two other vehicles in which she scored, were "Mary's Lamb," with Richard Carle, and "Springmaid," with Mizzi Hajos.

In "The Masked Dancer," Miss Orr enacts the role of Hera, the Persian girl who forsakes her home in the Orient to track the American whom she believes to be her father's murderer.

The beautiful dances presented in the course of the story are entirely original with this star. Like previous "Broadway Favorites" productions, "The Masked Dancer" will be released in regular service. The date of issue is Monday, August 30.

Essanay Players Active On and Off the Screen; Walthall Makes First Appearance

HENRY B. WALTHALL, leading man with Essanay, made his first appearance in person before the public, since his advent in photoplay work, when he appeared on the stage at the showing of "The Birth of a Nation," at the Chicago "Tribune's" benefit performance for the victims of the Eastland disaster. Mr. Walthall made a short speech at the intermission in which he expressed his gratification at being able to contribute in any way toward alleviating the sufferings of those bereft by the terrible tragedy.

Lillian Drew, the well-known character actress with Essanay Company, has joined Joseph Byron Totten and his Eastern company of Essanay players taking special photoplays requiring a setting along the Atlantic Coast. Miss Drew is expected to remain with the Eastern company until its return to Chicago in the fall, playing leading character roles.

After a rest of several weeks, Warda Howard, Essanay's new emotional actress, returned to the Chicago studio and is preparing for her next film with Henry B. Walthall. Essanay is receiving letters daily from photoplay enthusiasts, inquiring about the new screen actress. Miss Howard illustrated her ability in "Temper," opposite Walthall.

She has had a long stage experience and is a graduate of the University of California.

JACOB AND WOLF OPEN OFFICE IN BUFFALO

G. P. Jacobs, of Jacobs and Wolf, has returned to his Buffalo offices from an eastern trip, and announces that his firm has organized the Noted Players' Film Company, with headquarters at No. 309 E. S. Morgan Building, Buffalo. The new concern has already obtained the agency for the K. & R. film, "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "Protect Us," the Life Photo products, and other important films which are being distributed on the states rights basis.

ROCHESTER, IND., THEATRE USES CONTRIBUTION PLATE

The Garden, at Rochester, Ind., opened August 1, with a free show. The show started at 8:30 p. m. in order not to conflict with church services. There was a contribution plate at the door. There was no trouble and it is probable that the shows will be continued each Sunday night until cold weather.

There is considerable talk of censorship at Goshen and Elkhart, Ind., as a result of the trouble between the mayor, chief of police, and the matron at Elkhart and Peter Sarantos, of the Family theater, Elkhart.

The mayor, chief of police and matron say they found a picture that Sarantos had advertised to exhibit "not moral" and ordered him not to show it. Sarantos said they visited his show and left without expressing an opinion, and he says he thought this action meant the film was all right.

The city officials say that they had ordered him not to show the film in advance and that the visit had only confirmed the order, this being what they expected Sarantos to understand.

Following the trouble with Sarantos at Elkhart, the Goshen officials have taken up the censorship proposition.

World Companies Drawn Closer to Parent Concern

Selznick Makes Strong Denial of Dissolution Rumors and Shows Why His Corporation Is in Firmer Position with Its Ally Today Than Ever Before

THE World Film Corporation will operate the new Paragon studio at Fort Lee, New Jersey. World Film's control of the Paragon, says Lewis J. Selznick, will be as absolute as that at present exercised over the Peerless Company, whose acting and administrative policies are formulated at World Film headquarters. But there will be no direct connection between the Peerless and Paragon companies.

The Peerless will continue to employ the directors, stars and supporting companies, whose efforts have helped to establish its success. The Paragon staff directors, actors and studio employees will be exclusively engaged in the new studio.

After dissipating the atmosphere of mystery which had begun to envelop around the Paragon studio, Mr. Selznick definitely set at rest the rumors which have been circulated predicting a possible break in the relations of the World Film with other organizations with which it is now allied.

He announced that as the World Film owns the entire capital stock of the Shubert Film Corporation and of the Peerless Feature Picture Company, which in turn owns 50 per cent. of William A. Brady Picture plays, Incorporated, stories of a probable dissolution of the ties which bind together the interests of these concerns are mere vaporings. Instead of facing a limiting of its resources and a restriction of its activities, the World Film, by reason of its control of the Paragon Company and its alliance with the newly-organized Equitable Corporation, is preparing to enlarge its scope. Three feature releases per week will now be the number on the World Film program, with an excellent prospect of increasing this output in the near future.

The superficial dimensions of the Paragon studio are 160 feet. This vast building will enable spectacles of the greatest magnitude to be staged on it.

The designs for the new Paragon studio have been furnished by a well-known architect, who is embodying in the building the most modern ideas of motion picture studio construction. One of the many novel features of the studio will be an enormous revolving stage.

External to the main building will be an extension, giving an extra twenty feet of available space on which seats may be erected. The camera being operated in the studio, exterior sets may be photographed outside, all around the building. Something like a space of 200 feet square will be available for these purposes.

Facilities for camera work of the most diverse character will be provided inside the studio. Camera men will be able to operate at any height or angle, and panoramic effects may be easily obtained, the lateral and horizontal motions of the cameras also giving stereoscopic relief, as well as panoramas, when so desired.

Attached to the Paragon studio will be a positive printing plant of one million and a half feet capacity per week.

Another important feature will be the installation of a special plant for the production of motion picture positives in natural colors, by a process which has been successfully established by practice to give the best and most pleasing results.

Morosco Studio to Increase Floor Space 10,000 Feet

Structure Will Be of Corrugated Iron—Two Sirocco Blowers Will Provide New Ventilation System, Changing Air Every Thirty Minutes—Four Machines Added to Printing Room

OWING to the increased activity of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company the studio facilities have had to be enlarged, and Master Mechanic Earl Olin has a force of men at work on a new storehouse and shop which will give over 10,000 square feet of additional floor space. The structure will be of corrugated iron, and of the latest type construction throughout.

The laboratory is also undergoing many important extensions, notably the installation of two powerful Sirocco blowers of the most improved type, which will provide an entire new ventilating system equal to anything known to laboratory hygiene today.

By this system the air the laboratory employees breathe will be completely changed every thirty seconds, and will insure wholesome working conditions even with the night and day work the increased output of the plant has made absolutely necessary.

Another improvement is the installation of a large, new washer and drier. The new unit is about five times the size of the old, and effects a motor-driven air purification whereby heated air is blown through dripping water into the drying room for drying the film after it comes from the developing baths.

Last week the printing room was augmented by the arrival of four new printers. They are equipped with several important improvements, one being a new and better style of light changes, and another a higher rate of speed whereby their capacity is increased.

Vitagraph Establishes Scientific Department

Needs of Accuracy to Heighten Realism of Many Pictures Leads Company to Inaugurate Technical Branch for Medical Subject, in Charge of Competent Hands

IN order to register in a technically correct manner, the scientific and surgical work so essential to the realism of many pictures, now in course of production, and that show scenes requiring the aid of a physician, the Vitagraph Company has decided to establish a scientific department, and has engaged Prof. Sig. Stark to take charge of this important new departure in the field of motion picture production.

Not alone will Prof. Stark have charge of the scientific and surgical work in pictures, but has been commissioned to establish a first aid department and will have a room which will be as perfectly outfitted for first aid and operating surgery that will be found in any hospital.

As Prof. Stark is not a practicing M. D. an attending surgeon will be called in, in case of necessity and will be able to immediately administer necessary aid.

This will give the working people of the Vitagraph plant a new confidence, should any of them be unfortunate enough to meet with an accident and will add materially to the efficiency of those who, from necessity, are compelled to subject themselves to danger. A large room has been given Prof. Stark, which will be lined with white tile and every surgical instrument and appliance known to modern science, kept on hand. The Vitagraph is the only moving picture company to establish such a department.

HEAVY RAINS DAMAGE WIZARD STUDIOS

The rain in the eastern states did serious damage to the new studios of the Wizard Film Corporation at Fifty-second street and Eighth avenue, New York. The building, flat roofed, was a large dancing academy, with one story and a half, open to the top.

The walls of the building are built up several feet above the roof all around, and when the drain pipes got clogged, the water could not escape. The pressure became so great that it broke in one of the skylights, drenching the studio, spoiling one of the sets in readiness for the new comedy featuring "Bobbie," Burns and "Walt" Stull. Louis Burstein, general manager, estimates the damage at $1,000.

The Wizard Company has moved its offices from the Longacre Building to their new studio.

New Laws And Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed on all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

Railway Edict Bans Film Carrying on Jersey Trains

A PROTEST is to be made to the Board of Public Utilities, and possibly in other quarters, against a new rule of the railroads operating between New Jersey and New York to the effect that motion picture films will not be allowed on trains unless shipped by express. The Erie is said to be the first to promulgate this rule, and it is said all or most of the other roads will put it into effect by next Wednesday.

Howard Peck, of Van Liew and Peck, lawyers, with offices at 810 Broad street, said today that he would request the Utilities Board this week to pass upon the reasonableness of the rule, in view of the fact that it would not keep the films off the trains, but merely limit the handling of them to express companies. Mr. Peck said he would make his appeal as a representative of a local moving picture playhouse.

Injustice of Ruling

"The injustice of the new rule is obvious," he said today, "when you take into consideration the fact that when the operators or their assistants carry the films with them on the trains they have personal charge of them all the time, and therefore can use constant care to prevent any accident arising by reason of their inflammable nature. As a matter of fact the possibility of such accident is utterly remote, for the films are wound on metal reels and carried in metal cases, absolutely impenetrable and fireproof.

"If the reels are dangerous why allow them on the train at all? If they are allowed on the trains why not let them be carried in the safest possible way?

"The shows at the moving picture houses are changed every day, and that means that exchanges must be made every day in New York. Often it takes hustling to get the films out here in time for the 2 o'clock performance. If we are to fall back on the red tape of the express companies there's no telling when we will get the films and then, too, we shall have to pay the companies for a service we could render much better for ourselves.

Enforced Rule Means Auto Use

"If the rule is enforced it will simply mean that we shall have to use autos to transport the reels back and forth from New York, and this naturally will be an expensive matter, especially for houses which are in the more remote districts."

Mr. Peck said that if the companies insisted on the enforcement of the rule he would endeavor to find the means to bring a test case.

"Some managers of local houses using motion pictures have pooled together for the use of an automobile for the transportation of films in future," said J. B. McNally, manager of Keeney's theatre. "The expense for each house will be three dollars a week. Of course it is much more satisfactory to be able to send our own men and hold them responsible for the prompt and safe delivery of the films.

"We have been bringing the films for our theatres by way of the Hudson tubes. One of the guards on the train notified our man some days ago that after next Tuesday the films would have to be sent by express, or not carried at all. My understanding is that the railroads are to make the rule universal in this section.

"I don't want any quarrel with the railroads, in fact I understand they themselves are not directly responsible for the new regulation, but I don't quite see how films could be carried any safer by express than in the care of a man who has them personally in charge and is experienced in handling them.

Emergency Reels Possible

"Under the new conditions it may be necessary for a house to have emergency reels for use in case the reels it has ordered fail to arrive in time. Nearly all the films put out by the exchanges are ready by nine or nine thirty in the morning, with the exception of occasional news films or special release films. All of the local theatres showing movies change their pictures every day. The exchange people have already arranged to take the films away at night, but it is up to us to get new films here the next day, and that is where we are going to suffer the inconvenience and added expense. If we were to receive the films by express it would cost from fifty to sixty cents daily, and there would be no certainty of delivery at the proper time."

It was hinted today by some of the theatrical men that a general move might be made to disregard the rule, with the idea of making an arrest the basis of a test case.

Censor Board Has No Standing in Eyes of the Law, Rules Texas Court

THE Houston, Texas, Board of Censors made unreasonable demands, according to A. J. Xydias, proprietor and manager of the Rex and Star motion picture houses in Houston. "The Seventh Commandment" was shown at another theatre in Houston as a first-run, and the censor board passed it. It was to be shown by Xydias as a second-run, and they said "no."

But Xydias ran the picture anyway, even after the censor board had especially forbidden it. They tried to close him up and stop the showing, but found they could not do it. So they had him arrested for "showing an indecent film."

The case came up in the police court, and it was found there was no city laws regarding the matter, so his case was transferred to the County Court, where he was acquitted by the jury in ten or fifteen minutes. The court held that a member of a censor board has no more authority than any ordinary citizen. Just as any citizen may file a complaint with a county attorney, if he believe an exhibitor is showing an indecent picture, so also may the censor board members; but their say-so does not mean that the exhibitor will be convicted. It remains for the jury to say whether or not they believe the picture is indecent. The censor has no authority to make the exhibitor eliminate any scene from the picture, nor can a censor prevent the showing of a picture, according to the law brought out in this case.

The Houston censor board has seemingly been after Xydias for some time. When he had "The Devil's Daughter" booked, the censors looked it over and said: "It is an indecent film—we prohibit the showing of it in Houston." But a few days later "The Devil's Daughter" was shown at one of the largest theatres in Houston, after being passed by the Houston censors.

PROMOTIONS IN LAEMMLE OMAHA OFFICES

A. J. Jackson, formerly bookkeeper of the Laemmle Film Service at Omaha, Neb., has been promoted to the office of auditor and general correspondent. Eva Silkey has been appointed cashier.

ATTEMPT TO PREVENT SUNDAY OPENING IN ALABAMA DEFEATED

Senator J. M. Bonner's attempt to abolish Sunday motion pictures throughout Alabama, met with ignominious defeat at the hands of the Senate at Montgomery, which voted 24 to 7 on the "blue law" measure. A special night session was held, at which the Senate considered the united voice of 40,000 Alabamians who protested against the measure in immense petitions.

The bill not only provided for the closing of motion picture houses on Sunday, but likewise tabooed baseball, football and all other amusements, except golf. Why golf should have been left in is not quite clear. An amendment was adopted just before voting on the bill which gave cities over 35,000 the power to regulate Sabbath amusements through city commissions. When the amended bill was passed, the author withdrew the original, and after a long fight the slate was cleaned of all restrictions as to Sunday amusements.

Senator Bonner agitated throughout Alabama a proposition of Sabbath restrictions at the very time when the people and press were agitating Sabbath relaxation. He therefore met with short shrift at the hands of the newspapers, and the present victory is credited in a large measure to them.

Montgomery, for instance, is one of the best film cities in the whole South; supports one of the largest motion picture palaces in the South; and exhibitors there have always succeeded in giving the city the very best of programs and features. That the people appreciate all this is shown by the stand they took in helping the exhibitors out in their fight against adverse and ridiculous legislation.

Senator Bonner offered as one of his reasons for puritanical observance of the Sabbath that "in the kitchen of his grandfather no Sunday fire burned throughout a period of half a century."

ST. LOUIS JUDGE RESTRAINS CENSORS IN "REGENERATION" CASE

Having successfully jumped several consorious hurdles, "The Island of Regeneration," is attracting overwhelming crowds to the New Central theatre in St. Louis. The Censor Board in that city ordered several of the beautiful bathing scenes eliminated and the police threatened to stop its exhibition when it was decided to run the feature without making any of the eliminations.

Application was made to Judge Rassieur of the Circuit Court for an injunction restraining the police. This injunction was granted and made permanent after his honor had witnessed an exhibition of the film.

Judging from the tone of the press and the applause of the audience at its showing, all sympathies were on the side of the production.

Judge Rassieur's decision will undoubtedly have considerable effect on the censorship situation in Missouri. This situation is rapidly becoming intolerable. The picture patrons in the Kansas City territory are becoming aroused to a full realization of the implication, that they are not competent to be their own judges of what they should, and what they should not see.

Michigan Fire Marshal Promulgates Regulation Forbidding Use of Cloth Signs

IN line with its policy to take every precaution that will tend to reduce the fire loss in the state of Michigan, the state fire marshall has revised his rules and regulations under the provisions of Section No. 5 of Act No. 99 of the Public Acts of 1915. The new regulations are printed in vest-pocket size and have been mailed to the leading exchanges and exhibitors of Michigan.

Two paragraphs refer to the moving picture industry. One is headed "Clothing Advertising Signs" and the other is "Obstruction of Aisles and Exits."

The clause pertaining to cloth advertising signs will mean a drastic change in the advertising of the front of theatres. It will mean that the exhibitors will not be able to put up any cloth signs, either on billboards, bulletin boards, or any banners or streamers. They will be permitted of course to use paper.

Heretofore the exhibitors have been renting their cloth advertising paper from the exchanges, but under the new regulations, exchanges will not do any mounting, hence the theatres will have to buy outright whatever paper they care to use.

The paragraph pertaining to obstruction of aisles and exits is as follows:

Section 17. The use of chairs or seats in the aisles of any theatre, opera house, church, school, auditorium or hall where the public is allowed to congregate, is hereby prohibited, and all aisles and exits in any theatre, opera house, church, school, auditorium or hall where the public is allowed to congregate, must be kept clear and unobstructed during entertainments, lectures or other exercises.

Section 18. These regulations shall take effect and be in force from and after the first day of July, nineteen hundred and fifteen, in accordance with Act 99 of the Public Acts of 1915.

Section 19. A violation of these regulations is hereby declared to constitute a nuisance and any person, firm, board or corporation violating such regulations shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred ($100) dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than ninety (90) days, or both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

Albany Theatres Closed on Sunday While Awaiting Decision in Courts

A TRUCE has been declared in the fight to open moving picture houses in Albany until such time as Justice G. D. B. Hasbrouck of Kingston has an opportunity to read over the briefs which are to be submitted to him and his decision is filed. This is expected within a few days. Meanwhile the theatres will not be open Sundays until the right to do so is either upheld or upset.

LeRoy H. Bender, manager of the Silent theatre at the corner of Lark street and Sheridan avenue, went with the proprietors, Messrs. Emmett Weakley and James L. Rose, to the office of Mayor Joseph W. Stevens and applied for a license. It was issued with the proviso that the theatre would not open on Sundays. Then it was that the truce was made. As a result no attempt was made to do business Sunday.

There has been an understanding with the film men that no matter what the outcome of the fight may be before Justice Hasbrouck, the case will be carried to the highest court before it is settled definitely. Talk is in Albany that some of the goody-goody people are talking of a boycott on the houses that do keep open Sunday, if they are permitted.

But the more thoughtful ones say that it is far too early to even talk of any such thing, even though those who are circulating the talk were really in earnest. They assert that the time for a boycott, if one is to be made, is when the courts have determined the rights of the parties in interest.

An effort is to be made to get the matter before the Third Appellate Division when it meets in Saratoga on September 7.

Kansas City Censors Pass Picture—Then Reverse Judgment—Same with "Devil's Daughter"

"GHOSTS," killed by the Kansas State Censorship Board, last Tuesday afternoon after it had been officially passed in the morning, will be shown throughout the State, according to F. L. Kiltz, manager of the Mutual Exchange in Kansas City.

The dispute over this picture arose in the morning. One of the censors after eliminating several parts, passed it officially and issued a permit for it to be shown. The writer saw this permit. Another censor late in the afternoon saw the film and suggested several more cuts. The two censors, Carrie Simpson and the Rev. Festus Foster, finally decided to eliminate the picture.

On account of the fact that the picture had once been officially passed it is understood that the picture theatres in the State are going to run the film.

Here is another case. It is the Fox Film Corporation's "Devil's Daughter." This picture was passed on June 25, and the fact published in the bulletin of censored films that is issued by the Censor Board. Then on July 19, a letter sent to Manager Charles W. Harden, asserted that the picture could not be shown in the State. The picture had been booked in about twenty-five theatres and Harden says that he is going to show it.

Is this fair censorship?

FINAL HEARING ON FIGHT PICTURES

The final attempt of the Kalisthenic Company of New York to secure admission into the United States of the negative film of the Johnson-Willard fight took place a few days ago, when a hearing was held before Judge Hale in the United States District Court at Portland, Maine.

At the conclusion of arguments for the company and the government attorneys were notified by the court to file briefs before August 7.

The witnesses for the exhibition company were Harry H. Frazee, of New York, manager for the company and prominently identified with the theatrical business, I. W. Ullman, of New York, an expert on moving picture films, and F. F. Adams, a Maine photographer.

Their testimony was of a technical nature and dwelt mainly on development of negatives and use of films for exhibition purposes. The film which is in controversy was used as an exhibit and in illustrating the points involved during the progress of the hearing.

Mr. Frazee placed a valuation of $1,000,000 on the films and held that this valuation would greatly depreciate as time elapsed between the time of the fight and the using of the films for exhibition purposes. He declared that the films were intended for private exhibitions only.

HEVENER JOINS WIZARD AS DIRECTOR

Jerold Hevener, formerly with Lubin, Scarlet, Mittenthal Brothers and Colonial, has joined the Wizard Film Corporation as a director of a company which will make comedies featuring well-known comedy stars.

Mr. Hevener has already finished one picture, "The Crazy Clock Maker," in which Sliding Billy Watson played the lead, supported by Betty Holton, Mabel Paige, Beatrice Miller, Nan Egleson, Myrtle Gilbert, Ray Ford, Myra Brooke, Bab Hardy, Billy Bowers, Charlie Ritchie, Clay Grant, Hod Weston and Walter Schimpf. He is now making a second picture which will feature Ed. Lee Wrothe.

Betty Holton, Alma Mamay, Billy Fletcher and Billy Rouge have been engaged to play regularly with Mr. Hevener.

Religious Societies in Omaha Agitating for Strict Sunday Closing Ordinance

THE Christian Endeavor societies, at a mass meeting in one of the Council Bluffs, Ia., churches last Sunday evening, pledged themselves to begin activities at once to get a Sunday closing ordinance passed through the council. Several hundred young people were in attendance.

The societies, working together, recently secured an ordinance forbidding minors in the dance halls of the city. Flushed with this success, they planned at once the move against the motion picture theatres. They have asked an attorney to draw up an ordinance and will present it within several weeks.

Heretofore the Council Bluffs exhibitors, working in perfect harmony, have been enabled to ward off any such movement. They have shown the Young Men's Christian Association and the Ministerial Union of the city the useful means accomplished by the theatres and have, by judicious selection of films on Sunday, made themselves solid with these factions.

In Omaha, where Evangelist Billy Sunday will begin two months of meetings early in September, many exhibitors are discussing the feasibility of the plan of voluntarily closing on Sunday and in this way warding off any criticism that might be aimed at them at this time.

In so doing, some of them contend, they will also avoid the presentation of a Sunday closing ordinance in Omaha, a move that is deemed almost certain as a result of the revival meetings.

Throughout a large section of Iowa the motion picture theatre business has suffered because of the Sunday closing movement, but in the eastern section of the state several towns have waged successful fights against it.

Only a few parts of Nebraska have Sunday closing at present.

Ashtabula, Ohio, Test Case Goes Against Sunday Opening; Police Judge Is Firm

ASHTABULA, O., is not to have Sunday motion picture shows, as Police Judge D. V. Parker has so decreed. Manager A. A. Lins, of the Airdome, tested the law by opening that picture house on August 1. Lins was fined $25 and costs, although he produced an agreement, showing that he had contributed the net proceeds of the show to the Children's Home. The court maintained that it merely was a scheme to evade the law.

Lins has announced that he will appeal the case.

On cross-examination Mr. Lins testified that the gross receipts for the Sunday afternoon show amounted to $51.60 and net receipts were $21.44. The expense of the performance was divided thus: Rent of film, $15; express charges on film, 80 cents; employees' salaries, $7.50; advertising, $4.86, and electricity, $2.

The affadavit in the case charged that the show was operated "not for charity or necessity." Counsel for Lins was overruled in the contention that Lins be dismissed because the affadavit did not charge that the defendant committed a crime "knowingly and criminally," as provided in Supreme Court decisions.

Henry H. Hall, superintendent of the Children's Home, signed an agreement the night before the Sunday show whereby the receipts were to be contributed to that institution.

The inhabitants of Ashtabula are siding with the theatre managers in their attempt to run shows on Sunday. Threats to enforce "blue laws" and close every place of business in the city are being made in earnest.

TWO FIRST CUB COMEDIES SHOWN AT MUTUAL EXCHANGES

The first two of the new Horsley Cub comedies have been completed, and were shown at Mutual exchanges last week. The first: "The Little Hero," will be released August 19, and the second: "Jerry's Busy Day," on August 26. It is safe to say that these films will arouse great interest on the part of both exhibitors and the public. In originality of treatment, the work of the cast and the director, and in photography, they are excellent, and are up to anything in the comedy line which has ever appeared on the Mutual program.

George Ovey, who is featured as Jerry is unique and distinctive in his methods. His work is exceptionally fast—one almost suspects that the camera man is putting a little extra energy into his work, until he sees by comparison that Jerry is naturally much quicker than his associates in the cast.

The locations have been carefully selected, and no trouble seems to be too great to be tackled by the director in arranging striking and surprising effects. Certainly nothing is too much trouble for Jerry, and if he lives through the first few releases he is destined to become known in every town and village which is lucky enough to have a picture theatre, between the Golden Gate and Avenue A.

David Horsley and his manager, Chester Beecroft, are to be congratulated on the first samples of their product. They have set themselves a standard, and they will have to hustle to keep up to the mark.

MINUSA LEAFLET IS BRIGHT HOUSE ORGAN

The third number of the "Minusa Minstrel," the snappy little house organ which the Minusa Cine Products Company issues to keep the blood circulating in the arteries of its sales force, has appeared in unique formation. It consists of one small sheet of deckle-edged heavy linen stock, "Sent from St. Louis to Salesmen who Sell the Screen," and featuring Nat Brown, whose confession of faith appears on the "Minusa Cine Board" at the close of the short "spiel." In this third issue he closes with this confidential information:

"Salesmen who sell Minusa screens
Have money and homes and Limousines."

The "spiel" is witty and clever, and the fortnightly releases of the "Minstrel" should be bright spots in the lives of the salesmen.

PHOTOPLAYS PRODUCING GETTING OUT EIGHT-COLOR WORK

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, August 11.

The Photoplays Producing Company is to be congratulated on the very attractive paper which it is getting out, to be used by the exhibitor in advertising the "Sarah Bernhardt at Home" picture.

All the posters are in eight colors, and the art work is of a quality that will be appreciated by the class of people for whom this high type feature is designed.

President A. M. Gollos says that the bookings for this picture are surpassing his most optimistic hopes. It will be ready to be released the first part of September.

James and Crawford Go Over to Metro Pictures

Corporation Secures Services of Two Men Widely Known in Newspaper and Magazine Circles and in the Film Industry—James Will Be in Charge of Publicity and Scenarios

THE Metro Pictures Corporation, which has repeatedly stirred the film industry with a series of star conquests and big picture offerings during the past three months, announced Tuesday that it completed negotiations for and had secured Arthur James as head of its publicity, advertising and scenario departments.

ARTHUR JAMES

Mr. James at the same time announced his resignation from the Mutual Film Corporation, where he has directed the publicity and publication departments, which included "Reel Life," "The Mutual Girl Weekly," and "The Film." Mr. James for the Mutual set a new high water mark in general publicity with a record of more than 500,000 columns of newspaper space.

He directed an organization of twenty-two people and dealt direct each week with 2,300 newspapers throughout the United States, Canada and Europe. His was the largest publicity group in the film industry. Associated with him have been his brother, Henry James, as business and advertising manager of "Reel Life," "The Mutual Girl Weekly, and "The Film," Merritt Crawford as editor of "Reel Life," and a staff recruited from the newspaper and magazine field.

Mr. Crawford resigned the editorship of "Reel Life" to accompany Mr. James to his new field, and will be actively engaged in the several departments his chief will direct. Mr. Crawford is a man of wide experience in newspaper and magazine work, and was associated with Mr. James prior to his entry into the motion picture field, when the latter was Sunday editor of the "Morning Telegraph." Mr. Crawford was managing editor of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS before he became editor of "Reel Life."

Mr. James had already organized the scenario department with George D. Proctor and Captain Leslie T. Peacocke as film dramatists, and Edfrid A. Bingham, formerly dramatic critic of the New York "Evening Mail" and later managing editor of the Paris edition of the New York "Herald," as chief reader. A suite has been set aside for the scenario department at the Rolfe studios, 3 West Sixty-first street, one of the manufacturing companies contributing extraordinary feature pictures to the Metro program.

The Metro, which has grown rapidly in size and importance in the feature industry, has newer and still greater plans for the immediate future, and President Rowland is gathering about him men of successful experience for the carrying out of his big program.

MERRITT CRAWFORD

Mr. James is succeeded at the Mutual by Terence Ramsay, a Chicago newspaper man, and Harry Reichenbach leaves the publicity department of the Metro to take charge of the publicity of the Equitable. Mr. James will have his headquarters at the Metro offices in the Heidelburg Building at Forty-second street and Broadway.

PATHE'S "THE GALLOPER" SHOWN TO OFFICIALS OF THE COMPANY

Pathé officials had their first look at Donald Mackenzie's production of "The Galloper," by Richard Harding Davis, this week, and the prevailing opinion expressed by them was that it easily is the best comedy-drama they have ever seen.

Clifton Crawford as the war correspondent does some magnificent work and dominates every scene in which he appears with the pure comedy, which is expressed in his every action. He is ably supported by Melville Stewart, Fania Marinoff, Jessie Ralph and Rhys Alexander.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

FANNIE WARD IS CAST FOR "THE MARRIAGE OF KITTY," LASKY RELEASE

Internationally famous as a comedienne, Miss Fannie Ward will make her debut as a photodramatic star in the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company's production, "The Marriage of Kitty," by Francis de Croisset and Fred de Gresac, which will be released August 16 through Paramount Pictures Corporation.

FANNIE WARD (Lasky)

In this production, which will abound in comedy of the highest type, the Lasky Company, therefore, introduces to photoplay enthusiasts another noted star of the legitimate stage in a play that has been acted in all European countries throughout the United States and Canada, and in Australia and South Africa.

"The Marriage of Kitty" is a comedy of continental and American society and manners, replete with humorous characterizations and amusing scenes. Miss Ward's role of Kitty in the photoplay version will offer her opportunities for her delightful and wholesome personality that not even the stage version provided.

Kitty in the play is a young woman who suddenly is thrown on her own resources for a livelihood. Through a lawyer friend she quite willingly undertakes marriage to Lord Reginald Belsize, a young English peer, whom she never has met. The necessity of Lord Reginald's marriage was brought about through a provision in the will of his wealthy American uncle that unless he married within a year from the date of the uncle's death, he would lose the fortune.

Furthermore, he must not marry an actress. It happened that he was, in fact, infatuated with Mme. Helen, an actress, so the marriage to Kitty is a legal subterfuge, it being agreed that within six months the couple would be divorced and Kitty would receive a handsome sum for her trouble.

Not even lawyers can lead young hearts and the play concludes with a surprising series of situations in which the resourceful Kitty finds her way to ultimate happiness.

Miss Ward will have the support of a company that includes Miss Cleo Ridgley, Mrs. Lewis McCord, Richard Morris, Jack Dean and Tom Forman.

MARY MINTER RETURNS AUGUST 24 FOR NEW METRO FILMS

The Metro Pictures Corporation for its next Mary Miles Minter vehicle will offer her in a cinematization of the recent fictional success, "Stork's Nest" which, as a novel, enjoyed universal and international vogue.

Miss Minter is at present sojourning in a newly purchased house in the wilds of Long Island, but returns to New York August 24 for immediate work before the camera in her next Metro subject.

Word was received this week from Sir James M. Barrie through Harry J. Cohen, Metro's European representative, that Sir James had under advisement the possibility of writing a vehicle for little Miss Minter. Nothing in the form of definiteness has materialized as yet, but General Manager Rowland is looking forward with keen anticipation to something substantial from Mr. Cohen in the way of procuring the play for the new and dainty star.

"IRON STRAIN," INCE, MAY BE FIRST TRIANGLE

The NYMP subject which will in all probability be the first contribution of Thomas H. Ince to the newly organized Triangle Company"s program, a forty-five hundred foot subject, entitled "The Iron Strain," featuring Dustin Farnum, was given its final examination by Mr. Ince and principal members of the cast, at the Woodley theatre, Los Angeles. Incidental music arranged by Prof J. E. Nurnberger, who aided in selection of music for "The Birth of a Nation," was played by a twelve-piece orchestra during this showing of the film.

It is understood Prof. Nurnberger has been engaged to arrange incidental music for a number of productions made under the direction of Mr. Ince, and that all subjects of this program will be provided with full orchestrations.

MOLLIE KING AND COMPANY, WORLD, OFF FOR UPPER NEW YORK

Conducted by Director F. H. Thornby, Mollie King and her acting associates who will appear in the World Film feature "The Code of the Mountains," have journeyed to Lake Placid, N. ESSANAY SIGNS DARWIN KARR Essanay has engaged another popular leading man, and one of the best known photoplay actors in the country—Darwin Karr.

Mr. Karr has joined Essanay's Eastern company, headed by Joseph Byron Totten, to take leading parts. His first photoplay for Essanay is "Hearts and Roses," a fascinating three act love romance in which he plays the leading character.

Mr. Karr started his stage career with a small part in "The Missouri Girl," later taking the part of the heavy on the sudden departure of the regular villain. He later went into repertoire work for four seasons as leading man, and afterwards appeared in stock.

His advent in motion pictures was in 1911, when he joined the Edison company. He climbed rapidly, and was finally leading man with Mary Fuller. He also was featured by the Solax Company, and took leading parts with Vitagraph before joining the Essanay Company.

He is especially proficient in military plays and in romantic dramas.

DATES SET FOR LASKY RELEASES FOR NEXT 3 MONTHS

Definite release dates of the Lasky Feature Play Company's productions through the Paramount Pictures Corporation during September, October and November have been announced by Samuel Goldfish, executive head of the Lasky Company.

There will be nine Lasky productions in the next quarterly program of the Paramount Program, distributed equally through the three months. The dates as arranged are:

Thursday, September 9, Charlotte Walker in "Out of Darkness;" Monday, September 13, Blanche Sweet in "The Case of Becky;" Monday, September 27, Lou Tellegen in "The Explorer."

Thursday, October 14, Donald Brian in "The Voice in the Fog;" Thursday, October 21, Laura Hope Crews in "Blackbirds;" Monday, October 25, all star cast in "The Chorus Lady."

Monday, November 1, Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen;" Thursday, November 11, Blanche Sweet in "The Cheat" and Monday, November 22, Victor Moore in "Chimmie Fadden Out West."

A WOMAN'S KEEN EYE FOR DETAIL TO SCRUTINIZE EQUITABLE PICTURES

Mrs. Robert T. Haines, the wife of the actor, has been appointed the "social mentor" of the Equitable studio at Flushing. This means that she will act as sponsor for the social correctness of the pictures which are made at the Flushing studio.

She will not only advise the individual actors as to the correct clothes they should wear, but she will see that proper social observances are not neglected. Mrs. Haines will also supervise the stage settings, and will see that the little artistic niceties, which are so often overlooked by men in their less careful regard for detail, will not be neglected.

A woman of social experience, and possessing a knowledge of human life, Mrs. Haines will be consulted on all matters of importance, and will bring her knowledge of the woman's point of view to the assistance of the directors of the Equitable Company.

Interior Set in Kleine's Comedy, "Hello Bill," Featuring Bickel and Watson, Is Unusual

ONE of the most exquisite interiors ever designed for motion pictures was conceived and built in the Kleine studios last week, attracting much comment not only from casual visitors, newspaper men and several well known and experienced film men, but from the seasoned veterans who built it themselves and whose enthusiasm is hard to arouse.

The interior is a boudoir scene from "Hello Bill," featuring Bickel and Watson. The bed, dressing table, writing desk, footstool, chairs, lamp and similar articles are of yellow ivory, blending delightfully with the pink and old rose hangings and decorations.

Even the pictures on the walls are seventeenth century prints obtained from one of New York's fashionable art galleries and, in quiet sepia tones, harmonize pleasingly with their surroundings.

Another innovation is the oval shape of the boudoir, whose graceful, gently sloping lines convey a sense of symmetry, harmony and proportion.

The set was designed after a Parisian style much in vogue just now throughout the fashionable circles of the great European capitals.

In addition to an all star cast, the feature is conspicuous and unusual in many ways, one of which is the abundance of elaborate interiors similar to the boudoir set. "Hello Bill" will be released through the Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service, September 15.

FOX BRANCH IN 'FRISCO TO ERECT VAULT

The Fox Film Corporation will shortly award contracts for the erection of a large fireproof vault in its quarters at 107 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, California.

While there are no municipal regulations making this step necessary the concern is going to this heavy expense to safeguard its interests.

The results, they believe, will justify the action.

PRATT BEGINS WAR PLAY FOR LUBIN

John Pratt, the new Lubin director, who filmed such famous plays as "Shore Acres," "The Garden of Lies," "The Fighting Chance," "The Nightingale," "Paid in Full," "Arizona," and "Soldiers of Fortune," has begun work on the war play, in which Rosetta Brice, Richard Buhler, Francis Joyner and Charles Brandt play the leading roles.

Mr. Pratt, who belongs to the famous Pratt family of Massachusetts, was in the days gone by one of the best known baritones on the American light opera stage. He appeared with Eddie Foy in "Hamlet on Broadway;" with Blanche Ring; with Lena Abarbanell in "The Balkan Princess," "The Girl Behind the Counter," and other Broadway successes.

Three years ago he decided that there was more scope for his ability in the motion picture world, and he began his career as a director.

In the new Lubin war play, which is as yet unnamed, Mr. Pratt promises many surprises for the photoplay goer, both in photography and in acting. The play itself, written by Louis Reeves Harrison, while a war play, depicts only the effects of war —burning villages, scenes in hospitals, and the like.

During the entire five acts, only one shot is fired. It is expected that this very unusual and stirringly powerful play will be released for the public before the end of September.

LASKY'S "CARMEN" BOOKED FOR STRAND IN OCTOBER

"Carmen," in which Jesse L. Lasky will present Geraldine Farrar, the famous Grand Opera star, will have its premiere presentation at the Strand theatre Sunday, October 31.

Realistic Fight in Fox Excursion Scene Brings People to River Bank to See Panic on Barge

THE big river excursion scene in "The Regeneration," the picturization of Owen Kildare's famous story, "My Mamie Rose," which is being produced by William Fox, was made Monday on the Hudson River near Nyack. Nearly five hundred strong, the party left the foot of Eighty-first street and the Hudson River at eight-thirty o'clock in the morning and the big excursion barge was towed up the river by a tug.

BOAT WHICH WAS "BURNED" FOR "REGENERATION" (FOX FILM); (INSERT) ANNA Q. NILSSON

A more picturesque outfit could hardly be imagined. There were prize fighters, Bowery toughs, pretty girls, mothers and children, a band, and everything else imaginable that would make a typical excursion. R. A. Walsh, who is directing the picture, together with a large force from the Fox Executive offices, had charge of the arrangements.

John Henry Goldfrap, director general of publicity, wearing a new cane and a bright smile, entertained the large number of metropolitan newspaper men who were on hand to take part in the excitement.

Because of a heavy storm that blew out of the west and enveloped the Tappan Zee in black clouds, lightning and blankets of rain, the work of taking the biggest scene had to be delayed until another day.

So great was the commotion aboard when the big fight scene was made, and also the fire and panic scenes, that persons ashore in several places dropped their work and rushed to the river bank, believing that a tragedy was being enacted before their eyes.

The party was accompanied by thirty professional diving girls who were to dive from the uppermost decks when the big fire was started, but this part of the scene will be made later. By means of smoke pots and blazing torches many of the scenes were made exceptionally thrilling and realistic. During the afternoon, Peggy Barn, a fourteen-year-old girl, went overboard and there was a thrilling rescue by one of the girl swimmers, who jumped into the river with all her clothes on.

This is one of the most expensive scenes attempted by any picture company since the big mob scenes in "The Witch." Because of the storm and general excitement caused thereby, it was nearly 11 o'clock at night before the party returned to New York. Among some of the exciting scenes taken on the barge was the fight between the Bowery characters that started a big panic aboard. Then several fire scenes were taken.

Rockcliffe Fellowes and Anna Q. Nilsson, who are playing the leading parts, were the central figures of the big scenes. Miss Nilsson is cast as Mamie Rose, and she fits the part perfectly.

It is she, a young school teacher, who meets Kildare while he is hanging out in front of one of his Bowery haunts, and it is love for her that leads to his regeneration. The part is that of a modest, sweet character. In the scenes with the little children during the excursion, she appeared to excellent advantage.

The barge has been chartered for another day, when the big diving and panic scenes will be made.

GETTING READY FOR "LITTLE CHURCH AROUND THE CORNER"

World Film Director Emile Chautard having finished the production of "The Little Dutch Girl," of which Vivian Martin is the star, is making ready for the filming of "The Little Church Around the Corner."

The play was one of Charles E. Blaney's productions and its popular success is a matter of easy and pleasant recollection.

"RIGHT OFF THE BAT" NEARLY READY FOR A HOME RUN

"Right Off the Bat," the five-reel comedy drama in which the Arrow Film Corporation of 71 West Twenty-third street, New York, is starring Mike Donlin, the former New York Giant, is rapidly nearing completion. The company, under the direction of Hugh Reticker, is working this week in the Centaur plant in Bayonne, completing the few interior scenes there are in "Right Off the Bat." When these are finished the company will return to Winstead, Conn., to film the prologue.

"Right Off the Bat" is—and yet it isn't—

a baseball play. Of course, with Mike Donlin the star of the photoplay, the story by Albert S. LeVino, secretary and treasurer of the Arrow Film Corporation, naturally covers the big incidents in Donlin's career. These are indelibly associated with the national game. But the baseball scenes are so worked out that every woman in the country can follow the action easily.

It is expected that "Right Off the Bat" will be ready for release about September 1. W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, is now at work on the play which will follow it.

TWO VIVID GLIMPSES OF THE EASTLAND EXCURSION STEAMER DISASTER, CHICAGO, AS CAUGHT BY THE HEARST-SELIG CAMERAMEN

"A Game of Three," Sterling Camera, Is Good Vehicle for Talents of Gilmore and Niederaur

The Sterling Camera and Film Company announces in this issue the release, September 1, of the five-part detective story "A Game of Three," in which is featured Barney Gilmore and Lillian Niederaur, two stage stars, assisted by the following cast: E. F. Roseman, Roy Gahris, John Sharkey, George Stone, Richard Lysle, Roy Applegate, George Henry, Violet Stuart, Grace Norman and Mabel Wright, in addition to which one hundred others appear in most every variety of familiar character of metropolitan life.

"A Game of Three" is a New York detective story, said to be founded upon a recent sensational jewel mystery, many details of which are accurately visualized. Barney Gilmore in the character of Detective O'Bryan, while trailing his quarry, is seen in many exciting adventures and daring escapades. Lillian Niederaur, in the role of the adventuress, shows marked ability and character expression.

The photography throughout is deserving of special mention. Efforts to get street atmosphere were highly successful for there appears a number of street and exterior scenes actually taken at midnight in the streets of New York in which faces and foreground appear clear and distinct; at the same time street lamps, electric signs and automobile lights appear natural in the background and distance.

The feature, it is announced, will be released September 1, on a unique state rights plan that should interest every state rights exchange man and film exploiter in every part of the country. A fine line of advertising material for this production is now ready. The next release, a well known stage play, will be announced shortly by the Sterling Camera and Film Company.

"Who Is Guilty?" Is Pathé Sequel to "Who Pays?" Series Probably Ready in Autumn

IT is announced that Pathe is contemplating a novel series to be called "Who Is Guilty?" or "The Struggle for Life," which will be along lines somewhat similar to the very successful "Who Pays?" series recently released.

"Who Pays?" a series of twelve three-part dramas founded on social crimes and problems of everyday existence, enjoyed country wide publicity and there was an insistent demand for another such feature.

The new series will deal with actual problems of modern life presenting them in a forcible and graphic way. Each chapter will be complete in itself, and the Pathe name is assurance of the quality of the pictures.

Louis J. Gasnier, general manager of the Pathe Exchange, is now making the necessary arrangements for this great series, and it is probable that the pictures will be released in the fall. They will be put out in conjunction with a strong chain of newspapers which will carry the story simultaneously with the showing of the pictures. Balboa is being considered as the producer because of the success with the "Who Pays?" pictures.

WILLIAMS FORMS EXCHANGE IN SAN FRANCISCO

The firm of C. L. Williams and Company has been formed to engage in the feature film business at San Francisco. Mr. Williams is well known there, having been the manager of the Blinkhorn interests during the time that the Blinkhorn Photoplays Corporation was soliciting business in that territory.

The offices formerly occupied by this concern have been taken over by the new company.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, August 9.

THE metropolitan success, "A Message from Reno," produced on the legitimate stage three years ago by H. M. Horkheimer has been adapted to the screen, and is now being filmed by the Sherwood MacDonald Company at the Balboa studio. The production will be in five reels and features Ruth Rowland and Andrew Arbuckle, brother of the famous Maclyn. Miss Rowland appears in the part in which Violet Dale was starred.

All of the Balboa companies are busy. Bertram Brackin is making a three-reel society drama featuring Jackie Saunders, Lewis Codey and Frank Mayo. Director Frank Cooley, late of the American studios, is making a drama with scenes laid in the Latin quarter of Paris. Conspicuous in this cast are Paul Gilmore, Alma Ruben and Ethel Fleming.

H. O. Stechhan, well known West coast newspaper man and author, has been engaged by President H. M. Horkheimer to have charge of the publicity department of the Balboa Company.

Climatic conditions at Long Beach have made it necessary that the Balboa Company perfect a way of keeping water at a given temperature for use in their laboratories, and a sixty thousand gallon refrigerating tank has been constructed. By this it will be possible to keep the water at the same temperature at all times, and filter the same so that it is in the best of condition for laboratory use.

L-Ko Filming Bath Burlesque

Abe Stearn, business manger of the L-Ko Universal, is in Chicago on a two weeks' business trip. The Jack Blystone L-Ko Company is filming a one reel subject, "The Bath House Tragedy" in which scenes in a Turkish bath are burlesque. Hank Mann, Peggy Pearce, and Kitty Howell appear in the principal parts.

Director Harry Edwards, who has just completed a comedy about scenes in the Elks National Convention parade, in which all the national officers took part together with Billie Ritchie and Louise Orth entitled, "Hello Bill," is now engaged in making a trick photography picture which has hypnotism for its basis. Billie Ritchie and Alice Howell appear in this, and the subject is such that it required a number of special sets.

A travesty on the entertainments of wealthy, entitled "The Idle Rich" is being made by David Kirkland and company, which includes Harry Gribben and Mae Emory.

By the end of this week, "The Silent Voice" the second Francis X. Bushman Quality release for the Metro program will be finished. In this Mr. Bushman plays the part of a man who loses his sense of hearing, and feeling that all the pleasures of life have been lost, seeks solace in the mountains where he becomes a hermit.

One of the thrilling scenes is that in which workmen blasting a road through the mountains are unable to warn him that he is standing on a cliff that will soon crumble away because of an explosion, and he is badly injured in the fall. A society girl from the city ridiing through the mountains aids in recovering him and a pretty love story follows. Supporting Mr. Bushman and Miss Snow are Lester Cuneo, Frank Bacon and W. C. Clifford. The picture abounds with beautiful interior and exterior sets.

African Villages at Lasky Studio

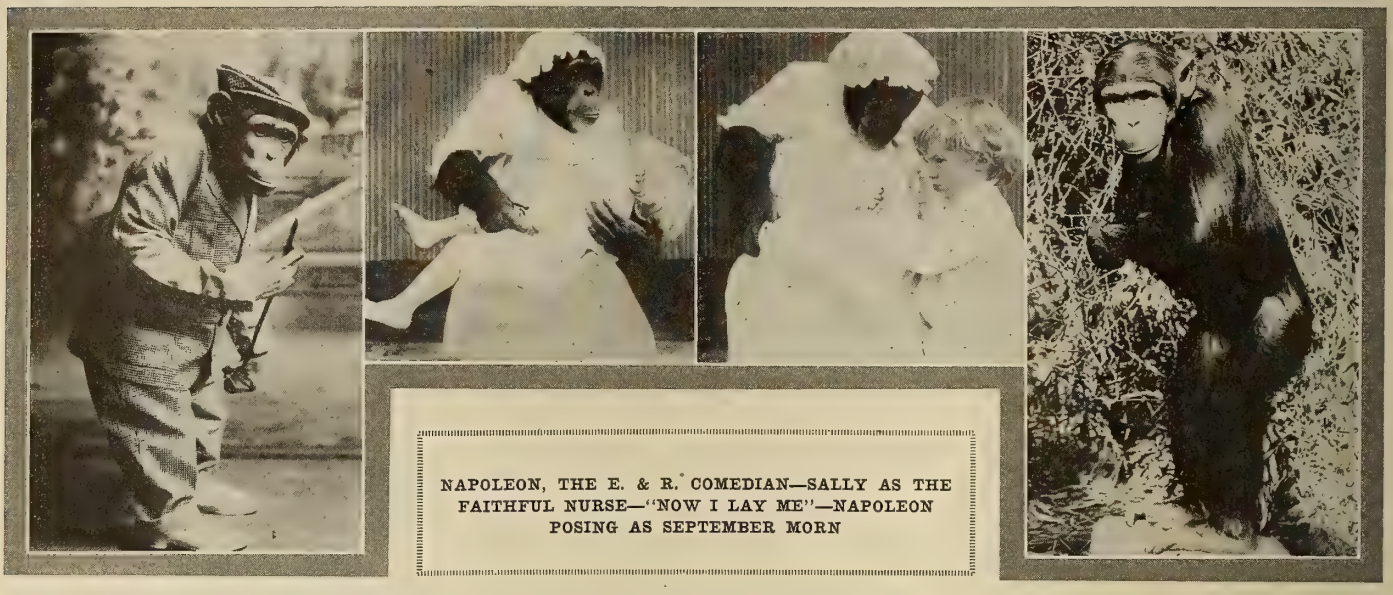
The big ranch of the Lasky Company in the San Fernando Valley is being transformed into southern African villages, and similar scenes for use in "The Explorers" in which Lou Tellegan will be featured, supported by Dorathy Davenport, Tom Frohman, Ernest Joy and James Neil.

One village will have more than a thousand population and consist of more than one hundred and fifty thatched huts. The technical department is now making hundreds of granaries similar to those the natives make by hollowing out trunks of large trees. They are used for the storage of food.

The stage, orchestra pit, and boxes of the Metropolitan Opera House of New York City is being duplicated on the Lasky stage for use in the third and last Geraldine Farrar subject, which portrays the struggles of a young opera singer to gain success. Miss Farrar is supported by Theodore Roberts, Pedro de Cordoba, Elsie Jane Wilson, Tom Frohman, H. B. Carpenter and others. A replica of the interior of the Ritz-Carlton cafe in New York City is being built for scenes in this picture. This set will be sixty feet wide by 200 in length.

In this picture Mr. de Cordoba appears in the role of a rising young composer, and it has brought out the fact that he is a violinist and has always had a desire to become a composer. Miss Farrar learning of this has been in collaboration with the actor in composing his first selection. It is stated that the composition will have a screen motive, and other players have named it "The Geraldine Gavotte."

Miss Farrar has taken a most keen interest in motion pictures, and during the week she has been at the Lasky studio has entered upon her work heart and soul. The making of the death scene in "Carmen" which required a number of retakes would have tried the patience of the usual star or leading woman, in that it required lying in the dirt and dust of the entrance to the bull ring for more than an hour. Miss Farrar withstood the ordeal in a most pleasant manner, jesting with the other members of the company when the camera was not operating, despite the torrid rays of the California sun in her face.



Geraldine Farrar Likes Pictures

Since coming to California the opera singer has developed a very keen interest in pictures, and at the suburban theatre in Hollywood has witnessed a number of episodes of the "Perils of Pauline," "Exploits of Elaine" and the "Hazards of Helen," and now suggests to the Lasky management that a serial be produced entitled "The Gyrations of Geraldine."

She has advised Director General DeMille that her greatest ambition is to ride a balloon and an airship, and her work in the two subjects now completed shows that she fully enjoys and insists upon making all hazardous scenes as realistic as possible, regardless of results. This is most clearly demonstrated in the fight scenes of "Carmen."

Members of the stock company and technical staff of the Lasky studio are at a loss to know how to show their appreciation of the many kindnesses of the opera star during her short stay at the studio, and a prize will be offered to the member making the best suggestion.

The equipment necessary for the filming of "The Case of Becky" at the Lasky studio was very elaborate, and consisted of all the appliances used in three forms of hypnotism. The play itself will contain demonstrations of the Charleton method by Theodore Roberts, the mechanical method in which an electric pipe organ, Lark's Mirrors, and other devices by James Neil; and personal or mental hypnotism by Carlyle Blackwell. In all instances it is the endeavor of the three practitioners of mental sciences to kill the unpleasant mental state of the girl, Blanche Sweet, who has a dual personality. The play can be described as a battle between minds, and in the climax Becky is killed mentally and Dorothy survives. The photoplay is adapted from the Edward Locke stage production in which Frances Starr was starred.

That another large studio will soon be built in Hollywood is the information given out by President "Bill" Parsons of the National Film corporation. The present quarters at the Oz studio are too small to accommodate the five companies that are now at work. No location has been decided upon, but it is understood the company has options on several very desirable tracts which will give them sufficient studio, laboratory, and exterior building space.

If a new plant is built it has been decided that it should be modern in every respect and contain sufficient laboratory equipment to make all prints of the releases of the company.

During the past week there has been a number of additions to the producing staff including Louis Chaudet, late animal producer of the Selig forces, who is now engaged in filming "Can You Beat It," a tale of a night at the club which causes domestic unpleasantness, all of which is straightened out by hubby returning at the psychological moment and capturing the burglar who is taking away the family silverware.

Additions to Producing Staff

The principals in this are Bill Parsons, the magnetic comedian, Miss Constance Talmadge who appears as the wife, and James T. O'Shea, assistant to Director Chaudet appears in the straight lead.

"The Accident" is the title given a two-reel dramatic subject being produced by William Seiter with a cast which includes Lamar Johnstone, late of Selig's, as the author, Bob Chandler the artist, and Edward Sloman, of Universal "Trey o' Hearts" fame, and Jill Woodward. This story portrays life in the Paris Latin quarter and depicts the struggles of a young author in his fight for success.

Ernest Garcia, formerly with the Sterling and Selig companies is another director of the National staff, who now has the filming of a two-reel underworld story, "The Scar" in charge. Eugene Paulette is appearing as a crippled Italian with Constance Johnston, Page Peters and Frank Bonn in the straight leads. This is a story of the New York Eastside which opens with an Italian picnic and accident scene in which a girl is rescued by a millionaire who later becomes a reform worker.

The girl's brother, the crippled Italian, several years later becomes the tool of a gang of lawbreakers and is assigned to the task of killing the millionaire and attempts to do so, but recognizes the scar on his face which was caused by his sister when the millionaire reform worker saved her life.

"A Simple Country Girl" is the title given a one-reel comedy in which Rena Rogers appears in the name part supported by Russ Powell. This is a burlesque on the white slave traffic pictures which have been shown, and the production is in charge of Ernest Van Pelt, late director of the Charles Chaplin-Essanay comedies.

Director General Bruce Mitchell and company have spent the past week on a launch near Los Angeles harbor making the kidnapping scenes for "Captivating Mary Carstars," adapted from the novel of the same title by Henry Sydnor Harrison. The kidnapping is done at the behest of Mary's father, who has not seen her since a separation of himself and his wife, and the young man he employes to secure the girl, played by Alan Forrest, falls head over heels in love with her, with the result that a wedding takes place on the yacht before Mary is taken to her father. Norma Talmadge, late of Vitagraph company appears in the name part.

Harold Ostrum, formerly business manager for the Oz Company, has taken up the duties of assistant to Managing Director Bruce Mitchell. The National Film Corporation is justly proud of its force of cameramen, which consists of Gus Peterson with Managing Director Bruce Mitchell.

Allen Davey with Louis Chaudet, M. S. Mouler for the Ernest Garcia Company, Chester Lyons, late of the Pathe, with the Seiter organization; and Victor Scheurich with the Van Pelt comedy company. The assistant directors are Jack O'Brien, James T. O'Shea, Vernon S. Jones, Howard Knoth and W. W. Wood. Ben Lee is stage manager and Fred Newmeyer, master of properties.

While the technical staff is preparing props necessary for the coming big V-L-S-E production, S. Sturgeon, feature director of the Vitagraph company, is making a number of small subjects.

The script was by Mr. Duncan and is entitled "Love and Law." Two rivals for the hand of a fair widow resort to seeing who can entertain her best by automobile rides. One having a "tin wagon" succeeds in having his friends on the city council prohibit a faster speed than fifteen miles an hour, and thus he is kept in the running. This is Mr. Sturgeon's first comedy.

A Vitagraph comedy drama of two reels, "Her Last Flirtation," is being made by Ulysses Davis. Myrtle Gonzalez, Alfred Vosburg, George Kunkel and Carleton Wetherby appear in this. Miss Gonzalez takes the name part, that of a girl who claims having received nine proposals and broken as many hearts, but when she meets a Westerner while on a visit to her father's ranch, he takes matters in his own hands and takes her to the parson.

The filming of four feature productions for the new Triangle program has been taken up at the Griffith studio, Hollywood. "Blood Will Tell" is the title of a five-reel comedy drama in which Douglas Fairbanks is featured. This is being made under the direction of William Christie Cabanne, and is the first picture in which the new armoured automobiles of the United States Army will be used.

Array of Armoured Automobiles

Learning that these were to pass through Los Angeles on their way from an Eastern fort to the San Francisco Exposition, Mr. Cabanne secured permission from the Secretary of War to use them. All are mounted with machine guns, one auto having a balloon destroyer, another an airship destroyer. Others are a hospital, kitchen, wireless station, and the sixth is a private car belonging to Capt. Dixon. Scenes with these autos were made at San Diego. The company including Signe Auen, Monroe Salisbury, Lillian Langdon, Olive Adair, Edward Warren, and cameraman Billie Tildeu spent the past week at San Diego. A mammoth set consisting of an Indian-Mexican village is being constructed in the San Fernando Valley for scenes in this subject.

Roszika Dolly, the celebrated dancer of "Hello Broadway" fame, supported by Lillian Gish, Wilfred Lucas, and Mary Alden is appearing in a dramatic part in the five-reel subject entitled, "Mrs. Billie."

The third feature now being filmed is an adaptation by Chester B. Clapp from the Horace Hazeltine novel, "The Sable Lorcha." In this, Tully Marshall appears in the character part of Soy, a half-breed Chinaman. He is supported by Thomas Jefferson and Elmer Clifton in the principal parts. The production is in charge of Lloyd Ingraham.

The fourth feature is entitled "The Scarlet Band," and features John Emerson.

DeWolfe Hopper is due to arrive in Los Angeles in the near future to appear in Griffith features.

"Hearts and Flowers" is the title of a one-reel Majestic release made by George Seigmann. William E. Lawrence plays the part of a musician whose clothes are stolen by a tramp. The tramp is killed in a railway accident, and the wife is misled by the instance. Francelia Billington, Francis Carpenter, Walter Long and Howard Gay appear in this.

The Komic of the week is entitled, "Shocking Stockings" which certainly means striped ones for Fay Tincher. The majority of exterior scenes of this were made at one of the local beaches. The scenario is by Chester Withey, who with Eddie Dillon, Max Davidson and Frank Darion complete the cast.

"Right to Live" by Majestic

The Majestic Kid Company is making "The Right to Live," a one-reel subject with the usual cast which includes Violet Radcliffe, George Stone and Carmen Derue. This company has just returned from San Diego, the trip being made to secure sea scenes aboard ship for the one-reel subject, "The Little Cupids." All of the miniature film players retained their good health during the trip, and are now boasting that they are immune from sea-sickness.

For the first time I. W. Hellman, Los Angeles millionaire, has permitted a motion picture company to make scenes at his palatial mansion in the millionaire colony at Pasadena. These will be used in the two-reel Reliance drama "The Bold Impersonation," being made under the direction of F. A. Kelsey. Mr. Hellman was so delighted with the film people that following their work he gave a luncheon at his home for them.

Irene Hunt, Reliance actress, recently was awarded first prize at a dancing contest at Venice. A beautiful silver loving cup was presented. This is the third trophy she has won.

Further preparations are being made for the making of Griffith releases for the Triangle program at the Griffith studios, Hollywood, in the construction of a number of additional buildings. G. W. Bitser, chief photographer, found the laboratory space insufficient, and a third large building, 26 feet x 125 feet, which consists of two floors, is now being erected. This will be used for film drving room. All positive prints for Griffith subjects will be made in Los Angeles. A carpenter shop 42 feet x 70 feet and 18 feet high is now under construction, and when finished the carpenter shop force, now consisting of ten men will be doubled. Additional property has been secured for use in building big exterior sets, and already a big swiming pool is nearing completion. Ten more dressing rooms are being built, and soon will be assigned to principal members of the Griffith Company.

Don Meaney Gets a Boost

Don Meaney, who has been serving as one of the business managers in charge of eight companies at Universal City, and later was assistant to Director General Henry McRae, this week took up his new position at the Quality Pictures studio where he will be manager of production. Arrangements are being made to begin work immediately on the next Quality Pictures release, "The Silent Voice" having been completed.

Mr. Meaney since coming to the coast has been allied with the production department, and in this capacity has been very successful. He was formerly advertising manager for the Essanay, and it was there that he was closely associated with Francis X. Bushman, the Quality Pictures star.

Work has been taken up on the next Bosworth Universal subject, "Big Bill Brandt," which will consist of four reels. Hobart Bosworth plays the leading part, that of a man who was convicted of a crime on purely circumstantial evidence and sent to prison for twenty years. At the end of fifteen years he and others escape, and he goes to Canada where he lives a wild Western life for a number of years, but the strong desire to see his aged mother causes him to return to the States, and it is while on this mission that he is recognized and an attempt made to capture him.

In this he is shot and dies shortly after learning that his mother has passed away. The story is built around a gift gun which is given him when a young man, and all the misfortunes of his life can be attributed to this, he having been convicted on the evidence introduced relative to this gun, and it was by this that he was shot and killed. Mr. Bosworth will be supported by Jane Novak, Lloyd George, Anna Lehr, and Albert MacQuarrie.

Giblyn Goes to Triangle

A number of changes have been made at the Universal studio in the past few days, and among the important changes is that of Charles B. Henkel, who was assistant to H. P. Caulfield, being selected as scenario editor. Marshall Stedman is made manager of production. Charles Giblyn, who has been directing for the Universal for the past year and a half, leaves upon the completion of his present production, and will be associated with the NYMP studio, where he will direct for Thomas H. Ince.

Mr. Giblyn has been considered one of the most successful directors on the Universal lot, and will make a valuable addition to the Triangle producing staff. Lee Lawson, technical director, has resigned, and it is understood he will be affiliated with the Triangle organizations. Mr. Lawson is succeeded by Frank D. Ormiston, who arrived at Universal City from Chicago, after serving as technical director for the Weber-Smalley company, making the Anna Pavlowa feature, "The Little Dumb Girl of Portici."

Scenario is being prepared for the Universal Broadway Feature starring Henrietta Crossman. The title of this is "Tongues of Men," an adaptation from a well-known play which is being done by Harvey Gates. This will be completed in four reels.

A young millionaire masquerading as a farmer at the beach in order to avoid the stares of the inquisitive is the cause for much fun in the Joker subject, "At the Beach Incognito," being made by the Allan Curtis Universal company. The sensations of this are caused by the changing of carpet bags with a farmer who is there to see all the beauties. The usual Curtis cast, including Max Asher, Milburn Moranti, Lillian Peacock, Gale Henry and William Farney appear in this. The company will next take up "He Couldn't Fool His Mother-in-law," depicting the attempts of a lover of the white lights to retain tranquility at his own fire side, and also enjoy the company of a number of fair ones.

A one-reel underworld story, "The Eagle" is being made this week by the Hobart Henley-Leon Kent Universal Company. The scenario is by Harry Mann, a member of the cast. Hobart Henley appears in the name part, that of a crook, supported by Grace Thompson and Ray Hanford.

"The Cry of the First-Born" is a three-reel drama depicting life in the Hawaiian Islands where an English rice plantation owner becomes infatuated with a native girl and weds her. Through the perfidy of an English army officer who covets the woman, the husband is falsely advised that the woman is dead after he has been called to his native country because of the illness of his father.

The husband learning this information is heart broken. After years have past and he has wed another he returns to the Island to find his wife and child. His half-breed son learning of the presence of the father attempts revenge by stealing the baby child, but is foiled in his attempt to commit murder. In the cast are W. L. Rogers, R. C. Ryles, Yona Landowska, Peggy Norris, and the direction is in charge of Norman McDonald.

"The Last Thirty" a News Story

The subject featuring Daddy Manly entitled, "The Last Thirty," being produced by H. G. Stafford, will soon be finished. This is a news association story with the aged actor appearing as a telegraph operator who is stricken when he learns of the kindness shown him by the boys at the office, who rebuke the retirement of their old friend by the new general manager. Supporting Mr. Manly are Walter Belasco and Gladys Applebee. The scenario is by Ben Cohan.

A Western two-reel drama from scenario by Bess Meredith is being made under the direction of Joseph Franz. This is entitled "The Ghost Wagon." This is an early day Western picture and will contain a number of big Indian warfare scenes wherein the tribe induced by a half breed attempt to kill all the settlers of a small Western settlement. Through this is a pretty love story, and shows the attempts of two impostors to gain possession of a silver mine. The cast includes Edythe Sterling, A. Edmundson, Sherman Bainbridge, Warren Ellsworth and Rex Roselli.

VICTORIA FORDE, THE POPULAR LITTLE COMEDIENNE, WHO HAS JUST JOINED THE SELIG FORCES IN THE WEST

Among the prominent people to visit Universal City during the past week were Madame Schumann-Heink, famous singer, and Governor Arthur Capper, of Kansas. The opera singer was posed for a motion picture while in the cage of the big Sumatra tiger "Princess."

The filming of the French tragedy, "Business Is Business," featuring Nat. C. Goodwin, was finished last week at Universal City.

For more than two hours seven hundred men representing the principalities of Gretzhoffen and Grahaffen, battled on the beach before the lenses of a dozen cameras Sunday for the fourteenth episode of the "Broken Coin" serial. Favored with good weather, the company secured the desired results which constitute the big punch of the closing episode of this serial. Oscar Dempsey, an actor, in charge of a cannon, was badly burned when the cannon exploded from an overload, and died later at a hospital. Funeral service was attended Wednesday by all members of the company.

The Al. E. Christie Nestor company, including Lee Moran, Eddie Lyons, Carmen Phillips, and Elsie Greeson are home from San Diego, where they made two pictures. One is entitled, "Too Many Smiths," depicting the misfortunes of a detective in running down a pair of crooks, when he was misled by the names on the hotel register. The second subject completed was, "Their Happy Honeymoon," wherein several couples, all newlyweds have their first breaking of the family ties and a final reunion which brings happiness to all.

Giblyn on Last U Subject

Director Charles Giblyn is now engaged in making his last Universal subject, "The Deceivers." The name parts are taken by Agnes Vernon and Jack Dillon, who are employed in the office of a noted lawyer. Their plot is to mislead an aged client of the lawyer by the girl posing as the elderly man's niece thus being in a position to get possession of the family jewels and other wealth. In the end the confidential clerk is found to be the cause of the trouble, and the girl is rewarded by the wealthy man adopting her.

A one-reel subject, "Every Man's Money," is being made by Lynn Reynolds, with a cast including Sydney Ayres and Doris Pawn. A pair of social pirates insist upon their daughter courting a wealthy young man, and the desired wedding is brought about, but on the eve of the wedding day, the young man finds that his fortune has been swept away.

Vitagraph Brings Mascot from Desert

A souvenir of the R. S. Sturgeon Vitagraph Company of their trip to the desert recently, is a mammoth desert turtle which measures fully fifteen inches in diameter. It is retained at the Santa Monica studio by means of a long chain, and during its short stay at the producing plant has made friends with everyone concerned, principally for the reason that it needs no care. It secures all its food from the lawn, and water from the dew. The mascot has been christened "Vita," and it has become so fond of Sam Spedon, publicity manager, here on a visit from the New York office, that members of the company fear they will lose it when Mr. Spedon departs.

10 MONTHS AGO

Ten months ago, shortly after the outbreak of the great European conflict now raging, F. O. Nielsen, of Chicago, realizing to the full the deadly peril which menaced our peace loving country on account of its "unpreparedness," determined through the medium of the moving picture, to place the actual facts of the situation before the people. The result has been a phenomenal picture.

Mr. Nielsen's efforts are the outcome of a purely patriotic idea. His sole aim has been to arouse the easy-going home-loving American citizen to his duty and loyalty to "The Flag." It has taken months of labor and thousands of dollars to bring about what the heads of the various Government Departments say is

THE GREATEST PICTURE OF ITS KIND

GUARDING OLD GLORY

"Guarding Old Glory" is the finest "Peace," "Patriotic" and "Preparedness" Picture, regardless of the statements of others. It is free from any play features, but tells hard, solid facts. It is the first and only picture of its kind to receive the solid endorsements of Government Officials. No other picture can show such wonderful scenes, such stirring action, such beautiful photography. "Guarding Old Glory" will be seen in every theatre in the country.

Mr. F. O. Nielsen,
Chicago, Ill.

July 14, 1915.

Dear Sir:

I have just seen your series of motion pictures entitled "Guarding Old Glory." They are faithful and accurate reresentations of the various branches of the land and sea forces in the service. They are extremely interesting and instructive; and I WISH THAT EVERY CITIZEN COULD SEE THEM and thereby be induced to feel the personal interest and pride in the Army and Navy which they so richly deserve.

Very truly, yours,
(Signed) LINDLEY M. GARRISON, Secretary of War.

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY
Washington

July 16th, 1915.

My Dear Mr. Nielsen:

I witnessed with pleasure a private exhibition of your moving picture film entitled "Guarding Old Glory." It is a splendidly realistic exhibition of various phases of Army and Navy life which can not fail to interest the public. I TRUST THAT THOUSANDS WILL SEE THESE PICTURES, for I am sure they will increase the pride and interest which the people already have in our Army and Navy.

Cordially yours,
(Signed) JOSEPHUS DANIELS,
Secretary of the Navy.

July 15, 1915.

Dear Mr. Nielsen:

I witnessed with the Secretary and Assistant Secretary of War the exhibition of films on military subjects entitled "Guarding Old Glory" yesterday in the War Department. I CONGRATULATE YOU FOR THE FIDELITY OF THE PICTURES SHOWN and THINK THIS SHOULD BE AN EDUCATION to many who never see our Army or Navy. I think you are doing a patriotic duty in showing these pictures throughout the country.

With best wishes, I am, Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Nielsen:

I have twice had the opportunity to see the remarkably good moving picture representing army life in various places, designated "Guarding Old Glory."

I WISH TO CONGRATULATE YOU ON GETTING UP A PARTICULARLY GOOD PIECE OF WORK, ONE WHICH SHOULD BE OF REAL EDUCATIONAL VALUE. Your interest has been such as to enable you to produce a particularly good piece of work, and all of us who are interested in the education of the people on the subject of military preparedness, appreciate the effects of your efforts in this direction.

Trusting that you will have a large measure of success, I am,
Very sincerely,
LEONARD WOOD, Major General, U. S. A.

Secretary of the Navy

NAVY DEPARTMENT
Washington

July 19, 1915.

Dear Sir:

It gave me great pleasure to witness the exhibition today by your representatives of the moving picture "Guarding Old Glory."

The scenes are selected with remarkably good judgment, showing as they do scenes from real service by the men who are kept ready at all times to guard the flag.

EVERY PATRIOTIC AMERICAN WHO HAS THE OPPORTUNITY TO SEE THESE PICTURES WILL UNDOUBTEDLY BE BENEFITED BY THE EXPERIENCE.

Sincerely yours,
W. S. BENSON,
Rear Admiral and Chief of Naval Operations, U. S. N.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By George D. Proctor

ALL out for the big field day of the New York local No. 1 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. The "midsummer gathering of the clan," as the announcement so prettily reads, will be held at Brighton Beach, Saturday, August 21. The kind offices of the weather bureau are hereby invoked.

Much fun is planned with Joe Humphreys as master of ceremonies. The features are the Charlie Chaplin contest, the "Goddess" contest, the photoplayers' parade and the shore dinner. Leather lunged Bill Haddock, who is called "Silent Bill" because he isn't, is the official announcer.

One can almost see Sam Trigger, Billy Hilkemeier, Lee Ochs, Adolph Weiss, Needles, Corn, Bauerenfreund, et al, disporting themselves. Yes, it will be a bully time. It always has been in years past.

Here is change of the week too important to receive anything less than a separate paragraph.

Harry Reichenbach, press agent par excellence, is leaving Metro for Equitable. Harry is hog-tied by a contract which was so good that he couldn't bring himself to refuse, especially when he thought of that famous old admonition "Get the money." What the opening overture will be is not yet known, but it will have to be a good one to beat his Bushman-bomb stuff. Harry is a real press agent and one of the most tireless workers in the business.

That luncheon that Harry Reichenbach gave at the Knickerbocker last Tuesday noon, apropos of his departure from the Metro to keep up the good work at the Equitable, was quite as unique as most of Harry's performances.

The unexpected happened when Harry was called upon to investigate the contents of a certain suspicious-looking package, and discovered inside a handsome gold cigarette case, a tribute from President Rowland and Joe Engel of the Metro.

"I can't say anything, boys," remarked the victim, as if a piece of cracked ice had stuck in his throat. "I'll pass it around instead and you can imagine what you would try to say if you were in my place."

John Semmler, of the "Morning Telegraph," gave an excellent impersonation of Neutrality in his position between Wid Gunning and Arthur Leslie. There were no casualities. The table, it may be remarked, was long enough to prevent anyone but Wid from being heard all around it without raising his voice.

The short story contest was won by Mr. Reichenbach of the Equitable, Arthur Leslie second. The entire scene was passed by the National Board of Censors.

Others present at the luncheon were: Lewis J. Selznick, Arthur H. Spiegel, Felix Feist, Lynde Denig, of the "Moving Picture World"; Robert Welsh,, of the "Dramatic Mirror"; A. MacArthur, Jr., of the "Moving Picture World"; Charles Condon, of "Motography"; Mr. Rosenthal, of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation; Lesley Mason, of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Arthur James, whose sound literary judgment has been the solid foundation of many past successes, leaves the Mutual, where he has been head of the publicity department for more than a year, to take a man's size job with Metro. James will be the executive head of the publicity and advertising and scenario departments.

Merritt Crawford, editor of "Reel Life" for more than a year, leaves the Mutual with James, to have more immediate charge of the Metro publicity. Henry James, the third man of whom it may be said "with Mutual for more than a year," also joins Metro in an executive capacity.

J. N. Naulty, general manager of the Mutual since its inception, leaves the Mutual to be general manager of Triangle, the Griffith-Ince-Sennet combination.

The day of the original scenario is just about here. Several years ago there was a lot of talk about the day when "the open market" would arrive. The open market arrived and existed full fledged long before anyone dared acknowledge. That is to say—the time when an exhibitor could book a program of films rented from different distributing companies without having his service cancelled.

Now the same condition holds good for scenarios. A lot of folks are predicting that the day of the original scenario will come. It has come, but the scenarios must be good.

Keep your eyes on Mutual. Not only is reorganization in progress, but it is highly probable that a couple of new exchanges will be opened soon. Remember that John R. Freuler, president, and J. C. Graham, his right bower, are real exchange men.

Prosperity note: R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of the Universal, now rides around in his own little twin six Packard. Now is a good time to remember that the Universal owes to Mr. Cochrane more than most folks know, for he has never sought the lime-light.

Nobody ever heard of a batrachomyomachio, outside of a few of us, until Arthur Leslie pulled it out of his Pandora's box to assault the gentleman who really deserves assault for his poorly grounded attack upon the women of the screen.

It's a shame to expose another writing person, but the polysyllabic offering is really the title of an ancient Greek poem, credited to Homer, and means "the battle of the frogs and mice." So, as used, its not so biting as it sounds.

But, regardless of that, Leslie's reply to the person in question is deserving of support.

Here's a fine, verbal passage of arms between two directors—two real ones, too.

The first, now on the Pacific Coast, sent the second this telegram:

"If your terms are very reasonable would like to engage you."

Just ten words, it went at regular rush rates.

To which the second, peeved, for he considers himself as good as the first, replied, after deliberation:

"Was considering making you the same offer."

The reply was sent at just as high prices as the first telegram.

George Universal Stevenson is back after a stay of nearly a year on the other side of the big drink, working for the Universal. George's first stop was London where he got the British house organ started for the Trans-Atlantic Film Company, the English Universal corporation. Then George went over on the Continent anad took in France and Spain, dodging shells and fleas alike.

Now he is back again bronzed, healthy and tired. President Laemmle gave him a vacation to rest up, after which he will go back into harness.

George can well be put on the list of untiring, faithful workers. His whole stay abroad, during these war times, has really been an exhibition of bravery and loyalty to his firm.

One "notes with pleasure" and "points with pride" to the rise of an old friend, Leonard W. McChesney, the new general manager of production at the Edison studio in the Bronx. Mr. McChesney succeeds Horace G. Plimpton, whose resignation came suddenly last week after six years on the job.

McChesney is a real film man. From advertising and publicity manager of the General Film Company he went back to Edison as sales manager of the motion picture department in July, 1913. Now he is manager of production. He has always been marked by one endearing quality—truthfulness. This quality and his frankness, pleasant frankness, have won him a host of friends and will stand him in good stead, anywhere. Here's best wishes for success.

Jacob Wilk, press agent, leaves World Film. Dame Rumor says he has been seen around the Equitable studio of late, but he says he is opening an author's agency in the Longacre Building, and he ought to know.

Percy L. Heath, a well known theatrical press agent, for many years identified with the Henry W. Savage interests, latest with "Watch Your Step," succeeds Wilk at the World Film offices.

Well, the first copies of the "Minusa Minstrel," a snappy little fortnightly house organ, have arrived. Appended is the signature of "the world's greatest screen expert," Nat I. Brown. The Minstrel is so interesting that it is worth while hollering for. Which is to be construed as saying something.

The Knickerbocker Star Features, three-reelers, remain on the General Film program.

Joe Farnham is going to pull a real one pretty soon. All you directors better get in while you can.

John W. Grey is a busy young person with "The Battle Cry of Peace." Some picture.

D. W. Griffith is among the new car owners. His is a 1916 Fiat limousine. It matters not how you pronounce it, it rides just as easy.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

Harry Spingler, juvenile leading man, is still in town, his announcement that he was going with Balboa notwithstanding.

Louis Gasnier, general manager of Pathé, is back from a short vacation spent with the Pump Club, an organization of Jersey City politicians.

D. W. Russell has left for England to represent David Horsley there.

Mary Anderson, Vitagraph ingenue and leading woman at seventeen, goes to the Pacific Coast Company.

CHANGES OF THE WEEK

Eddie O'Connor, the bald-headed comedian, is in stock with the Whartons playing "Onion Jones" in the Wallingford series.

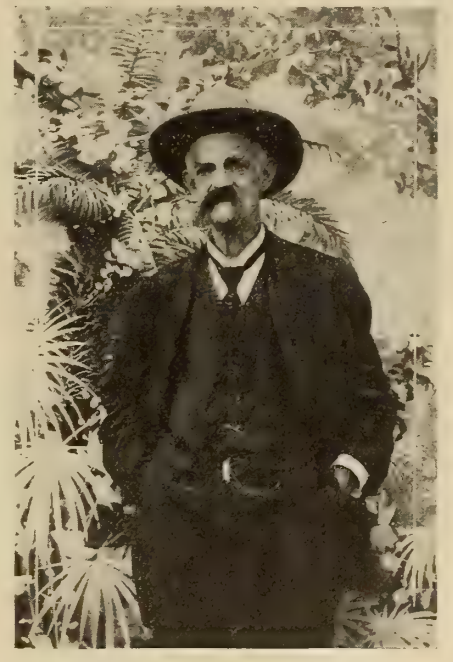
Brinsley Shaw rises from characters to directing with the Universal. He is taking George Lessey's company during Lessey's vacation.

William Courtleigh, Jr., the Neal of the Pathé "Neal of the Navy" series, recently married Ethel Fleming at Long Beach, Cal.

Frank D. Sniffen, a well known advertising man, has been appointed general sales manager for Paramount.

Blanche Walsh has signed with the Triumph Film Corporation for a five-reeler.

May Ward, and her eight Dresden Dolls, late of vaudeville, are to play in a five-reeler, "A Continental Girl" for the Continental.



Frank Bacon, from the speaking stage, has joined the Metro forces and will support Francis X. Bushman in Quality features.

Literary Sleuth to Ferret Animal Moods for Horsley

F. W. Doughty, Who Wrote 1,250 "Brady" Detective Stories, Is Engaged to Write Two-Reel Scenarios and Will Study Bostock Beasts to Embody Their Whims in Pictures

FRANCIS WORCESTER DOUGHTY, known to every reader of light fiction, has been secured by David Horsley to write the scenarios for the two reel animal pictures, featuring the Bostock collection of performing beasts, which Mr. Horsley will produce and release on the Mutual program beginning about the middle of September. He left New York this week for the Horsley studios in Los Angeles.

As soon as he arrives in Los Angeles and before he actually begins writing his scripts, Mr. Doughty will study the possibilities of the Bostock animals so that in his plays the full limit of performing ability of the animals may be realized.

He will also study their moods with a view to inculcate in his scenarios points of detail in wild animal life that are not apparent to the casual observer, but which are sure to add interest to these subjects. The scope of the new Horsley double exposure camera, which is capable of accomplishing new illusions remarkable and mystifying in the extreme, which will be used in the animal productions, is to be demonstrated to Mr. Doughty.

Combining this material with his vivid imagination and fertile brain, Mr. Doughty is sure to turn out some exceptional scenarios.

Francis Worcester Doughty is a national character. His novels, which have been published in almost countless number, have delighted readers for many years. He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1850, and when but twenty-two years old, succeeded to the publishing business of his mother, Sarah Parson Doughty, who was prominent in literary circles and contributed to almost all of the big publications of the day. Mrs. Doughty also wrote many plays which were produced at Barnum's museum and other theatres.

Since he succeeded to his mother's business forty-three years ago Mr. Doughty has been writing continually. He wrote the famous Brady series of detective stories, 1,250 in number, which made him a name as a creator of fanciful fiction.

He is also the author of a number of other successful series of "thrillers," including "The James Boys," and "The Young Sleuth." A large number of animal stories came from his pen. Of all of the old school of novel writers Mr. Doughty alone remains.

Mr. Doughty's first motion picture scenario was written in 1913. It was called "Hook and Hand" and was produced in five reels by the Solax company. After that time he wrote many photoplays, one of his greatest effects being "The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery," the serial story which he prepared in collaboration with Howell Hanchell.

The brand name under which these animal pictures will be released, together with the date of the first release and the title, will be announced later.

FIRST PULLMAN IN PICTURES SHOWN IN KLEINE'S "HELLO BILL"

For the first time in the history of picture making the interior of a Pullman car was photographed last week. George Kleine succeeded in breaking the ironclad rule of the Pullman Company during the making of some scenes for "Hello Bill," his five-part comedy featuring Bickel and Watson.

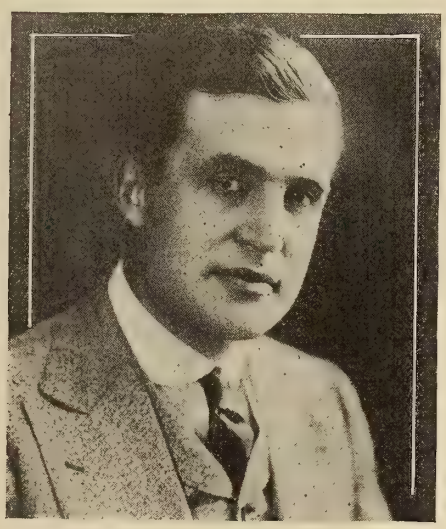
The Pullman interiors of the past have invariably been studio built, owing to the opposition of the Pullman Company to the use of their cars for such purposes. The car was placed at the disposal of the producer for an entire day and permission was extended at the same time to string a line of Allison-Hathaway portable lights through the top of the Pullman. Scenes were made in the Lehigh Valley yards and in transit to Communipaw, N. J.

"Hello Bill" will be released through the Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service, September 15.

SKY WRITING AVIATOR CHERISHES METRO MEDAL

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Aug. 9.



Art Smith, the daring aviator, who as a personal favor to Sol. L. Lesser and E. M. Asher of the All Star Feature Distributors, wrote "Metro" in the sky on his only night flight during Exhibitors' Convention week at the San Francisco Exposition, has written Francis X. Bushman that of the many medals he has been awarded, he prizes the one given him by the Metro Film Corporation most.

This was pinned on Smith, when he alighted from the flight, by Margaret Snow, who is playing opposite Mr. Bushman in Quality Pictures.

FELLOWES IN "REGENERATION," FOX, WAS BANK CLERK

Rockcliffe Fellowes, who plays the leading part in William Fox's forthcoming feature, "The Regeneration," has had a remarkable career. In two years he made the transition from a bank clerk in Ottawa, to a Broadway matinee idol.

This is Mr. Fellowes' first appearance on portunity for some wonderful character work.

Under the direction of R. A. Walsh, who is now putting the finishing touches on "The Regeneration," as big a success is predicted the screen. He was the star in "Under Cover," and "Within the Law," before appearing in pictures. "The Regeneration," which is the picturization of the dramatization of Owen Kildare's famous book, "My Mamie Rose," gives Mr. Fellowes an opportunity for some wonderful character work.

THAW SNAPPED IN FILM AT LEAGUE OUTING

Special to Motion Picture News

Philadelphia, Aug. 9.

At the recent outing of the Philadelphia Exhibitors' League held at Atlantic City, a goodly sum was realized. The coffers of the league are in a healthy condition in consequence. Amongst the many interesting events of the occasion was the taking of a moving picture of all the principal events of the outing. A Lubin cameraman was taken along in order to insure a successful film.

Interest was added to the occasion by the presence of the much talked of Harry Thaw in the throng. This gentleman good naturedly consented to pose and went into the reel at the side of the president of the league, Charles Siegel.

This picture has been passed by the censors in spite of the presence of Thaw, and will be thrown on the screen for the first time this week, having its initial performance at the Eastwicke theatre, the manager of which is Nat Fischer.

KEYSTONE WINS DRESSLER SUIT

The New York Supreme Court has decided that Marie Dressler is not entitled to recover damages against the Keystone Film Company in her suit against it in which she alleged that it had broken its contract with her.

The court held that there was no fraud or misconduct on the part of the defendant and that the plaintiff is entitled merely to her proper share of the profits of the picture entitled "Tillie's Punctured Romance." These profits were never refused by the Keystone Film Company to Miss Dressler, but she declined to accept what the court now compels her to accept.

The case was further complicated by the fact that the receiver of Miss Dressler's property in supplementary proceedings on a judgment of several thousand dollars procured against her, demanded of the Keystone Film Company to pay no monies to her until the judgment has been satisfied.

INDIANA MUNICIPAL ATTORNEY HOLDS BACK SUNDAY CLOSING FANATICS

A committee of citizens of Logansport, Ind., called on the city authorities recently and requested that the theatres of Logansport be notified to close their theatres on Sunday. The city attorney says the law is based on popular opinion, and that if strictly enforced, all the drug stores, cigar stores, garages and other places would have to close. He says the action of the city must be based on an affidavit filed by some complainant.

He said the city stood ready to prosecute theatre owners if affidavits were filed against them, charging that they were following their usual vocation on Sunday.

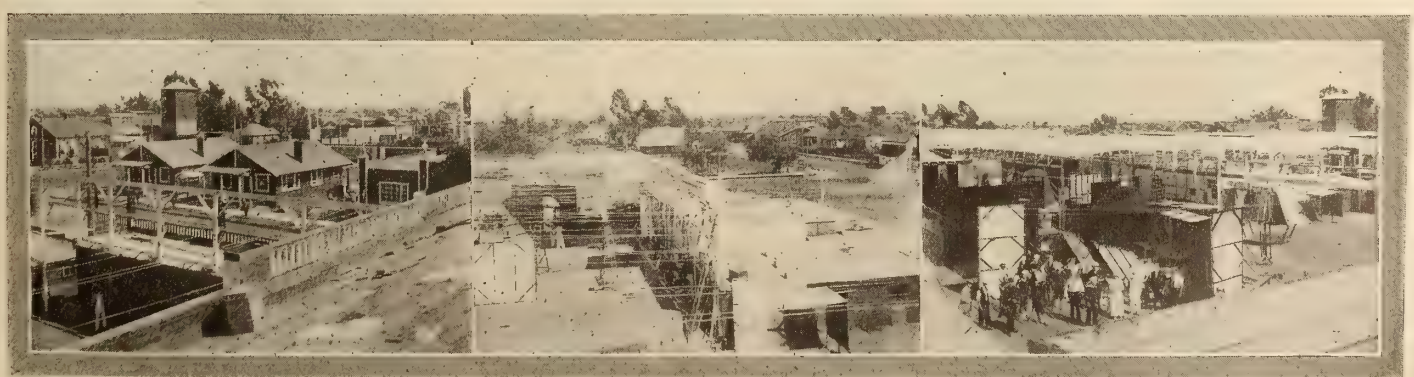
JOHN REINHARD PLAYS HEAVY LEAD IN "CAPITAL PUNISHMENT"

John Reinhard, who has had a long and successful career on the legitimate stage is making a strong heavy lead in the three-reel productions of Knickerbocker Star Features.

Mr. Reinhard won many compliments in his work in a recent Knickerbocker Star Feature production in his support of Alice Brady.

In the latest release of Knickerbocker Star Features, "Capital Punishment," Mr. Reinhard has a very strong part in which he is distinguishing himself as a heavy in a difficult role.

In his work on the legitimate stage, Mr. Reinhard has occupied some important engagements, being under the management of Lew Fields, Shubert, Ziegfeld, Cohen and Harris and others. Some of his important parts have been in "Wizard of Oz," "It Happened in Nordland,"



JOHN REINHARD, HEAVY LEAD IN KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURES

"About Town," "Girl Behind the Counter," "Algeria," a Victor Herbert production managed by McKee and Zimmerman, and "Miss Innocence," in which production he supported Anna Held in the juvenile lead. "The Follies," the original "Madam Sherry" production in which he made famous the song "Every Little Movement."

For two years Mr. Reinhard played in numerous parts on the Orpheum vaudeville circuit.

VIEWS OF THE EXTENSIVE PLANT OF THE BALBOA COMPANY AT LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA

WARDROBE DEPARTMENT—LABORATORIES VIEW OF STUDIOS OPEN STAGE OF 8,000 SQUARE FEET AREA

Work was taken up last week on a new row of dressing rooms at Universal City, and following the completion of this, a duplicate of the mammoth front stage measuring one hundred and twenty-five by five hundred feet will be built on the north adjoining the present one giving the Universal approximately one hundred and seventy-five thousand square feet of stage floor space.

WILLIAM PARSONS (National)

The new stage will be built from the same plans as the present with the exception of a new defusing system. Being along side the other which is located adjoining the property rooms and scene docks, it will be convenient for production, and will need no additional buildings. The dressing rooms will consist of two sections each of fifteen rooms, and will be along one edge of the new stage.

Pavlowa at Universal City

The Weber-Smalley company accompanied by Madame Anna Pavlowa and her troupe of sixty artists, arrived in Los Angeles in special cars from Chicago, where they have been working on the eight or nine reel subject featuring the international dancer. All interiors for this subject are to be made here, the company having made all exteriors during the Chicago engagement of Madame Pavlowa.

The animals of the Bostock Jungle Zoo, owned by David Horsley, have been engaged for Saturday, August 14, and will take part in the San Fernando Valley Day, when a number of small cities in this district will have a big celebration.

Raymond Hitchcock, of the Keystone, and a party of friends while fishing at Catalina Island, were suddenly given the scare of their lives by a freight steamer striking their launch, and causing it to capsize. All the occupants of the boat were rescued by nearby Japanese fishermen, and the only serious damage was the loss of bait.

A daily news service has been established by Frederick Palmer, head of the publicity department of the Keystone Film Company, and it is the first instance of such an organization issuing daily proof sheets. These go forward to all the principal publications of the world daily, and bespeak the progress and enterprise of the Mack Sennett organization.

Syd. Chaplin and company of Keystone players, including Phyllis Allen, Glen Cavender, Wesley Ruggles and others, went to San Francisco this week to make a two-reel comedy in and about the Exposition grounds.

On the athletic grounds of the University of Southern California this week, football players of three big Universities in Los Angeles, and others from high schools took part in scenes for the Carter-DeHaven feature entitled, "At Watt College," being produced by Wm. C. Dowlan. The bleachers were filled with college students and there was as much real enthusiasm displayed at this game as is usually seen at a regular one.

"The Crystal Ball" is the working title of a two-reel subject made by Robert "Bob" Daly at the Selig zoo. The story and scenario was written by W. C. Clifton, head of the scenario department at the zoo, and tells the story of the misfortunes which befall a young man because of his desire for wealth and attempts to secure it by the bucket shop route. Some East India magic is introduced which will add much to the picture. In the cast for this are Fritzi Brunette, George Larkin, Bert Grasby and George Hernandez.

A. W. Goff, of Cleveland, recently appointed Western division manager of the V-L-S-E, has arrived on the coast, and is now making a tour of the various branches. He is expected in Los Angeles within the next few days.

Children Save Money from Villain

"Providence and the Twins" is a one-reel Majestic of a comedy-drama nature, wherein a pair of mischievous children replace currency with paper dolls, thus saving the fortune of their spinster aunt, who is about to fall for the entreaties of her lover of forty years ago. The chance exchange prevents the lover, who in reality is the villain, from wasting the poor woman's money.

Olga Grey, Howard Gaye, John Kohler and Maggie Wilson appear in the principal parts of the one-reel Reliance, "A Woman of Nerve," wherein the woman captures the burglar for whose arrest the police have offered a big reward. The manner in which she does this makes an interesting single reel.

"He Fell in a Cabaret" is the title of a one-reel Nestor comedy, and refers to a youth, studying for the ministry, and his father and his mother. All saw and were conquered by the beauty of the cabaret singer; that is, all but ma. Lee Moran, Jack Dillon, Billie Rhodes and Harry Rattenberry appear in the cast.

A C F BATTLE PICTURES ARE NEUTRAL

It may be of interest to exchanges and exhibitors to know that the pictures turned out by the American Correspondent Film Company, Inc., makers of A C F Real Life Features are strictly neutral. They are assembled from the various centers of interest in Europe and deal with the war strictly on a fair and impartial basis.

This is a gratification as well as a pleasure to the New York critics and experts who have viewed "The Battle of Przemysl." It is true to life and is presented for the purpose of entertainment and instruction with no comment or prejudice that might affect any audience.

The pictures were taken by American citizens who are still in Europe at the scene of action. Another American Correspondent Film Company envoy will be dispatched within the next few weeks to Italy where he will gather pictures and news stories on the Italian-Austro-Hungarian frontier.

ELEANOR BLANCHARD PREFERS OLD DICKENS CHARACTERS

Eleanor Blanchard, with twelve years' experience upon the legitimate stage and five years in the motion picture studios, is certainly qualified to be one of the most useful character actresses of the Lubin plant. Miss Blanchard is not only an American, but per extrema, a Quaker, born in Philadelphia. She does not state when, but says it is none of our business. However, vital statistics are not as important as earnest endeavor and ability. She is a student and a writer of stories and photoplays. Her preference in roles is comedy, especially of the Dickens type. Her political views are "Leave it to the men," it is not a woman's work. She is an actress and that is enough employment for any normal mind. Miss Blanchard has played leading roles in many of the Lubin feature pictures.

Mutual Completes Its Program Membership

Brands Comprised in the New Line-up Are American and Beauty, Gaumont, Bostock Jungle and Film, Horsley Cub and Centaur, Mustang, Thanhouser and Falstaff—No Increase in Rental Prices, Declares Freuler—One Mutual Masterpiece a Week Will Be Released, Featuring Broadway Stars

THE Mutual Film Corporation announces that it has just completed a record-breaking series of contracts reaching a total of $8,000,000 for the year, for the production of its new program.

The brands comprised in the new Mutual program, according to the announcements, are:

The American Film Company, Inc., producers of "Flying A" photo plays, American Beauty Comedies and dramas.

The Gaumont Company, producers of Knickerbocker Star Features and All-Star Comedies.

The Bostock Jungle & Film Company, featuring the Bostock zoological collection.

David Horsley productions: Cub Comedies and Centaur Features.

Mustang Film Company, producing Mustang Western features and star photoplays.

The Thanhouser Film Corporation, producing Thanhouser feature plays and Falstaff Comedies.

Productions Total Million Feet Weekly

The combined productions of these manufacturers as contracted for in the Mutual program amount to a million feet a week—fifty-two million feet a year.

"We have made an era marking step in the framing of the new Mutual program," observed John R. Freuler, the new president of the corporation. "The new program is, we believe, without a precedent in film program history.

"This program goes out without any increase in rental prices. Yet the program has been brought to all feature quality and the same high standard that has given the strong appeal to the best of our multiple reel productions will be found in the quality of the single reel productions and everything on our regular program.

"Some of the new productions will go out right away and the entire new program will be in full swing the week of September 13.

"The new Mutual program will carry in its regular service two three-reel Broadway star releases every week, five two-reel banner features, nine one-reel feature comedies, two one-reel all-star dramas and one one-reel Mutual Weekly of world news events.

"It is significant to consider the comedy factor of the new program. It is framed on the assumption that the great American majority likes to laugh if it has provocation. We certainly will give 'em provocation. I have added five new comedies every week to the regular Mutual program.

Masterpictures Will Be Continued

"In addition to the regular program the Mutual Film Corporation will release each week one Mutual Masterpicture of four or five reels. These Mutual Masterpictures will be productions of such magnitude that they cannot be comprehended in one, two or three reels. They will be produced by special arrangements with the greatest theatrical magnates of the country. The Mutual Masterpictures will put on the screen great literary materpieces from the pens of famous writers. These masterpictures will feature big Broadway stars.

"The subjects for each day will be of so different a nature that there will positively be no duplication of subject or presentation. With the exhibitor on the Mutual program receiving a number of reels per day, an assurance will be given that no two releases will be similar in any manner. This, of course, is a big step forward in the interests of exhibitors who will appreciate a variety of theme in the menu served moving picture fans."

Mr. Freuler is a strong believer in the future of the moving picture business as applied to low-priced entertainment of the five, ten and fifteen-cent order. Hence the completion of his plans to strengthen the Mutual program so that exhibitors will secure in this way the best possible productions in regular service.

"Business Is One of Volume"

"The moving picture business is essentially one of volume. That is proven by the fact that over 18,000,000 people daily attend moving picture shows. If we are to produce just for the classes then the foundation for the moving picture business is wrong. It has become one of the leading industries of the world because entertainment of a high class order has been brought to the millions who cannot afford to pay high prices for entertainment.

"The moving picture has progressed to a point where it rests on a solid basis and is supported by the theatres that charge five, ten, fifteen, twenty and twenty-five cents. Ninety-five per cent. of the moving picture theatres of the country are in this class and the same percentage represents their following among the fans.

"As an exhibitor, I have frequently complained because of the sameness of the theme offered in one day's program. My hope as an exhibitor was that my patrons could be supplied with a variety of subjects independent of the length of the films.

More and Better Theatres

"The exhibitors are in a sense the retailers of our product and for the best interests of the business we are determined to give them what they have long sought for through the expression of their patrons."

"The evolution of the moving picture theatre," continued Mr. Freuler, "will find more theatres, but of a higher character. Just as the moving picture theatre was a development of the store-front show place, so you will find a gradual disappearance of the house seating but 300 people. Moving picture exhibitors are rapidly coming to the conclusion that the ideal seating capacity is 1,000 or more.

"The overhead in such a theatre is not greatly in excess of the smaller house and a good profit is assured through increased attendance.

"We must not forget the neighborhood theatre and the theatres in the smaller cities and towns of the country, which in reality are the backbone of the moving picture enterprise. There are 13,120 moving picture theatres in cities and towns of the United States of 10,000 population and under. This is a substantial majority of moving picture theatres. You will probably see an increase of this number rather than a decrease, for the reason that the neighborhood theatre is the show house that has a regular, steady patronage the year round."

MORGAN, PLANK WALKING EXPERT IN HAPPY PIRATE DAYS, IN VITAGRAPH SUBJECT

Rollin S. Sturgeon, the director of the Western Vitagraph Company, who has produced such Vitagraph feature successes as "Capt. Alvarez," "The Lorelei Madonna," "The Little Angel of Canyon Creek," and "The Chalice of Courage," has been given the pictured manuscript of Cyrus Townsend Brady's remarkable story of piratical adventure, "Sir Henry Morgan, Bucaneer."

As the principal scenes will be enacted in mid-ocean, Mr. Sturgeon is selecting his cast from among expert swimmers.

As the players will have to live in a craft, a replica of the sailing ships used by lawless rovers, who fought under the skull and cross bones, Mr. Sturgeon has secured a staunch, rakish-looking craft that is now in drydock being rebuilt and overhauled to comply with the resign of the vessel in Mr. Brady's story.

CHARLOTTE GREENWOOD AND GRANT IN MOROSCO COMEDY

Charlotte Greenwood and Sidney Grant, co-stars in "So Long Letty" the Oliver Morosco comedy with music having a very successful run at Morosco's Broadway theatre, Los Angeles, in its fifth week, have been engaged to play leads in a comedy subject to be produced by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, active production of which will be taken up Monday of next week.

Marjorie Rambeau, who was to appear in the next Morosco subject filmed, will be unable to do so because of her engagement to play in the initial production of "King, Queen and Jack."

Tempting Program for League Carnival

Screen Stars, Both the Brave and the Fair, Will Gambol in Swimming Races, Three-Legged Races, Pig Chase, Flivver Contest, Rifle-Shooting, Watermelon Eating Contest, Horseback Races, and Film-making Tournament—Comodore Blackton, Joe Brandt and Lewis J. Selznick Among Cup Donors

ANYONE looking over the list of entries of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League Carnival, to be pulled off Saturday, August 21, at Brighton Beach, concludes at once that the screen heroes are surely going in for a day's real sport. They are in earnest, too, in all this fun, for there has sprung up some real rivalry. Besides, the winner in each event is to receive a handsome prize. Practically all the big photo stars will be there and take part. The Eighth Regiment band will furnish music.

Joe Humphreys, master of ceremonies, is doping out a batch of stunts with the old fashioned names, but all puckered up with new laughing spots. From ten a. m. to one p. m. there will be water sports of all kinds. Lottie Briscoe, Lillian Walker, Edith Storey, Helen Constance, Vera Hastings, May Finnigan and Jeanette Ehrman are entered in the Ladies' Swimming Race. Jess Phillips, Saul Harrision, Guy Hedlund, H. W. McMahon, A. J. Goode, J. Hurst, Alan Hale, Devore Parmer, F. Lewis, Joe Beck, Charlie Hoffman, C. Archer are entered in the Men's Swiming Race.

In the tub race will be Jeanette Ehrman, Harry Howe, Devore Parmer, Billy Quirk, Ed Ankewitz, Eugene Cavanaugh and Albert Roccardi.

Parade Will Start at One-Thirty

Ida Schnall, well known as an all-around athlete and champion lady diver of America, will give an exhibition of fancy diving. Chester Beecroft, holder of many medals, and A. L. Lack will also do fancy diving, while J. Albert Hall will make a 75-foot dive.

At 1:30 the gala parade of photoplayers and members of the different branches of the trade will start at Coney Island and march to the Brighton Beach Track. Leading the parade on horseback in gay costume will be a phalanx of favorites among the lady stars including Mary Pickford, Lottie Briscoe, Anita Stewart, Mary Fuller, Lillian Walker, Beverly Bayne. The big film companies will all be represented with some spectacular features. A number of them will have huge floats depicting feature productions. Pathe has planned a huge battleship float smothered with pretty Navy girls symbolic of "Neal of the Navy." The Universal is planning a great surprise which they refuse to divulge.

After the parade commence the various athletic and crazy contests. The hundred yard dash has attracted Guy Coombs, Charles A. Cook, Wally Cook, D. Lewis, J. R. Kennedy, Bob Collins and Jack Hopkins. The obstacle race will test the grit and dexterity of Hugh Mack, Wally Van, A. Shannon, J. Moran, G. Dubois, E. Waters, T. Myers, Thomas R. Mills, Jack Hopkins, and Vinton Ross. And of all things never before seen—a three-legged race with ladies entered. This will be a novelty. In this race will be Leah Baird and Kate Price, Elsie MacLeod and Dolly Caine, Aleck Neil Jr., and C. Frank, H. Connalan and V. Blair. But funnier still will be the Greased Pig Chase and that said pig may be appropriately arrayed he will be smeared with white grease paint. The winner of course gets the pig and invites the judge to dinner. In this contest there are also several ladies entered. The merry pig chasers are Kate Price, Margaret Johnson, Marcelle Schlessing, Vinton Ross, J. James, H. Kief, J. Ward, T. Devens, Mrs. A. Shannon, J. Kepple, F. Brule.

Rifle and Watermelon Contests

In the rifle shooting contest Edith Storey, Helen Constance and Maurice Costello will strive for honors.

Arthur Ashley, Director Marston, Tony Moreno, Walter Healey, Reggie Lyons, Willie Blackton, Wally Van will test the speed merits of their automobiles.

Imagine four charming young ladies diving ravenously at the juicy interior of a watermelon to see which one can eat a whole one first. May Riccardo, Annette Agnelly, A. Chevalier and Louise Barry will do just that. Fenders will be provided that the public may not be splashed. In the men's Watermelon Eating Contest are John Johnson, M. Richmond, R. Grossett, A. Kubiak, T. Meiles, A. J. McGowan.

D. Carey, D. Holland, J. Landon, F. Feist, J. Barbee will undertake to climb the greased pole.

The Gentlemen Horseback Race has a very classy and Chevy Chase echo, but the truth is, that the mounts for these gentlemen riders will be furnished. They will not be allowed to ride their own horses. The man who publishes the dictionary of cuss words will be on hand to get the new stuff. King Baggot, Harry Spingler, Guy Coombs, C. Fisher, Eddie Dugan, T. O'Connor, Tom Hagan, J. Williams, J. Beede, J. P. Ryan, A. G. Goode, Hector Dion have entered this race.

The Goddess Contest

This is purely and simply a comedy contest to be participated in by young men who will endeavor to imitate the mysterious charms of Miss Anita Stewart in her appearance as the Goddess. The imitators must combine dignity with comedy with rare ability in order to win the prize.

Earle Williams and Anita Stewart, who are at present appearing in the serial picture "The Goddess," will act as judges. Maurice Costello and Ralph Ince will award a prize to the best imitator of the Goddess.

Anna Q. Nilsson, Rose Tapley, Edith Storey, Lottie Briscoe, Margaret Riccardo, Grace Wick, Violet Merserau, Ruth Miller, Augusta Bliss have entered the Ladies Horseback Race. Special concessions will be given to bookmakers for this race only.

A Flivver is a miscellaneous collection of automobile parts which have had domestic troubles. They were joined together some years ago into a compact whole and every now and then for some unknown reason will move without the application of any exterior force. Flivvers include anything which will go or are supposed to go on their own power from a 1914 Ford to the earlier vintages of one lung varieties. This race is limited to eight star players and so far Earle Williams, Maurice Costello, King Baggot, William Garwood, Robert Edeson and Herbert Prior have entered. There will also be a Ford Flivver Race for ladies.

Mitchell Lewis is burnishing his biceps for the Shot Put while King Baggot is training for the Running Broad Jump.

A bunch of young men, admirers of Charlie Chaplin will endeavor to imitate the well-known comedian. To the best imitator will be given a prize.

A Film-Making Tournament

In the Film Making Contest five or six different comedy scenarios will be transformed into pictures, the scenarios to be furnished by writers in competition. From all scenarios received the best six will be selected and prizes awarded the winners.

Silver cups for the different events have been donated by Commodore Blackton, Maurice Costello, Joe Brandt, Jule Bernstein, Al Kaufman, Costello Theatre, Lee Ochs, Sam Trigger, J. J. Unger, A. Carlos, Lou Rodgers, F. Ince, L. Selznick and others.

Harry Reichenbach Joins Equitable Pictures After Successful Career with Metro

HARRY L. REICHENBACH, general press representative and advertising manager of the Metro Pictures Corporation since the inception of that corporation, leaves that concern August 16 to assume a similar position with the newly formed Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, with offices at 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York.

The reason for the change, according to Harry Reichenbach, is a large increase in salary which inducement, according to Harry, is the only one that could attract him from his happy surroundings in Metro Square.

In leaving the Metro Company, Mr. Reichenbach paid a warm tribute to President Rowland and Mr. Engel in saying that during his sixteen years in the theatrical and picture business he has never enjoyed seven months of happiness and contentment as has been his during his stay at the press desk in the Heidelberg Tower.

Mr. Reichenbach, in company with Felix Feist, Art. Spiegel, Lewis Selznick and other executives of the Equitable, left on Friday for Chicago to attend a meeting of the World Film exchange and branch managers, at which gathering new ideas will be discussed by the heads of the concern.

FAD FILM AT WORK ON FIRST COMEDY, FOR WORLD

The Fad Film Producers, with offices at 1431 Broadway, New York City, started its first comedy production this week under the direction of J. A. Fitzgerald, the producer of the "Peaceful Rafferty" series for the World Film Corporation, who has resigned from the All Celtic Film Company to assume the sole charge of the Fad Company's producing department.

Frank P. Donovan, the "D" of Fad, is too well known to need any extended mention here. Suffice it to say that he was moving picture editor of the "New York Star," "Photoplayers' Weekly" and the press and advertising manager of the All Celtic, and has been in the business since 1910. He is general manager of the company.

W. P. Adams is the head of the scenario department, and one of the company heads. He was a film manufacturer in Europe, besides being a well-known author and magazine writer. He is "A" of Fad.

This company will make pictures for outside concerns, and finance scripts that are of exceptional nature.

WITH MORALS 99 44-100 PER CENT PURE, LIKE IVORY SOAP, LECTURER SLURS PLAYERS

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, August 9.

Members of the Los Angeles film colony were somewhat perturbed last week when a local man in an address at the World's Purity Congress at San Francisco, characterized the screen as the gravest peril of the girl of today; his statement being, "It is almost impossible to be in the movies and keep virtuous. Every moving picture actress, I believe, loses her virtue when she enters the field."

Investigation of the man in question brings out the fact that he has been seeking notoriety more or less, posing as a great reformer. He is said to have hailed from Long Beach, and was very active in a recent wet and dry campaign. The speaker now has the distinction of being the executive efficiency secretary of the Morals Efficiency Committee of Los Angeles, the chemically pure, which brings out the question, why should the "chemically pure" need such an efficiency man?

"JERRY'S BUSY DAY" IS SECOND CUB COMEDY

David Horsley's second one-reel comedy release on the Mutual program under the brand name of Cub Comedy is called "Jerry's Busy Day." It features George Ovey and is scheduled for release Thursday, August 26.

The title "Jerry's Busy Day" is wholly applicable to Jerry's experience as recounted in this picture. His pranks are of a variety too numerous to mention and lead him into a continuous round of trouble, which, as portrayed by Ovey, makes for an unlimited amount of good comedy.

The story is of Jerry's plan of revenge upon a father who objects to Jerry's attention to his daughter. The plan is broad-sweeping and not only is Jerry's object caught in it, but a number of other characters besides.

"Jerry" is played by George Ovey, the Mutual's new comedian. Others in the cast are Louis Fitzroy, Goldie Colwell, Gordon MacGregor, and Janet Sully. Milton Fahrney directed.

EVERYTHING ON WHEELS FOR FIELDING'S COMPANY

Romaine Fielding's Arizona company equipped with a portable studio, dressing rooms and scenery, also numbers among its novelties, five immense touring cars and five motorcycles. Three of the touring cars are for the transportation of the company.

One has been converted into a huge truck for tents, and camping outfit, and cooking utensils. The fifth is the lighting plant whereby enough electricity is generated to light up a small town. With this portable lighting plant it is possible to take scenes anywhere at night, besides interiors of all descriptions including cellars, caves and subterranean passages.

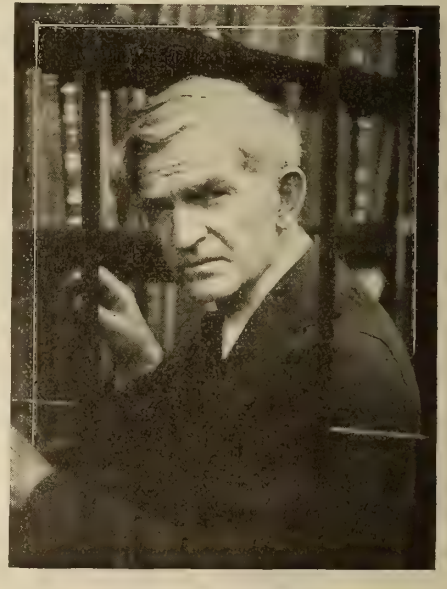
The five motorcycles are used for emergency cases and the taking of scenes in the mountains or in places impassable to automobiles. When these are used the cameras and apparatus are strapped on the back of the motorcycles, so that all in all this is perhaps the most novel moving picture outfit in the world today.

METZGER MAKES REPORT ON BUSINESS IN NORTHWEST

G. A. Metzger, general manager of the Universal Film Company, with head offices in Portland and branch exchanges in Seattle, Spokane and other Northwestern towns, has just returned from a trip to Seattle where he spent several days last week.

Mr. Metzger reports normal business throughout the territory and exceptionally good business in Seattle.

FRANK BACON, COHAN ACTOR, A METRO PLAYER



Frank Bacon, one of the best known and most versatile actors on the American stage, became a member of the Quality Pictures Corporation when he began work in "The Silent Voice" in the support of the popular screen personality Francis X. Bushman.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN, MARGUERITE SNOW AND FRANK BACON IN "THE SILENT VOICE" (Metro; Quality Pictures)

Mr. Bacon was last seen on Broadway in George M. Cohan's "The Miracle Man" in which he played the part of the innkeeper.

In addition to Mr. Bacon supporting Mr. Bushman, the Quality Pictures Corporation boasts of many principals and among them is Katherine Henry, last seen in New York in Lew Field's production of "The Midnight Sun."

MYRTLE STEDMAN APPEARS AT "WILD OLIVE" PREMIERE

The Los Angeles premiere of Oliver Morosco's photoplay, "The Wild Olive," was made a special event by the management of the Alhambra theatre on Hill street, where the stirring American-Argentine romance was exhibited. The feature which was responsible for the packed house was the announcement that Myrtle Stedman herself, co-star in "The Wild Olive" with Forrest Stanley, would give a selected program of songs.

RICHIE LING PLAYS BROKER-CLUBMAN IN "WOMAN NEXT DOOR"

Richie Ling, who essays the important role of Benjamin Whittier in George Kleine's film production of Owen Davis' "The Woman Next Door," is one of the most recent acquisitions of the screen at the expense of the speaking stage.

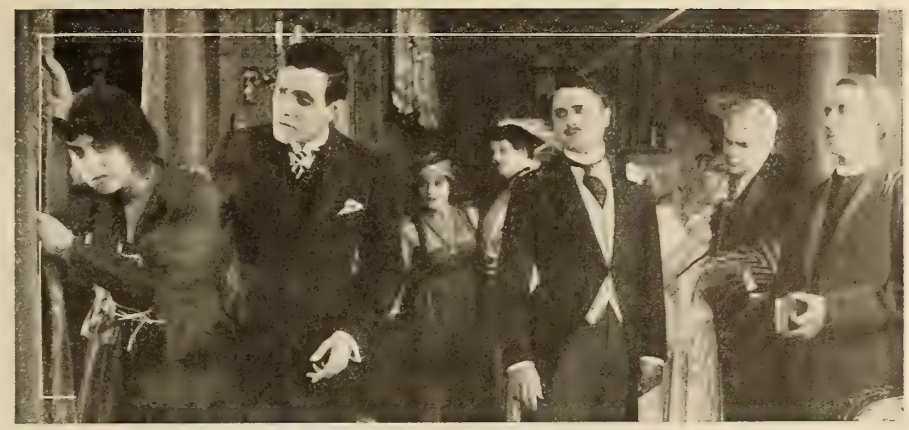
Although he might boast of a long and successful career in both the operatic and straight dramatic branches of "legitimate" endeavor, Mr. Ling's chief delight at present is to point to the fact that in his first appearance in the silent drama he has given one of the most finished portrayals of the middle-aged broker-clubman ever seen in moving pictures.

To the support of Miss Fenwick in "The Woman Next Door," Mr. Ling brought many years of stage experience and an unusual amount of native dramatic ability. Lovers of light opera will remember him as prominent in the support of such famous prima donnas as Lillian Russell, Alice Neilsen, Marie Tempest and Fritzi Scheff, with all of whom he sang roles that called for genuine talent as an actor as well as an unusually fine singing voice.

Mr. Ling has also made his mark in the straight drama, in such productions as "The White Sister," with Viola Allen; Charles Frohman's "Decorating Clementine," David Belasco's "Temperamental Journey," and "The Butterfly on the Wheel."

"The Woman Next Door" will be released September 1 through the Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service.

NEXT V-L-S-E SELIG RELEASE IS "HOUSE OF SEVEN CANDLES"



V-L-S-E announces as the next release the six part Selig Red Seal Feature, "The House of a Thousand Candles," with Grace Darmond and Harry Mestayer in the leads.

There are many points of interest in this feature that place it on a plane superior to the great majority of feature picture dramas. One of the most gorgeous sets ever erected in a film studio is a library scene in this Big Four feature.

The completion of this set occupied a force of skilled artists and mechanics for several days; it is a marvel of beauty, and as a background to the big climax in the play is exceptionally impressive.

The film is a picturization of the novel by Meredith Nicholson, and the entire cast is made up of stars.

In addition to Miss Darmond and Mr. Mestayer, the cast includes John Charles, Edgar Nelson, Mary Robson, Forrest Robinson, George Backus and Effingham Pinto, all favorites of the screen and stars of the speaking stage.

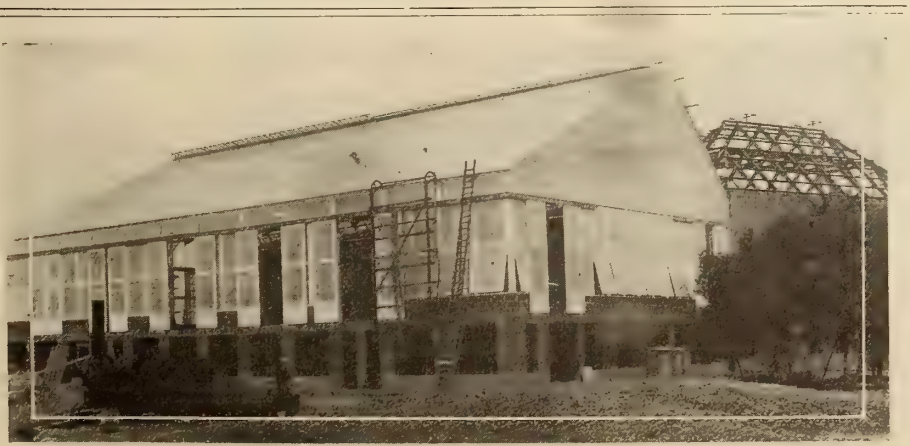
LENORE ULRICH IN "CAPITAL PUNISHMENT" (Knickerbocker—August 18)

MARGARET ANGLIN'S VITAGRAPH MEDIUM IS "GREEN STOCKINGS," MASON COMEDY

The Vitagraph Company has selected the cast that will present A. E. W. Mason's comedy, "Green Stockings," in which Margaret Anglin starred for three seasons, every player chosen being a screen star of proved ability.

Dainty Lillian Walker as Celia Faraday heads a long cast that includes Louise Beaudet in the character of Aunt Ida, Arline Pretty as Phyllis and Lillian Burns as Madge. Stanley Dark, who was Miss Anglin's leading man during the three years of the comedy's run on the legitimate stage, will be seen in his original creation of Colonel Smith; Charles Brown, a clever Vitagraph comedian, will portray Tarver; John T. Kelly, Admiral Grice; Charles Wellesley, Colonel Rockingham, and Denton Vane, Raleigh.

Wilfrid North will direct the production of "Green Stockings," which will be a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature in five parts, to be released through the V-L-S-E.



ELSIE JANIS IN "'TWAS EVER THUS," HER FOURTH WITH BOSWORTH

Bosworth, Inc., announces as its first release during the fifth quarter of the Paramount Pictures Corporation commencing September 1, Elsie Janis in her fourth photoplay, "'Twas Ever Thus," a novel comedy written by the little star herself presenting a cycle of four romances in four different periods commencing with the time of the cave dwellers.

The success of the previous Janis releases, namely, "Caprices of Kitty" and "Betty in Search of a Thrill," has surprised even the producers and the manner in which this clever little artist has been received all over the country by motion picture patrons, particularly the ladies, has made her a big screen favorite. "Nearly a Lady" is the third Janis subject by Bosworth, Inc., and will be released August 19 on the Paramount program.

"'Twas Ever Thus" will present a romantic comedy that is away from the beaten path and sustains throughout the theory of reincarnation. On the wings of time are borne the two lovers, Elsie Janis and Owen Moore, first in the stone age when love is dominated by brute strength, then in the days of 1865, where gentleness and modesty held sway, up to the present century where love is modernized though as potent as the heart throbs of the past.

Several surprises are promised in the unfolding of the story on the screen and in the chief role the versatile comedienne is called upon to portray a series of characterizations in her own inimitable manner, which judging from her previous work before the motion picture camera, will result in another triumph for her as well as Bosworth, Inc.

Louis Rosenbluh, one of the oldest and most widely known exchange experts in the east, who was active in the forming of the Variety Films Corporation with offices in the Leavitt Building, Manhattan, has acquired the rights for the exclusive handling of the Standard Program for Greater New York.

In addition to Greater New York Mr. Rosenbluh has also obtained the Standard Program for New York State and will make Syracuse the headquarters for that territory.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" Is Epic of Patriotism

COMMODORE J. STUART BLACKTON

"THE LAST STAND"

"THE AMERICAN ARMY SURRENDERS"

MAJOR-GENERAL LEONARD WOOD

"THE Battle Cry of Peace" was given a private showing at the Vitagraph theatre, New York City, Friday, August 6. This picture was written by J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph Company, and produced under his personal supervision. The picture is destined to perform an inestimable service for the country by arousing the people to a proper realization of the true condition of the nation's defenses—or, rather, lack of defenses.

Commodore Blackton seeks in this picture to make every American realize whither we are drifting in the present current of indifference toward the inadequacy of our coast defenses, the deplorable condition of the navy, the lamentably small army and the criminal lack of arms and munitions of war now at our command.

The picture will bring home to every spectator in most vivid form the absolute helplessness of the country, and the merciless treatment the inhabitants might expect from an invading army bent on loot and conquest. All the horrors of war descending upon the resistless heads of an unprepared people are shown in a swift panorama of stern realism.

Blackton Inspired By a High Purpose

The subject is a warning, a prophecy of unmitigated calamity for a generation refusing to note the handwriting on the wall.

The picture breathes an air of patriotic feeling. The audience could feel something which indicated a whole-hearted purpose on the part of the man responsible for the existence of the picture. No one had to be told that Commodore Blackton was inspired by a high purpose—the launching of effective propaganda in a campaign affecting the future in some manner, of everybody in this country.

Of course, it must be granted that the manufacture of a picture is based on the expectation of its yielding a profit to the owner. But the nature of the subject selected for this Vitagraph film, its treatment, the lofty aim unquestionably indicated in the picture itself, the history of its origin and the interest, generally known, of Commodore Blackton in the vital matter of national defense, makes one believe that mere money making was a secondary consideration in the issuance of "The Battle Cry of Peace."

Only sheer inspiration from a man moved by a big overpowering idea is responsible for the magnitude of conception exhibited in this picture.

In a technical sense it has numerous faults, but the spectator is breathlessly interested and fails to notice the defects. It is like a huge painting filled with minute incidents and character groupings—all swept along, however, in the epic surge of the ensemble, gripping the imagination with unforgettable power.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" will prove one of the big pictures of the year. Its subject alone would be enough to make it popular even if it had lacked the proper picturization given it by the Vitagraph Company. No one can see it and go out of the theatre without being deeply moved by what he saw on the screen.

Interest Sustained By Plot

The picture contains a well defined story. "The Battle Cry of Peace" in its story part, is briefly as follows:

The young people of two well-to-do New York families are engaged to be married. The father of the girl is a peace-at-any-price man, who hates the idea of building up the army and navy as much as he hates to take physical exercise.

He is a member of peace societies and is therefore intolerant of his daughter's fiance, an advocate of preparedness against war.

Finally the day set for invasion by the European power eager to attack the United States brings a hostile fleet suddenly to our unprotected shores.

Shells crash their way through New York's huge buildings. One explodes in the very meeting rooms of the peace advocates. The people in the streets flee to the suburbs for shelter, but find that the long range guns and the aeroplane bombs seek them out.

The invading forces are soon landed, and take possession of the city. The peace advocate, falsely accused by a spy, is dragged from his abode and shot as a sniper. The young man engaged to his daughter resists an attack on the girl and is bayoneted in cold blood before her eyes. As a climax to the Dantesque horror the mother shoots her two daughters to prevent them from becoming victims of the invaders.

Aftermath Relieves Gloom and Horror of Climax

The film does not end with this terrible climax, but goes on to show a brighter picture of America, as a reminder of what we now have and ought to take pains to cherish.

The picture is founded on the facts contained in Hudson Maxim's "Defenseless America," which relates with appalling truth the utter helplessness of the country for resistance of aggression from abroad at this time.

Charles Richman plays the leading masculine role with energy and feeling, and Norma Talmadge in the chief feminine part exhibits histrionic ability of a high order.

The photography is remarkable for a number of beautiful dissolves and fade-ins. Captain Jack Crawford, the poet scout, and Hudson Maxim appear in the picture with several other notables.

SCENES IN VITAGRAPH'S "WHEELS OF JUSTICE" AND SELIG'S "HOUSE OF 1000 CANDLES," LATEST V-L-S-E FEATURES

THE REVELERS THE WHEEL OF JUSTICE TURNS THE CONVICTS ESCAPE A GAME OF HEARTS

"THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES"

(V-L-S-E-Selig—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

MEREDITH NICHOLSON'S famous old story has been given an attractive and dramatic setting by the Selig studios. The climax is built up in masterly fashion, and the eerie atmosphere of the Glenarm manor house is well preserved. Flawless photography adds greatly to the charm of the production, the exteriors, especially being attractive.

The story is well known. It revolves around the inheritance of the Glenarm estate, of the reported death of Squire Glenarm, in Italy, and the leaving of the estate to his grandson, Jack, provided the latter lives on it one year, with only one companion, and of the search for $1,000,000 in missing securities. The Squire, who was only playing a joke on his grandson, reappears, in time to catch his lawyer stealing the securities, which he has located.

No trouble has been spared in building up the interiors of the rich manor house, and the secret safes, drawers and panels, are consistently placed and handled.

The cast is generally capable. It includes Harry Mestayer, Grace Darmond, John Charles, George Backus, Forrest Robinson, Edgar Nelson, Emma Glenwood, Gladys Samma, Mary Robson and Effingham Pinto. T. N. Heffron, the director, is to be congratulated on achieving an artistic triumph.

LAMBART TAKES SCENES AT LAKEWOOD FOR "YOUTH"

CAPTAIN HARRY LAMBART took a company of Vitagraph players to Lakewood, New Jersey, recently, where he filmed a number of exterior scenes of an old English mansion, with extensive gardens.

These scenes will be seen in "Youth," a three-part Broadway Star Feature, in which Mlle. Valkyrien, Antonio Moreno, Donald Hall and Frankie Mann will be seen.

"THE SECRET ORCHARD"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

INASMUCH as the public is the great final critic in such matters, this new Lasky feature must be pronounced excellent. Of what avail to quarrel with the Castles' story, or with little inconsistencies of production when a film can draw the crowds which this one brought to the Strand theatre every evening of its week's run?

To say that they were turned away is merely figurative—hundreds could not get near the box office. We take that to mean success.

The settings and photography are what one expects in a Lasky film, and this makes the little inconsistencies above referred to all the more glaring and surprising. In the duel, the Duke of Cluny is shot squarely through the heart, yet, with assistance, he walks home, and lives long enough to ask forgiveness of his wife. Blanche Sweet is none too convincing as Diane, but perhaps mention of these things is hypercritical, as the picture, in as thorough a test as a picture can have, holds its spectators tightly throughout its run.

Both interiors and exteriors are charming. There is something especially alluring in the garden scenes, and the posing and "stage business" are admirable. William C. de Mille's scenario presents the story clearly and logically, and there is no moment where action or interest is allowed to drag or become sidetracked from the main theme.

Edward Mackay's work as the Duke of Cluny is finished.

"I CAN'T ACCEPT ANY HONEST MAN'S LOVE!"

Especial praise is also the due of Cleo Ridgley, Carlyle Blackwell and Theodore Roberts. Marjorie Daw, Geraldine Farrar's young protege, appears as Nanette, and the cast is completed by Cynthia Williams, Lorola O'Connor and Sydney Deane.

Words are poor commendation in the face of such evident public approval as this film has received.

It is evident that unusual success awaits it in any city where it may be shown.

"SOLD"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

WHEN one has reached the top of his profession he compels admiration which takes no account of the nature of the profession. A man, forced by circumstances to become a window-washer can extract great satisfaction out of the knowledge that he is the best window-washer in the world; and the same feeling must have come to Marcus Aurelius with the knowledge that he was the best man who ever wore Rome's purple.

Such satisfaction must also belong to Pauline Frederick. In "Sold" she makes her second appearance before the camera, and, although tastes are notoriously beyond dispute, there are few critics who will deny her a place on the heights. Her art is absolute, and a revelation in how much a really big artist of the legitimate stage can bring to pantomime. If aspiring motion picture actresses seek a lesson in this it might be found in: "Study Pauline Frederick; note what she does not do."

"I POSED FOR HIM FOR YOUR SAKE!"

With a story of little originality, and surroundings not at all out of the ordinary, "Sold" is an intense picture drama. Part of this is due to the superb direction, and part to the supporting company, but these are mere settings for Miss Frederick's work. This is said in no disparagement of Thomas Holding, Julian L'Estrange and Russell Bassett, all of whom have imbibed in the spirit in which the play was produced.

The play was originally written in Russian by George Erastov. As presented in this film, it is located in New York, with New York street scenes, and a thoroughly American atmosphere. The theme is the devotion of a young wife for her artist husband, which leads her to a supreme sacrifice to save him from ruin. Her husband finds her posing in the studio of a successful rival, and misjudges her, and an understanding is reached only when a bullet fired by the husband at the other man, hits his wife.

The dramatic situations are introduced and distributed with a masterly hand, and the suspended interest at some moments holds the audience breathless. There are, however, one or two little slips which attract the supercritic. For example, the bullet which hits Miss Frederick as she hides behind the tapestries, is fired some twenty-two degrees to starboard, and how in the world it ever got around to the curtains is a mystery. We must ask Christy Mathewson how it is done. The incident occurs at such a stirring moment, however, that it will scarcely be noticed.

In Thomas Holding and Julian L'Estrange, Miss Frederick has associates with whom she worked in her first screen play, "The Eternal City," which has greatly aided the work of the director. A perfectly rounded out production is the result.

DREW PICTURE EVERY FRIDAY IS VITAGRAPH PLAN

COMMENCING in October, the Vitagraph Company will release a Sidney Drew picture every Friday, inaugurating what will be known as a "Sidney Drew Day."

Mr. Drew will direct all the pictures in which he appears, playing opposite his wife.

"THE MASTER HAND"

(Premo-World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

IT is getting to be quite the thing of late to have the directors of the up-to-the-minute pictures watch for the smallest inaccuracies in detail, pay special attention to the interior settings, and exercise great care in the choosing of locations for the exteriors. This is so manifestly evident lately that, especially in the case of World Film releases, it is the usual instead of the unusual.

In addition to having all the above mentioned, "The Master Hand" is fortunate in exploiting the popular Nat Goodwin in the title-role. In the character of the millionaire Bigelow his facial expressions are nothing short of marvelous, and through the manipulations of an expert cameraman none of these are lost. Right here it might be said that seldom has better photography been embraced in a film than has been presented here.

The story of "The Master Hand" is hard to class. True, it is a drama bordering on the melodrama at that, and yet it has so many twists that might bring it in the category of society drama that the proper classification might be society-melodrama. The plot is intensely interesting, there is none of the so-called padding, the story runs along smoothly and holds one's attention to the finale.

There is a good supporting cast, but little Katherine Lee deserves special mention for her natural representation of "Dot," Bigelow's adopted daughter. It is refreshing to witness a child actress whose every motion is not studied but who acts the part in all grace, and most important of all, naturally.

James Rallston (T. Babcock) in order to get control of his invalid wife's fortune, has her (Julia Stewart) confined in an asylum, conducted by a Dr. Garside (A. Calvert). Fifteen years later she is rescued by Bigelow (Nat Goodwin) and the fortune saved for Jean, her daughter (Florence Malone) who marries a protege of Bigelow, an architect, Ed. Pembroke (C. Fleming).

THE MASTER HAND AND HIS ADOPTED DAUGHTER

VICTORIA FORDE IS NOW WITH SELIG AT NEW MEXICO STUDIOS

One of the most recent additions to the Selig Polyscope Company's forces is Victoria Forde, the clever little leading lady who has a legion of admirers wherever motion pictures are shown. She has joined the Tom Mix company of players, who are at present working in Las Vegas, N. Mex., making western pictures of the type for which the Selig cowboy producer-actor is famous.

Miss Forde is known to her friends as "Vicky," and is very popular with the players on the Pacific Coast, where she has worked for the past three years. She is ideally suited to play opposite Tom Mix, as she is a daring horsewoman and no "stunt" is too difficult for her to undertake.

She enjoys the open air, and swimming, rowing and kindred sports are her hobbies. Las Vegas has taken a great liking to this little star and her evenings are taken up with social engagements. She says that, while she misses California she is almost convinced that the New Mexico city is an ideal place to live.

A TRIO OF TYPICAL SCENES FROM "JEWEL," THE LATEST UNIVERSAL FIVE REEL FEATURE

THE WINNING OF GRANDPA JEWEL AT HER NEW HOME JEWEL FOLLOWS INSTRUCTIONS

"JEWEL"

(Broadway-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

TO a crabbed and steely-hearted millionaire, who has shut all human affection from his heart and his magnificent home, the touch of love comes just as the shades are gathering. It is a touch of nature which makes for real art. The picture is dainty and charming throughout its five reels, and without exception the acting is excellent, and thoroughly in keeping with the magnificent settings and brilliant photography which have brought the story to life.

The scenario was made by Lois Weber from Clara Louise Burnham's novel. Mrs. Burnham's slight tendency to preach has been allowed to remain, but there is nothing in the piece which jars. The average person will not be bored on seeing the picture for the second, or even third time. The direction is deserving of all praise; it emphasizes just what one may long have suspected—that there are many orders of directors.

Mr. Evringham has cast off his two sons. One dies, leaving a designing widow, and grown daughter, who foist themselves upon him, and camp in his mansion, ignoring the coldness of their welcome. The other son steadies himself, and gets a good position, but one which suddenly calls him and his wife to Europe. Evringham is induced to allow their little daughter, Jewel, to stay with him until their return.

Ella Hall, as a not particularly graceful Jewel, arrives, filled with the golden rule ideas inculcated by her mother, and gradually melts all hearts in the House of Hate and Bitterness, which she nicknames "Castle Discord." The sight of the stiff and crabbed millionaire trotting around the yard beside Jewel's pony moves the servants to awe and wonder, but the little child continues to lead them, until even the friction between Ervingham and his shallow and worldly daughter-in-law wears away, and as Jewel expresses it at the dinner table: "Grandpa, aren't we all happy?"

The icy air of the millionaire's home is excellently portrayed, and the breakfast and dinner scenes are delightful. The story is unfolded with great attention to logic, with the apparent realization that maybe the picture will be seen by someone who has a glimmering of sense. The settings are elaborate and show expert care.

Exhibitors who show "Jewel" will do well to put a little extra thought on the music plot. This is merely a suggestion, which doubtless their exchanges can elaborate.

"NEARLY A LADY"

(Bosworth-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

ELSIE JANIS, of the films, bids fair to repeat the success of Elsie Janis of musical comedy. In this delightful comedy she has found an excellent vehicle, and she makes the most of the many opportunities given her to exhibit her talents. She has, furthermore, excellent support in Owen Moore, Frank Elliott, Myrtle Stedman, Harry Ham and Roberta Hickman, and her directors have apparently spared no effort in selecting locations and scenes of striking beauty as a setting. The photography will be a subject of general admiration; it is superb in every scene.

Miss Janis portrays a girl of the cowboy regions—this time it is Montana. Her sweetheart goes east to take a position, and in his absence she meets Lord Cecil Grosvenor, who is out buying land. They are attracted to each other, and their engagement is announced. Frederica then comes east with Lord Cecil to visit the latter's sister, Mrs. Brooks, in New York.

While a guest at the Brooks home, Frederica discovers that Lord Cecil has arranged to meet an old flame of the chorus, and escort her to the French Ball. Frederica dresses in male attire, and hides herself at the stage entrance, "getting the goods" on his lordship. She gets into trouble over this, for a moment, for after she returns, her prospective sister-in-law peeks through the keyhole and sees a "man" in her room.

FREDDIE MEETS LORD GROSVENOR

Frederica uses the knowledge gained at the stage entrance to throw over Lord Cecil, and marry her Western sweetheart, who is now prosperous in his New York position. Lord Cecil audibly admits that although Frederica did not become Lady Grosvenor, she was a "lady at heart."

"QUO VADIS?" IS RANKED HIGH BY CHAUTAUQUA IN GEORGIA

George Kleine's "Quo Vadis?" first of the big features and even today one of the most widely playing attraction on the screen, was signally honored by the Piedmont College Chautauqua, Demorest, Ga., last week.

"Quo Vadis?" was placed in competition with the best feature products of every exchange in Atlanta and proved the unanimous choice of the Chautauqua committee.

"THE LITTLE HERO"

(Cub Comedy-Mutual—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS, the first of the new Horsley comedies on the Mutual program, sets its own standard of humor. It is a fast, furious and really laughable standard, and the film is cleverly produced. George Ovey, who is featured, is a delightful clown with individuality throughout his work.

Resort to slapstick and knockabout methods is necessary in comedy such as this. Gentle little touches, such as the knocking of a policeman from a theatre stage through the bass-drum in the orchestra, help to keep things interesting, and result in a complicated situation.

Jerry is rescued from the police by a kind philanthropist, who takes him home, and there he is seized upon by the daughter of the house, who is organizing an amateur dramatic performance. Jerry is just the type she wants—or thought she wanted. Jerry's stage fright creates an uproar, which a policeman is called to quell.

Jerry's up-bringing has made him suspicious of all policemen, and he cannot resist the opportunity to lay violent hands on this one. The ensuing excitement breaks up the show.

Jerry's support is excellent, and the settings and "props" are original, and aid greatly in the fun-making.

Jefferson Osborne, Louis Fitzroy, Janet Sully and Goldie Colwell are also in the cast.

"THE WAY BACK"

(Edison—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

ASIDE from the fact that the interest is sufficient to give this picture a value at the box-office, there is little to be said in its favor. It purports to tell of life in that gilded underworld so well known in everything except actual life. The story is not especially new, and the sentiment of a mawkish variety, giving the impression that neither author nor producer knew just where they were at.

The company, headed by Miriam Nesbit, is excellent, and the individual work saves the film from ruin.

Mary Wilson, a wealthy young girl, is robbed of her fortune by the trustee so cleverly that she has no redress. She is compelled to sell her home and furnishings, and finding herself in desperate straits, finally becomes a decoy for a gambling house. From this she drifts into the profession of snaring rich young men, and absorbing their wealth.

In this way she meets the young son of the man who has robbed her, and through her he is induced to embezzle $30,000 from his firm. To show that she sought only revenge in this case, she makes good the $30,000, on agreement that the young man will not be prosecuted. After doing this, the chief criminal who opened the life of crime to her, tells her he wants to travel the straight road, and asks her to lead him.

She does it, with the statement that the only way is "the way back," and the pair disappear down a beautiful tree-lined avenue.

Miriam Nesbitt is as charming as ever, and her work is of a high class in every situation where she has a chance to do anything. Her support is capable, the cast including Frank McGlynn, Mrs. Wallace Erskine, Robert Walker, Mabel Dwight, Robert Bromer, Jessie Stevens, George A. Wright and Marjorie Ellison. Mary Miner is credited with the authorship of "The Way Back."

"THE LEGACY OF FOLLY"

(Kalem—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

MRS. OWEN BRONSON has provided an excellent starring vehicle for Lois Meredith in this "Broadway Favorites" production. Lois Meredith plays Constance, a convent girl, daughter of Corinne, a notorious woman of the town who wanted to raise her daughter to be a lady.

The first five hundred feet of the picture show the mother's life and friends, and her sudden death through heart failure at a gay party.

Constance, leaving the convent, becomes the stenographer of Scott, a novelist and former friend of the mother's. Scott makes love to Constance, and when she refuses him tells her of her mother's character and taunts the girl. Constance flees back to the protecting arms of the convent. Then Scott realizes what a cad he has been, and the end of the picture leaves him wondering if he can straighten out his way of living and get Constance to forgive him.

"The Legacy of Folly" provides an admirable part for Miss Meredith's type. One of the best things in it is Gertrude Barnes' interpretation of the mother's part. Miss Barnes should be called on for more important parts. She screens well, is a handsome type and a good actress. Tom Moore directed and plays Scott in his usual competent manner.

Clara Blandick and Helen Daly are Scott's aunt and the mother superior, respectively.

"THE SECOND SHOT"

(Lubin—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

THIS plot is full of excitement and suspense. There are only five actors in the cast. The people are: Ormi Hawley, Kempton Greene, Earl Metcalfe, Herbert Fortres, Arthur Matthews. The producer is George Terwilliger.

John Antony insults Alice Jason. Phil Dunbar knocks him down. Phil loves Alice and Alice loves Phil. John is murdered and Alice discovers the body. Alice, suspecting Phil, takes the crime on herself.

THE WEEK-END PARTY AT ALICE JASON'S

A smart detective proves this impossible. The "second shot" accidentally stops the clock. This is the proof of the girl's innocence. Phil is arrested for the crime, but his own sister is the murderer. She had been betrayed by John. When he refused marriage she killed him.

The sister is forgiven and dies. Phil and Alice supposedly live happy ever afterwards.

"MRS. PLUM'S PUDDING"

(Broadway Universal Feature—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS picture, containing some exceedingly funny passages and others of less boisterous humor, is in toto a very enjoyable offering. Marie Tempest makes her debut as a motion picture actress in the role of Mrs. Plum, a part containing less humor than any of the others. Miss Tempest's acting is expressive and telling in every instance, and her support, particularly in the case of W. Graham Browne, who appears as the lord, is of a like quality.

The picture is from an original script by James Dayton and Eddie Lyons, principal comedian of the Nestor company, while Al Christie produced it. While the story is very simple, it may well be relied upon to carry the interest over all its length.

The story deals with a widow who, with her son, has become immensely rich through the discovery of oil wells on her property while staying in the city. The widow is courted by a penniless lord, mainly for her money. The son falls madly in love with the daughter of a society lady who is also without funds. Swindlers plan to rob the widow of her fortune by making off with the deeds to the wells. The papers are stolen just before the wedding ceremony, and consequently the lord suggests that they wait until the papers are recovered.

Greatly embittered by his act, Mrs. Plum plans to return home where the people are real, but the lord, discovering that he loves Mrs. Plum more than her pudding, returns and begs forgiveness. The son in the meantime has secretly married. And then it develops that the papers were never stolen. Mrs. Plum was merely testing the lord's love.

Eddie Lyons appears as the son, while Violet MacMillan is the girl he loves. Harry Rattenberry and Gus Alexander furnish the greater number of laughs as the two friends back home. Jean

EVERYTHING READY FOR THE WEDDING

Hathaway appears to good advantage as the society lady, while Lee Moran gets in a bit of his funny work as a detective.

Photographically the picture is good in all save a few instances, while the settings in the homes of the rich do justice to their owners. All in all "Mrs. Plum's Pudding" should register a success, particularly with those familiar with the Nestor comedians, all of whom do creditable work in this.

"THE MONOPOLIST"

(Pathé—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS is a drama of a love which found a way. It is interestingly told, with several moments of real thrill, and the dramatic qualities are well preserved. The hero is the secretary to a large ship-owner, and falls in love with his employer's daughter. The latter scorns him, telling him to keep his place, and the young man resigns his position.

Working for himself, the former secretary develops an invention which is designed to increase the speed of all merchant vessels. He makes a fortune out of this, and becomes a power in the shipping world. His former employer gets into serious financial straits, and the new ship-owner offers to help him out if Hopkins will command that his daughter wed the former secretary. This Hopkins does, and the girl consents, telling her husband that she has done so only to save her father, and there is no love between the couple.

The young inventor is about to effect a great monopoly of ship interests. Just as the contracts are to be signed he is spirited away on his own yacht. He secures the upper hand, however, and taking charge of the vessel himself, makes port in time to put through the deal. His wife gradually loses her antipathy to him, and her love awakened she pawns her jewels to tide him over a financial crisis. The picture ends with the two on a belated honeymoon. The acting is good, and there are several striking scenes.

LOVE FINDS A WAY

"THE GAME OF THREE"

(Sterling Camera—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

AS a chapter in the eternal battle between lawbreakers and the New York police, this feature should have a strong box-office appeal. It is filled with lively scenes in New York streets, and the photography is brilliant. There is plenty of rapid action, and the story is not allowed to drag. Artistically it is neither more nor less than others of its type.

IN A DILEMMA

The characters are of the cut and dried—or perhaps one should say, of the approved type, and the "business" in most cases, would have been recognized as an old friend long before Commissioner Dougherty invented the camera.

There are several examples of attention to detail, however, which make it possible to forgive the director for carelessness in other places. For instance: The title says: "The jewels are at the foot of East Fifty-fourth street," and the following scene actually shows the foot of East Fifty-fourth street, with Blackwell's Island, the bridge and the river traffic in the background.

The interiors of police headquarters are also as correct as if the commissioner's office was the actual setting. Maybe it was. As for the rest, a servant is bound so securely as to lie helpless all through the evening, a few feet from a gay party, only to be released by his rescuers in two short seconds; and so on.

The son of a detective goes wrong, and is pressed into service by a pair of high-class criminals operating at receptions and dances. The thieves steal a diamond necklace, and pass it to the young man, who makes his getaway. He is wounded by a shot from his own father, and later quarrels with the criminals over the division of spoil, and takes refuge with a reformed thief and his bride. They are arrested, and when the real culprits are rounded up they attempt to shift the crime to the reformed criminal because of his record.

They are about to succeed when the detective's son staggers in and confesses. There is a thrilling chase of a motor boat by a police boat in the East River, and an arrest in the water after the arch-criminal has dived overboard, and also several striking night scenes which form the high spots in the picture.

The work of Barney Gilmore, and Detective Bryan, Roy Gahris as his wayward son, John Sharkey as the reformed one, and Violet Stuart as his wife is above the average. Other parts are taken by Lillian Niederaur, Grace Norman, E. F. Roseman, George Stone, Mabel Wright, Roy Appelgate and Richard Lysle.

"THE JILT"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

ATTRACTIVE seashore scenery and tastefully staged interiors laid principally in the homes of wealth abound in this production. As usual, perfect photography and excellent technique in the way of tinting and fade-ins enhance its artisticness.

Edward Coxen, Winifred Greenwood and George Field ably enact the principal parts, receiving good support from Lizzette Thorne, John Steppling and Lillian Knight.

The plot hinges upon the identity of the father of the society girl's illegitimate baby. This delicate theme is well handled and the denouement is witheld to the end of the picture when it is learned that not Boyd, who in the meantime is happily married to another girl, but Norman his former rival, is responsible for Marie Thompson's betrayal.

THE ENGAGEMENT IS BROKEN

Boyd has been the cause of the broken engagement between Marie and Norman. Norman is favored by her family, who disapprove her affair with Boyd. In spite of this, the latter continues to make secret visits to her home until she is sent to Europe, where a child is born.

Returning after a long absence she finds Boyd happily married and sets out to wreck his happiness by telling his wife that he not only jilted her, but is the father of her child. Boyd confronts Marie and Norman and forces them to admit that Norman is the real father and everything ends happily with the delayed marriage of Norman and Marie.

"IT WAS TO BE"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

THIS scenario by Shannon Fife is to my mind inaptly named. However, authors are doubtless at their wits' ends for new and attractive titles. The story is interesting enough, even if the plot does hinge on motives.

The extreme bashfulness of John Trevor, who lacks courage to propose to Anne Winton, his dearly beloved, brings all sorts of trouble on her, himself and her husband, the final member of this crooked triangle.

Query—would any conceivable twentieth century young man give up a girl because he couldn't find a way to propose?

WHO WAS THE MURDERER?

Anne marries Henry Randall, "who hath a way" with women. He cherishes ambitions for wealth at any cost.

She cherishes memories of John. Result, indifference, neglect and suspicion on both sides. Henry wants John as his lawyer in a questionable business transaction. Anne warns John against it. Henry furiously resents her interference. Complications result.

Henry is mortally wounded in his curio room. Circumstantial evidence involves both Anne and John. But Henry before his death becomes conscious long enough to tell the truth.

The butler had tried to rob the curio room and being caught, gave his master the death wound. John follows Anne to her old home. No longer bashful he proposes and they at last see happiness in sight. Joseph Kaufman produced the picture with his usual conscientious care.

Ethel Clayton is well cast as the unhappy wife. Jack Standing and Walter Hitchcock are good in their respective parts of sentimental sweetheart and horrid husband.

Bartley McCullum, William Turner, Tony Loftus and Charles Hyatt are the other characters.

O. E. GOEBEL, STANDARD PROGRAM PRODUCER, MOVES OFFICES TO NEW YORK

O. E. GOEBEL, of the Premier brand, releasing through Standard program, is moving his offices in Los Angeles to New York City.

The Premier studio is located in Santa Paula, California, and has, until recently, been producing two reel dramas for release on the United program. Several weeks ago Mr. Goebel was called east to take an active part in the organizing of the Combined Photoplay Producers, Inc., producing for the Standard program. He remained in New York until a regular outlet for his pictures was assured by the contract which makes the Standard Photoplay Distributors, Inc., the distributors of Standard Pictures.

Lillian Hamilton and Frederick Church, who have been co-starring in the Premier pictures, will be seen again on the screen, beginning August 30, when the Standard Program makes its initial appearance.

"THE CLAUSE IN THE CONSTITUTION"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

A RATTLING good political story in which a star reporter thwarts a crooked political boss and wins the girl he loves, is pictured in this three-reel Diamond Special. While the general theme is not a new one, the method the hero uses in outwitting the boss is decidedly original, and very well played up.

There is a canal bill, the passage of which will cut the profits of the railroad interests in half. Edward Clay, star reporter, gets wind of a deal whereby the governor is to receive $25,000 from John Duffey, political boss, if he refuses to sign the bill.

Clay also learns that on the day set for the passing of the bill, the governor will be attending the laying of the corner stone in a distant city. The railway map shows that on his return trip he will be out of the borders of the state. There is a clause in the constitution reading:

> "In case of the death of the governor or his absence from the State, the duties and powers of said office shall devolve upon the lieutenant governor."

Consequently if the train on which the governor is returning can be held up before it crosses the state line long enough to allow for the passage of the bill, it may be signed by the lieutenant governor, and thereby become a law.

CLAY EXPLAINS THE PLAN

Men sent out by Clay bind the tender of the railroad bridge which crosses the river that borders the state. The open bridge thus delays the train until the lieutenant governor has affixed his signature to the bill. Clay's paper obtains the exclusive story; he forces the political boss out of power and also forces him to consent to the marriage of Clay and the boss' ward.

All the scenes are well staged. Those showing the holding up of the train at the bridge, and also the one taken in the press room of the paper add realism to the picture. Each member of the cast acquits himself very creditably. Earl Foxe as Edward Clay, Stella Razeto as the girl with whom he is in love, George Hernandez as the political boss, are excellent in their characterization of the principal parts.

Nothing is lacking to make this a most popular offering.

"FROM OUT OF THE BIG SNOWS"

(Vitagraph—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS unconvincing story has received such a logical and elaborate setting that it makes a very interesting and attractive film. It requires only four principals to tell the tale of love and murder in the land of the long winter, but these are all capable people, and save the picture.

There is a dance hall, not of the best repute, which seems to be the chief feature of the hunters' and trappers' camp in the northern woods. There is a girl, not so much a loose character as a characterless character who frequents the place with her temporary proprietor, a half-breed named Jean.

Then Harris, the young adventurer, arrives. He is found injured in the woods by the camp doctor, who shelters and heals him, and then Harris goes forth to the dance hall, to flirt with Marie, and arouse the jealousy of Jean. Jean pretends to be the young man's friend, and takes him off on a hunting trip, much against the advice of the kindly doctor.

There, deep in the woods, Harris is overpowered, tied to a tree and left for the wolves, which actually arrive and snap around him. When Jean returns alone, the doctor goes out on a search for Harris, and seeing him from afar surrounded by wolves, he draws a short pistol and neatly picks off the wolf which is just leaping for its victim's throat. The other wolves flee in discouragement, and this, we believe, establishes a new record in medical marksmanship.

Harris is brought back to camp, and when he recovers is warned that Jean will now shoot him on sight. He resolves to beat the half-breed to it, and does. He then flees the camp, pursued by the Northwest Mounted Police, but reaches the border safely.

James Morrison is excellent as Harris, and Dorothy Kelly is an attractive Marie. George Cooper and Donald Hall are also to be commended.

"WHEN MY LADY SMILES"

(Essanay—Three Acts)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THIS drama throbbing with human interest is bound to touch the hearts of the most callous audience. Able acting by a good cast, together with careful directing, makes the play ring true from beginning to end. Ruth Stonehouse as the heroine deserves special praise for the manner in which she makes the most of her possibilities for emotional acting.

Thomas Commerford as the proud, but impoverished Southern gentleman appears to best advantage, and Richard Taber as the hero is most convincing. The rest of the cast, including Florence Oberle as the ambitious mother, and Ann Kirk as the designing society girl, come up to the high standard set by the others.

The photography is good throughout and the several vision effects are effectively brought in.

A proud, penniless, old Southern colonel's daughter, Janet, employed in a fashionable millinery shop, delivers a hat one evening and is escorted home by the rich customer's son, Edward Stone. Edward has refused to meet his mother's snobbish demands to marry Velda Browning.

Shortly after this the colonel dies and Janet left alone in the world elopes with Edward. Edward's mother cuts him off entirely, leaving him to shift for himself. Several years later he is taken very ill and his mother consents to care for him on condition that Janet relinquishes all claim to her baby and Edward.

During months of convalescence Edward pines for Janet and his strength does not seem to return. At length the mother having learned her lesson through witnessing the mental anguish of her son, finds Janet and reunites them.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"Mrs. Randolph's New Secretary." (Biograph. Mon., Aug. 16.)—Stolen jewels make trouble for the new secretary The girl, missing the gems, rushes to the street in time to see a well-dressed man disappearing around the corner. She follows him and locates his abode Mrs. Randolph returns from her visit to the country, and her son, who has been persecuting the secretary with his attentions, induces his mother to cause her arrest. It then develops that the "burglar" is Mrs. Randolph's nephew, who has merely taken the jewels for safe keeping. The cast consists of Clairette Clair, Herbert Barrington, Claire McDowell and Alan Hale.

"Death's Marathon," (Biograph. Fri., Aug. 20.)—A Griffith re-issue, showing Blanche Sweet in one of her earliest appearances. There is a thrilling climax, in which the young husband, ruined by gambling, and an embezzler of his firm's money, telephones his wife that he is about to commit suicide. His partner gets the call, and while the wife tries to hold her husband on the 'phone with her own conversation and that of their child, the partner starts in an automobile for the office. Death wins the race, however, and the young wife is freed. Others in the cast are Henry B. Walthall, Walter Miller, Lionel Barrymore, Kate Bruce and Robert Harron.

"His Last Wish" (Biograph. Thurs., Aug. 19.)—An old farmer adopts strategy to bring about the marriage of his daughter to the son of his old friend the Doctor. A spinster has been annoying the doctor's son, and on her account there is coolness on the part of the farmer's daughter.

The farmer takes to his bed, and gives out his dying wish that his daughter marry the young man. Not until the ceremony is performed does he commence to recover, and he is then on his feet in a twinkling. The excellent cast includes Gus Pixley, John Harper, Irma Dawkins, Jack Mulhall and Adila Comer.

"The Ace of Diamonds." (Biograph. Sat., Aug. 21.)—A pretty story built around a little girl whose father has gambled away his last dollar. He sends her to her aunt's home, and then selling his household effects, returns to gambling. A soiled ace of diamonds which he has picked up in the street, convinces him that he will have luck this time, but he is wrong.

In desperation he assaults the gambler, and seizing a roll of money, flees. Taking refuge in his old home, he finds his motherless daughter, who has returned, and is weeping amid the ruin of the home. The gambler, pursuing him, pities the girl, and takes her home with him. The penitent father gives himself up and offers to return the stolen money, but the gambler tells him to keep it and make a fresh start. The picture is produced under the direction of George E. Reehm.

"The Substituted Jewel." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., Aug 18.)—Major Dunbar's valuable scarf pin is stolen. Finally the two crooks are captured. One of them has been posing as a blind man to avert suspicion. Marin Sais as the girl detective.

"The Game of Life. (Kalem. Two reels. Fri., Aug. 20.)—Roy Van Dyk, whose marriage to Ilma is loveless as far as he is concerned is infatuated with a cabaret singer, according to common report. The wife turns for help to Professor Layton, whose merciless indictment of Professor Trenton has been the cause of the dismissal of the latter from the college faculty.

Layton sees that Ilma loves her husband and so, when the denouement takes place, he takes the husband's place. Thus the scandal mongers find the stern professor drunk. The husband and wife are re-united but Layton shoots himself. Guy Coombs plays Layton and produced the picture. Arthur Albertson and Anna Nillson are the husband and wife. Ethel Eastcourt is the adventuress and John E. Mackin is Professor Trenton.

"A Perilous Chance." (Kalem. Sat., Aug. 21.)—Another of the "Hazards of Helen" series. Helen Holmes again outdoes herself. On the train with a gang of train robbers, she seizes the bag of loot and leaps from the train. Fleeing she barely gets across a drawbridge before it opens, but the crooks swim the river and nab her on the other side.

She is being beaten down when help arrives in the nick of time. Glen Gano, Rex Downs and Robyn Adair are the crooks. G. A. Williams is the chief of the railroad detectives.

"Polly of the Pots and Pans." (Lubin, Mon., Aug. 16.)—This sweetly pathetic story, written by Shannon Fife, is sure to make a wide appeal to the majority of picture-going audiences. With John Ince as director and such a fine cast as Mary Charleson, Crane Wilbur, Rosetta Brice and Jessie Terry interpreting the interesting types of the film, an unusually good one-reeler is assured.

Rodman, an author, seeking types for a new novel, unconsciously wins the heart of the little slavey, "Polly of the Pots and Pans." When he realizes this he tactfully tells the girl his story so that she always retains a wistful recollection of him, even when she reads the account of his marriage in the paper, with which she then scrubs the kitchen sink.

"The Dead Letter." (Lubin, Tues., Aug. 17.)—On the same heel with "Persistent Dalton." As long as slapstick rules the comedy game, we must have these silly stories caricaturing all sorts of nationalities. In this release "Dagoes" do the running about with the inevitable cop at their heels. The organ grinder and the ice cream cone man fight over the landlady, who is won by the star boarder. The letter that gives the comedy its name is called for at the morgue instead of the dead letter office by Luigi

Will Louis directed the scenario of Fred Hayn. Francis NeMoyer, Babe Hardy, Vincent DePascale and Charles Richie are the cast.

"Persistent Dalton. "(Lubin. Tues., Aug 17.)—Split reel with "The Dead Letter." Jack Dalton, who is shown in the Vincent Whitman cartoons as the comic villain, is here dubbed the "Persistent" because of his relentless pursuit of the hapless heroine.

In his headlong career he not only wrecks the railroad bridge and kills the hero over and over, but does other equally laughable cartoon stunts.

"When Souls are Tired." (Lubin, Fri., Aug. 20.)—Romaine Fielding in his triple role of author, director and star actor, in the productions of his company, shows himself exceedingly capable in this release. Vinnie Burns is his leading woman, with Jack Lawton taking the part of Philip Heath.

The story has a different touch in addition to the usual requirements of a thrilling melodrama. Jerry Long, mine boss, almost loses the love of his dainty city wife when Philip Heath, inventor of a new oxygen helmet, comes along. But when the inevitable mine explosion occurs, Madeline realizes it is her husband she loves. Philip dies because he gives his helmet to save Jerry.

"The Life Guard." (Lubin. Sat., Aug 21.)—Billie Reeves, assisted by Billy Potter, Amy Doyle and Charles Griffith, impersonates the hod carrier, who thinks a life-guard's position easier than his own, so he steals a beach patrol's jersey and starts on his adventures.

Willy nilly he drags people who don't need him out of the surf and leaves to their fate those who are in real danger. Consequently, no money but plenty of threats and curses for Billy, who has a harder time getting out of the scrape than he did getting in. Success at last is with him, and a hod carrier he once more gladly becomes.

"The Goddess." (Vitagraph. Chapter Fourteen. Two Reels.)—There are indications that this serial is drawing toward its end. In this chapter Celestia throws off the spell which has been upon her, is convinced that she is only human and begins to undeceive the public as to her divine attributes.

The frenzied mob rises against the group of millionaires, and begins to storm the residence in which they have taken refuge. Professor Stilliter, alone in the forest, and helpless without his eyeglasses, stumbles along until he is bitten and killed by a huge diamond-back rattlesnake. This incident, while producing a thrill, is revolting.

"Mr. Jarr and Circumstantial Evidence." (Vitagraph. Mon., Aug. 16.)—This is the sixteenth family trouble of the Jarrs. Both Jarr and his boss get into difficulties at home through the combined agency of a "Grass Widow" and a camera fiend, but finally extricate themselves. Harry Davenport, Rose Tapley and Charles Eldridge again have the principal roles.

"She Took a Chance." (Vitagraph. Wed., Aug. 18.)—Fun starts when Kate Price, as Mrs. Luckey, wins a prize pig in a raffle and takes it home. The prize brings nothing but woe to the Luckeys. Justice triumphs, and piggy meets his doom in a sausage factory. William Shea, Johnny Cahill, William Sloane and Sig. Stark are also in the cast. The scenario was written by H. Edward Knies, and was produced under the direction of C. Jay Williams.

"The Quest of the Widow." (Vitagraph. Thurs., Aug. 19.)—Pa Perkins' campaign for the hand of a dashing widow makes a lot of fun for the observers. The path of true love is as rough as the Atlantic in December, and after enduring ceaseless reverses and humiliations, Pa gets the laugh for his trouble, and gives it up. George Stanley in Pa Perkins, and the Widow is played by Anne Schaefer. Others in the cast are Gretchen Lederer and Alfred Vosburgh. The picture is produced by Ulysses Davis from a scenario by Frances M. Wright.

"Cutey's Awakening." (Vitagraph. Fri., Aug. 20.)—Cutey carries his light comedy into business, and uses his frivolous methods to make fun and money in his father's office. Not only does he convert a formidable rival into a friend and partner for his father, but he finds a wife for himself in the new partner's daughter. The cast includes Wally Van, Nitra Frazer, Albert Roccardi, and Templer Saxe. Wally Van also produced the picture, which was written by William Addison Lathrop.

"The Goddess." (Vitagraph. Two reels. Chapter Thirteen.)—In this number Mrs. Gunsdorf attempts to murder Celestia but her plan is frustrated by Freddy. Celestia, although her life has been menaced by the miner's wife, succeeds in again becoming her friend. Tommy learns of Mary's despicable actions and renounces her. Stilleter plans to marry Celestia but Tommy interupts his plan and takes the girl away, intending to lay before her eyes the fallacy of the doctrines which she preaches.

"The Dawn of Understanding." (Vitagraph. Two Reels. Sat., Aug. 21.)—This is an excellent little drama, excellently played. Leah Baird is charming as the wife of a banker (Maurice Costello) who is devoted to the social whirl, and neglects her home for that purpose.

While she is at a reception her baby dies, and the bitterness aroused in her husband's heart, leads to an estrangement, and legal separation. Both are later drawn back to the farmhouse where they once spent a happy summer, and there they find that the young farmer and his wife have also lost their baby, but the loss has only drawn them closer together.

The banker and his wife profit from their example and are reunited. Maurice Costello has done nothing so well in some time.

Theatre Management

is a science. The News has the distinction of publishing in every issue, more practical, financially valuable suggestions for the profitable conduct of motion picture theatres than all of the other mediums COMBINED.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Universal Animated Weekly, No. 179." (Universal. Wed., Aug. 11.)—Armored autos start for the Plattsburg war game; provisions distributed by the State to destitute Ohio miners; newspaper men on a picnic atop of Mt. Mitchell, N. C.; devastating storm on the Jersey coast; National Guard of Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island reviewed by Governors; auto racers make new half-mile track record; motion picture exhibitors at annual convention at San Francisco.

Girl rides at thirty miles an hour on board towed by fast motor boat; Oregon bridge blown up by dynamite blast; South American diplomats leave State department after Mexican peace conference; U. S. S. Tennessee off with marines for Hayti; suffrage torch transferred from New York to New Jersey women in middle of Hudson river; women who aid in making war munitions parade in London; scenes attending Lord Kitchener's pleas for recruits; Camberwell, London, sends record number of 4,300 men to the front.

"The Substitute Widow." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., Aug. 20.)—This mystery drama, written by Hugh Weir, would have constituted a more creditable screen number if the action had been made just a little more clear. At present the plot develops to considerable extent without the spectator being aware of what it's all about, and consequently the interest is lessened.

A poor girl is offered a hundred dollars if she will take the place of another woman for an hour. She does so and discovers that the husband is a criminal, the real wife having gone to replace some stolen property.

The capture of the thief by the police introduces several thrilling scenes. Frances Nelson and Hobart Henley are the leads in this, the picture being made before Henley's departure for the west coast.

"The Taming of Mary." (Victor. Fri., Aug. 20.)—This pleasant comedy number was taken while the Victor company was en route to Havana. Mary cares little for the man who humbly anticipates her every want, but when he temporarily deserts her, and then saves her from a fake fire, her heart belongs to him. Mary Fuller and Milton Sills lead this cast. The scenes, all taken on shipboard, are pleasing.

"Kids and Corsets." (Nestor. Fri., Aug. 20.)—In which the jealous wife is the cause of several small eruptions in two families. A comedy number that contains some humorous and well conceived situations. In the cast are Jack Dillon, Billie Rhodes, Lee Moran and Jane Waller.

"The Gopher." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Aug. 31.)—One of Harvey Gates's stories produced by William Worthington It shows how a man wrongly accused of murder took refuge in the West and finally apprehended the real criminals by the use of a scientific device. The man's underground home is a novel piece of work.

The original nature of the story's construction will assure it the stamp of popular approval. Herbert Rawlinson and Anna Little play the featured roles.

"A Double Deal in Pork." (Powers. Sat., Aug. 21.)—Frank Lloyd directed the old 101 Bison company in this picture, and the result is a comedy of average humorous value. Its theme is old. The girl does not wish to marry the son of a pork king, but the two meet at a hotel and are in love before they make themselves known to each other. In the meantime father and mother are gaily flirting, so a double match is the result.

"A Tale of Twenty Stories." (L-Ko. Two reels. Sun., Aug. 22.)—When this subject was seen for review it contained many scenes that were disgusting. The censors have doubtless had these eliminated.

If not the picture is still to be avoided. The latter scenes of the picture are thrillingly uproarious, due to the manner in which the various characters fearlessly cavort about on the edge of a twenty-story building. Hank Mann, Vin Moore and May Emory are the most prominent.

"A Seashore Romeo." (Rex. Sun., Aug. 22.)—In which a young man gains fathers permission to marry his daughter by "rescuing" her from the water. A fair comedy with Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips in the leading parts.

"Dr. Mason's Temptation. (Laemmle. Sun., Aug. 22.)—A destitute doctor is sorely tempted to steal so that he may provide for his wife, but by exercising just a little patience things soon start to come his way, before he has a chance to do wrong. Another good drama made by Frank Lloyd's company, from a scenario by Hugh Weir. Millard Wilson, Oliver Fuller Golden and Marc Robbins are the principals.

"Refuge." (Victor. Two reels. Wed., Aug. 11.)—This story is so conventional and obvious that it will awaken little interest. An orphaned girl and an Indian are brought up together in a monastery. The girl believes she loves a Mexican and elopes with him, but discovering his villainous character she returns to her old love, sadder and wiser. H. C. Mathews produced this. Elsie Albert appears as the girl.

"The Broken Coin." (Universal Special Feature. Chapter Nine. Two reels.)—This chapter is entitled "Room 22," and in it the squabble over the halves of the valuable coin is temporarily forgotten, as both the count, Kitty and her bodyguard, Rolleau are accused of murder. However, the real culprit is not revealed in this chapter, although the Apache is suspected. There is much action in this number, although none of it is direct.

"Just Jim." (Broadway Universal Feature. Four reels. Mon., Aug. 16.)—Reviewed at length in issue of August 7.

"Tony, the Wop." (Nestor. Mon., Aug. 16.)—A fair farce of Al Christie's manufacture, revolving about the commotion caused by Tony's monkey, who escapes and hides in the house belonging to Eddie Lyons and Victoria Forde. Lee Moran plays the title role but his performance does not measure up to his usual work.

"A Fiery Introduction." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., Aug. 17.)—This is chiefly a comedy with Cleo Madison and Arthur Moon playing the main characters. The leading lady and the author both desirous of meeting each other, have that opportunity when a fire breaks out in the hotel.

There are many original screen comedy moments in these two reels, ably taken care of by the leads. Lydia Yeamans Titus as the actress's maid is very good. While the picture is not entirely humorous, it may well be relied upon to create more and heartier laughter than the average one reel slapstick number.

"Quits." (Rex. Tues., Aug. 17.)—This picture, adapted from a magazine story, is positively one of the strongest single reel dramas that we have ever seen. While void of a love story—in fact no woman appears—the subject is tremendously powerful because of its character delineations and its excellent treatment.

The sheriff is rescued from quicksands by one, "Frenchy." Subsequently he is informed that his rescuer shot the woman he loved. Feeling that he owes the man a debt, he allows him to escape, but afterwards he pursues him and takes his revenge.

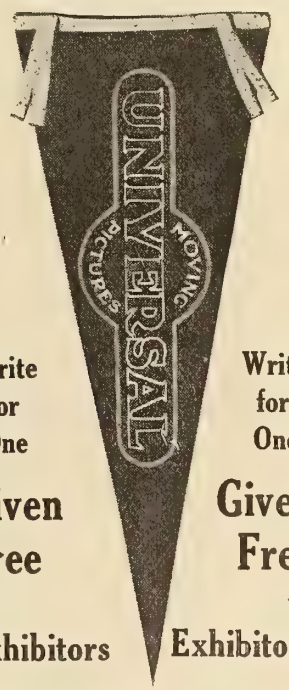
Lon Chaney, as Frenchy, gives one of those remarkable character portrayals at which he is best, while Arthur Shirley plays strongly as the sheriff. The locale is northwestern Canada and the atmosphere is perfect as to scenery, while the photography is admirably clear. This is a real drama and deserves to be highly featured. Joe De Grasse directed.

"The Country Girl." (Imp. Tues., Aug. 17.)—The Imp company can do much better than this. It's the story of a country girl almost going astray in the city but being rescued in the nick of time. There is little suspense. Frances Nelson is the girl.

"Lord Barrington's Estate." (Victor. Three reels. Wed., Aug. 18.)—The inheritance of English property by the Westerner brings with it matrimonial complications that are only cleared after another heir has put in his appearance.

This story by Leonora Ainsworth, relies largely on its comic element to entertain. The situations during the cowboy's stay at his English estate, while he is introduced to the ways of the elite, are humorously presented, while old Doc Crane as "Cookie" in the western camp, is responsible for no small amount of laughter. In the featured roles William Dowlan and Violet McMillan appear, while Mr. Dowlan produced the picture. For a refined comedy-drama this will delightfully fill the bill.

"Her Wedding Night." (Joker. Wed., Aug. 18.)—A low comedy containing several risque scenes. A burglar breaks into the home of the newly married couple and in order to escape from the husband, dons a nightgown, making himself look very much like the wife except for the face. There are not many laughs in this. Fritzi Brunette is the lead.



"The Little Blonde in Black." (Laemmle. Two reels. Thur., Aug. 19).—In order that she may operate in safety, a young secret service agent leads the local detectives to believe that she is a criminal, and consequently she is very easily enabled to gain a long-lost necklace belonging to an English family. Incidentally during the course of her work she encounters a young man who falls very much in love with her and the romance ends happily also.

This is one of Bob Leonard's pictures, based on the story by Julius Furthman. It has been produced in an attractive style, the scenes and photography being worthy of special mention. The comedy is mixed with several moments of suspense, while the whole picture is surely to be enjoyed. Bob Leonard, Ella Hall and Harry Carter play the leads.

"Ethel's Burglar." (Big U. Thurs., Aug. 19.)—A young girl reforms a burglar who had years ago saved her life. This subject is extremely weak and not well developed at all. Murdock Mac Quarrie and Marjorie Beardsley lead the cast.

"The Dread Society of the Sacred Sausage." (Powers. Thurs., Aug. 19.)—Duck and Baffles again respectively protecting and threatening a Chinese prince. Duck wins as usual. The humor well predominates in this farce of the burlesque series, although it fails to measure up to some of the very good ones.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"The Right to Love." (Majestic. Tues., Aug. 10.)—There is nothing startlingly original or new in this reel, but the story, though old, is interestingly presented. A newsboy gives shelter to a starving little waif, who is later injured by a wealthy man's automobile. Luck is against the newsboy, when the motorist realizes, through a note in the paper that his car has done the damage, and hastens to make reparation. George Stone and Carmen De Rue are pleasing as the children. Violet Radcliffe, Edwin Harley, Jack Cosgrave and Jack Hull complete the cast.

"Gussie the Graceful Life Guard." (Falstaff. Fri., Aug. 13.)—Announcement as "a seashore comedy, starring Peggy Burke," this picture "makes good" on every promise. It is a real comedy, full of the fun of the salt air, and the big outdoors, and Peggy Burke's work, as Daisy, the hotel cashier, fully justifies the starring.

Ted Jerrold meets Daisy while on his vacation, and she takes a great interest in him. He gets a telegram from his employers saying changes are being made at the office, and he need not return after his vacation. Daisy uses her influence to get him a job as a lifeguard, and as he cannot swim, induces her brother to do the real work.

Things go swimmingly, until Ted's head is turned by the flattery of the summer visitors, and Daisy's jealousy is aroused. Then her brother upsets the fake life guard and a fair companion who are rowing, and Ted's inability to swim nearly costs him his life, and does cost him his job. George Renevant is funny as Ted, and Carey L. Hastings, George Welch and Kenneth Clarindon complete a capable cast.

"The Noon Hour." (Reliance. Wed., Aug. 11.)—Impossible, but interesting, which means it would be highly satisfactory to the average audience. Florence Elmore, as aunt Sarah, the crack shot, and the friend of the persecuted sweethearts, is a strong, vigorous character, but the idea of backing an unwilling parent up to a preacher's residence with a shot gun, and covering the whole party, minister and all, until the ceremony is performed, strains the credulity, except in burlesque comedy.

The story tells of the troubles of a young couple, and how Aunt Sarah, drawing from the experience of her own loveless life, brought about their happiness during the noon hour at the factory. "Billie" West is attractive as the girl. The cast also includes O. MacDiarmid, James Cosgrave, Cora Drew and G. M. Blue.

"Shorty Inherits a Harem." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., Aug. 11.)—Shorty, lost in the jungle of India, while traveling with a wild west show, aids a dying Maharajah, and in return is made heir to the kingdom. A part of the inheritance is a trifling harem of forty dashing wives. Shorty takes it all in good part, especially the youngest member of the harem, with whom he becomes infatuated.

Fatimeh, the former favorite, commits suicide in her despair, and Shorty, in conformity to the laws of the land, is sentenced to be buried with her. The cowboy files his objections in the form of a general shooting up of the palace, during which he makes his escape. The action is rapid and the settings elaborate. Jack Hamilton, as Shorty, is supported by Lorena Gross, Diana Corillo, Robert McKim and R. C. Smith.

"The $100,000 Bill." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., Aug. 12.)—Lively action on shipboard results from the search of a band of crooks for a $100,000 bill which one of the passengers is known to possess. Guy Roberts, an Alaskan prospector, gets the bill in exchange for gold at Nome, and ships for Seattle. The band of crooks drug Roberts, but cannot find the money.

Later the prospector pretends to give the bill to the skipper's daughter, with whom he has fallen in love, but again the thieves are unable to find it. After the band has been captured, Roberts tantalizes them by showing the bill pasted under a label on his trunk. Walter Edwards is Roberts and Ethel Ullman is Ruth Duncan, the skipper's daughter. Others in the cast are Robert Kortman, Leona Hutton and Lewis Durham.

"Weighed in the Balance." (Thanhouser. Fri., Aug. 13.)—John Hastings, a boy from the country, is weighed in the balance by his uncle, who has given him a position in his office in the city, and found wanting. The weighing was made necessary because of John's association with a band of counterfeiters. The great test comes when a poor scrub woman is arrested for having received some of the counterfeit money from John, and unable to see her led away to a cell, the young man confesses his part.

His uncle finds the lad was only a dupe of the gang, and makes an upright man of him. Highly improbable, but interesting. Claude Cooper is John, and others are Morgan Jones, Mrs. Palmer and Sam Niblock.

"Over Secret Wires." (Kay Bee. Two reels. Fri., Aug. 13.)—This is a dramatic tale of warspies on the Pacific coast, which will be especially pleasing to pro-Germans. Thomas H. Ince, the author, has made a rather trite use of natural forces, and uses a bolt of lightning to strike the English spy dead just as secret service agents are about to seize him as he works in an old mission tower.

These secret service agents are working to discover the source of wireless messages sent from the Oregon coast to British warships, and trace them to Ralph Bell, a supposed artist, who pretends to be sketching the mission of Santa Rosa. They find him sending out his messages to the fleet at night, and as a result of his information, the Germans are being defeated. The agents climb the vines and are about to seize Bell, when the lightning arrives and helps them out. The scenes are spectacular and there are plenty of real thrills.

"The Way of a Mother." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., Aug. 14.)—A touching and excellent drama, showing that an actress is a woman, and actuated by the same principles and ideals as women in any other profession or occupation. A country boy comes to the city and becomes infatuated with an actress. A man about town, jealous of the youth, writes to his mother, who comes to New York to "save" her boy from the danger. She finds the actress caring for her sick child and the two women are immediately attracted to each other. The mother helps along the wedding, which follows.

"The Kinship of Courage." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., Aug. 15.)—An appealing story of the wayward son of a high official in Arizona. Carlos Dunning (W. E. Lawrence), is associated with a gang of lawbreakers until he meets Olive Temple, a girl from the East. He resolves to reform, and gets eager assistance from his father. But his former companions will not let him alone, and he is slipping back to the old life, when he is sent to New York to begin life over.

There he again meets Olive (Francelia Billington). Shadows of the former life arise between them, they are estranged, and Dunning is discouraged in his efforts to lead a better existence, until suddenly the clouds are blown away, and Dunning and Olive are happily married. A fine story, well told, and elaborately set. Wilbur Higby, William H. Brown, Walter Brown, Mildred Marsh and Violet Wilkey are also in the piece.

"The Fatal Finger Prints." (Komic. Sun., Aug. 15.)—The finger prints are those of a quick-working young burglar, who has entered the town, won the affections of another man's fiance, set the wedding for the next day, and stolen a necklace belonging to the girl's aunt, and intended as a wedding gift, all in one day. The prints are on the cheek of the bride to be, who in the darkness attempted to prevent the robbery, without recognizing the robber.

The thief realizes that the aunt must be prevented from recognizing the necklace, which he has given to his intended bride, and he attempts in vain to recover it. Eventually he is exposed, and the girl returns to her real love. Fay Tincher is the bride, and others are Edward Dillon, Max Davidson, Jennie Lee, Eleanor Washington and Frank Darien.

"The Big Brother." (Reliance. Mon., Aug. 16.)—This is the story of Lillian Watkins, a worker among the slums, and is well and truly told in an excellently executed film. She induces her sweetheart to act as Big Brother to "Scraps," a twelve-year-old expert trouble maker. Frank, the sweetheart, finds it necessary to make a few reforms himself in order to be the example which Lillian desires, but he does it. Some time later Frank's firms books are short $500, and he is suspected.

Then Scraps comes to the rescue, and by means of his expert knowledge, digs up a famous crook, who finally admits having altered the books. Francelia Billington is excellent as Lillian, and is ably supported by Frank Bennett as Frank, and Bobby Feuhrer as Scraps. Others in the cast are William Brown, George Beranger and Ben Lewis.

"Providence and the Twins." (Majestic. Tues., Aug. 17.)—The twins arrive for a visit to Aunt Abagail in time to discover that an unprincipled man has promised to marry her, then has induced her to invest her savings in a shady "deal" which he has explained to her as a great business venture. They exchange the roll of money which she has for investment, for paper dolls, and when the deceiver tries to spend it he finds paper dolls are not negotiable, and is arrested. Gladys Brockwell, Elinor Stone, Joseph Henabery, Ninon Fovieri and Beulah Burns compose the cast.

"The Crogmere Ruby." (Thanhouser. Sun., Aug. 15.)—An exciting yarn revolving around the theft of a famous ruby in England, and the attempt to smuggle it into this country. The real thief poses as a Sherlock Holmes on the ship, and casts suspicion on a young couple, who are found, on arrival, to have a ruby concealed in a cake of soap. At the suggestion of the young woman the ruby is tested and found to be glass, and the real gem is found in "Sherlock Holmes' " pipe. The girl then proves to be a Scotland Yard Inspector.

"A Marvelous Marathoner." (Falstaff. Mon., Aug. 16.)—Athletics play the leading part in this comedy. The father of the girl, himself an old athlete, insists that the man cannot marry her unless he shows himself an athlete by winning the Marathon race, about to be run. The suitor trains in vain, but is game, and enters the race.

As the runners are about to start, a spinster, to whom he has proposed in error, appears and insists he carry out his contract, and his fright is so great that he starts off with the others and easily wins the race. Boyd Marshall, Ruth Elder, Justus D. Barnes and D. Hegeman compose the cast.

"The Battle of Ambrose and Walrus." (Keystone. Two reels. Mon., Aug. 16.)—Chester Conklin and Mack Swain are aides to an insurrecto general, and both fall in love with his daughter Dora, who brings her father's lunch to camp. Conklin hides important papers in Swain's boot, and the latter is taken off to the guard house

Dora changes clothes with him, and he escapes in this disguise. Dora, recognized, is released and Swain is recaptured, and placed at the brink of a grave to be shot. He dodges the bullets, jumps into the grave, and hastily throwing up breastworks, seizes firearms which he finds in the grave, and routs the forces. There is a lot of powder-burning, and a wealth of ridiculous comedy.

"When Hungry Hamlet Fled." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., Aug. 17.)—Pretty Lorraine Huling plays a charming part throughout this comedy. The story concerns a village dramatic society, which press an itinerant actor into service as stage manager and hero of its production. The sweetheart of the leading lady is denied a part, and his revenge on the actor is to disarrange all the settings and properties just before the performance, so that everything goes wrong.

The garden gate is nailed shut, the stage horse parts in the middle and throws his rider, the villain's pistol is plugged, and the performance breaks up in a shower of garden products. Great attention has been paid to maintaining the atmosphere of the typical amateur production, and the company is capable. Claude Cooper, Frances Keyes, Harry Benham and Winifred Lane are also in the cast.

"The Lighthouse Keeper's Son." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., Aug. 19).—This is a story full of thrills and sentiment. It has to do with a young artist, who wins the heart of a beautiful girl in the fishing village, where he is spending the summer. They are married, and go to the city, leaving Owen Hanby, son of the lighthouse keeper, broken hearted.

Later the girl discovers her husband's faithlessness, and returns to the village. Owen renews his suit, but learns that the girl still loves her worthless husband. She is about to become a mother, and the doctor tells Owen her only chance for life is to see the artist again, so Owen goes to the city after him.

The artist is unwilling to visit his wife, and the lighthouse keeper's son kidnaps him, and starts back on his sloop. A terrible storm arises, and Owen gives the artist the only life preserver on board. With this he makes the shore, and aroused to his better self through the sacrifice of Owen, he returns to the girl and they are reconciled. The cast includes Jerome Storm, Elizabeth Burbridge, Jack Nelson, L. J. Dowling and Ethel Ullman.

"The Girl from the East." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., Aug. 18.)—The exciting story of an Eastern girl, who. left alone by the death of her father, starts for her uncle's ranch in the Southwest. She is lost through missing train connections, and is captured by a desperado, who takes her to his secluded shack, but is rescued by a young hold-up man who is fleeing from the sheriff, and who kills her captor.

The hold-up man is taken by the sheriff, and in the night the girl steals his handcuff key and frees her protector. After reaching her uncle's ranch she receives word from the young road-agent that he has decided to lead a straight life. Nona Thomas, J. W. McLaughlin, Robert Kortman, Walt Whitman and J. P. Lockney compose the cast.

"The Root of All Evil." (Majestic. Fri., Aug. 20.)—A delightful story of how sudden wealth parted the "most happily married pair in Nevada." Farmer Biflings and his wife each get $10,000 as a prize for their congeniality, and immediately trouble begins, culminating in a divorce.

Farmer Billings realizes that Nancy in his only real soul mate after she has foiled the plans of two sharpers to get her husband's money while he is living apart from her, and they are reconciled. The piece is well staged, and ably played by a cast which includes Spottiswoode Aitken, Jennie Lee, Elmo Lincoln, and Juanita Hanson.

"Help! Help!" (Falstaff. Fri., Aug. 20.)—It is easy to solve the servant problem—if you are a judge, and have the powers which usually go with the job. For instance, this judge's cook had a husband who decided he wanted her in his own home; his housekeeper is engaged to a Canadian, who came on to claim her; his housemaid was receiving attentions from a young man of the town, and his man-of-all-work accepted a job as chauffeur for a millionaire.

The judge simply induced the cook's husband to go to the war in Europe, had the housemaid's sweetheart sent up for vagrancy, got a policeman to meet the Canadian and scare him back in the direction of the North Pole, and have the millionaire arrested as a speed maniac. Very simple. It is well produced and makes a real comedy on the screen.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"The Sky is the Limit." (Starlight.)—Here Heinie and Louie, sudden heirs to $9,999,999.99, work feverishly through 1,000 feet of film distributing the money to all comers. Although great packs of bank notes, and sacks of gold coin are scattered about the streets, and even lavished on bell boys and waiters, the fun is fast and contagious and the laughs are close enough to touch one another. James Aubrey and Walter Kendig do most of the work.

"Colonel Heeza Liar, War Dog, and Wonders of Bird Life, No 5." (Pathe split reel.)—Colonel Heeza Liar's startling adventures are a collection of Bray animated cartoons,, originally intended for the "Pathe Weekly," but assembled into a more or less connected series of hair-raising experiences with aeroplanes, Zeppelins and submarines. There is plenty of action, as the breezy colonel is kept busy dodging air bombs and torpedoes, which he does with his usual vigor. The other half of the reel is devoted to a study of buntings and other birds in their native haunts.

"Pathe News, No. 63." (Pathe.)—A reel unusually full of events of interest and importance. Scenes in the Erie county flood; war demonstration by women in London; drill by Royal Horse Guards in camp; moving of ashes of Rouget de l'Isle, composer of the "Marseillaise," in Paris; great seas lashing the New Jersey coast; Greece trains her troops; Campfire Girls at Rye Harbor, N. H.; Flood conditions in California; Pioneer Day is celebrated at Salt Lake City.

"Pressing His Suit" (Phunphilms.)—Described as a "higgeldy-piggeldy comedy," this film lives up to his name. There is furious fun over the romantic mix-up involving Toots, the Tailor; Sweitzer, the Swiss; Sally, the Salubrious, and Kate, the Kalamity. In order to scare Toots into marrying her, Kate dresses up a dummy in her clothes, and plunges it head downward in a vat of dye. It spoils the tailor's dinner. There are more pre-marital misunderstandings, but all are straightened out in rapid fashion.

"The Silent Chord." (Victory. Three Reels.)—The stirring story of a young man made criminal through a long term in prison, to which he was sentenced for a youthful slip. He breaks into the home of a wealthy couple, and the woman proves to be his sister, whom he had not seen since she was a baby.

She shields him, and in so doing arouses her husband's jealousy, to the extent that he puts an armed guard around the house. In attempting to pass this guard, the criminal brother is shot. In the climax, he confesses his identity to clear his sister of suspicion.

"DEATH'S MARATHON," BIOGRAPH RE-ISSUE, FEATURES BLANCHE SWEET

WHEN Blanche Sweet and Henry Walthall are playing opposite each other, excellent acting may be expected; but when they are directed by D. W. Griffith in a story that is a marvel for plot construction, and supported by the unusually large casts of prominent players to be found in the Biograph re-issues, it is a foregone conclusion that the production must be a good one.

Such is the case in "Death's Marathon." If ever there was a reason why strong one-reel pictures should have a prominent position on programs, this production is that one.

We have a self-centered husband who is bored with the monotony of married life and becomes estranged from his wife. Gambling is his ruin. Determining to commit suicide, he calls his wife on the telephone to tell her of his intentions. His partner, who, at his wife's instance, has been searching for him, answers the call, and, in desperation, conceives a plan. While he races with death in a swift motor car, the wife attempts to hold her husband on the wire with her own pleadings and with the lisp of their child. But death wins the marathon, setting the wife free from her unfortunate alliance.

The story is original and as presented by Biograph, should be seen by the exhibitors who claim there are no one-reel pictures suitable for a position on feature programs.

Blanche Sweet, Henry Walthall, Lionel Barrymore, Walter Miller, Robert Harron, W. J. Butler and Joseph McDermott complete the cast.

MAC MAHON VISITS SENNETT IN LOS ANGELES

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, Aug. 9.

HENRY MAC MAHON, representative of the newly organized Triangle Film Corporation, arrived in Los Angeles early last week from New York to spend several days inspecting the studios of the three producers of this company in Edendale, Hollywood and Santa Monica. While here Mr. MacMahon will be the guest of Mack Sennett, managing director of the Keystone Film Company.

WITH BENJAMIN CHAPIN AS LINCOLN

DO YOU want to know your America as she is? Would you like to trace her growth from the baby days of '76 to her full-bloomed maturity and majesty? Would you like to thrill with the realization of all that America means in freedom, and how she attained her power?

Now America never produced so true an American as she did in Abraham Lincoln, and he in his life inspired America and created America's romance.

Here is the most lovable and startling creation of the moving-picture genius—yes, of the dramatic genius of all history.

Think! The great Lincoln is brought back to you, and he lives over his fascinating life for you, and draws for you the truest picture of your country. Here is America's epic. Here is the symphony of patriotism. Here are romance, excitement, fervor, intrigue, comedy and pathos. I want you to recall anything that ever thrilled you and anything that ever left its impression on your mind for years. And I will say that here is something that will make everything you have read or seen fade away into insignificance—a vast claim, but a reasonable one!

Think! Here are a series of plays—complete plays of five to nine acts—based on Lincoln's career, which all together give you the truest idea of Lincoln—from the baby to the martyr—the human, the beautiful Lincoln and greatest American. For three years the Charter Features Corporation and Benjamin Chapin have been working to make the Lincoln Cycle a masterpiece for this and succeeding generations.

BENJAMIN CHAPIN, THE LINCOLN MAN was and is at the helm, and as Lincoln he gives you your hero back again, for he is Lincoln in everything.

Watch for the opening days of the cycle at

(Name of Theatre)

The above is a sample newspaper advertisement reproduced from the much-discussed Portfolio outlining the activities of the CHARTER FEATURES CORPORATION.

If by any chance your name has been omitted from the prominent theatre operators who are getting this important document, by all means ask us for a copy.

The Lincoln Cycle has been spoken for by many of the best-known exhibitors in various parts of the country and already a distribution is assured which will be phenomenal.

THE great man of America coming to his people through the diversion of all diversions that touches the public heart, that reflects the popular tastes, whims, desires, ambitions of America—moving pictures—what a gigantic thing!

For ten years Mr. Chapin has been making preparations for the Lincoln Cycle. During the past three years the Charter Features Corporation has greatly augmented the scope and magnitude of his efforts. Noting this work, a few producers, who caught a fleeting impression of the possibilities in this great "Chapin-Lincoln" work, have rushed at the task. But nobody has approached near the visualization of the idea as Chapin and the Charter Features Corporation have done, nor would it be possible to do it now but for their many years of direct, effective building to the task.

Books have been written by the hundreds about the Great Emancipator, and have been the most popular of all biographical offerings. But the only successful stage plays based on Lincoln are the "Chapin-Lincoln" plays. Chapin created the American dramatic Lincoln. Even some of the moving-picture imitations of Chapin's great dramatic work have achieved a certain measure of popularity.

And now—Lincoln, the boy, the man, the President — the moving spirit of America, embodied into moving pictures in a big way, with Chapin himself (no imitation), is proving the most attractive character in all motion pictures.

As Lincoln is the embodiment of the spirit of America so this Cycle is the visualization of the life of America.

The Most Important Film Announcement of the Year! Read All Four Pages!

ANOTHER volume has been added to film history. The Mutual Film Corporation announces the completion of the NEW MUTUAL PROGRAM —an all-feature, all-star program comprising the releases of the world's most noted film producers at no increase in rental prices. Beginning the week of September 13 the Mutual Program will carry in its regular service, two three-reel Broadway Star releases every week; five two-reel Banner Features every week; nine One-reel Feature Comedies every week; two one-reel All-Star Dramas every week; one one-reel Mutual Weekly of World Events every week. In these productions ON THE REGULAR MUTUAL PROGRAM you'll find stars whose fame in film circles and on the speaking stage is world-wide. It will be the policy to put into single reel productions the same high quality found in four to six reel productions—the same great stars, the same expensive costumes, the same costly settings, and the same high-priced direction. And this quality policy will be maintained always in all Mutual Program releases whether they be single reel productions or those of greater length.

EIGHT MILLION DOLLARS will be expended annually to make the Mutual Program the greatest box-office attraction exhibitors have ever had. Think of it! An Eight Million Dollar Mutual Program—and no increase in rental prices. You exhibitors who believe in reading "the handwriting on the wall"—TIE UP NOW to this bigger, better, stronger, all-feature, all-star MUTUAL PROGRAM before your competitors beat you to it. Get full information at your nearest Mutual Exchange and watch for startling announcements of releases.

MUTUAL MASTERPICTURES

Mutual Masterpictures
Colossal Productions by America's Greatest Theatrical Geniuses

In addition to the regular Mutual Program the Mutual Film Corporation will release every week one Mutual Masterpicture in 4 or 5 reels—a production of such magnitude as to make it impossible to produce it in one, two or three reels. These Masterpictures will be produced by special arrangements with America's greatest theatrical magnates and will bring to the screen film portrayals of great literary masterpieces.

Featuring Big Broadway Stars

Mutual Masterpictures will be tremendous, inspiring works of art interpreted by the most famous of American and European stage-stars. Releases will be announced soon.

This, then, sums up the NEW MUTUAL POLICY—a policy of bigger, better motion picture productions combined in an ALL-FEATURE, ALL-STAR MUTUAL PROGRAM; colossal feature productions as Mutual Masterpictures; all reinforced by powerful capital and a policy of advertising co-operation that is bound to mean BIGGEST PROFITS TO EXHIBITORS.

Are you ready NOW to book this ALL-STAR, ALL-FEATURE Mutual Program or will you wait and lose out? Apply at once to your nearest Mutual Exchange or write us.

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

Copyright, 1915, by J. H. Hallberg

19 D—Suppose when you project the image of the stereopticon slide on the screen the corners appear to be yellow or not brilliantly illuminated all the way out from the centre. What is this an indication of?

Ans.—The chances are that in that case the diameter of the stereopticon lens is too small. Stereopticon lenses are had in several sizes; the smallest one is known as the quarter size and the opening in this lens measures approximately 1½ inches in diameter. The largest size generally used on all foci over 18 inches is called half size and measures approximately 2¼ inches in diameter.

If you have the smaller size lens the difficulty of dark corners may be removed by using the half size lens of the same foci. With some of the machines more recently put on the market, the manufacturers use a single glass stereopticon lens which when mounted in a collar casting or ring, leaves an opening of 2¾ inches in diameter. With this single glass lens of such large diameter it is almost always possible to secure perfect illumination on the screen.

19 E—When very high focus lens has to be used for long distances with the moving picture machine stereopticon equipment, you are sometimes bothered with light escaping, due to reflection from the lamp house fittings. The light shows itself around the screen outside of the margin of the picture and is very disagreeable. How do you overcome this trouble?

Ans.—There are two ways in which you can correct this, one is to use a very small opening in the wall of the booth, just large enough for the light rays, but the better way is to take a piece of sheet metal and cut an opening in it so that it can be slipped over the stereo lens mount acting like a shield which will prevent the escape of reflected light.

19 F—Suppose that it is impossible to get a perfectly clear field of light on the screen, which condition would you favor, the dark spot in the centre with bright corners, or yellow corners and uniform centre light?

Ans.—I would make the center field perfect and let the corners take care of themselves, because the stereopticon slide in conjunction with motion picture projection is only a side issue as a general rule, and furthermore, the announcement slides have most of their display matter in the middle part of the slide and it is very seldom that the corners show.

19 G—What are the different illuminants which may be successfully used for motion picture projection?

Ans.—The electric arc maintained between two carbon electrodes is without question the most efficient and satisfactory means for illuminating the aperture of a projector.

Next to the electric arc the ox-hydrogen or calcium light is the most satisfactory. The calcium light is produced by playing a needle shaped flame from a jet burning oxygen and hydrogen gas against a calcium cylinder. This cylinder becomes heated in a small spot about ⅜ inch in diameter, and gives a fairly satisfactory illumination for picture projection.

The incandescent gas filled lamp made with a specially concentrated filament ranges third for this purpose. This special incandescent lamp is very satisfactory for home projection, that is, for machines using standard size films where the distance is short and the picture is not over 6 feet wide.

The acetylene light ranges fourth and can hardly be considered satisfactory for motion picture projection. It has been used in cases where no other form of light could possibly be had, but it is not recommended for motion pictures and can be used with only small success for stereopticon slide projection. The acetylene light is made by putting calcium carbide in contact with water. It is quite convenient to store and handle and is therefore of advantage in certain special cases.

19 H—What do you consider the limiting distances and size of pictures which may be projected with the various illuminants mentioned in the foregoing question?

Ans.—With the electric arc using D. C. at the carbon points pictures have been projected at distances of 300 feet and as large as 36 feet wide. The ampere capacity at the arc determines, of course, the intrinsic brilliancy of the crater and the size of the crater, which must be greater for the larger pictures and longer distances.

With calcium gas light the maximum distance at which a motion picture can be fairly well projected is 50 feet, and the picture should not be larger than 9 by 12.

The calcium gas is, however, very satisfactory for stereopticon projection for all distances which one may meet in ordinary practice and for any size picture desired. It is a fact that the calcium gas light is soft and very steady, and is preferred by many exhibitors of lantern slides to the electric arc.

Another point in favor of the calcium gas light is that it requires practically no attention after it has once been started, excepting possibly a moment or two when the lime has to be turned. There is now a new material on the market known to the trade as the Guil Pastil, which is made in the shape of a small cylinder against which the ox-hydrogen flame may be played which will produce a comparatively strong light and it is convenient because it is not necessary to readjust it after the light has once been started.

The gas filled incandescent lamp is suitable for distances up to 15 feet or so, and for small pictures only.

The acetylene gas for motion pictures may be used with short distances and small size pictures on a metallic silver finished screen which gives greater contrast and brilliancy to the picture.

Omaha Passes Operators' Ordinance; Favor Exhibitors

A FIGHT between the operators' union and the exhibitors in Omaha, Neb., made its way to the city council chambers and ended Tuesday, August 3, when the city commissioners passed an ordinance. There were two for consideration, one desired by the operators, and one desired by the exhibitors. The one favored by the exhibitors was passed.

The exhibitors did not want an ordinance at all. But when one, which they believed favored the union operators, was introduced, and then another was introduced after they started the fight, they were almost forced to accept the least of what they considered two evils.

The first ordinance was entitled "An Ordinance Requiring Moving Picture Machine Operators to Obtain a Permit After Examination; Creating a Board of Examiners Therefor; Regulating the Business of Operating Such Machines, and Providing a Penalty for the Violation Thereof."

First—It declared it unlawful for any person to operate a moving picture machine in the city without a permit.

Second—It organized a board of examiners of five members, appointed by the mayor, and consisting of two operators, two exhibitors and the city electrician, for the examination of all applicants for such permits.

Third—The board shall give at least one examination a month in general as follows: the handling of the head, lamp, appliances and wiring; testing for voltage and for electrical defects in wiring lamp or operating room; the use of various safety appliances, mechanical and electrical; general precautions to be observed in operating machine, and the general competency of the applicant.

Penalty for Violation from $5 to $500

Fourth—No person under 21 years of age can be eligible.

Fifth—Each applicant shall pay two dollars application fee.

Sixth—Permit may be revoked for failure to display the permit in the operating room, keeping or permitting an exposed or open light, smoking or permitting another to smoke in the operating room, permitting an unlicensed person other than the manager or proper official to be or remain in the operating booth while an audience is in the building, having film exposed in the booth at any time other than is absolutely necessary, over-fusing or having improper electrical connection, allowing another person to operate under one's permit and denying or refusing admittance into the booth of any proper official.

Seventh—The penalty was from $5 to $100 fine.

This ordinance, from which the second differed but little, was opposed for these reasons by the exhibitors:

First—Omaha motion picture exhibitors are already hampered by three distinct sets of censorship laws, the last of which went into effect two weeks ago.

Second—Present fire precaution are sufficient and answer all the purposes the proposed ordinance would answer.

Third—The board of examiners, with the city electrician as the controlling factor, would undoubtedly favor the unions against the exhibitors at every turn, as union labor counted much for or against the political prestige of the men who had the appointment of the city electrician. This, the exhibitors contended is a mass-meeting before the city commission, would put them in the power of the unions.

Fourth—It would be a hardship upon non-union operators now at work.

The exhibitors assured the commission they were in favor of anything favoring the efficiency of operators or safety for the people in general. They pointed to the fact that they had never opposed progressive movements in business life in Omaha and had really taken care to co-operate with the city powers in every movement.

Attend Commission Meeting in Body

They attended the commission meeting in a body. The local newspapers played the story up as a fight between the two factions and published editorials demanding the city commissioners to enforce strict motion picture theatre legislation and save the city from threatened disasters.

The exhibitors were rewarded with another ordinance which was passed Tuesday. They sent a letter protesting against that one, but the letter was merely read and laid aside. The second ordinance, which will go into effect August 18, differs from the first as follows:

The board of examiners shall consist of three members, the chief electrical inspector, building inspector and fire warden.

The examination may be of a practical and elementary character, but sufficiently strict to test the qualifications of the applicant.

Every applicant shall have served as an assistant or apprentice to a competent operator for a period of one year. The permit may be renewed each year for $1. The application fee will be one dollar.

If an applicant fails to pass the examination he may take it again in three months, instead of six, as provided in the first. The fine will be from five dollars to fifty dollars.

This is the first of such drastic legislation in the Middle West. Exhibitors are confident the matter would have come up at this time had it not been for the trouble between the union and some of the exhibitors.

The second ordinance, with its examining board a body that will be certain to lean toward organized labor, is little, if any, better than the first.

Those exhibitors who are keeping step with the times deplored the unfavorable attitude of the public press. The newspapers heretofore have been indifferent to the censorship agitations, with the exception of a paper of minor influence. With the start of this movement, however, with the newspapers more or less criticising the exhibitors for standing in the path of an ordinance that was more or less a popular demand, it is feared the newspapers may maintain their unfavorable attitude.

MONROE AND MADISON THEATRES EQUIPPED WITH FEASTER MACHINES

THE Monroe and the Madison, Chicago, two new Keith houses are to be equipped with the Feaster no-rewind system. Manager A. G. White of the Keith equipment department has thoroughly investigated the merits of the Feaster machine, and states that he is convinced that it is the logical solution of the rewind evil in the theatre, as it not only eliminates most of the wear and tear of the film, but also saves a large proportion of the breaking of film, and all the labor, time and noise of rewinding, and the resultant inconvenience to patrons.

GHOST ON THE SCREEN ELIMINATED

R. L. I., Elkton, S. D.—Dear Sir: I enclose diagram of my lamp house and wiring.

I find at times there is a very large ghost on the screen. The only way that I can get it off is to move the lamp house back, and then this makes the slides out of focus. My lenses are so set that I can't adjust them any more. Can you tell me how I can get rid of the ghost?

Dear Sir:—I have yours of the 21st inst., together with a sketch in which you complain about the fact that you cannot adjust your stereopticon lense any more. In other words, you cannot accommodate it to the position of the lamp house when it is way back. I note that you have ½-inch cored carbon in the top and ⅝-inch cored carbon in the bottom.

Please verify this statement and also specify what make carbons you are using. If you are operating on direct or alternating current at the arc and the voltage of the circuit.

I also want to know the make and style of your machine and the focus stamped on your M. P., as well as on your stereo lense, and give the exact distance and the size of the picture projected.

CORRECT CARBON AND CONDENSER COMBINATION

Elkton, S. D., July 31, 1915.

Dear Sir:—In reply to your letter of the 26th inst., I wish to state that I am using ½-inch Electra pink label cored carbons on top and ⅝-inch Bio cored carbons on the bottom.

I am operating a 1-A 1914 Motiograph using 60 volt D. C.

I have a throw of 46 ft. and a picture of 8 ft. by 10 ft. 9 inches.

Thanking you for past favors, I am, R. L. I.

Ans.—With the additional information given in your letter of July 31, I am now able to advise you as follows:

At the distance of 46 feet, with a picture 8 feet high by 10 feet 9 inches wide, your specifications call for approximately 3¾ in. M. P. lens and 15-inch stereo lens. With these lenses you should use two 6½-inch focus condensing lenses and your lamp house should be moved fairly close (at least more than halfway) toward the aperture plate. Then your lamp should be properly adjusted back and forth relative to the condensing lenses so that you will secure a nice round spot at the film gate.

One of your main troubles is evidently due to the fact that you are using a half-inch cored carbon in top and ⅝-inch cored carbon in the bottom. If your arc lamp is properly connected to your 60-volt D. C. dynamo or supply circuit the upper carbon should be the positive and the lower therefore, the negative. Your carbon setting is wrong, because the positive requires the larger carbon. Therefore, if you will reverse your carbons, putting the large one in top and the smaller one in the bottom you will, I am sure secure the results you are looking for.

Suppose you do not know which wire is the positive coming from the electric generator, then it is an easy matter for you to find out. Proceed as follows:

Close the machine switch, strike the arc and let it burn for about 10 seconds, then pull the switch and open the lamp house door in order to determine which carbon is the hotter. You will find that on all D. C. circuits the positive carbon will be almost four times as hot as the lower, or in other words, it will stay hotter a longer time than the negative. If you find after this test that the lower carbon is the hotter, all you have to do is to reverse the two wires at the carbon holders. This will immediately reverse the current at the arc and then you will secure proper results.

After you have secured the spot you require at the aperture plate for the film, then the back and forth adjustment of the lamp house should be locked. Now, move the lamp opposite the stereo lense and loosen the color casting which holds the stereo lense so that you may slide it back and forth on the supporting rod until you have moved the lense to the position where you get perfect focus of a slide on the screen. Then merely tighten the collar casting on the rod. There is no reason in the world why you should not be able to make this stereo adjustment properly, unless you are using the wrong rod, which might be too short, but I guess upon examination and study of the adjustment you will find that you can easily get perfect focus on the screen. It would be well for you to make sure that you are using the 6½-inch focus condensing lenses, and in any case do not use but a 6½-inch next to the light and possibly a 7½-inch on the side nearest the aperture plate, as that would make about as high a foci-condensing lense combination as you should use for your short throw.

TRANSPARENT MATERIAL FOR SHUTTER

E. N., Tampa, Fla.—Just got through reading "Motion Picture Projection Simplified," of July 31, and reading Section 18-G., which says, "What is the effect of a light interrupting shutter having blades which, instead of being opaque are made of transparent or translucent mediums?"

Now, what I wish to know is where could I get the transparent material to make a shutter with. Now, if it is possible for you to send me the material C. O. D., I will be more than thankful to you.

Ans.—Your letter and its friendly statements make me feel good, because it proves that you men who are directing the welfare of the Projection Department of the theatre are wide awake and are reading the columns of the News and taking advantage of the suggestions which are made in this department.

The shutter referred to in question 18-G of Motion Picture Projection Simplified in issue of July 31, can best be made from a piece of clear mica or isinglass. Take your old shutter if it's one of the kind used in front of the projector lense and use it as a template or pattern on top of the mica, marking all holes and full outline so that when you have made the holes and cut the shutter from the mica it can be fitted onto the old hub. This gives you a practically transparent shutter which when rotated in front of the lense has no effect on the screen.

The most interesting experiments in the world can be made with this shutter of yours. With a pen knife you can split the mica blade almost down to the hub, then you may insert a sheet of colored gelatine, such as used on spot lights. Temporarily this gelatine may be held in place by using three or four ordinary paper clips to hold the mica together.

You may for instance, use a dark blue gelatine in the blade which covers the film during the time it is in motion. If your shutter is of the two wing type put in the other blade a medium red gelatine. If your flicker is practically eliminated with this combination you can use for your next experiment a lighter shade of blue and keep on lightening the color density of the shutter blades until you have the most brilliant picture with the least flicker.

The distance of the projection governs the density of the blades. With a short throw you must use a darker color for the shutter. For a very long throw the color may be very light and quite transparent.

My experiments indicated that the two wing shutter was satisfactory in all instances, in fact, there was no advantage in using a three wing shutter even for direct current.

The trick in the combination is to get the right density of color on the blade which covers the film while it is in motion and have it just dark enough or maybe slightly translucent so that you cannot see the motion of the film on the screen.

To make the shutter in front of the lense translucent, while the picture is in motion, you may take a piece of sandpaper and with it scratch the surface of the mica, but don't go too far in this direction, because if you do the light will be diffused outside of your screen, giving an illuminated effect of the entire front of your theatre.

As this illumination will be pulsating, appearing only when the translucent or scratched mica shutter passes in front of the projection lense it will appear as a flicker on the outside of the screen, giving a rather bad effect.

The real way to use these shutters of the colored translucent and transparent kind is to have the shutter in front of the film gate like the Kinemacolor shutter is, or by having the shutter between the aperture and the projector lense, as in all of the old style machines.

The objection to having the shutter between the aperture and the projection lense, or in front of the film gate, is that you lose some of the effect which the front shutter gives in dissolving the picture on the screen which softens the flicker.

S. L. Rothapfel, formerly director of the Strand Theatre in New York and who is now director of the under construction Rialto Theatre in New York which is intended to be the finest and most perfect motion picture theatre in the world, was associated with the editor of this department in making a set of the most exhaustive tests along the above lines and we produced shutters more than three years ago which were very efficient and they were used for certain special effects, desired by Mr. Rothapfel at that time when he was director for the Motion Photo Plane Company of New York.

Operators who have the time and the inclination to do a little experimenting along these lines will find the pastime very interesting and it is possible to, what I might call, increase the depth of focus of the picture, or to make the figures on the picture appear to stand out more clearly and in better relief.

COST TO RUN MOTOR GENERATOR

G. B. B., Buffalo Center, Iowa.—I want to ask you a lot of questions and will thank you for the information. Our city is going to build a new light plant and, of course, we will put in A. C.

Now, what will the cost be to run a motor generator at 7 cents per K. W.?

My distance is 62 feet and am using a 5-inch lens.

The arc burns on an average of 2 hours per night and 7 cents will be the rate for power and 14 cents will be the rate for light.

I use ⅝-inch top and 14-inch bottom carbon, both cored.

At present I am using a small electric light plant of a 4 K. W. generator and 8 H. P. engine. My lighting outfit is located across the street in a garage and I am furnishing the garage with light. Garage is using thirty 40 watt lamps and I get the rest. At times I do not get all the juice I need and in fact I don't think I do any of the time.

Feaster No-Rewind Machine

Bulletin No. 1

On August 1 the Park Theatre, Boston (conceded to be the best equipped motion picture house in New England) installed the FEASTER no-rewind system in their projecting booth. Previous to August 1 the operators in this theatre rewound 400,000 feet or 75 MILES OF FILM each and every week. Since the installation of the FEASTER system not one foot of film has been rewound. Do you realize that the saving in TIME in this theatre each week is TWENTY-FOUR HOURS? Easily and simply attached to Power or Simplex machines. The price per equipment is $100.00. If I can operate a motor generator cheap enough I will sell the plant and buy a motor generator. What had I ought to buy one for?

I have a new Power's No. 6A machine, new last fall, and the lens I got with it will not give me a good clear light so am using the lens out of old machine. I have written to the house whom I bought it from and they say it is O. K., and that is just what I ordered. What would you do with it?

How much juice will a No. 10 wire carry? That is the size of my wire.

How many amperes should I have at the arc?

There is 380 watts comes off my wire all the time besides the arc. This current is for sign lighting, etc.

Wire which runs from plant to my building is No. 4.

ANS.—In view of the fact that your questions are not exactly in the order they might be for best explanation I will consider all of your points and answer them in proper rotation.

For your distance of 62 feet using a 5-inch lens which makes a picture between 10 and 11 feet wide, about 30 amperes D. C. at the arc is sufficient, in fact a properly maintained 25 ampere arc with good carbons should give you good results.

Taking for granted that 30 amperes will be sufficient, then a device to produce this current from the A. C. line supplied by the city, taking for granted that the service would be 60 cycles, will consume approximately 2½ to 3 K. W. per hour, which at 7 cents rate will cost you about 20 cents per hour or 40 cents per night.

If the Electric Lighting Company will supply 2 phase or 3 phase current at 60 cycles a motor generator for this work will cost you about $185.

For single phase current a motor generator would be more expensive, costing in the neighborhood of $200. Such a motor generator would be adjustable, however, by means of a controller between 20 and 35 amperes with a possibility of 40 amperes on a pinch for a short time.

Your incandescent lighting load amounting to only 380 watts operating maybe only 3 hours per day would require only 1 K. W. per day and at the 14 cent rate would be 14 cents. In other words, your total electric light bill would not be more than about 54 cents per day. I doubt if you could operate a gasoline engine plant considering cost of gasoline, lubricating oil, repairs due to wear and tear and above all the depreciation of the engine and the generator for any such small amount per month.

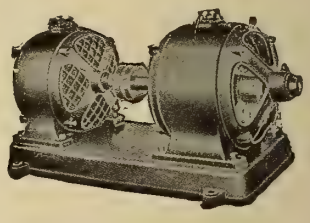
I have personally been connected with large central stations and electric lighting plants for many years as constructor, engineer and manager, and I know that the service which you will get from the electric light plant will be far superior to the service which you now obtain with your plant.

The carbon combination which you are using, ⅝ and ½-inch both cored is correct.

The No. 4 wire which runs across the street to your electric light plant is capable of carrying 70 amperes and is plenty large enough for your service.

No. 10 rubber covered wire has a capacity for 25 amperes and is, of course, the smallest which you should use. I would rather rewire and use No. 6 wire for the moving picture machine as that would be the requirement of the fire underwriters.

If you have a 4 K. W. generator and your engine is strong enough to operate it at full load then when you deduct the power required for thirty 40 watt lamps in the garage and the 380 watts which you are using for incandescent lamps, you have left just 2,420 watts for your picture arc. If the generator is wound for 110 volts then the amperage available for your picture arc is just under 25 and that amount ought to give you a good light providing the engine runs steady and the voltage is up to 110 and your rheostat and your carbons are properly set and adjusted.



It is safe to say that you can secure better results, however, for your moving picture machine by putting in an A. C.—D. C. Motor Generator and if you please, you could leave the incandescent lamps on the garage engine if you think the lighting outfit could be operated as cheaply as 25 cents per hour, which is about what it would cost to operate the thirty 40 watt lamps in the garage and the 380 watt incandescent load in your theatre. Not knowing what it costs you to run the gasoline engine I can, of course, not argue that question.

There is no reason why the lense furnished with the Power's No. 6A machine, if you bought it new should not be perfectly satisfactory to you.

ADVERTISING CLOCK FOR PICTURES BROUGHT OUT BY KINETO

THE Kineto Machine Company, with offices in the First National Bank Building, Chicago, are placing on the market a new advertising clock for motion picture theatres.

This clock accomplishes two important things. First it keeps the patrons continuously in touch with the time and second, because of an automatic slide arrangement, does away with the necessity of showing slides on the screen.

The mechanism is so arranged that eight different slides are shown for a period of three minutes each, changing automatically at the end of each period. Thus each slide appears every twenty-four minutes.

The instrument is small and compact and is in no way a disfigurement to the theatre in which it is installed.

TEXAS FIRE MARSHAL FINDS MANY THEATRES BELOW STANDARD

SOME of the picture shows of Beaumont, Tex., fall far short of the standards required in the state law in regard to fireproof booths, standard aisles, proper exits, and other provisions, is the text of a report recently made in that city by Fred. Wilson of the Texas fire marshal's office.

Mr. Wilson has so far confined his operations to simply notifying the proprietors of the shows which do not come up to standard, and telling them what they must do. He says he is willing to give them a chance, but failing to grasp it, he must close up their houses. It is understood that the seeds he has sown already are bearing fruit, inasmuch as the exhibitors are willing to co-operate with him as much as possible.

The Texas law requires:

That the booth in which the machine is located shall be from seven to nine feet in height, and nine feet square. This booth must be constructed of standard 20 gauge United States iron, and must be lined with asbestos and wood. All openings in the booth must be equipped with automatic doors which will close when a cord controlling them inside the booth is burned in two.

Films must be kept in standard metal proof cases, and motors must be of an improved type. All electric wire inside the booth must be in conduits, and switches controlling various currents must be in steel cases. There must be guards on the electric lights.

"The front extrance and exit must be at least ten feet in width. No tier of seats may be wider than nine seats, so that any person on that tier of seats won't be four seats from an aisle."

AUDITORIUM ON VENICE PIER IN NEW DRESS

THE Auditorium Theatre on the Venice, California, pier, has been improved by new front decorations, a handsome marquee, and very elaborate interior decorations which consist of Japanese umbrellas, and the ceiling is laced with festooning. The theatre was reopened Monday evening, August 2, when the button which raised the velvet curtains for the first time was pressed.

This theatre is equipped with a double role automatic pipe organ which permits the shifting from one selection to another, the playing of a single selection or two at one time. The organ is the only one west of Chicago which has the bird imitation features and was installed at the cost of sixteen thousand dollars.

A big law suit regarding patents was fought out by two companies, but the federal courts held that they had no jurisdiction over this instrument because it was not on American soil, the theatre being over the ocean.

The policy of the managers, the Abbott-Kinney Company, which owns many of the concessions at this beach, is to have four feature nights each week at which Mutual master-pictures are shown. On the remaining three nights a regular Mutual program will be used. At the opening Monday evening boxes were occupied by many of the local motion picture players in subjects shown were there, and one box was occupied by Manager Johns, Edward S. Holmes, Newton Levy and Chas. Coshard of the Los Angeles Mutual Exchange.

STANLEY INTERESTS MOVED TO NEW OFFICES

THE Stanley interests, comprising the Stanley Company, Stanley Mastbaum, manager; the Stanley Booking Company, William Heenan manager, and the Stanley publicity bureau, with A. L. Einstein in charge, have moved their offices from the Globe Building to a commodious suite, over the Palace Theatre, 1214 Market street, Philadelphia. With all the offices now on one floor (which was not the case at the old stand) and a well fitted projection room adjoining, business will be greatly expedited.

Stanley Mastbaum himself has not even taken time this summer for a real vacation. When in need of a breath of fresh air, this energetic film magnate accompanied by his inevitable big black cigar takes a spin to Atlantic City in his speedy motor car. Incidentally business is not neglected on these little outings, for several of the most important picture houses of the Stanley chain are down by the sounding sea.

The genial Abe Einstein has also a penchant for the shore. Or is it Mrs. Abe and little Doris who chose the summer abode? Friend Abe confesses that daily commuting to Atlantic is not an unmixed joy to a busy publicity man. The Einsteins are located in a cottage on South Connecticut avenue.

HAMBURG, ENGSTROM COMPANY TAKES ORDERS FROM METRO AND FAMOUS PLAYERS

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, August 11.

E. A. HAMBURG, in connection with Emil Engstrom under the name of Hamburg, Engstrom & Company have organized to take care of display advertising. At the present time they are specializing in oil process painting for the lobbies of motion picture theatres.

They are producing very artistic portraits of all the leading players in colors. They are made in various sizes. They have just received a large order from the Metro Film Company and also from Famous Players. The Ascher Motion Picture Theatres in Chicago are to be decorated with their displays.

They are at present making arrangements to start branch offices in the various exchange centers throughout the country, so they may handle the exhibitor's business in any section of the United States.

INSTALLS LARGE SCREEN IN ELWOOD, IND., THEATRE

J. H. FIHE, lessee of the Grand Opera House at Elwood, Ind., has made some extensive improvements in that theatre, so that pictures can be used during all dark nights of the summer and also the winter seasons.

A fireproof booth has been placed in the rear of the balcony and is equipped with two of the latest improved Motiograph machines, and a new silver fibre screen furnished by the Mirror Screen Company of Shelbyville, Ind., has been installed.

This is one of the largest screens this company has turned out. It is fourteen feet by eighteen feet eight inches. A Wurlitzer organ orchestra has been placed in the orchestra pit. This instrument is one of Wurlitzer's latest models and contains all the effects necessary to make a "hum" to the pictures.

The Paramount, Metro and Pathé are furnishing the picture service. Frank H. Mackey looks after the local management of the theatre and will in the regular season play the traveling road attractions in addition to the pictures.

ARTCRAFT SCREEN COMPANY FORMED IN DETROIT

THE Artcraft Screen Company, with offices in the Majestic Building, Detroit, has been organized to manufacture the new Artcraft Gold Woven Screen.

The organization is composed of individuals with long experience in the manufacture of projection surfaces, and ample capital assures its success from a manufacturing standpoint.

The company was formed after a new and durable screen had been found. Considerable experimenting has proven it a success, and it is now ready for the market.

A large factory has been secured and projection room fitted up to test every screen under actual projection conditions before shipment.

THEATRES SHOW FEW NIGHTS A WEEK INSTEAD OF CLOSING IN SUMMER

INQUIRY among exchange men of Harrisburg, Pa., who serve, for the most part, a territory within a radius of 75 or 100 miles from Harrisburg, shows that many of the theatres in the small towns in that territory have this summer adopted a policy of showing fewer nights each week during the hot weather instead of closing down entirely as many of them did in former years.

This applies, of course, only to the small towns and villages, chiefly in agricultural sections where the people are busy with farm work in the summer. Many houses that during the winter were open six nights a week and in other years closed up altogether in the summer are now playing three nights weekly throughout the heated spell, while others that showed three nights during the winter are now having shows on Saturday night, whereas last summer they closed all summer long.

In this way many exhibitors have been able to help carry their building rent charges in what heretofore was an unproductive period. Of the 125 theatres in the small towns of the kind referred to in the territory between Lancaster and Altoona it is learned that only about 25 or 30 closed down entirely for the summer months, a smaller percentage than in former years.

FIRE IN KENTUCKY THEATRE DESTROYS SIX THOUSAND FEET OF FILM

FIRE in the Casino Theatre in Fourth avenue, Louisville, Ky., destroyed 6,000 feet of film and a machine causing a loss of about $900. Harry Hughes, the operator, was burned about the head and arms, but his injuries are not dangerous. None of the patrons who made a rush for the exits was injured. The Casino is owned by the Princess Amusement Company. The damage to the building was negligible.

SCHANK SIGNS 99-YEAR LEASE FOR THEATRE IN OMAHA

J. SCHANK, of the Hipp theatre, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth street, the Omaha Paramount house has just signed a ninety-nine year lease for a big photoplay theatre to be erected.

CALIFORNIA

THE Wonderland theatre at Turlock, Cal., which was recently destroyed by fire, is to be replaced by Mrs. Cora Johnson with a two-story reinforced concrete structure after plans prepared by Charles C. Frye, an architect of San Francisco.

The building will be of the Spanish Renaissance type of architecture and will cover a lot 56 x 150 feet. The auditorium will be finished in handsome style and the lobby will be wainscotted with marble and mirrors, and will have a terrazzo floor.

A small balcony will be provided and the combined seating capacity of the main and balcony floors will be about 750. Work on this structure will be commenced at once and will be rushed as it is desired to have the house in readiness for use by the close of the airdome season.

G. L. Ferguson, one of the owners of the New Airdome at Tulare, Cal., has secured a long lease on two lots on K street and plans are now being prepared for the erection of a large theatre to cover a ground space of 50 by 150 feet. It is planned to install four hundred and eighty stationary seats, according to the tentative plans, but there will be floor space to accommodate more than seven hundred persons, if necessary.

A modern heating and ventilating system will be installed and the equipment will be of high order. The new house will be known as the Theatre Tulare and will be conducted as a moving picture and road show house under the management of Ferguson and Cain.

A number of marked improvements are to be made in the Empress theatre at San Francisco, Cal., before the commencement of the fall season.

C. N. Carrington, of the Rose theatre, San Rosa, Cal., has taken over the Columbia theatre at that place.

A new theatre, which will be patronized almost exclusively by Japanese, is being fitted up at Isleton, Cal., by K. Ota.

Moving pictures are now being shown at the Arcadia Dance Pavilion, being conducted at Eddy and Jones streets, San Francisco, Cal., by M. A. Fisher.

The Pavilion Rink at Grass Valley, Cal., has been renovated and is being conducted as a moving picture house.

The Delano theatre will be opened shortly at Delano, Cal., by Frank Panero. A Baird machine and a Minusa Gold Fiber screen have been purchased.

The Pastime theatre at Berkeley, Cal., is now being conducted by J. Ashkenazy, who recently purchased the house from Clark and Son.

M. T. Carkeek has purchased the Majestic Airdome at Tulare, Cal., from S. J. Greenwood.

S. Williams is now conducting the Colfax theatre at Colfax, Cal.

The T. and D. theatre at Berkeley, Cal., has a new manager in the person of A. J. Bachelor, formerly door man for Turner and Dahnken at Sacramento.

INDIANA

R. H. Carnes has bought the Wayne, Fort Wayne avenue and Tenth street, Indianapolis, from Eugene Short.

J. Hill has sold the Idle Hour, College and Massachusetts avenues, Indianapolis, to W. Price. Price opened the theatre Saturday night, August 7, with "Midnight at Maxims."

J. E. Thomas has closed the Elite, Eighteenth and Montcalm streets, indefinitely.

Joseph Bommersheim and John T. Belger, of the Gaiety Theatre Company, Fort Wayne, Ind., have leased a room at Bluffton, Ind., for a moving picture theatre. The room is being remodeled and will have a seating capacity of 350 people. It will be called The Gaiety Theatre.

The city officials of Elkhart, Ind., would not permit the moving pictures of the Eastland disaster to be shown in that city.

Paul Curry has been engaged to play the drums and traps at the Lyric theatre at Elwood, Ind.

World Film Corporation features are being shown at the Lyric theatre at Vevay, Ind., once a week.

William Meloy will erect a fireproof moving picture theatre at Shelbyville, Ind., with a seating capacity of eight hundred persons. The theatre will have forced ventilation and steam heat. The architecture is to be ornamental and the inside will be built in luxurious comfort for the patrons. The contract has been let for the construction of the theatre to W. V. and S. L. Dorsey, of Shelbyville.

Grimes Brothers, owner of the Arc theatre at Crawfordsville, will show photoplays for five cents admission.

Exhibitors of Valparaiso, Ind., are featuring a daily weather report as a part of their shows. The government weather bureau will furnish such reports regularly on request.

Walker and Sons, of Anderson, Ind., have obtained a building permit to build a new motion picture theatre at Anderson.

Another moving picture machine has been added to the equipment of the Wonderland theatre at Clinton, Ind.

Patent safety locks are to be installed in the Arcade and Pacae, at Richmond, Ind., by Roy Parks and F. E. Thompson, proprietors of the theatres, as a result of an order from the building inspector of Richmond, who visited the theatres and found the side doors were locked during recent shows.

ILLINOIS

Dorgan Brothers, of Georgetown, Ill., who have let the contract for a new motion picture theatre in Decatur, Ill., will use the highest class of material in their projection department. Through the Springfield Co-Operative Amusement and Supply Company, of Springfield, Ill., they have purchased one of the General Electric Company's new model AC to DC compensarcs, and also a Minusa screen.

J. I. Davis has opened a new motion picture theatre at Oakford, Ill.

C. E. Irwin expects to have his new motion picture theatre at Bloomington, Ill., opened within a few weeks. The building is entirely new and is one of the most attractive picture play houses in the city.

Adam Greenawalt has opened a motion picture theatre at Illiopolis, Ind.

Jerry Hogan has purchased the motion picture theatre at Taylorville, Ill., and is planning a number of improvements.

E. J. Henderson has just opened a motion picture playhouse at Literberry, Ill.

M. McDonnell, of South Pekin, Ill., has just opened a new picture house there. The building is attractively decorated and has a seating capacity of about four hundred.

R. E. Recox will shortly open a motion picture theatre at Bowen, Ill.

LOUISIANA

In Louisiana, and in New Orleans particularly, comment has been made by exchange men on the number of theatres closed since May 1. At least a dozen have shut their doors, and nobody seems to know just the exact reasons for the falling off of patronage. At least, think some, this deplorable condition is only temporary. The bigger houses in Canal street and adjacent territory manage to hold up well, and features go as well as ever, but it seems that the suburban exhibitor is the one most hit.

Clarence Roussel has purchased the Marvel theatre in Thibodaux, La., from F. Nolan. The Marvel was erected seven years ago, and has always been a success. Mr. Nolan sold it because his other houses in Opelousas demanded most of his attention.

Tylertown, Miss., a town of 1,000 population, is without a moving picture show. There was one several months ago, but this one closed down. There is an excellent opportunity in this Mississippi town for the right kind of an exhibitor. In Franklinton, La., twenty miles away, a city of about 950, a moving picture show is supported, and the exhibitor here gets fifteen cents nightly, whether one reel or four is shown, and twenty cents for anything approaching a feature.

MAINE

Wallace Gould, whose motion picture house in Brunswick burned down in the spring, has erected a new theatre with a capacity of seven hundred people, and it will be ready to open Monday, August 9. The theatre is well arranged, well protected from fire, and has a stage for vaudeville features, if the management cares to put them in. The booth is equipped with two Powers 6-A machines. Admission of ten cents will be charged. Universal service has been contracted for.

The New Central Theatre in Old Town has leased the General Film Co.'s service, and is now putting on a daily change.

The Searsport Amusement Company has resumed service after having been closed for several weeks.

Fred Johnson, proprietor of the Music Hall in Farmington and the theatre in Strong, has leased Universal service.

The Bijou theatre, which runs high class features and vaudeville, will reopen about the first of September. "The Goddess," recently released by the General Film Company, will be among the pictures for the opening.

MISSOURI

The first of the large theatres in St. Louis that closed for the airdome season to open this fall is the Grand Opera House, on Market, near Sixth street. The Grand played to excellent houses last season, and only closed during the last few weeks that the place might be put through a rigid cleaning and decorating process for the fall and winter session.

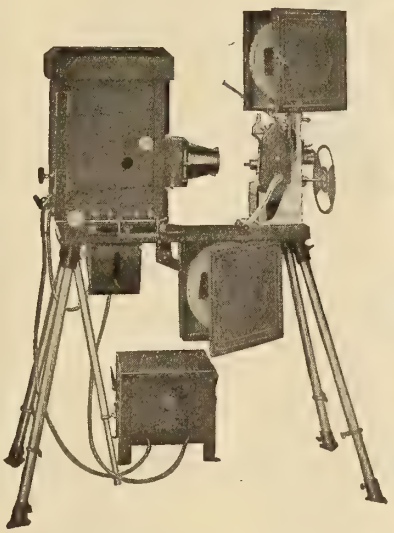
Harry R. Wallace, manager of the Grand, will again give his patrons the best vaudeville and moving pictures to be shown this season. The show will be continuous from eleven in the morning until elven at night. Five reels of pictures are shown at every performance, in addition to several numbers of vaudeville, with an admission price of ten and twenty cents.

The Hippodrome, Sixth and Walnut streets, St. Louis, is billed to open in the near future with a program consisting of from ten to fifteen reels of motion pictures, for five cents admission. The Hippodrome is one of the most beautiful and well equipped theatres, as well as one of the largest in the city, and in the first few years of its existence was one of the most widely known in and about St. Louis.

The house will open under the name of New Grand Duchess, and will be under the same management as was the theatre of that name on Grand and Olive street, before the building was sold.

S. J. Hankin, a well known exhibitor of motion pictures, has taken over the management of the Minnesota airdome, on Minnesota avenue, in Carondelet, South St. Louis. Mr. Hankin's experience in handling motion picture audiences should insure successful business for the Minnesota.

George Angelich, proprietor of the Rainbow theatre, and several other St. Louis men interested in amusement enterprises, are remodeling the building at 209 North Broadway into a very modern and up-to-date theatre.



The cost of alterations and appurtenances for the theatre will be about $11,000, the equipment to be furnished by the Lears Theatre Supply Company. The house, when completed, will have a seating capacity of seven hundred, and will be ready for business early in the fall.

The Victoria theatre, Delmar and Grand avenues, St. Louis, has been engaged by an organization composed of St. Louis' smartest society to exhibit a film in which the members will appear, the proceeds from the first three performances to be given to the Protestant Orphan Home.

The scenario of the play, which is to depict society life in St. Louis, is to be written by William Le Beaume and A. J. Lindsay, two of the members, and the camera man, J. D. Wooster Lambert, is also prominent in society. The cast of characters is to be selected by Mrs. Samuel C. Davis, who will also assist in directing the play. The Victoria will run the film as soon as it is finished, which will probably be in a month or more.

Mrs. O. T. Crawford has assumed management of the Delmar theatre and airdome at Delmar and Aubert avenues, St. Louis. Mrs. Crawford has changed the name of the Delmar to Rialto, and will run the place under the same policy as was formerly maintained by the Delmar.

NEBRASKA.

W. L. Bennett has sold the Jewel theatre at Beatrice, Neb., which he has owned for three years, to I. C. Hansen, of Los Angeles, and A. G. Nelson, of Beatrice, who will make some repairs and conduct the theatre during the coming season as one of the best in the state.

Henry Rohlff is erecting a theatre at 2651-63 Leavenworth street, Omaha, Neb., that will have a fifty-four foot front and a depth of 120 feet. The Rohlff will be the name of the new theatre. It will have a twenty-two foot ceiling and capacity for seating 500 people. It will open in November.

Leavenworth street, one of the big thoroughfares of Greater Omaha, is in a thickly populated district, and has been the site of many smaller theatres in the past. Mr. Rohlff is confident a larger establishment, open every afternoon and night, with the very best runs of pictures, will be a big success.

NEW JERSEY

Charles C. Hildinger, George Bishop and Russell Lamont, of Trenton, N. J., all amusement men, the former being the proprietor of a chain of motion picture theatres and the original motion picture man of the city, are having a modern amusement house constructed there at a cost of $20,000.

It is located at Chestnut and South Clinton avenues. The material used in the construction is red brick, and the theatre will be modern in every respect, with a seating capacity of about 1,000. There will be indirect lighting systems and a Wurlitzer organ.

OHIO

Announcement has been made by the Orpheum theatre, Cleveland, that F. P. Woda now has full charge of that theatre. Mr. Woda formerly was connected with the Mall theatre. He says that a big feature will be shown every day at the Orpheum.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Of the twenty-two Philadelphia theatres closed during the summer season, the following three will reopen August 16. Others are scheduled a little later. The Globe at Juniper and Market streets has only been closed a few weeks. It will reopen with vaudeville, in addition to high class features. The prices of the new program will be ten, twenty and thirty cents. The Globe has a capacity of 2,200. The manager is William Goldberg, formerly of the Alhambra.

The Keystone at Eleventh and Lehigh avenue, Philadelphia, is under the management of William Steele. With 2,200 seats, and a program of features and vaudeville, it has been decided to make the prices here ten, twenty and thirty cents. There will be a semi-weekly change of attractions.

The Orpheum of Germantown, formerly a stock theatre, has been a picture house for a year, and will continue this policy on its reopening. Ten cents straight is the charge here. There are 1,400 seats in the house, which is managed by Homer Lord.

The Palace at 1214 Market street, Philadelphia, has been improved at a cost of $15,000. The interior has been redecorated in a pleasing manner, and the exterior much improved. And you must know this was all cleverly done without closing the house a single hour. The Palace formerly carried vaudeville, but in future will cater entirely to picture patronage, with a program of feature pictures. Stanley Mastbaum himself has taken over the management of this house, in addition to the Stanley. This fact will insure a big success for the new policy of the Palace.

The Lyric theatre in Shippensburg, Pa., has just changed hands, C. C. Sigler, of that town, having sold it to Ed. Condran, of Middletown, Pa., who until recently was in control of the Realty theatre in the latter place. Mr. Condran will assume personally the management of the Lyric.

Many of the owners of theatres in the Pittsburgh district are taking this time while business is slow to make repairs and remodel their houses. The amount of money expended on theatres during this month has been larger than it was last year, and before September is reached the amount will total many thousands of dollars.

C. B. Pascoe, the well-known exhibitor of West Virginia who has a chain of houses scattered through West Virginia and western Pennsylvania, has secured control of the opera house at Somerset, Pa. His lease is a long one. He has started on the work of re-modeling and re-decorating the house, and will have it ready for work by September 1.

F. B. Whiteman, manager of the Roaring Springs, Pa., Opera House, has let the contract for the renovation of his house, and states that it will be one of the prettiest in the state when the work is completed.

Ira M. Owen, owner and operator of a number of houses, has let contracts for work to be done in bettering a number of his theatres in West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

A new theatre is to be erected at Adena, Ohio, by Mrs. A. C. Ramsey, owner of the Ramsey hotel. The contract has been let, and the theatre is to be rushed through to completion as fast as possible.

It is said it will be ready for business by September 15.

The house is to be built in strict accordance with the Ohio building laws, and is to be a beautiful specimen when completed. It will have an attractive front, which will contain all of the latest devices from the ticket booth to the doors.

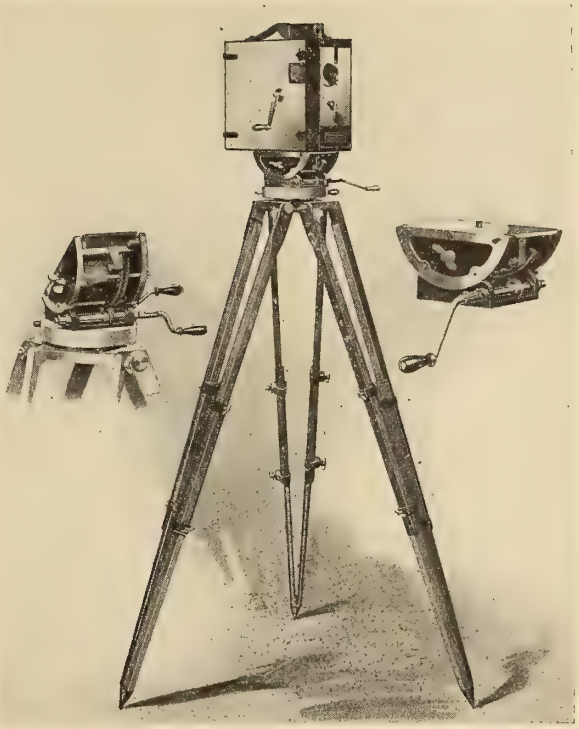
The equipment for the house has already been ordered. It includes fans, seats and screen of the latest type, and everything that can possibly be done for the comfort of the patrons. Mrs. Ramsey, the owner, states she will operate the theatre herself.

A corps of efficient attendants will be on hand to see that every desire of the patrons is looked after. Comfort rooms will be added to the theatre. The theatre will be lighted by the indirect lighting system.

TENNESSEE.

The Alcazar theatre, Chattanooga, is undergoing extensive repairs. It is understood that the Lyric company controlling the Alcazar and Lyric, is considering plans for the complete remodeling of the former picture house.

The plans call for the erection of a stage with a proscenium arch, and the construction of a commodious balcony. When reopened the Alcazar will be one of the prettiest and most up-to-date picture theatres in the south.



Present arrangements will make it available for vaudeville purposes, and it is learned that the Lyric company has under consideration the installation of vaudeville service during the cool months.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

EDITOR'S NOTE.— This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

PICTURE CLASSIFICATION OF MUSIC

TO avoid monotone playing for pictures, it is necessary that music be properly classified as to its thematic as well as temperamental effect.

It is needless to explain how tiresome music becomes to the hearer when it continues in the same key or tempo. The distinction between major and minor themes is very important.

Minor keys have a natural inclination for depressing the audience, and when there are no relief or light numbers in major keys interspersed the music becomes monotonous.

There is a great tendency among one-man instrument players, who make a specialty of improvization, to continue in minor keys. Melodic possibilities in minor keys being very limited, such players cannot expect that their music can be other than monotonous.

If at a musicale or concert there were a decided sameness in the music played it would not only be unenjoyed but severely criticized.

To avoid a monotone sameness or a misprograming of music in picture playing it is highly essential that every player have his music properly classified.

Danger of Sameness Avoidable

The danger of sameness in music is easily avoided when picture action suggests the dramatic, characteristic or suggestive.

When the picture action is neutral, requiring introductory or descriptive playing, this fault is more noticeable. Many players thinking that when there is no picture suggestion it matters little as to what or how they play.

This is a great mistake. When a picture is weak, its weakness is more apparent at these points and it is up to the music to be more entertaining, thereby covering the faulty picture and creating a satisfied feeling in the audience.

Mr. Musician, this is the place in picture playing where you make your reputation, both with the audience and exhibitor. Not until you hear it said, "The picture was not so good, but the music was fine," have you done your duty as a picture player.

There are many pictures that need no musical assistance to make them appreciated, consequently if the player cannot cover the weaker pictures in a program his services are valueless.

Invariably in my early experiences I found that when the audience left the theatre criticizing the pictures they would also criticize the music. To overcome this I first set a thematic plot of picture action, such as is shown in this department; this then enabled me to set a musical program, any lengthy sameness in my numbers being apparent before I went into play.

Playing Long Concerted Numbers

Introductory or descriptive playing differs from neutral playing in tempo and musical tension. In pictures of many subtitles depending upon dialogue and pictures lacking development of pathos or high tension thought, when action is descriptive, yet not expressive and of lengthy duration, a neutral number, such as a selection of potpourri regardless of tempo or theme can be used. When the number is well selected and played it will help to entertain, for when such as the above occurs in pictures it is usually padding or unnecessary subject matter which tires and dissatisfies the audience. At such points a good number well played will be much appreciated and save the theatre from much adverse criticism.

With thorough musical research and a proper classification of your repertoire many opportunities will arise for the playing of long concerted numbers or operatic selections as they are written, with perfect picture synchronization.

Such an opportunity will be found in the New York Motion Picture Company feature, "The Toast of Death." Numbers 15. 16 and 17 of this picture are well covered by Oehmler's "Cleopatra Suite" in four numbers, published by Carl Fischer, New York City. Such a number is valuable in picture playing, appealing to the intelligent audience and making it possible to make the music of a high tension Oriental picture classy.

Other such selections for covering lengthy sameness of high tension dramatic action in pictures are "La Traviata," arranged by Roberts and published by Carl Fischer, New York City; "Maritana," by Wallace, and published by Carl Fischer, or "La Boheme," as arranged by Ad Ganwin and published by G. Ricordi & Company, New York City.

"La Traviata" plays one full reel or seventeen minutes, has a dramatic and romantic or pathetic appeal throughout.

"Maritana" has the same high tension appeal as the above and very effective in pictures bordering on the religious, and plays 11 minutes.

"La Boheme" has a positive plaintive or sorrowful appeal throughout, as well as dramatic. It plays 24 minutes in its entirety and 17 minutes when a cut is made from letter R to W. When proper care is taken in placing such numbers the effect is most beautiful, while when they are misplaced both the music and the picture are irretrievably ruined.

Definition of "Neutral" in Music

While such numbers are classed as neutral and used in neutral playing, nevertheless a positive knowledge as to their appeal must be known, neutral being a term used to signify a lengthy sameness in the picture appeal.

Neutral playing is nothing more than descriptive or introductory playing, the term being the means whereby concerted numbers, selections of known operettas, musical comedies, grand operas or popular songs can be safely used if properly classified.

Such neutral numbers should be known as light, romantic, semi-heavy, heavy, heavy dramatic, medley and characteristic.

Neutral (light) selections are those continuously in 2/4, 4/4 Alla Breve, 6/8 or ¾ tempo, with very few if any slow movements.

Selections of the George Cohan musical comedies and many English operettas are such numbers.

Neutral (Rom) selections must consist of mostly slow movements in any tempo with a melodious appeal, not serious or dramatic. Many of these are found among what is known as light opera and the compositions of Victor Herbert and R. Friml.

Neutral (semi-heavy) selections are those wherein the dramatic and romantic are intermingled, as well as the slow and more lively tempos. Such numbers are found among the Italian grand operas, such as "Ernani," "Lucrezia Borgia," "Romeo and Juliet," "Bohemian Girl," and "Martha."

Slow and Serious Movements

Neutral (heavy) selections are those in which slow and serious movements predominate, having a distinct pathetic or plaintive appeal. "La Traviata," "Maritana," "La Boheme," and "Lucia di Lammermoor" are excellent.

Neutral (heavy dramatic) selections are those wherein the melodious is sacrificed for the dramatic effects in music. Selections of Wagnerian operas, Pagliacci, and the compositions of some of the present day imitators of Wagner are appropriate under this classification.

Music Plot for "The Toast of Death"

The plot of the New York Motion Picture Company's feature, "The Toast of Death," is self-explanatory. The action is all characteristic of the Orient. The scenes are all set in India, and the action forcibly illustrates the passion of the Orient. An excellent picture, with great musical possibilities.

18.	Desc. (Plaintive)	"Amo" (Whitmark)	To end.

NOTE.—No music should be used that will detract from the Indian character, or Oriental. For Nos. 15, 16, 17 the Cleopatra suite No. 1, 2, 3, 4, published by Carl Fischer, New York City, is very appropriate.

Nos. 1, 5, 7, 9 and 13 are all 2/4 numbers on the order of characteristic marches. They must be light. Nos. 2 and 3 accompany dances at a theatrical performance. Nos. 4, 8, 11 and 14 are waltzes in minor keys played slow. Called Oriental waltzes.

Nos. 6, 12, 15, 16, 17 and 18 are all slow numbers. Minor keys preferred. Must have a dramatic effect, as well as a legato pathetic or plaintive appeal. No. 10 can be a light 6/8 number, with an uncommon melody. Must not detract from the Oriental.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

C. B. A., Slatington, Pa.—The addresses you ask for are Carl Fischer, music publisher, No. 6-8 Cooper Square, New York City; Joseph W. Stern, No. 112 West Thirty-eighth street, New York City. All musical numbers suggested in plots issued in this department are considered by me to be excellent for picture playing. They can be used continuously at short intervening intervals. Most of them will be just as valuable in twenty years from now as good picture music. It might be interesting for you to know that many publishers are reprinting twenty year old numbers that are exceptionally good for picture playing.

R. E. B., Portland, Ore.—There has never been any competition in picture playing. The musical competition you speak of is among exhibitors. Some are musically extravagant, thereby catering to the eye.

Because one theatre has an expensive equipment and well selected musical organization, while another has not, does not constitute competition in picture playing. Musical competition will begin when the producer gives some thought to his picture music when the picture is being produced. The musicians received about $2,000 as compensation for the rehearsals of the Griffith picture, "Birth of the Nation."

Were excellent musical results as expensive as the above would make it appear, there would be little possibility of perfected picture music.

The actual cost for rehearsals of "Birth of the Nation" exceeded that of any Metropolitan opera. Until there is a fixed way of playing every picture to which the musician can intelligently adhere, there will be no competition in picture playing, and until there is such competition, the results will be poor.

As exhibitor you should not criticize harshly, for you will get better results by consultation and argument. The man never lived that knew everything.

Alice S. Burton, of Honolulu, writes in part: "I don't mean playing to change with every character as they appear on the screen. That would sound like chopsticks. I only change my music when the action of the scenes demands it; then follow the leads. The music must suit the character, from witches to lovers. Character is the keynote for motion picture music. There are all classes of dramas.

"A Shakespeare play requires a much different grade of music than a society drama. Character in music is the keynote to work from. I thoroughly believe that nearly every composition of music is adapted to a picture of some grade. I never start a picture until after the announcement of the reel. I start at the action of the picture. I think if music stops during the picture, the interest stops.

"The picture seems lifeless. The whole questions of music and the picture is artistic talent and a good instrument to work with. These are only suggestions which, I think you will agree with me, are for the benefit of our professional sisters and brothers in the picture world."

ORGANIST'S MELODY PICTURE MAY BECOME OFFICIAL SONG

J. WALFORD WATKISS, organist at the Queen Theatre, Houston, Tex., has composed a melody all his own which has been highly praised by Houstonians, and may become the official song of the Texas city.

Neutral (medley) selections are those made up of the popular or rag songs of the day, such as are published by our modern publishers. They can be used in comedies when the action is not of the slapstick variety. Their greatest value lies in the fact that some of the public demands that they hear something popular to be musically satisfied. Thematically they have no value in picture playing. Suggestively they are better used in their original form or as a two-step trot or waltz.

Neutral (characteristic) are more often suites of concerted numbers. There are some operas of strictly characteristic music, such as "Carmen" (Spanish) or "The Geisha" (Japanese). Among the suites will be found the Luigini Egyptian ballet suite of four numbers, Christian Kriens' Holland suite numbers 1, 2, 3 and 4, Oehmler's Cleopatra suite, an Oriental suite of four numbers, etc.

In using the aforementioned numbers the player must be positive that the screen action allows sufficient time for the proper rendition of such numbers. The one man instrument player will find it possible to break into such numbers at any time to illustrate some suggestive or melodramatic action, but he will find that any abrupt interruption of such classical numbers, especially when they are known, will not be appreciated by his audience.

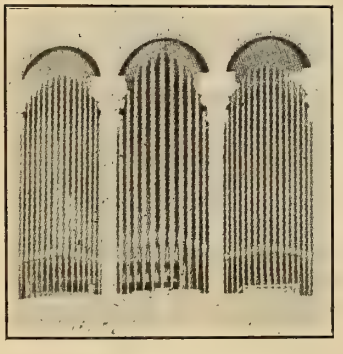
When such neutral numbers are placed at picture points whereat they will not sychronize with the picture, they will lose their value as music.

Pictures Full of Action

Selections of any kind are thought of little value today by those advanced in picture playing, they having been continually used as numbers to kill time, no one ever trying to properly set them. In pictures of much action, such numbers can never be appropriately used, nor are they safely used in dramas of one or two reels, the continued duration of sameness seldomly being of sufficient time to properly play them, their playing time being from nine to twenty-two minutes.

Until the player is very familiar with such numbers, he will find it very difficult to properly set them. No one should ever hurry their use, for after playing these numbers at proper times in the picture, the picture when seen will suggest their use and a properly constructed plot will show you the actual time wherein the number must be played. When the number you intend playing will last ten minutes you should look for a spot of twelve or more minutes adding a short number of proper theme to carry you to the next succeeding cue.

The classification of neutral numbers is difficult, for as a rule they are difficult to properly interpret and until you have successfully used them you will have trouble in locating their theme value.



You will know the value of picture music classification when you have brought the use of the above to a successful issue.

DAVIS, OF THE ELMWOOD, BUFFALO, N. Y., WAS FORMERLY IN THE SOUTH

ELMER S. DAVIS, who recently assumed the management of the Elmwood Theatre, one of the most beautiful and largest in Buffalo, N. Y., devoted solely to the presentation of silent dramas, is meeting with unusual success in his new venture. Mr. Davis went to the Elmwood Theatre from Keith's, a Main street house, where he had been for the last three years. Prior to coming to Buffalo, Mr. Davis built and successfully ran the Palace Theatre at Dallas, Texas, selling it after a few years and building the Elk in the same city.

From Dallas, he went to Fort Worth, where he was at the head of the American Theatre. He has been on the road in vaudeville. Since coming to the Elmwood a new reign of prosperity has come to that house. He has placed one of the best orchestras in the city in the theatre, books Big Four, Metro, General and other programs, and presents each in an unusual way. Mr. Davis plans to again augment his orchestra on September 1, and is to make the Elmwood a first run house from now on.

One-Man Orchestra instruments are not complete without a set of Organ Show Pipes. We specialize, made in sets or to measurements. Write for full details to

Adopted for the Screen by Lois Weber

DID you ever cry from sheer happiness? Did you ever laugh with a lump in your throat, while little thrills of joy swept over you? Did you ever see a photo-play so sweet and wholesome that the effect was that of a mental bath?

Were you ever so lifted out of yourself that you forgot to think of your thoughts and feel of your feelings? Can you imagine a play so strong as to make you oblivious to your surroundings, and yet so tender as to be comparable only to the dainty fragile things of life?

Did you ever see a play so satisfying that you wanted to get away by yourself and think about it; to live its scenes over again in memory? A picture so "altogether lovely" you would rather leave the theatre than to have your inward vision destroyed by the next play on the program?

That's "JEWEL." Book this photoplay marvel and you will have the fans talking about it and your theatre for months and months. Pronounced by leading film critics "The Perfect Photoplay."

Infatuation

A Mutual Master Picture

From Lloyd Osbourne's Wonderful Novel Of Love and Romance

To be released September 2nd

A young girl who hungers for love—who finds society life a humdrum existence—loses her heart to a star of the "ten-twenty-thirty." A wondrous story written by one who wrote as co-author with Robert Louis Stevenson.

Four Amazing Parts

"Infatuation" is a four-part feature. Each of the parts teems with an uncontrollable love—with situations that surprise and are unconventional. It is a strong story enacted in a bold way. The film version of "Infatuation", the novel by Lloyd Osbourne, published by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

A Cast of Stars

Margarita Fisher—the sprightly, black-haired star of the screen, plays the leading role—the role of the love hungry girl. In the all-star supporting cast are Lucille Ward, Joseph E. Singleton, Harry Pollard and a host of others—all favorites.

Superlative Scenic Effects

Exquisite effects have been obtained in this remarkable picture. There are scenes of social splendor—scenes of stage and dressing-room life—scenes that make you gasp—and wonder.

Good for a Run of Several Days

"Infatuation" is a play that all your patrons want to see. It is good for a run of several days—a big feature! Book it now! It will bring crowds—crowds—crowds.

THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE

"THE Battle Cry of Peace" is difficult to describe; impossible to compare. It is difficult to describe because the adjectives that fitly apply to it have, by long misuse, lost their meaning; impossible to compare because in its conception and realization J. Stuart Blackton has shattered all established ideas as to the possibilities of motion pictures.

In every field of achievement progress is made by slow degrees—when of a sudden some genius appears with a big and revolutionary idea.

Before the advent of "The Battle Cry of Peace" motion pictures were a pleasant diversion, a means of recreation; a few sought to teach. Their power as a vast, far-reaching medium of publicity—more encompassing even than the great power of the press—was never realized. J. Stuart Blackton saw this latent power and harnessed it to a great national propaganda.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" will find its way into the history of motion pictures as an epoch-making achievement—in the magnitude of its production, in the novelty of its appeal, in the idea that is behind it.

But—of vastly the greater significance—"The Battle Cry of Peace," as the exponent of a great national idea, will find its way into the history of our nation.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" is a call to arms against war. It is written and produced under the personal supervision of J. Stuart Blackton with acknowledgment to Hudson Maxim for facts contained in "Defenseless America."

During the present month it is being shown at the White House, before Army and Navy organizations, Governors of States and Mayors of the larger cities. It will be released early in September.

The Exhibitor and National Advertising

"DOES so-called national advertising pay from the exhibitor's viewpoint?" is a question raised by a contemporary.

To which most any advertising man—and it would seem any exhibitor—will reply: Why not as well raise the question: Does the national advertising of shoes, clothing, hats, drugs, cigars, food products—pay the dealer?

THEY stopped asking this question in the big commercial world some time ago—since, in fact, business grew up. And since motion pictures have grown up—to the rank of fifth among our present-day industries—it would seem a rather late day to bring forward this query.

THE only question raised today in connection with advertising to the public—or national advertising—is, how to do it successfully. And since it has been done successfully time and again with all kinds of articles, from the price of a penny up, it certainly can be done now with pictures—with good pictures.

FIRST: The pictures must be good—that is, they must be worth advertising; second, the manufacturer's motives must be sincere—that is, he must endeavor to sell pictures, and not, for instance, himself; and, third, the advertising campaign must be placed in the hands of an experienced man who will forge every link strong; who will make every dollar spent count in bringing people to the exhibitors' doors to see the pictures advertised.

MAGAZINE advertising—national in scope—that merely tells the public about the pictures, which is all it can do, goes only half way; it must be coupled with local newspapers, billboards, lobby display, electric signs—or some local advertising—which will tell the magazine reader where to see the pictures and so complete the selling effort.

In other words, it must not only be manufacturer advertising, but also exhibitor advertising. This makes it direct and complete.

WE talk a great deal—aimlessly—about co-operation. What better co-operation than this? What co-operation more practical, more logical, more necessary than a business-like combination between the maker and exhibitor of pictures to increase box-office receipts—in the very same way that dealer business always has been and always will be increased.

What objection can the exhibitor have? Even if he doesn't tie on to the manufacturer's advertising, and so get all the possible advantage of it, he is bound to get some benefit, even if he has but the feeblest advertising in his lobby or over his theatre to the effect that he shows the pictures advertised.

THE exhibitor must advertise. It is up to his shrewdness largely to know how to do it best and most economically—to choose wisely the mediums best suited to his means and location, whether they be newspapers, signs, billboards, mailing lists, lobby displays, slides, or all together.

But in each instance he needs the closest kind of working combination with the manufacturer, and the very basis of this is a manufacturer campaign of national advertising and all the preparedness that goes with it.

WHEREVER you go the successful exhibitor is a successful advertiser. Advertising is the rock basis of the show business.

Successful booking men are men alive to advertising possibilities. It is probably a fact that quite as much money has been lost by exhibitors in not advertising sufficiently well good pictures, as in showing poor pictures. At any rate, the two—advertising and good pictures—go hand in hand and each is as important as the other.

EXHIBITOR advertising was not as essential in the early days; but competition has made it a prime necessity today. Every exhibitor knows this, and should know it. Moreover, better pictures are being made today, and millions of people are as yet unaware of that fact.

They must be told—through sturdy campaigns of manufacturer—exhibitor—or, in other words, national advertising.

JUST so, manufacturer advertising to the public was not thought necessary in the industry's early days. The maker of pictures told his story simply to the exhibitor. But the very same advance has been made in pictures as had been made in every great industry.

The progressive manufacturer has said to himself: "I will go a step further. I will talk to the public. Then I will co-operate with the dealer and bring the public to his doors and to my pictures. And I will tell the exhibitor what I propose to do through his trade paper."

NATIONAL advertising is simply an evolutionary step. It is absolutely inevitable. All objection to it, or even any uncertainty as to its value to the exhibitor belong only to the past. MOTION PICTURE NEWS welcomes it as a certain evidence of this industry's growth and greatness.

THE recently announced advertising campaign of Paramount Pictures in the leading newspapers will undoubtedly be of great business value to the exhibitor and makers of these pictures.

It will do more, and so will other campaigns for other pictures. They will continue the great good already done in a broad way by previous campaigns in national magazines, namely, of acquainting the press and the public with the true status of the present-day motion picture, its artistry, its educational force and purpose, its appeal to all classes, its crying need for freedom from censorship.

The Exhibitor And National Advertising

Certainly this is good, too, for the exhibitor and for the whole industry. WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON.

The Lawlessness of Motion Picture Censorship

ANOTHER large section of the American people has been found incompetent to take care of themselves and in need of a moral guardian.

This time it is the city of Dallas, Texas, where censorship has just broken out in the form with which the events in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Kansas have made the industry unpleasantly familiar.

It is the same old story all over again, with merely a different cast of characters. Director of Public Welfare Elmer L. Scott, with whom the idea of censorship has apparently been a hobby for some time, is taking advantage of his official position to realize a grand scheme for "the regulation of all commercialized amusements in the city of Dallas."

Needless to say, his whole system of regulation pivots upon the motion picture.

MR. SCOTT is so firmly convinced that the motion picture should be censored, that one is tempted to expect some very specific and definite information from him as to exactly what pictures should be forbidden, and exactly why they should be forbidden.

Right there Mr. Scott proves to be dismally disappointing. He does not know what pictures should be forbidden, or why.

He insists upon the prohibition of pictures which "develop conditions prejudicial or harmful to the morals, or are in any way vulgar, indecent or disorderly."

But he does not show himself able to trace the line between that which is prejudicial or harmful to the morals, and that which is not; between the vulgar and the refined; between the orderly and the disorderly.

AS for pictures which are indecent, obscene or lewd, to create censors for their regulation is quite as unnecessary as to appoint special officers for the purpose of preventing men and women from committing suicide. There are cases of both, it is true, but there are already plenty of statutes dealing with these cases in existence, and plenty of officers to enforce them.

The police are fully equipped to handle such offences —they have both the power of statute and the power of public opinion.

DO we need to remind Mr. Scott that, were he to recommend a similar law to regulate any other business, he would be required to lay down definite and invariable standards and values upon which the officers could proceed, and to which the members of that business could intelligently conform, knowing exactly when they were within the law?

That much is due to the men who will suffer if they violate the law. Ignorance of the law does not shield a man from the consequences of its violation. But the state owes it to every citizen that its laws shall be so simple, so clear, so exact and specific, that he can know, if he will take the trouble, just what the law is.

BUT the motion picture producer who knows by heart the censorship law of every state where censorship exists, and can recite it word for word, knows no more how to produce a picture that will certainly conform with that law—as, for instance, a catsup manufacturer knows how to make a bottle of catsup that will conform with the Food and Drugs Act—than if he had never heard of censorship.

Every censorship law that has ever been enacted is a riddle and a cryptogram. It leaves the censor who is appointed to enforce it as much at sea as the producer who is required to obey it.

THAT is to say, it permits the censor to enforce the law as he sees fit, against any picture he dislikes, without any semblance of restraint, any guiding standard, any exact definition of his power.

Such a state of affairs demoralizes the motion picture business; it cannot do otherwise. And, in the end, it demoralizes the censor who must work thus blindly because he has no light, except the flickering will-o'-the-wisp of personal opinion and conjecture.

The utter impossibility of fixing standards of judgment in these matters that will be sufficiently constant and reliable to prevent the wrecking of the entire motion picture business, is only one of the reasons—and they are many—for denouncing censorship of any kind, legal or non-legal, statutory or voluntary.

SOME day the monstrosities called censorship laws will be brought squarely and forcibly to the attention of the courts, as they have not yet been.

In that day, we are confident, the striking injustice of those laws, their absolute lack of equity, and the menace of their example will be so overwhelmingly evident to the administrators of justice that they will be pronounced against the spirit of the Constitution of this country, and against the spirit of the nation that has grown and flourished thereunder.

And we are equally confident that that day is not far distant.

Muddlers Blight Film Welfare in Texas

Meddling Citizens in Dallas Meet in Municipal Building for Purpose of Inaugurating Strict Censorship—Two Ministers Disagree Over the "Morals" of a Picture—Judge McCormick, in Favor of Leaving the Matter to Parents, Points Out Conflicting Testimony as Instance of Senseless Censorship

Special to Motion Picture News

Dallas, Tex, Aug. 18.

THE censorship bug is again in prominence in Dallas. A few days ago, the Board of Public Welfare met in the Municipal Building, with about a hundred visitors present. The film exchanges were represented by Messrs. Depinet, Hudson, Peter, Russell, Reed, Byrd, Meade, Hill, Levison, Dembow, Peebles and Lowe. The exhibitors were represented by Messrs. Lewis, Bissinger, Nevils and Jorgenson.

The proposed ordinance was read, among its features being "A censor shall be appointed by the mayor from the applicants nominated by the Board of Public Welfare. The censor may condemn and prohibit a film, and if the exhibitor thinks that he has been unjustly treated by the condemnation of the production, he may appeal to "the Censor Board of Appeals, to consist of three people, from applicants nominated by the Board of Public Welfare."

McCormick Attacks Censorship

Judge McCormick, a member of the Welfare Board, then introduced a substitute recommendation, in which he asked that in as much as "censorship is a war measure," and it should be treated as such, that no action be taken with reference to censorship of motion pictures, leaving the matter to the mothers and fathers to censor pictures for their children. He did not secure a second to his motion, although he made a very brilliant talk against censorship of any nature.

Rev. J. Frank Smith, a local minister, prominent in fights against the picture shows, then arose to tell why censorship was needed. In his talk, he said he had visited a theatre at the manager's request, with other pastors to view a picture that was to be shown later.

He said that he talked with another preacher when they were leaving the theatre. The other pastor thought the picture was simply "rotten," and Rev. Smith said, "And I really thought the picture was a very fine one."

Preachers Cannot Agree

Judge McCormick then arose and said: "Here is an instance where two preachers saw the same picture, one with the opinion that it was good and the other that it was rotten, and yet Dr. Smith asks for censorship to be left in the hands of any one or half dozen persons, for our city of 130,000 people."

The different film men urged that the standard for pictures in Dallas be the standard of the National Board of Censorship at New York, and that their rulings be accepted.

Mr. Scott, the chairman of the Welfare Board, then jumped up with his face very bright, as if he had scored a hit and said: "Do you mean you want us to adopt the 'standard' of the National Board or their rulings?" Mr. Peter asked if it was not the same. Mr. Scott answered that it was emphatically not.

He said he had letters from Jacob W. Binder, of the National Board of Censorship, that, while not stated in so many words, seemed to him to mean that the film manufacturers had so controlled the National Board that just censorship of pictures by that body was a thing of the past; and that Binder's correspondence would tend to show that the film men dictated to the National Board what should and what should not bear the stamp of approval of that body. Some one said "Just another case of a good movement poisoned at its source."

Mayor Lindsley said that when Mr. Orrin G. Cocks, advisory secretary of the National Board, was in Dallas during May, in the talk he and Cocks had regarding the question of censorship, Cocks advised that they have a local board, and even went into the question of the personnel of that body. Cocks said that there were often times when the National Board and the producers were at "outs" and that during that time the producers would not submit film for review.

He said also that there were many productions that while they might be good to be shown in some towns, in others, they should not be shown, and that some pictures were permissible in the North, while they should not be shown in the South, and vice versa.

Mayor Lindsley said that Cocks told him that the National Board was very lenient in using its stamp of approval on films, and that local sentiment should govern the use of various productions.

Hot Words from Policeman

During the discussion, Police Commissioner Winfrey had occasion to make one of his campaign speeches, which was applauded very strongly by the few ladies present. During his speech, he said in part: "The proposition is simply this: Before we had a good censorship ordinance (referring to one that was never enforced), and as soon as the new commission was installed, all you film men and picture show men come racing up here to have us stop all censorship.

"You ask us to go by the rulings of the National Board, when you say that your companies are the ones that pay the salaries and expenses of that body. You ask us to give you the censorship that you manufacture for yourselves. Your own manufacturers saw the need of censorship and organized a body for that purpose, and yet you ask us not to do the same thing for ourselves. You come up here with a lot of requests and want us to handle this question your way."

After the ladies in the committee room had ceased their applause, Judge McCormick arose and said that inasmuch as he was the only one that had requested that there be no censorship at all, and as he had the right to make such a request, as he was a member of the Welfare Board, which was then in session, he felt there was a slight mistake made. To which Mr. Winfrey immediately "took back water," and said, "No, not you, Judge, but these other fellows that have been after us ever since the new commissioners were elected."

About this time two or three film men said they were present at this and other meetings discussing the question, at the request of the mayor and chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, Mr. Scott. After this second "call down" on his statements, Commissioner Winfrey did not "speech" further; but the majority of those present enjoyed a good laugh.

Mr. Babcock, the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, made a very good talk before the Board, reciting the facts concerning the amount of business done by the exchanges and supply concerns in Dallas, comparing it with other business lines.

Eighty Per Cent. Adult Patrons

He said that to hamper the film business in Dallas, the center of the Southwest by local ordinances was a grave action. He said that the Chamber of Commerce had seen fit to do what they could to help make the film business better, and that the city might do likewise.

He said that it was a mistaken idea altogether that the majority of the patrons at Dallas picture shows were children. He said the managers had told him the percentage was about 80 per cent. grown-ups and 20 per cent. children.

Commissioner Shannon finally succeeded in getting a modification of the ordinance to its present form, by suggesting that all "this talk and argument be eliminated and the Welfare Board and the picture people get together on a half-way ground." When Mr. Scott, chairman of the Welfare Board, suggested the changes making the ordinance as follows:

The standard of the local Board shall be that of the National Board of Censorship, with any particular provisions that may be necessary to fit local conditions.

Film Men See Ray of Hope

Instead of the censor-inspector condemning and prohibiting a picture, this individual may ask the theatre manager to refrain from showing it, and if he persist in so doing, the censor-inspector may appeal to the three members, that constitute the Board of Appeals. If they say the picture cannot be shown, then it is final.

The film men are glad that the "one-person" censorship has at least been done away with in the ordinance, as they believe they will be given a better chance with three than one censor.

The Welfare Board recommends the ordinance to the City Commission. Whether it will pass as it stands or be changed again, is not known now.

S. G. Parker.

BRIEFS SUBMITTED TO COURT IN FILM FIGHT CASE

Briefs have been filed by the attorneys representing the Kalisthenic Exhibition Company, Inc., of New York and by John F. A. Merrill, United States District Attorney, of Portland, Me., who represents the government in the equity case recently brought in the United States District Court in which the plaintiff seeks the admission of films of the Johnson-Willard prize fight at Havana, into the United States. William T. Emmons, collector of the Port of Maine, held up the films on the ground that the federal law prevents such admission and action has been brought against the government.

The brief filed for the plaintiff company covers forty-five pages of legal size paper and was submitted by Loucks and Alexander of New York, Tyler, Corneaugh and Eames of Boston, Woodman and Whitehouse of Portland and McLaughlin and Stern of New York. The government's brief was prepared by Arthur Chapman of Portland, assistant United States attorney.

In the brief the attorneys for the company submit that where the film offered for entry is a negative, which at the present time and in its present form is incapable of public exhibition so as to be reasonably intelligible to the eye of the observer, and where the purposes of the film is simply to make positives for exhibitions before clubs and associations of limited membership, such exhibitions would not be public exhibitions, and are impliedly permitted by the statutes of the state and the act of Congress in question.

The brief of the government points out among other things that there is no equitable jurisdiction because it is not shown that there is any irreparable loss to the plaintiff corporation by excluding the films.

KLEINE'S "THE POLITICIANS" FEATURES BICKEL AND WATSON

"The Politicians," Aaron Hoffman's celebrated farce, is now in course of filming at the Kleine studios, with a Broadway cast featuring Bickel and Watson. Such well known players as Snitz Edwards, Ruby Hoffman, Alma Hanlon, Florence Morrison and John Nicholson will support the famous comedians. The precedent in matters of exquisite interiors and the general excellence of detail set by "Hello Bill" will be followed in "The Politicians."

JEROME LEWIS JOINS KLEINE SELLING FORCES

Jerome Lewis, well known in eastern film circles, has been added to the George Kleine forces. He will travel out of the New York office, filling the vacancy made by the resignation of Ed. Guzman.

PUBLICITY FOR PARAMOUNT TRAVEL SERIES DESCRIBED IN BOOKLET

An attractive booklet describing the Paramount Travel series has just been issued to exhibitors from the Paramount press department. Illustrations and press copy describing the South American series of pictures, fill its pages, and twelve different reels are placed before the theatre owner.

"How we are backing you through advertising" is the caption on one page, and illustrations of folders, heralds, posters, letters and lectures are given, together with the offer of a free introductory film of 500 feet.

This describes pictorially the Paramount camera men and helpers embarking for their tropical trip.

Florida, the Keys, Cuba, Jamaica, Panama, Chile and Peru are covered in these travel pictures, each reel of which is finished off with a clever animated cartoon.

FROHMAN COMPLETES FILM VERSION OF SUTRO PLAY

The Frohman Amusement Corporation has just completed a five-reel photoplay, entitled "John Glayde's Honour," written by the English author, Alfred Sutro, which was produced and played in this country by James K. Hackett, and in London by Sir George Alexander.

Judging from the success of "The Builder of Bridges," also written by Alfred Sutro, "John Glayde's Honour" will be a very popular attraction. It is not yet decided how this picture will be released.

William L. Sherrill has completed the sale of "The Builder of Bridges" for the British Isles, through the London office, for what is said to be the largest price ever received for any one production.

"NATION" TOUCHES 400 MARK IN NEW YORK CITY

With the passing of the old theatrical season last week D. W. Griffith's great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" established the year's record run for continued performances. On Friday night the 400 presentation in New York City was reached.

The new season starts this week with the big production remaining one of the most talked of attractions on the list. This starts the twenty-seventh week of the engagement at the Liberty theatre. There are so many elements of appeal in Griffith's epical treatment of the subject that it looks as if it will establish the record for all offerings in New York.

The linking of history and romance and the wealth of detail crowded into the production are qualities which assist in making this offering so popular.

STARS AND SCENES FROM THREE OF THE SEPTEMBER GROUP OF THE NEW FOX "ONE-A-WEEK" FEATURES

THEDA BARA AND WILLIAM E. SHAY AS THEY APPEAR IN "THE TWO ORPHANS"

BETTY NANSEN AND ARTHUR HOOPS IN "THE SONG OF HATE"

ROCKLIFFE FELLOWES IN "REGENERATION"

4 Fox Subjects for Next Month with Elaborate Sets

"The Two Orphans," Featuring Theda Bara, Is First Release, "Regeneration," Scheduled for Second Week in September, Contains Many Noted Scenic Effects

AN announcement of peculiar interest to exhibitors the country wide is made by William Fox in presenting the first month's program of the new one-a-week policy. Mr. Fox presents four unusual and remarkable features to herald the commencement of the new policy.

For the first week in September the release will be a spectacular and dramatic presentation of the famous drama, "The Two Orphans" by Adolphe D'Ennery in screen form. The picturization of this drama was conceived, written and produced by Herbert Brenon, the director of "The Clemenceau Case," and "Kreutzer Sonata," for the Fox firm.

Theda Bara, Jean Sothern and William E. Shay are featured in "The Two Orphans," which is one of the most scenically elaborate photodramas so far witnessed, and upon which more than $300,000 was expended.

For the second week in September William Fox presents Rockcliffe Fellowes and Anna Q. Nilsson in a visualization of "The Regeneration," based upon "My Mamie Rose," Owen Kildare's world-known novel. This feature which is directed by Raoul A. Walsh is remarkable for a noteworthy cast, among them being William A. Sheer, who plays Skinny the Rat, a remarkable characterization and Earl Harbaugh, the author of the scenario, to whom was intrusted the important role of the assistant district attorney.

Mr. Walsh has succeeded in incorporating in this photoplay many remarkable scenic effects among which is the burning an excursion steamer on the Hudson which scene by the way, was responsible for the calling out of the New York police and fire department. "The Regeneration" is one of the most graphic and dramatically noteworthy recent film dramas.

"The Song of Hate," featuring Betty Nansen, Dorothy Bernard and Arthur Hoops, is the third of the September releases on the new program. "The Song of Hate" is a modern society drama based upon Victorien Sardou's universally known "La Tosca." As directed by J. Gordon Edwards, it is a poignant exposition on the sins and follies of the twentieth century men and women.

The production has been screened massively and engages the services of hundreds of people. From the first scene flashed upon the screen to "Passed by the Board of Censors," there is not a dull moment in the throbbing and thrilling action.

The fourth release as announced by William Fox is William Farnum, the celebrated star of "Samson," "A Gilded Fool," "The Plunderer," and other Fox successes in "The Wonderful Adventure," which was produced by Frederic Thomson.

In Mr. Farnum's support are seen Dorothy Green and a brilliant assemblage of well-known photoplayers. "The Wonderful Adventure," is by Captain Wilbur Lawton and provides Mr. Farnum with a magnificent vehicle for the display of his striking dramatic talent. The photography of "The Wonderful Adventure" is bound to cause nation wide comment.

Mr. Farnum in this latest of his screen successes is seen as two characters, John Stanley and Edward Demarest, two men who resemble each other in a startling manner facially, but who are diametrically opposed in their inner souls.

Demarest is a profligate and a dope fiend, while Stanley is an upright and honorable man. By a strange freak of fortune, John Stanley becomes "husband in name only" to Helen Demarest. How he supports this strange manner of life problem of Helen Stanley and Demarest are finally solved, makes a photodrama of decidedly unique interest.

Future announcements from William Fox concerning the weekly releases for the month of October will be of equal interest to exhibitors.

Triangle Film Aims to Get Chain of 1,000 $2 Houses

Acquires Knickerbocker, New York, the Studebaker, Chicago, and Is on Verge of Completing Negotiations for Boston and Philadelphia Theatres

NEGOTIATIONS have been completed for the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York. Through Klaw and Erlanger the Triangle Film Corporation will have control of the time of this theatre for one year beginning in September. This will be the New York house in which the plays and comedies of the Griffith-Ince-Sennett combination will be brought out weekly. The film plays will be produced at the regular theatre scale of prices graded from two dollars downward.

The plan as fully determined upon is to offer prominent stars in two five reel feature dramas which will be brought out under the supervision of D. W. Griffith and Thomas Ince and two two-reel comedies under the supervision of Mack Sennett.

The definite date for the first week has not been settled but the new occupants take over the Knickerbocker the first week in September and will make changes there before inaugurating the new policy. This is the first of the prominent theatres to be secured for the Triangle combination. The new company has secured the Studebaker theatre in Chicago and expects to have houses in Boston and Philadelphia.

With these houses as their nucleus the Triangle film plays will be presented in a chain of theatres in all the cities and larger centers of this country and Canada. Previous plans already announced for the Triangle Film Corporation state that over fifty of the most prominent stars on the American and English stages have been engaged.

The initial bill in the Knickerbocker Theatre will include Douglas Fairbanks, Raymond Hitchcock and Frank Keenan.

The Triangle executive forces are at present pushing the work upon the preliminary film plays and comedies to be released under their new arrangements. It is estimated that by the time the application for franchises are disposed of that over 1,000 houses in this country and Canada will be included in the chain presenting Triangle film plays.

These franchises are being negotiated for prior to the opening of the Knickerbocker engagement, so that the new combination can be started at once.

The Knickerbocker will be the original starting point for all the big plays in the eastern territory. The Studebaker will be opened in Chicago at about the same time and will be the point of origin for these attractions in the middle western territory.

A TRIO OF ESSANAY RELEASES FOR AUGUST, GRAVE AND GAY

Edna Mayo in "The Woman Hater" (Aug. 21)—Charles Chaplin in "The Bank" (Aug. 9)—"Le Grand's Revenge" (Aug. 17)

"MIRTH OF A NATION" IS BURLESQUE BY VAN LOAN

"The Mirth of the Nation," a five-reel burlesque and travesty, written by H. H. Van Loan for the Universal, in now on the stocks at Universal City. This big feature comedy is said to have more laughs in it than a striped hyena and the fact that Van Loan wrote it certainly would indicate that such is the case.

"The Mirth of the Nation" will be issued in book form shortly by Grosset and Dunlap, publishers of 518 West Twenty-sixth street, New York City. The scenario of the multiple-reel comedy has been copyrighted in pamphlet form at Washington.

Ohio Public Pledges Aid in Censor-Shackle Fight

Exhibitors Will Receive, According to Present Indications, Five Times Required Number of Names for Petition in Referendum Vote—Governor and Chairman of League in Tilt

Special to Motion Picture News

Cleveland, Aug. 18.

THROUGH an exchange of letters, Governor Frank B. Willis has become involved in a discussion of the movement started in Cleveland by the Motion Picture Referendum League to put to a referendum vote this fall the state law that provides for motion picture censorship by an Ohio board.

Chairman B. J. Sawyer, of the Referendum League, which seeks to create Ohio sentiment in favor of repealing the censorship law, has received a letter from Governor Willis. This was an answer to a letter written by Mr. Sawyer to the Governor in which Mr. Sawyer asserted that the Willis slogan, "Let the people rule," which was used extensively during the gubernatorial campaign last fall, was being violated under the Willis administration.

Mr. Sawyer also averred that politics had a part in the conduct of the affairs of the board of censors. The Governor said that he did not "approve of any statement that has been issued by any department of the state if it is not true." Governor Willis continued:

"In order that this matter may be brought to the attention of the state board of censors, I am taking the liberty of transmitting your letter directly to the chairman of the board.

"I also agree with you that politics ought not to enter into the conduct of the affairs of the board and my own opinion is that it does not enter into the work of the present board. In my judgment films ought to be censored solely with a view to the public welfare and not with reference to political considerations."

Upon receipt of Governor Willis' letter, Mr. Sawyer sent another communication to the Governor, in which he enclosed an affidavit to the effect that the movement for a referendum originated with Cleveland exhibitors and denying the truth of a statement attributed to the board that the movement was promulgated by the National Board of Censors and by exchange men.

The state board issued this statement a few weeks ago and declared that the exhibitors were being used as a tool by the film interests and the national board. Signatures are piling in on the exhibitors and there will be five times the required number of names when the petitions are filed.

First 2 and Last 2 Days in Week American Releases

"Flying A" and Beauty Brands Are Now Scheduled for Rental by Exhibitors on These Dates Beginning August 23—Change Made Necessary by Additional Beauty Subject

A RADICAL change has been made in the releasing schedule of the American Film Company, whose film outputs are distributed throughout the United States exclusively by the Mutual Film Corporation.

Hereafter, "Flying A" dramas and American Beauty films will be released on Monday, Tuesday Friday and Saturday. This announcement covers all releases on and after August 23, irrespective of release dates named in advertising copy.

The decision to release two Beauty films instead of one each week and other developments have made necessary these changes.

The American Film Company also announces the release of a four-reel feature entitled "Infatuation," a Mutual master picture.

Following is a list of releases as compiled by R. R. Nehls, manager of the American Film Company:

Monday, August 23, a two-reel "Flying A" drama, "Drawing the Line"; Tuesday, August 24, an American Beauty film, "His Mysterious Profession"; Friday, August 27, a one-reel "Flying A" drama, "Mixed Wires"; Saturday, August 28, an American Beauty film, "Uncle Heck—By Heck!"; Monday, August 30, a two-reel "Flying A"drama, "A Divine Decree"; Tuesday, August 31, an American Beauty film, "Green Apples"; Thursday, September 2, a four-reel American Mutual master picture, "Infatuation"; Friday, September 3, a one-reel "Flying A" drama, "The Spirit of Adventure"; Saturday, September 4, an American Beauty film, "A Bully Affair" Saturday, September 4, a one-reel "Flying A" drama, "A Question of Honor"; Monday, September 6, a two-reel "Flying A" drama, "In Trust"; Tuesday, September 7, American Beauty film, "Plot and Counter-Plot"; Friday, September 10, a one-reel "Flying A" drama, "The Forecast"; Saturday, September 11, an American Beauty film (title not announced); Monday, September 13, a two-reel "Flying A" drama, "The Signor's Silver Buckle"; Tuesday, September 14, an American Beauty film, "Incognito"; Friday, September 17, a one-reel "Flying A" drama, "The Little Lady Next Door"; Saturday, September 18, an American Beauty film (title not announced), and Saturday, September 18, a three-reel release (title not announced).

FLORENCE ROCKWELL TO STAR FOR FROHMAN

Florence Rockwell has been secured by the Frohman Amusement Corporation to star in its next production, work on which will commence in a few days, at the studio in West Fifty-fourth street, New York.

Miss Rockwell has a splendid line of stage success to her credit, and her advent to the screen should add another line to the argument that beauty, grace and acting, as developed by the stage, are the best training for the actor on the screen.

CORY, NATIONAL VICE PRESIDENT, RECOVERS FROM ILLNESS

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, Aug. 6.

M. E. Cory, the well known San Francisco exhibitor, who has been seriously ill since the close of the national convention, at which he was elected National vice-president of the League, has entirely recovered and is devoting his attention again to looking after the interests of the Cory and Fairyland theatres.

"Chronicles of Bloom Center" Vivid Rural Picture

Distinctive Characters and Organizations Associated with Life in the Country Districts Visualized in Selig Series of 12 Two-Reel Rural Comedies

IN the Selig series of a dozen two reel rural comedies, released in the near future, each comedy contains virtually the same cast of characters and each comedy is complete in itself, possessing an easily recognized plot. The same characters disport themseles in every one of the series of comedies, thus cultivating and sustaining continued interest in these real American people.

The rural characters have been drawn true to life and those who have read the scenarios pronounce the idea one of the best having to do with real American life since the time of Charles Hoyt. These comedies deal with ruralites of true Yankee persuasion, people you have seen, people you know, and the stories of their trials and triumphs, frailties and foibles, are not overdrawn, and yet they are interesting, highly entertaining and, at times, appealing.

Under the name of "The Chronicles of Bloom Center," these comedies will be released one every two weeks for six months, starting in the near future.

Colonel Selig in a recent interview asserted: "There is a sad dearth of true comedy both on the stage and in motion pictures. The people are tiring of the slap stick near-humor. We have worked for over a year in the endeavor to provide a series of comedies which will carry situations logically humorous.

"We think that we have succeeded in our efforts and we are sure 'The Chronicles of Bloom Center' will be cordially received by the exhibitors.

"I thought so well of 'The Chronicles of Bloom Center,' that I ordered a complete village erected at Los Angeles. It was complete even to the town pump. There is the general store and postoffice, 'Melodeon Hall,' the smithy, the church, the volunteer fire department and other rural essentials. We venture the prediction that Bloom Center, the name of this village will become dear to the hearts of picture play lovers and most popular with exhibitors before many days."

"The Chronicles of Bloom Center" is all about the "home folks," it will recall the nearly-forgotten days of youth to some; and it will vividly recall the best of days—the days back home—to others. There is only good nature and cleanliness to be found in them.

Postmaster Pash, Constable Plum, Phil Pickle, Mrs. Plum, the Ladies' Art Embroidery Club, and other characters and organizations peculiar to rural America will appear in "The Chronicles of Bloom Center." The home talent theatricals, quilting bees and the general congregating of the villagers at the "station," when the "3:30" comes in, are all faithfully set forth by an all-star cast of character actors and actresses especially engaged by the Selig Company for the series.

Marshall Neilan was the director in charge of the production.

It is expected that "The Chronicles of Bloom Center" will be released in the near future and the Selig Company is preparing for them for special exploitation, believing that the "Chronicles" will fill a long felt want on the part of motion picture exhibitors.

Montgomery Signed to Direct Horsley Animal Films

New Director Will Begin Production of Two-Reel Jungle Subjects for Mutual Program on the Arrival at Los Angeles of F. W. Doughty, Engaged for Special Scenarios

FRANK MONTGOMERY has been engaged by David Horsley to direct the two reel animal pictures, featuring the Bostock collection of performing animals, which Mr. Horsley will release through the Mutual.

Mr. Montgomery, who is now in Los Angeles, will await the arrival of Francis Worcester Doughty, the author whom Mr. Horsley has engaged to prepare the scripts for these releases, to confer on points of production before beginning work. Mr. Doughty left New York last week for the West.

The animal subjects will be filmed in the hexagonal arena in Mr. Horsley's new plant in Los Angeles, built especially to facilitate staging such productions. This arena is arranged in six sections of fan like shape, each with a background to give the locals of the scene to pictures. The background is not made up of artificial "props," but is obtained by the use of full growing trees, shrubbery and vines, as it is in the jungle of the country in which the scenes are laid.

The players in the animal pictures will work face to face with the brute performers without the protection afforded by bars, wires, or nets. The only avenue of escape the players have is a moat surrounding an island at the hub of the arena. This moat is filled with water, into which the players dive and swim to the other side of the fence, which divides one section from another, in case of necessity. The animals will not follow the players into the water. The camera is stationed on the island in the center of the arena, from which point the director oversees the production.

With this studio equipment and with the famous Bostock animals and trainers, including Captain Jack Bonavita, at his command, to say nothing of scenarios as supplied by such a writer as Mr. Doughty, Mr. Montgomery has every facility to make animal pictures of the type and quality Mr. Horsley has set for a standard.

Mr. Montgomery has long been recognized as a director of unusual capabilities. Years ago he was with the old 101 Bison Company, producing Western pictures, as a player. Later he was with Kalem as director. Following this he was with the Universal and then directed a company of his own known as the Liberty Feature Film Company, with studios in San Mateo, Cal.

FRANK MONTGOMERY

The first animal picture will be released about the middle of September.

STEPPLING WILL DIRECT SECOND AMERICAN "BEAUTY" COMPANY

John Steppling has been given the directorship of the second American "Beauty" Company, recently formed at the Santa Barbara studios of the American Film Company.

Already Director Steppling has produced three comedy-dramas, the latest of which is "Uncle Heck, by Heck," which will be released Tuesday, August 31.

The increased demand among exhibitors for American "Beauty" films led to the formation of the second company. As already announced, two "Beauty" releases will be made each week, instead of one as heretofore.

WEAK SPOTS IN A STRONG BUSINESS----XXIV

Producers Must Feel the Public Pulse, Declares Thomas H. Ince, Vice-President of the Triangle Film Corporation, Who Also Reminds Manufacturers of the Necessity on Their Part of Giving the People What They Demand—With Public Sitting in Judgment Censorship Problems Will Be Solved, Too

"ONE of the serious problems with which the producer of motion pictures has to deal is feeling the public pulse in order to find out for himself the class of film that is popular and that which is not," says Thomas H. Ince, vice-president of the Triangle Film Corporation.

"Unfortunately, some producers do not attempt to get in touch with the public at all, preferring to produce pictures that please them and disposing of all further doubts as to the ultimate success of the film by expending a large amount of money on yellow advertising.

"I consider this the most outstanding so-called wrong of the motion picture business and one that should be immediately corrected if the industry is to continue to bask in the favored light of public opinion.

"The supreme critic of all motion pictures is the public, not the producer, nor the exhibitor, nor the dramatic writer. The public is, therefore, the one to whom both producers and exhibitors should cater.

"Glance over the motion picture field of the world and you will notice that the most successful producers and exhibitors are those who have made a close observation of the wants of their auditors, the people. Those who have not done this in many instances have signally failed.

Effects of Misdirected Publicity

"I shall recite an instance in which exhibitorial obstinacy in the aforementioned respect, combined with the injudicious use of advertising and yellow journalism, conspired to put one of the biggest motion picture theatre owners in the industry nearly out of business.

"The man had all the facilities at his command, including abundant capital, for a first-class, successful theatre. But he did not believe in catering to the public. He took the stand that the public should cater to him.

"He began by turning down a perfectly high-class brand of films because he didn't like the names of the brands. He didn't inquire into the quality of the pictures. The producer's brands combined names that lacked euphony, or something of the sort, and that was enough to condemn them on.

"So he satisfied himself, not by consulting his patrons, the public, but by putting in a program very much inferior to the one he had rejected because the names of the brands grated on his ears. He bolstered up the second-hand program by employing a clever advertising man to lure the public to his theatre by high-sounding misstatements and saffron-hued advertising.

"The plan worked for a little while, but it was soon evident that the public saw his pictures and failed to come again. His receipts dwindled at an alarming rate. He began to lose money, saw ruin staring him in the face. Then he was advised to investigate the brand of high-class films with the discordant names. He saw some of the pictures run off, the first he had seen. He was intelligent and noted the difference at once.

Changed Policy

"He signed up the new program, discharged the advertising man with the wild imagination and took on a young fellow who could write the truth. Misrepresentation had gotten him nowhere, so he turned about on another tack. In two months he had built up a strong patronage and he is still prospering and is one of the foremost and highly respected in the great league of American exhibitors.

"Others can do the same. This should be a lesson to the manufacturer of film plays as well as the exhibitor. The former must get away from the idea that to "bunk" the exhibitor into taking poor films which survive only by yellow journalism is a sane business method, for it is not.

"And the exhibitor must forget that one of those easy kind is born every minute; that the world is very large and that there is always a new bank roll to dig into in every town and city.

"These reprehensible tactics do not last, at best. They create distrust and overcaution, two elements of which are bound to injure the industry irreparably if permitted to continue.

"The manufacturer should be on the level with the exhibitor, and the latter should be absolutely on the square with the general public. It is all right to engage a clever, big-salaried advertising man and run a highly-advertised program, but be sure that what is told of a picture is the truth. The public may be gullible, but the public is also very critical, and it has the power to make or break a man or a corporation, no matter how big and powerful.

"The stage has always had a most wholesome respect for public opinion. In my stage days there was always the little peek-hole in the curtain through which, unknown to the audience, we watched the effect of a play on the public mind.

Study Likes and Dislikes of Public

"We studied its pulse, its emotions, its wants, its dislikes. We caught the audience unawares and therefore got, first-hand, the unvarnished truth about our plays.

"We are doing the same in motion pictures. I make it a point on the appearance of a production to place half a dozen men in the audience, to mingle with it, and thus come by the strong points and weaknesses of the film play. Sometimes I go myself and I consider that I have learned a lot about the motion picture business by this means. Then I get together with the others and we compare notes. Or, I visit and talk with the exhibitors and exchange men through whom I have come in possession of many valuable pointers which have stood me in good stead in other productions.

"My advice to producers and exhibitors alike is to get in touch with the people who are the great arbiters of the film play. Upon their judgment alone rests the success or failure of the producer's hopes.

"If we have disregarded the views of the public in the past let us determine on a new course from now on. With the public sitting in judgment on our productions there will be no further use for drastic censorship and other unlikable, hypercritical things with which the motion picture business seems to be at present obsessed."

Film Conditions Studied by Rothacker in West

President of Industrial Moving Picture Company Spends Month and a Half in Cities of Northwest and Pacific Coast, Where He Made Himself Conversant with Screen Situation

W. R. ROTHACKER, president of the Industrial Moving Picture Company of Chicago, who has been on the Pacific Coast for the past month and a half, returned to his office on Tuesday, August 10.

While in the West Mr. Rothacker visited Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Spokane, Salt Lake City, Colorado Springs and Denver.

In Los Angeles he spent considerable time with Carl Laemmle, who personally condutcd him about Universal City. David Horsley explained to him the many things he accomplished in the few months it took him to erect his film town. In Los Angeles, Mr. Rothacker also visited the Carl Ray studios.

In Frisco he spent some time with Mr. Collins, the official photographer of the exposition. Several days were spent with the Pikes Peak Film Company at Colorado Springs. Mr. Wiswall, of the Columbia Amusement Company at Colorado Springs, entertained Mr. Rothacker during his visit.

While in Los Angeles, Frisco, Seattle, Portland, Spokane, Salt Lake City, Colorado Springs, Denver and the many other cities throughout the West which he visited, Mr. Rothacker appointed camera representatives to represent the Industrial Moving Picture Company in the procuring of current events for the "Tribune Animated Weekly" made by his company.

GEORGE KLEINE'S "MONEY MASTER" TO BE SHOWN AUGUST 24

The Candler theatre, 226 West Forty-second street, New York, will be used Tuesday, August 24, for a special exhibitors' performance of the "Money Master," George Kleine's five-part feature, starring Frank Sheridan with Paul McAllister and Fania Marinoff. An exhibitors' performance of Edison's "Vanity Fair," which had been scheduled for the same date at the Candler, will be announced later.

FINDS EVERYTHING IN THE "NEWS"

"When you drop into a place to talk with an exhibitor, it makes no difference what you talk about—construction, refraction, singing, pictures, advertising or decorations—he keeps referring to something he has seen in MOTION PICTURE NEWS. You've just got to quit letting them tell you and take it yourself," was the explanation of Joseph Levy, manager of the Fox Film Exchange in Omaha, Neb., as he handed in his subscription last week.

"This has happened frequently of late and it is time I get in the bandwagon," he said. Mr. Levy had been buying MOTION PICTURE NEWS at newsstands in an effort to keep posted, but he declared that was not sufficient.

"Carmen" Completed, Geraldine Farrar Starts East

Prima Donna Leaves Los Angeles in Private Car Laden with Flowers—She Will Resume Concert and Operatic Work After Short Rest

GERALDINE FARRAR said farewell to Hollywood and Los Angeles this week and with her party that had gone to the Pacific Coast with her in June she left for the east by private car. She will arrive in New York late Friday afternoon and after a short rest will resume her concert and operatic work.

No one who ever has been in southern California left behind so many interesting subjects for conversation as did Miss Farrar. The natives won't forget her for years, and the neighbors probably never will forget Miss Farrar's farewell party which started last Saturday night at nine o'clock and which ended last Sunday night at midnight.

The caterer's list included supper, breakfast, lunch, dinner and supper, in that sequence. Those present insist that it was the greatest party in the world's history and those who weren't present declare themselves willing to believe it.

Soon after the guests had arrived Miss Farrar disappeared for a moment to reappear in her "Carmen" costume. She mounted a platform near the orchestra and sang several arias from "Carmen." Later she sang selections from "Madame Butterfly" and obliged with encore after encore until, almost from sheer exhaustion, she was compelled to stop.

Among those who attended the farewell party were Mrs. David Belasco, Mrs. Morris Gest, Helen Ware, Blanche Ring, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil B. DeMille, Mr. and Mrs. William C. DeMille, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Melford, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reicher, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. McGowan, Helen Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Buckland, Jeanne MacPherson, Francis Ring, Charlotte Greenwood, Messrs. Fred Kley, Kenneth McGaffey, Thomas Meighan, Pedro de Cordoba, William Desmond, Frank A. Connor, Louis Sherwin, dramatic critic of the New York Evening Globe, James Sullivan and others.

The Santa Fe station at Los Angeles was filled with persons who had come to wish Miss Farrar and her party a speedy and safe trip back to New York when the train left on Sunday night. Her private car was laden with flowers. Miss Farrar is expected in Chicago on Thursday morning and in New York next Friday afternoon or evening.

It was in June that the prima donna went to Hollywood to appear in "Carmen" and other productions of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. "Carmen" will be the first of her pictures to be released through the Paramount Pictures Corporation on November 1.

Despite the trying work of acting before the camera and the usually difficult demands made upon her physically by the rough country in which many of the scenes were made, Miss Farrar declared she never felt better nor stronger than at the close of her first summer's experience as a photoplay star.

V-L-S-E Announces Five September Releases

Three Five-Reel Subjects and Two Six-Reel Pictures Are Scheduled—First Will Be "Mortmain," Featuring Robert Edeson, Followed by "The Man Trail"

FOR release during the month of September, the V-L-S-E has so far scheduled five productions, three five-reel subjects and two six-reel features. These five subjects form a perfectly-balanced program in which will be seen a galaxy of stars, including Marie Dressler, Robert Edeson, Richard C. Travers, Stella Rozeto, Guy Oliver and Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Drew.

The first release of the month will be Robert Edeson in "Mortmain," a five-part Blue Ribbon feature, that will go into screen evidence on September 6. "Mortmain" is an intensely tragic drama, as sensational as it is unique and weird. The story revolves about the researches of modern surgeons, and in its production the Vitagraph Company called to its aid many noted medical men in order to secure an atmosphere of perfect realism.

Mr. Edeson, who plays the title role, will be seen in one of the strongest parts he has ever created. The character is that of a man who, through an accident, loses one of his hands. The hand of another man is grafted in its place, and it later develops that the hand in question is that of a murderer. This fact and other contributing circumstantial evidence make a play of powerful dramatic quality.

On September 13 the Essanay Company will release the six-part feature, "The Man Trail," in which Richard C. Travers plays the leading role. "The Man Trail" is a story of the lumbering camps, and the principal scenes were taken in the lumber country in Tennessee. This fact gives to the production all the necessary local color demanded of a play of this type.

The story from which the production was adapted appeared in serial form, in "Adventure Magazine," and was selected by the Essanay Company for production, because of the exceptional possibilities it offers for screen production. The play deals with that interesting rugged life of the woods, and illustrates the adventures of a city-bred man in the crude life of the logging camps.

The Selig Company's contribution that will be released September 20 is a six-part visualization of Anna Katherine Green's celebrated novel, "A Circular Staircase," in which Stella Rozeto and Guy Oliver will be presented.

This Big Four subject is reported to be one of the strongest picture plays of this kind the Big Four has yet released. The novel from which it was adapted enjoyed the greatest success and is still a big seller.

This, like the other Anna Katherine Green stories, has lent itself readily to the requirements of motion picture production. It is a strong story, full of that heart interest so necessary to arouse the sustained, undivided attention of picture patrons.

On September 20 the second Blue Ribbon feature of the month will be released. This is a five-part production, "Playing Dead," in which Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Drew will make their first appearance on the V-L-S-E program. This is a comedy-drama of the type that has endeared the Drews to picture play patrons.

It is a feature with all that airy, easy-going humor that goes to make an ideal picture play.

On September 27 Marie Dressler in "Tillie's Tomato Surprise" is scheduled for release by the Lubin Company. The Big Four had intended to release this production in August, but in response to the many requests received from exhibitors all over the country to the effect that the August program of the V-L-S-E was of such strength that this feature could be postponed until the following month, the Big Four decided to hold the production for September release.

Exhibitors have stated that they look for this Dressler comedy to be a smashing big success, and according to reports from the Lubin studio, Miss Dressler has given to the camera the greatest comedy of her career.

It is reported that the productions so far scheduled may be increased by the addition of another Liberty Bell feature.

This, however, has not as yet been definitely decided.

FEASTER ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN BRINGS FLOOD OF RESPONSES

The Feaster non-rewinding machine is proving its merits. Byron Chandler, Inc., distributors, 1482 Broadway, New York, reports a flood of inquiries in response to the advertising campaign, proving that exhibitors appreciate the time and labor saving of the Feaster device.

FROHMAN FILM LEAVES WORLD FILM PROGRAM

The Frohman Amusement Corporation has withdrawn from the program of the World Film Corporation. It is said it is in negotiation with two prominent releasing exchanges, but no definite arrangements have been made, as yet.

Good Pictures and Publicity Helps Metro Policy

President Rowland's Company Will Supply Exhibitors With Features Manufactured with the Express Idea of Giving Them Subjects Likely to Appeal to the Public—"Can't Afford to be Satisfied Short of the Last Word in Feature Productions"—"We're Proud of Metro"

EMMY WEHLEN, THE VIENNESE ACTRESS, AS SHE APPEARS IN THE FORTHCOMING METRO RELEASE, "WHEN A WOMAN LOVES." LEFT TO RIGHT—"DAN CUPID IS MINUS AN ARROW"; "RUTH LOSES HER POSI TION"; "POWER'S ATTACK ON LOWE"

PRESIDENT RICHARD A. ROWLAND, of the Metro Pictures Corporation, recently took exception to the views of the advice givers of motion picture industry and paid his compliments to those who "talk down" to exhibitors.

"One of the tiresome things about moving pictures as a business," said Mr. Rowland, "is the grand little advice factories that are working full time in all directions.

"Along with other exhibitors each week, I read that I am to be told how to make my theatres tremendously profitable. I am to be let in the secrets of the wise men who point with pride to their experience and to their money. With all their experience and all their vast capital I wonder they don't go into the exhibition end of it.

"Give Exhibitors Good Pictures"

"To begin with, I do not regard the motion picture exhibitor as a mental incompetent or 'poor nut,' as the slang phrase has it. I don't believe he needs to be told how to run his theatre or how to deal with his patrons.

"I am among those who are willing to concede that the exhibitor is of full age and sound mind and that he'd rather have good pictures and good paper and good publicity and advertising helps than advice conversation or piffle. Give the exhibitor good pictures. That's all he needs and it's all he wants.

"We're too busy here at the Metro making good pictures to have time to give advice.

"We started out with selling experience, a pretty definite idea of the kind of picture entertainment that brings people to theatres and then we all had and still have youth, ambition, and the grim determination to make better and still better pictures.

Grows Fast and on Firm Ground

"We all of us are human enough to like money and to like to make money, but I'll tell you in all candor we don't want to make money without making good.

"We are neither satisfied nor contented. We have grown fast and on firm ground and we're still growing. That's pleasant but it's nothing to be satisfied over. We can't afford to be satisfied, short of the last word in feature productions and all pictures are a long way from that.

"We are proud of Metro because Metro vibrates with life and moves each week toward better things. We are gratified because exhibitors everywhere are looking to us to supply them with pictures that will make their money.

"We have flown in the face of a good many precedents, we have traveled new paths, we have stirred up the animals and we are about to stir them up still more.

"It won't annoy us a bit to have the entire motion picture world keep its eyes on Metro and we will make a 'sportsman's promise' that they won't look in vain."

Centaur Moves General Offices to New York City

New Address at 46 West Twenty-fourth Street Gives David Horsley Better Facilities for Handling the Increased Volume of Business, Now Handled Through Mutual

THE offices of the general manager and the publicity department of the Centaur Film Company have been moved from Bayonne, N. J., to 46 West Twenty-fourth street, New York City.

The change in location was made to handle more expeditiously the vast amount of business incident to the increase in the productions of David Horsley, who is at the head of the Centaur Film Company and the Bostock Jungle and Film Company, the entire output of which goes through the Mutual Film Corporation.

Previous to his alliance with the Mutual Mr. Horsley released but one single reel comedy a week. Under his present arrangement, however, he will release four brands. At this time he is releasing weekly a single reel comedy under the brand name of Cub Comedy, in which George Ovey, who in the space of three months made a big name for himself as a comedian, is featured. Milton Fahrney is the director.

About the middle of September Mr. Horsley will release his first animal picture, which will be in two reels and feature the famous Bostock aggregation of performing animals. Late in September the first of the Horsley three reel subjects will be released and this will be followed by the first Horsley Mutual Masterpiece in four reels. Broadway stars will be presented in these films.

The one, two and three reel pictures will be filmed at Mr. Horsley's new studio in Los Angeles, which is well provided with facilities to accommodate these companies. The Masterpictures will be made at the Centaur studio in Bayonne.

The best available material to make these releases of exceptional quality has and will continue to be secured. In addition the pictures will be backed by a big plan of exploitation carried on from the New York offices.

WILL MAKE ADVERTISING SUBJECTS IN LOS ANGELES

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, August 16.

A recent addition to the producing colony is the California Motion Picture Advertising Company, which has opened offices here and is engaged in making advertising subjects.

The company so far is a partnership composed of R. C. Dennison, M. D. Devillo and N. P. Girrard, general manager. Meyer C. Cohen, formerly with William Swanson and later with Kriterion, is with this company.

WILTON LACKAYE AND CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG AS THEY APPEAR IN "TRILBY," EQUITABLE-WORLD FILM FEATURE

WARDA HOWARD, DAUGHTER OF COLLEGIAN, WITH ESSANAY

Essanay has secured an unusually talented and beautiful actress in Warda Howard, well known in legitimate stage productions on Broadway and throughout the country.

Miss Howard acts exceptionally well in emotional roles and firmly established herself in motion picture work, playing opposite Henry B. Walthall in "Temper."

WARDA HOWARD

The play is full of emotional climaxes, and Miss Howard brings out the subtle expressions called for in a way that makes the character she represents a living breathing being on the screen.

In acting before the camera she has proven an excellent photographic type.

A wide experience on the speaking stage has ably fitted her for almost any role. She starred in such productions as "The Wolf," "The Lion and the Mouse," "An American Widow," "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "The Cowboy and the Lady," "Paid in Full," "The Christian," "The Girl of the Golden West," "Sappho," "Brewster's Millions," and many other successful plays.

Miss Howard is a daughter of Professor C. H. S. Howard, of the University of California. She is a graduate of the university, and while in school starred in all the college theatrical productions.

Kalem, Changing Policy, Secures Hornung Serial

Company Gets World Rights for "Stingaree," for Release as a Series of 12 Two-Reel Episodes, Each Complete in Itself

WHAT appears to be a masterstroke has been accomplished by the Kalem company in securing from the celebrated author, E. W. Hornung, the exclusive world's rights to his famous novel of adventure, "Stingaree." The picturization is to be released weekly as a series of twelve two-reel episodes.

Mr. Hornung, the creator of Raffles and other picturesque adventurers, found in "Stingaree" the opportunity to give full sway to his remarkable genius. The Hornung characters are noted for their red-blooded fearlessness and the occasional touch of the sentimental which stamps them as really human.

"Stingaree," the many readers of the novel will recall, leaves his home in England to protect the honor of another and locating in the wilds of the Australian bush, determines that society in general shall repay him for his exile. He then enters upon a series of unique adventures which gain for him the peculiar title.

Undoubtedly no work of fiction is better suited for picture purposes than is "Stingaree." The Kalem company has never favored the serial idea, contending that those who miss the early episodes have difficulty in following the continued story. In "Stingaree," therefore, Kalem offers a complete adventure with each two-reel release.

It is interesting to note that this new series is practically the first production which Kalem has made from fiction. Apparently they have been of the opinion that fiction is written to be read and that the most compelling photoplays are either written expressly for the screen or adapted from time-tried stage successes.

However, it appear that the character of "Stingaree," who virtually lived on the printed page, through Hornung's superb genius, so impressed Kalem that they prevailed upon the author, through their London representative, to sell them the picture rights.

Stingaree is not unlike his companion character Raffles, in that he is a polished gentleman. The novel, however, gives the promise that "Stingaree" will bob up in unexpected places in the picture, as a bandit, a champion of honor, a self-appointed officer of the law, an expert horseman and a deadly marksman.

Director Charles Giblyn Signs with Triangle

Lee Bartholemew, Expert Camera man, Is Engaged to Supervise Development of Negatives at NYMP—Los Angeles "Times" Critic Will Analyze Scenario Plots

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Aug. 16.

IN another week or two Charles Giblyn, now with the Universal, will be back at the NYMP studio, a subordinate director for Thomas H. Ince. Mr. Giblyn was formerly affiliated with the New York company, and due to his excellent work performed then and since Mr. Ince selected him to become one of the producers of the big Triangle features. The other directors now at work are: William S. Hart, Raymond B. West, Reginald Barker, Walter Edwards, J. Hunt, Scott Sidney, Charles Swichard and others.

Lee Bartholemew, formerly chief cameraman of the Universal, has been engaged to supervise the development of negatives and act in a supervisory capacity with the other cameramen at the NYMP studio. This plan, Mr. Ince believes, will materially aid all concerned.

Henry Christeen Warnach, music and dramatic critic of the Los Angeles "Times" has been engaged to analyze and comment on the scenario plots as well as occasionally furnish them with a scenario. Another addition to the Thomas H. Ince staff is William Stoermer, who will have charge of negotiations for rights on plays and books, and to aid Mr. Ince in contracting legitimate stage stars to appear in pictures.

STRONG CAST FOR PATHE'S "THE CLOSING NET"

"The Closing Net," by H. C. Rowland, a coming Pathé Gold Rooster play, will have a strong cast. Edward Jose, who is producing it, has signed Howard Estabrook, the popular leading man now appearing in the new play "Search Me" at the Gayety theatre, New York, for the lead.

He will be supported by Bliss Milford, Kathryn Browne-Decker, and Madaline Traverse.

Equitable Waits for 10 Pictures Before Releasing

Six Directors Well Known in the Industry at Work for Seven Weeks, with Five More in Sight on Subjects of Large Scope, Are Putting Best Efforts in the Releases—Elaborate Production of "Trilby," with Clara Kimball Young and Wilton Lackaye in the Leads

OF the army of new entrants into the realm of filmdom one of the most serious is the newly formed and already active Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, closely allied with the World Film enterprise and so grimly determined, that ere the forthcoming week has waned, an announcement so startling in its inception and so broad in the vogue it will create, it is promised will be made.

Felix F. Feist, perhaps best known from his favorable work at the head of an important Chicago film exchange, is general manager of the new Equitable and an harmonious affiliation of ideas, belief in the future of the film industry and deep mutual admiration and respect for each other's accomplishments and ability, link Feist and Louis J. Selznick together.

The Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, now in the seventh week of its actual existence, is following a plan heretofore unattempted. The Equitable, before one release sees the light of screen day, will have in its possession ten pictures of which there can be no uncertainty of their quality and calibre.

Six directors, men of tradition in the trade and men whose work has created places for them in an overtrodden field, have been actively engaged in production activities for the past seven weeks, and will continue for the forthcoming five weeks, and the result of their efforts, if their efforts reach the standard Equitable has set itself, then the pictures will reach the market.

There will be no costly and heartbreaking "failure" releases owing to the lack of releasing material.

First Release "Trilby"

Four of the first ten pictures to be released have already been selected by the examining board of the Equitable. The initial release, although unseen as yet by the trade reviewers, is a production of "Trilby," with a powerful combination of noted players, headed by the distinguished actor, Wilton Lackaye and Clara Kimball Young and having in support a first rate cast of players.

"Trilby" in its cinematized form, according to the authorities who know, will be, when seen, one of the greatest surprises in the history of features and another feather in the cap of Director Tourneur. "Trilby" will be released September 21 and then, in succession, will come the work of John Ince, Seay, Cullison, Golden and McNamara.

Among the directors already at work and completing or having completed their first efforts are John Ince, of the famous Ince trio and lately one of the shining luminaries of the Lubin forces. Mr. Ince has long harbored a desire to concentrate on pictures big enough to require thought, time, knowledge and supreme attention to the all important matter of atmosphere and environment and has been allotted a series of serious vehicles which will require the every resource of this prolific creator.

Webster Cullison is grinding slowly toward completion "The Bludgeon," in which Kathryn Osterman will be seen. This feature will characterize the Equitable contribution to the World Film about October 26.

Joseph Golden, featuring Hilda Spong in "Divorced," his first work. Known to men throughout the trade from his long and ardent attention to production with

HILDA SPONG

Edison, where his greatest works will stand as monuments of keen efficiency, is handling the company, at present headed by Thomas Wise in "Blue Grass," by Paul Armstrong, and is a permanent valued fixture with Equitable.

Beloved by all and heading to the minutest detail the every production effort of Equitable comes Isidor Bernstein, former general manager of Universal City. Mr. Bernstein will be the directing genius of the Equitable and while his specific duties are manifold, the exhibitor who contemplates dealing with the Equitable need best know that Isidor Bernstein will be present, in spirit, on every screen showing of an Equitable product.

Walter McNamara, whose "The Traffic in Souls" and "Ireland a Nation" attracted such widespread attention, is busily engaged on "Human Cargoes" for Equitable.

"Human Cargoes" promises to exceed any previous McNamara creation. He is permanently with Equitable.

The executive staff of the Equitable Corporation boasts a number of men of precedent in filmdom and the commerces.

Arthur H. Speigel, whose flourishing merchandising plants through the Middle West denote him a man of acumen, success and more than a fair share of judgment, is the guiding spirit at Equitable and shares the suite of General Manager Felix F. Feist.

Reichenbach Behind Publicity Gun

The entire exploitation department is in the hands of Harry L. Reichenbach, whose method of aiding exhibitors and exploiting features in the manner most beneficial for the buyer of films was so effective while with the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company and the Metro Pictures Corporation. Mr. Reichenbach will install, at the Equitable offices, one of the most far reaching systems of dissemination beneficial to exhibitors ever attempted by a producing and distributing company, it is said.

Among the principal features to be introduced by Equitable is the idea developed by Mr. Feist and Mr. Selznick, of using the leverage of local exhibitors advertising to aid the exhibitor, without expense or trouble to the exhibitor. This system has been used to advantage by several large national advertisers and will be adopted just prior to the first Equitable release.

The news service will begin within the week and the money saved on this direct method will, according to General Manager Feist, be guided into local channels with immediate results to any exhibitor on the regular Equitable roster.

FILM EXCHANGE CLUB IN QUAKER CITY GROWS STEADILY

The Exhibitors' Booking Office, of Philadelphia is no more. In spite of the good work of its officers, S. F. Wheeler, J. M. Delmar, M. J. Walsh and Jay Emanuel, it failed to receive support.

The Exchange men of Philadelphia seem to have realized the value of unity. The recently-formed Film Exchange Club, of Philadelphia is steadily growing in numbers and usefulness. The most recent acquisitions to membership are Jean Marcus, of the Eastern Booking Office, and M. Libros, of Libros Brothers.

The club now has its own rooms at the new building, 225 North Thirteenth street. Social gatherings are held every other Thursday. The last entertainment took the form of a lively dinner on the Bellevue-Stratford roof. Many questions relating to the good of the film industry are discussed at these meetings.

Vitagraph Will Put On Another Breezy Gunter Novel

"Surprises of an Empty Hotel," Full of Mystery and Lively Action, Will Be Directed by Marston—"Thou Art the Man," An Indian Subject

CHARLES RICHMAN, supported by Arline Pretty, Ethel Corcoran, Katherine Franek, Leo Delaney, William Dunn, Charles Eldridge and Robert Gaillard, have begun work under the direction of Theodore Marston, on the Vitagraph's production of "The Surprises of an Empty Hotel." The story was picturized by Jasper Ewing Brady, from Archibald Clavering Gunter's book of the same name and is described as a breezy seaside affair of mystery, drama and comedy.

Special locations are being selected by Director Marston, in which the gay life of a summer resort will add contrast to the gloomy atmosphere of a deserted hotel set in the midst of its prosperous neighbors. While the most of the action has its beginning in the hotel, the characters will be seen in episodes that carry them in every direction of the compass and involve them in automobile and motorboat races, mysterious disappearances, unexplainable happenings and unaccountable accidents.

The Vitagraph Company has successfully produced several of Mr. Gunter's stories, including "Mr. Barnes of New York," and "A Florida Enchantment," but none that will equal the photodrama possibilities of "The Surprises of an Empty Hotel," which contains every essential of a photographic masterpiece. It is destined to be a five-part Blue Ribbon Feature.

A story of Anglo-Indian life of the present day, "Thou Art the Man," is being produced by the Vitagraph company, directed by S. Rankin Drew. "Thou Art the Man" is by George Cameron, author of "A Million Bid," and is an original manuscript, written especially for motion picture production, founded on the biblical story of "Uriah."

The scenes are all laid in India, and depict the life of the resident Englishman with glimpses of the fever ridden districts where the white man finds it impossible to exist. The story tells of a rich man who coverts a poor clerk's beautiful wife. She is ordered to the hills during the hot summer, and her husband, that he may be able to send her away, accepts a position in the interior of India, that carries a handsome salary, offered by the rich man.

The clerk dies, but not before the man, repentant of what he has done, follows to the lonely hut and, unable to withstand what he forced others to endure, is buried by the side of his victim.

"Thou Art the Man" will be enacted by a superior Vitagraph cast, including S. Rankin Drew, Virginia Pearson, Joseph Kilgour, Billie Billings and Harold Foshay in the principal characters. When finished it will be a Blue Ribbon Feature in five parts and released through the V-L-S-E.

Edna Goodrich, Back from War, Goes to Lasky Studio

American Actress, Who Like Many Other Stage Women of Note Got Her Start in Musical Comedy, Returned from Year's Nursing for Camera Debut

AFTER a year's devoted service as a nurse in the hospitals in England and Belgium, Edna Goodrich, the famous American actress, returned to New York last week for two-fold reasons. Although she showed no evidence of the strain under which she has been constantly for many months, particularly during the last weeks of her stay in England when her house near London was transformed into a hospital for convalescent soldiers.

Miss Goodrich admitted a certain fatigue and the need of a rest here in scenes far from war's devastation. The other and more important reason for her return is that she is leaving almost immediately for Hollywood, Cal., to make her debut as an actress before the motion picture camera in the studios of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, at Hollywood, Cal.

Miss Goodrich's beauty has won world-wide fame for her. Like so many talented American actresses, she made her start in musical comedy, her first appearance being at the Casino Theatre, New York, in 1900, in "Floradora." After a brilliant career in musical comedy she became leading woman for Nat C. Goodwin, and played with him at various times between 1905 and 1909. Subsequently, she was one of the leading dramatic stars in vaudeville.

Her photodrama debut will be an important event in cinematography. The Lasky Feature Play Company has a surprise photoplay in store for her.

When the war broke out Miss Goodrich was in London studying. Finding she could be of some help in the war zone, she went into France and Belgium on a private relief expedition, organized in London to mitigate the horrors for the civilian population for the first few months of the war. She was engaged in this work many months.

LONG TERM CONTRACT FOR NEILAN WITH FAMOUS PLAYERS

The famous Players Film Company, in many of whose recent productions he has appeared to advantage, has now secured the permanent services of the popular leading man, Marshall Neilan, who, within a comparatively short time after his entrance into the motion picture field, has risen to an estimable place in the ranks of film favorites.

Mr. Neilan has been presented by the Famous Players in conspicuous and leading roles in "The Love Route," "May Blossom," "Rags," in which his capable support of Miss Pickford was favorably noted by all the trade-paper critics in their reviews of this subject, and in a forthcoming Pickford production, "A Girl of Yesterday," will be again seen in a similarly important part.

Mr. Neilan also played the title role in one of the early Lasky productions on the Paramount program, "The Country Boy." In all of these various plays he has displayed a fine dramatic sense and strong personal force.

He has as well that other essential of screen acting—magnetism.

The consistent approbation with which his previous appearance in the Famous Players' releases have met throughout the country has now induced this concern to place him under permanent contract.

His past experience, comprising, as it does, every element of dramatic work, ranging from stock to support of Broadway favorites, enables him to undertake with an adequate measure of ability any screen role he may be called upon to assume however difficult.

When added to this, his youth and photographic attractiveness are considered, it may be reasonably assumed that Mr. Neilan will be conceded a valuable acquisition to the regular organization of the Famous Players Film Company.

It is planned that Mr. Neilan will be assigned some very important work in Famous Players' productions now being prepared or contemplated. Details of these will be announced in the usual way.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. CLOSED HOUSE BETTER THAN AIRDOME

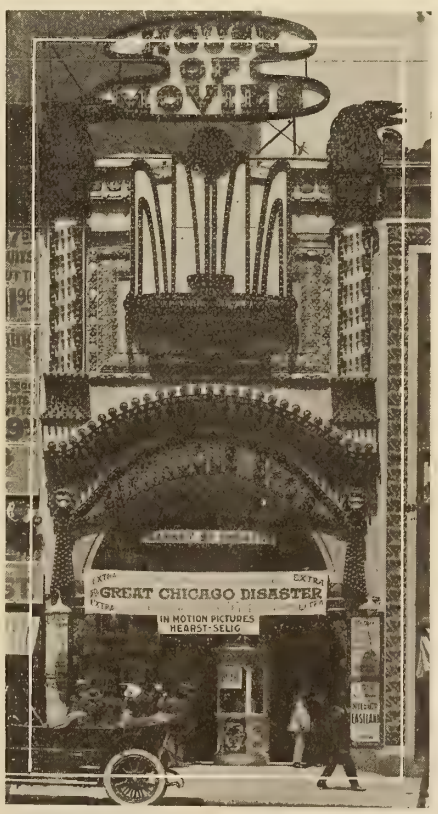
The Mackland theatre, 5415 Arsenal street, St. Louis, is in its second season of playing inside all summer. Paul Steffen, the manager and proprietor, says that he has tried all the ways and means of the business, and for his locality, which is strictly a resident district, he finds that most of the elderly people will come more regularly to the show if it is inside the building than if it is in an airdome.

Where there are little children, the parents do not like to take them out if the night is not perfectly dry and warm, and that necessitates the parents staying at home themselves. He says he finds that by staying in the house all summer he gets enough patronage to keep the place running, and another advantage is that when the regular show season begins in the fall, the people come in larger crowds, without having first to become accustomed to a change, as they would if they had been going to an airdome all summer.

HARRISBURG, PA., CHARGING TEN CENTS INSTEAD OF FIVE

Due to several causes, the motion picture exhibitors of Harrisburg, Pa., are gradually getting closer and closer to a uniform ten-cent rate of admittance as compared with a practically universal five-cent charge a little more than a year ago.

Some time ago the theatres in the downtown business section went to ten cents, although those in the residential sections remained at five cents. Last spring one of the downtown houses began to cut rates with a five-cent charge and this caused the other houses in this section of the city to partially meet the cut.



Some sold seats in the gallery for a nickel while others made a general five-cent rate except on Wednesdays and Saturdays. The result was that the general condition of the business became rather unsatisfactory. The man who began the cutting, however, closed his theatre, owing to the lease having expired, and the other downtown houses straightway went back to a ten-cent rate for all parts of the house.

Since then the theatres in the residential sections have been flirting with ten-cent prices, many of them asking a dime on Wednesdays and Saturdays and a nickel on other days. The whole tendency now, however, is for everybody to put the rate on a ten-cent basis. Some of the downtown houses, moreover, have tried the experiment of asking fifteen cents on occasions when particularly big features are being shown, and they report satisfactory results.

INDIANA THEATRE A FAMILY AFFAIR

Persons living at Carbon, Ind., say that the Pastime theatre at that place would have been more appropriately named the Family theatre. David Butts, the owner, is the manager and also runs the gasoline engine that generates electricity for the moving picture machine and the lights about the theatre.

Mrs. Butts sells tickets and is cashier. The son, Orville, runs the player piano when Arthur Butts, the pianist, is not present. Ira Butts plays the drums, which completes the orchestra. Waneta Butts takes tickets at the door. During the day Mr. Butts runs a dray.

MARKET STREET THEATRE, PHILADELPHIA, WHERE EASTLAND DISASTER PICTURES, HEARST-SELIG, WERE FIRST SHOWN IN THE QUAKER CITY

ON LOOKOUT FOR "BEAUTIES" IN TEXAS CONTEST

The Old Mill theatre of Dallas has been receiving photographs of "beauties" to select the most beautiful girl in the city. They now have some three or four hundred photographs, and it is said the judges are having a hard time picking out any one that is more beautiful than another. The judges are composed of Ben B. Lewis, Old Mill manager; E. H. Fitzhugh, camera-man and producer of a number of local motion pictures, and other prominent men of the city.

As soon as the most beautiful girl in the city is selected she will be starred in a short film, produced for the Old Mill, about the State Fair of Texas, which is in full blast each year between the middle of October and November 1, lasting 16 days.

One of the afternoon newspapers says that the secret meaning of the "beauty" contest is to secure beauties who are capable of acting before the camera, to be used in the corps of photoplayers of the recently mentioned producing company in Dallas, which is as yet, in the projected class.

NOT USING MONEY FOR ADVERTISING JUDICIOUSLY

An example of misdirected use of money in advertising a film was seen in a Bay State city recently, when four horses drew around the town a big truck upon which billboards advertised a feature picture.

This was all right as far as it went; but no attempt was made to use the horses for anything but dragging the truck. The pull of the money invested would have been tripled by using some such device as banners or streamers on the horses, particularly since there were four, this providing a long sweep for advertising purposes.

BUFFALO THEATRE ABOLISHES INTERMISSIONS

Most of the Buffalo, N. Y., theatres have eliminated the intermission and its accompanying overture. The patrons everywhere have expressed their approval.

It is argued by those who have taken this move that they have found that people come to see pictures and no matter how good the music, they get impatient during long music selections. Houses which have adopted this policy are Shea's Hippodrome, the Strand, Elmwood, New Victoria and Palace.

SPECIAL COMPANY, ALL ORIENTAL PLAYERS, CAST FOR "IN JAPANESE GARDEN"

For the filming of a number of the scenes in "In a Japanese Garden," a single reel Thanhouser drama for release in the regular Mutual program, August 22, a special company of exceptionally talented Japanese screen players were especially engaged.

In the numerous scenes in which they appear, the players give many demonstrations of their abilities as screen players, which have won them a prominent place as stars of the silent drama. Each of the group of six is a thoroughly trained film player, for, during the past several years they have appeared in photoplays produced by various manufacturers throughout the country.

Tochicho Kamada, who for many years was noted as one of Japan's foremost dramatic actors, heads this group of players from flowery Japan. Mini Mitzu, a winsome little Japanese Miss, who, in Japan is noted as one of the stage's most celebrated beauties, Talo Maido, another well known stage favorite, and his wife are the chief players of the group.

PATHE TENNIS TOURNAMENT SET FOR AUGUST 28

The Pathe office force is all "het up" over a tennis tournament which has been gotten up to take place at Lee Woodruff's courts at Brighton Beach on Saturday, August 28.

Mr. Woodruff has generously offered the use of his courts for the occasion, and it is planned to have a swim and dinner after the championship has been decided.

There are twelve entries and it is whispered that several of the boys have got something up their sleeves in the way of real tennis ability. General Manager Gasnier will probably be present to award the prizes, and Pearl White may take her life in her hands and referee.

Herrington Will Work for Closer Association

Thanks Trade Journals for Their Co-operation with League in Past, and Asks Its Continuance for the Future—May Get Northwestern Exhibitors

F. J. HERRINGTON, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, informs the NEWS of his desire to acknowledge publicly the numerous communications he has received from members of the industry throughout the country since his election to the presidency of the national organization.

Mr. Herrington expresses his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him by his colleagues at San Francisco in July, and hopes that his efforts toward bringing together in closer unity the various branches of the association will indicate a desire on his part to perform fitting service in the discharge of his duties.

Mr. Herrington's letter follows:

Pittsburgh, Pa.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS, New York City.

Gentlemen:—Please afford me a short space in your valuable journal, as a means of answering the numerous notes of congratulations received by me from exhibitors and friends throughout the States, as otherwise it will be impossible for me to reply personally to such a magnitude of letters for some time.

It is, I can assure you, beyond my power to find words to express my deep appreciation of the honor conferred upon me by the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America.

And I wish to thank one and all, and MOTION PICTURE NEWS and other trades journals, for their hearty co-operation and assistance rendered to myself and our organization in the past.

It is gratifying to know that the exhibitors are in accord with the action taken by the convention at San Francisco, in July, 1915, and being assured that in the very near future all branches of organized exhibitors in the U. S. A. will be under the banner of the M. P. E. L. of America. Particularly so (I am pleased to state) of the Northwestern Exhibitors' Association.

I shall in the future, as I have in the past, use all the ability I possess to the advancement and betterment of conditions of the motion picture interests, and with the assistance of the exhibitors, for which I most earnestly ask and desire, there is no doubt whatever that great success will result from our efforts.

Thanking you again for past favors, and hoping for a continuation of same, I am

Respectfully yours,

F. J. HERRINGTON,

President M. P. E. L. of America.

GENERAL FILM GIVES DAY'S RENTAL TO EASTLAND FUND

At the last regular meeting of the International Motion Picture Association, Chicago, held Friday, August 6, a resolution was unanimously passed, thanking the General Film Company for its co-operation with the exhibitors, in donating a full day's film rental to those who desired to give their entire receipts for the Eastland benefit performance.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

HAPPENINGS OF INTEREST AND CHANGES IN PHILADELPHIA OFFICES

MILTON C. WORK, a well-known Philadelphia lawyer, has been made chairman of the executive committee of the World Film Corporation. Mr. Work has shown a remarkable aptitude for the film industry. Although only four weeks in the business, he has become an expert.

In order to test his knowledge, Mr. Work volunteered to sell the picture houses at Cape May, where his summer home is located. In a few days he reported that he had obtained all three theatres in the little town as World patrons.

Jack Flynn, of the New York office, has been transferred to Philadelphia, replacing M. Melvin. Ben Hayn has been promoted from the shipping to the head of the booking department. In one year this office has increased its force from four to fourteen people.

Jack Levy, manager of the Fox Film office in Philadelphia, has just returned from a three-weeks' trip through his territory and reports big business on yearly contracts for Fox. "Lady Audley's Secret," with Theda Bara, is in great demand.

Harvey B. Day, the Pittsburgh manager, while making a trip to New York ran over to Philadelphia for a short visit. Both these gentlemen in discussing the censorship situation expressed themselves favorably in regard to Chief Breitinger. While just as strenuously opposed to State censorship as ever, as long as this law is in existence, they say Breitinger is inclined to be more liberal than formerly and is giving the exchanges a fair chance.

V. R. Carrick, manager of the Inter State Film Company, Philadelphia, which is the branch of the Universal in the Quaker City, has just returned from an enjoyable fishing trip.

The Philadelphia Film Exchange, representing the interests of the Interstate Film Company, has moved its offices from 225 North Ninth street, where only two floors were occupied, to new and commodious quarters at 223 North Thirteenth street. This building, erected for the purpose, is three stories on a basement and admirably fitted for the fast-growing business of the Philadelphia Film.

Harry Schwalbe, having in charge the office of the Electric Theatre Supply Company, Philadelphia, has just returned from a trip with the Shriners to Seattle and the Far West.

Mr. Schwalbe and his family are spending the rest of the summer in a cottage at Atlantic City.

The Electric office has just added to its program the Century releases. These will consist of one five-reel feature a week. Many of the U. B. O. stars, such as Lew Dockstader, have been captured by the Century.

C. S. Rudolph, for two years a salesman with the Electric, has been made assistant manager, a place formerly filled by J. Lynch.

A new enterprise is the Klein Poster Renting and Booking office, which is just starting business at 1305 Vine street, Philadelphia. George H. Klein, its manager, has fitted up very attractive rooms on the second floor. As some of the big firms such as Paramount and V-L-S-E do not give their paper with their features and it is too hard on the small exhibitor to buy such things, Mr. Klein thinks they will welcome the chance to rent their posters at a reasonable figure.

The stork has been flying low over filmland recently. He kindly left a bouncing boy with John C. Clark, the manager of the Metro office, last week. For fear of hard feelings he doubled up and deposited twin boys at the home of Robert McCarthy, bookkeeper at the Electric offices.

CAILLE BUYS METRO RIGHTS FOR MICHIGAN

Arthur Caille, president of the Majestic Theatre Company, the Fine Arts theatre and the Maxine theatre, Detroit, with his associates, has purchased the Michigan business, rights and privileges, of the Metro Feature Film Corporation. The price paid for the stock he controls is said to have been in the neighborhood of $18,000.

Mr. Caille has not made any announcement as to where he will establish quarters and who will be in charge of the business. In addition to being financially interested in these various theatres, Mr. Caille is one of the firm of Caille Brothers, manufacturers of Perfection marine motors, coin slot machines and the Caille automatic ticket register, automatic ticket chopper and other devices, operated electrically, for motion picture theatres.

LESSER ADDS STANDARD PROGRAM TO HIS SERVICE FOR COAST

Al. Lichtman, vice-president and general manager of the Standard Photoplay Distributors, Inc., wires in from the Pacific coast that Sol. L. Lesser, president of the All Star Features Distributors, Inc., handling the Metro program in California, Nevada and Arizona, has completed arrangements to serve the Standard program to the theatres of the above territory through his well-known Golden Gate Film Exchange in San Francisco.

Sol. Lesser has long held a high position in film affairs, and his activities have made themselves felt as forcibly in New York and Chicago motion picture circles as they have in the West. His frequent trips from coast to coast keep him in close touch with the rapid changes of the business in every territory, and he has long been considered one of the most expert exchangemen in the country.

The fact that the destinies of the Standard program for California, Nevada and Arizona are in his hands assures it of the benefits of live-wire methods and speaks well for the policy of Al. Lichtman and the Warner brothers, who are using their well-seasoned judgment to select responsible exchanges for Standard program distribution in every territory.

Al. Lichtman is now on his way to the New York headquarters of the Standard, and an important announcement is promised for the near future.

PATHE OPENS NEW BRANCH IN INDIANAPOLIS

The Pathé Exchange, Inc., has opened a new branch office in Rooms 27, 28 and 29 Willoughby Building, North Meridian street, Indianapolis. The rooms are on the second floor and the company has equipped the office so that it is one of the best exchanges in the city. It is in the same building with the Empress Film Company, Blache Feature Service and the World Film Corporation, making the building nearly a moving picture exchange building.

J. C. Lyttle, who has been the Indianapolis representative of the Pathe Company since January 1, is the local manager. The company also expects to have two men out on the road in Indiana.

C. E. Edwards, traveling director of exchanges, is in Indianapolis assisting in organizing the office. He will be there for about ten days.

This is the first branch office to be opened by the Pathé company since it was incorporated, as all the present exchanges of the company were already established as the Eclectic exchanges when taken over by the Pathé company.

SEELYE PLEASED WITH ATLANTA BRANCH MANAGEMENT

C. R. Seelye, assistant general manager for the V-L-S-E, was in Atlanta last week with W. C. Brandon, manager of the Southern branch.

"I am more than pleased with the showing of the Atlanta office; the splendid progress made demonstrating that good judgment was exercised in the selection of Mr. Brandon for the place," said Mr. Seelye.

JACOBS SECURES GRIFFITH PICTURES FOR NORTHWEST STATES

O. H. Jacobs, of the Jacobs Film Booking Offices, Manhattan Building, Milwaukee, on his return from a six weeks' trip in the East, announces that he has secured a number of notable film attractions for his company's territory, which includes Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, as well as upper Michigan.

"Silver Threads Among the Gold," with Richard Jose, the famous tenor in the leading role, is one of the big attractions secured, and will be shown to the Milwaukee public some time in September, at one of the leading downtown theatres, for a week's engagement, after which the picture will be put on tour through the state.

Another picture which will no doubt cause a stir, and which also belongs to this enterprising concern, is "The Fish Circus," about which further announcements will be made later. D. W. Griffith's "Home Sweet Home," "The Battle of the Sexes," "The Great Leap," and "The Dishonored Medal," all big pictures made by the producer of "The Birth of a Nation," will also be handled by this concern. W. A. Baier, copartner with Mr. Jacobs, leaves in a few days for Detroit and Minneapolis to open branch offices to handle the increasing business in that territory.

SIEGEL, FOX MANAGER IN DETROIT, MARRIED

Detroit friends of Abe E. Siegel, manager of the Detroit office of the Fox Film Corporation, are awaiting the return of Mr. Siegel with his bride. Mr. Siegel joined the ranks of the benedicts on Sunday afternoon, August 15, by marriage to Lena S. Levy, prominent in Philadelphia social circles.

Mr. and Mrs. Siegel, after a trip to Washington, New York and Niagara Falls, will settle down in Detroit. Mr. Siegel has been located in Detroit for the past five months. He is in love with the city and its people, but, as he says, "what's living without a wife and home?" The increased responsibilities of life from now on will stimulate Mr. Siegel to greater things, and the Fox Film Corporation can expect more business in Michigan than it has ever had.

TRAGGARDH TOURING CALIFORNIA

O. V. Traggardh, manager of the Union Film and Supply Company, San Francisco, is making an automobile trip through California in the interests of this concern, visiting many of the smaller places not reached by bookers who travel by train.

He has been meeting with splendid success and has been enabled to meet many customers with whom he has done business for a long time, but whom he had never seen.

LUNTZ BACK IN LOS ANGELES

Charles I. Luntz, formerly los Angeles manager of the Universal Exchange, who since January first has been in charge of the branch at Phoenix, Arizona, has returned to Los Angeles, where he will act as salesman owing to the Phoenix branch being closed.

HOFFMAN, MANAGER OF UNIVERSAL EXCHANGES, MAKES FLYING COUNTRYWIDE TRIP

THE demand for Broadway Universal Features has become so great, and the changed conditions incident upon this demand have become so pressing, that M. H. Hoffman, general manager of Universal exchanges, decided that a three or four weeks' trip embracing all of the exchanges or their managers was imperative.

He left New York on Tuesday night on a trip which will take him as far west as Denver, and as far south as New Orleans. Managers of those exchanges which lie west of the Rocky Mountains will be notified to meet Mr. Hoffman in Denver, and those exchange managers in the south to whom he cannot pay a personal call will meet him either in Atlanta, El Paso or New Orleans. Mr. Hoffman is not expected back in New York before September 1.

Since the Broadway Universal Features have been added to the Universal program, there have been many questions which need Mr. Hoffman's personal attention coming up in the exchanges all the time. In some, conditions have been satisfactorily met, and in others there is need of extra assistance, and different methods of handling the films and publicity matter.

One plan which Mr. Hoffman has decided to carry out in each exchange is a free publicity and information service. There are hundreds of exhibitors in every territory who do not know how to get the most out of the features which they play in their houses.

Their methods have been vastly improved by the assistance rendered by the publicity and advertising departments of the Universal itself, but Mr. Hoffman's idea is to have this help brought nearer home. He stated before he left New York that a publicity and information service would be established in every exchange, and that it would be maintained for the benefit not only of Universal exhibitors, but of every exhibitor in the territory which that exchange served. If an exhibitor wants to know anything about how to approach his newspapers, how to draw up his advertising, how to arrange a lobby display, how to bill his show, the best method of arranging a program, or any of the thousand and one things which make for showmanship, all they will have to do is to apply at the nearest Universal exchange.

Whether they are receiving service from that exchange or not, they will be able to get just as much help from the publicity and information bureau there as any Universal exhibitor would. These publicity bureaus will keep in close touch with the Universal home offices, and will draw much of their inspiration and material from that source.

"The advent of Broadway stars, best selling novels, and Broadway legitimate plays on the Universal program has necessitated such a move," said Mr. Hoffman, "and we have known for some time that this need existed. With the tremendous increase in business which has resulted, we feel justified in greatly enlarging certain departments in all of our exchanges.

"Many of the methods heretofore used are not up to the mark when it comes to the matter of publicising these new stars and plays. I shall hope in my three weeks' tour to meet every Universal exhibitor, and have made arrangements to have those whose exchanges I cannot reach meet me on neutral ground, as it were.

"The Universal exchanges are in a very strong position since the Universal was formed, but the volume of business which is constantly growing necessitates immediate and material changes in certain directions, and I hope to arrange all of these matters satisfactorily before I return."

CHANGES IN KANSAS EXCHANGE CIRCLES

C. A. Nichols, the former baseball star who was with the old Boston Nationals, is now on the road for George Kleine in Kansas City.

Manager Simon Libros, of the Picture Playhouse Film Company, has added another roadman to his staff. He is R. W. J. Bettis, and knows the Kansas City territory well and should make good.

The increasing business of the World Film Corporation in Kansas City under Max Levy, has increased until it has been found necessary to put on an assistant manager. He is William Parsons and is expected to be a great help to Manager Levy.

The Mutual has lost two of its Kansas City roadmen. They are C. A. Jones, who goes to the Metro Pictures Service, and G. E. Akers, who has connected with the Kansas City Feature Film Company.

C. L. Hull, special representative of the Selig Company, has been in Kansas City for several days looking over things with Manager Pearson of the V-L-S-E.

E. H. Wachter, an old-time film man in that territory, has accepted a position with the Fox Film Corporation under Manager Chas. W. Harden.

C. A. Coleman of the Kansas City Feature Film Company, has gone to Des Moines to be connected with the Iowa office of the same firm.

REILLY, EX-NEWSPAPER MAN, ON ROAD FOR PEERLESS IN NEW ORLEANS

Phil J. Reilly, known to every newspaper publisher in the New Orleans territory by the sobriquet of the "irrepressible press agent," is once more back in his home town after an absence of a year. He formed connections this week as traveling salesman for the Peerless Feature Film Company, of Louisiana. Reilly has been a press agent all his life, and it is even claimed of him that exaggerated reports of his weight were sent out at his birth. He was for many years connected with the old New Orleans "Picayune," but was noted principally for his press agent connections with the legitimate stage and motion picture productions locally.

A year ago he entered the film game at the selling end with the Texas Paramount Film Company.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

RUTH ROLAND IN RENO COMEDY

In "The Message from Reno" Ruth Roland has a comedy part which will present her in a new light. This piece was originally produced for the legitimate theatre by H. M. Horkheimer, several years ago, when it scored a metropolitan success.

Now it has been turned into a five-reel photoplay. Sherwood Macdonald is directing the screen version. Besides Miss Roland, the cast includes many other Balboa favorites.

MARY PICKFORD IS CAST FOR "THE FOUNDLING," FAMOUS PLAYERS' RELEASE, SEPTEMBER 6

QUITE inexhaustible, it appears, is the peculiar artistic faculty of Mary Pickford, the world's foremost motion picture star, for creating characters that are idealized and yet wholly true to life. In rapid and uninterrupted succession, this inimitable star has provided a series of individually distinctive and collectively astonishing film successes.

Following her triumphant appearances in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" and "Rags," Miss Pickford will next be presented in another unusual role, as "The Foundling," the Famous Players' release on the Paramount Program, September 6.

"The Foundling" is a characterization of tender appeal and wistful pathos. Molly O, the foundling, is the daughter of a struggling artist at whose birth her mother dies. Because of his wonderful love for his wife, the artist hates the child that caused her death, and gives the baby-girl to a mothering heart that cares for it.

The tragedy of his wife's death brings to the artist the master touch he has so long sought, and in the years to follow he wins fame and fortune. But in the sunset of life he realizes its emptiness and futility and yearns for the return of the child he has driven from his heart.

She, in the meantime, has drifted through a strange and varying life. How the threads of destiny unite these parted souls, bringing to each its first genuine happiness, is absorbingly unfolded in the photoplay—not, however, until a number of tense dramatic situations and a series of novel incidents have been developed.

Miss Pickford's masterly ability to mix pathos with humor is strikingly displayed throughout this entire five-part feature. She plays so effectively on the heart-strings of her spectators that the smile and tear pursue each other constantly.

A capable cast, including Frank Mills, Harry Ham, Gertrude Norman, Donald Crisp and Edith Chapman, renders the star adequate support. "The Foundling" may be said to present Little Mary at her best in her most captivating mood, her most triumphant ability and compelling power.

ACTOR'S EXPERIENCE IN SAN FRANCISCO IS BASIS FOR "FALSE CLUE" IN KALEM HOTEL SERIES

WHEN a certain star of the legitimate stage whose work in detective dramas has made him famous, registered at the Hotel St. Francis, San Francisco, he never dreamed that his subsequent adventures at that famous hotel would eventually be made the basis of one of the episodes of Kalem's "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel." The house detective of the St. Francis forwarded the story to Kalem recently and it impressed the producers to such an extent that "The False Clue" resulted.

SCENE FROM "THE FALSE CLUE—MYSTERIES OF THE GRAND HOTEL" SERIES, MADE BY KALEM

According to the hotel officials, the actor registered at the St. Francis, together with his wife, a young and very attractive lady, and his valet. The latter had been in the star's employ for several years and was trusted implicitly.

The actor's wife kept her jewels in a small jewel box reposing on her dresser. One of the hotel's messengers had occasion to deliver a parcel to the player and while waiting for the receipt to besigned, stood near the dresser. The actor, his wife and the valet were all in the room at the time.

Barely had the messenger returned to the office floor when the star rushed down, grasped the boy by the arm and excitedly denounced him as a thief.

The house detective inquired as to the disposition of the people in the room at the time when the boy called with the parcel, and what the acttor, the latter's wife and the valet had been doing prior to the messenger's appearance.

The valet had been cleaning the jewels with alcohol. This done, the man buried them in sawdust to make them dry with the most lustre. Upon hearing this, the detective examined the wastebasket and saw that it contained a quantity of the sawdust. Groping about in the basket, the sleuth brought the missing rings to view.

The valet then recalled that his master had been rehearsing his part while he was cleaning the rings.

"The False Clue" will be released in Regular Service, Wednesday, August 31.

PATHE BUYS RIGHTS TO "AT BAY"

Pathé announces the purchase of the picture rights to George Scarborough's play "At Bay," which had a long run both on Broadway and on the road.

"At Bay" is a society melodrama, showing the persecution of a charming girl at the hands of a blackmailer.

A FEW OF THE ANTICS IN WHICH SAM BERNARD INDULGES IN "POOR SCHMALTZ," A FAMOUS PLAYERS COMEDY

BERNARD RELEASE CHANGED TO AUGUST 23

It is announced by the Famous Players Film Company that the date of the first appearance in motion pictures of the world's foremost character comedian, Sam Bernard, in a typical characterization, "Poor Schmaltz," originally scheduled for release in October, has now been changed to August 23. The Paramount Pictures Corporation ends its annual program during the week of August 23, and it was in order to terminate the first Paramount year auspiciously that Mr. Bernard's initial screen creation was substituted for this occasion.

The subject selected for Mr. Bernard's introduction to the motion picture public, "Poor Schmaltz," presents him in the hilarious role of a German wig-maker who becomes the principal agent in a series of excruciatingly comic adventures.

SELIG SPECIAL TO GO ON REGULAR PROGRAM

"The Way of a Woman's Heart," a Selig Special in two reels, released in regular service on Monday, August 30 was originally planned for a feature photoplay. But it was decided to present this story in regular service.

"The Way of a Woman's Heart" features Eugenie Besserer, the French emotional actress, who is supported by Harry de Vere, Virginia Kirtrey and others. The plot is from the pen of Nellie Browne Duff, the well known authoress.

The story deals with a stage-struck girl and how she finally realizes that all is not gold that glitters.

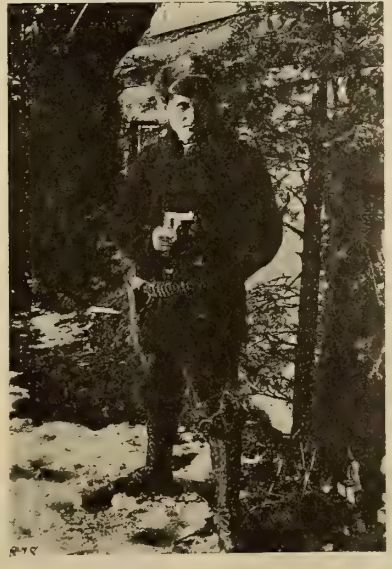
HELEN WALCOTT SIGNED TO ACT IN QUALITY FILMS

Helen Walcott, who has been playing leads for the Bosworth Company, has been engaded by Don Meaney, manager of production of Quality Pictures, to play opposite Francis X. Bushman, and Miss Snow will play leads for the other company now being formed.

The Bushman producing company went to San Bernardino last week to make scenes in the forest reserves near there for the Canadian north western scenes for "Pennington's Choice."

HELEN GIBSON REPLACES HELEN HOLMES IN THE "HAZARDS OF HELEN" RAILROAD SERIES

WITH the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series, approaching the end of the first year of its existence, and with motion picture exhibitors and patrons urging that it be continued, Kalem has taken steps which indicate that this remarkably successful series is to run on indefinitely.



Of paramount importance is the announcement that Helen Gibson has been engaged to succeed Helen Holmes as the heroine of the series. This change goes into effect immediately. Miss Gibson is admirably suited for the role. It is because of her absolute lack of fear—the positive delight she seems to take in performing the most hazardous feats—together with her protean ability, which have caused her to be added to Kalem's galaxy of stars.

The daughter of a railroad engineer, there is probably no other girl in the country who knows more about railroad life and railroading in general than this charming young lady. According to those people who know Miss Gibson, she actually ran her father's locomotive when but twelve years old.

It is said that until Miss Gibson attained womanhood, it was her father's constant fear lest the desire for excitement and adventure which caused her to risk her life upon numerous occasions, would some day be attended with serious results. He has by this time, however, become thoroughly convinced that his daughter possesses as much common sense as courage and that, as a consequence, she knows just how far she can go in defying death.

Aside from the acquisition of Miss Gibson, Kalem has put into effect other changes which promise to make the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series, better and more sensational than ever. It is to be expected that to those who have seen the episodes issued in the past year, this would seem impossible of accomplishment, but the fact that Kalem has yet to fail to live up to its prophecies must be taken into consideration.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series, has achieved a unique record. Not once, says the Kalem Company, have the episodes released to date received disparaging mention on the part of the motion picture reviewers.

OSBOURNE STORY, "INFATUATION," OFFERED BY AMERICAN

Lloyd Osbourne, who is the author of "Infatuation," to be released September 2 as a four part American Mutual Master picture, is a stepson of Robert Louis Stevenson.

In 1894 Lloyd Osbourne became U. S. vice-consul at Samoa. It was while he held this federal post that he conceived the plot and did the early work upon "Infatuation," which now is known as his greatest novel.

President S. S. Hutchinson, of the American Film Company, considers the securing of the film rights to "Infatuation" a master stroke, because of the beauty and the wonderful adaptability of the story.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, August 15.

THE semi-occasional rumor period is here, and at each studio are to be heard stories of numerous changes that are about to take place. Directors and players, according to these stories, will cause a general change among the studios. Just how much truth the rumors are founded upon it is impossible to learn.

ANNA PAVLOWA "TURNING THE CRANK" AT UNIVERSAL CITY

Added to the stories concerning the players, are others regarding legitimate stage stars who have brought the atmosphere of a certain Broadway to another Broadway in Los Angeles.

Nat Goodwin has completed his first picture with the Universal Company, and a local newspaper announced that he would give up his road tour this season to remain in pictures. No definite statement was made as to what company. Mr. Goodwin has been a recent visitor at the Griffith studios.

Kitty Gordon, whose million-dollar back photographs like a house afire, is said to be flirting with producers. In fact, Miss Gordon, who is here filling an engagement at the Orpheum, has visited several studios, and at the home of NYMP negatives was in consultation with Thomas H. Ince.

The Hobart Henley Universal Company, under the direction of Leon Kent, has taken up the filming of a four-reel subject to be released as a Broadway feature. The title of this is "The Tenor," and the story for the photoplay was written by the leading man and his director and the scenario prepared by F. McGrew Willis.

Henley Plays Dual Role

In this Henley plays a dual role, that of brothers who were separated at the death of their parents in Italy. One is adopted by a wealthy New York woman and becomes a physician, while the other, reared by the chief of a wandering band of musicians, becomes a noted grand opera singer. A reunion is brought about by the opera singer being brought to America where he becomes infatuated with the wife of the brother, who deserts him when he becomes a drug fiend.

In the end the singer married the leading woman of the troup after learning the identity of the woman who wronged his brother. For scenes for this subject the Majestic theater was leased for several nights and the second act of "Carmen" was staged for scenes in the photoplay. The cast supporting Mr. Henley includes Carmen Phillips, Gretchen Lederer and Walter Belasco.

The complete cast for the forthcoming Hobart Bosworth feature, "Big Bill Brent," now being filmed, has been announced, and includes the following players. Anna Lehr, Maud George, A. Karmeyer, Donald Bradbury, Dick LaReno, Jane Novak and Albert MacQuarrie. The subject will consist of four or more reels and is from a scenario by Donald Bradbury.

"The Fair God of Sun Island," is the title given a two-reel story of sea life in which the sweetheart is shanghaied on a boat that is wrecked and he is the only member of the crew which reaches an uninhabited island. There he finds gold and is believed to be a god by the natives of a nearby island, who bring a young girl there to make their annual sacrifice. He prevents the death of the girl and she becomes his companion.

Agnes Vernon in "Her Three Mothers"

The cast for this includes Barney Fury, "Daddy" Charles Manley, Luella Maxime, Herbert Rawlinson, and Lillian Hamilton. The direction is in charge of William Worthington; scenario is by James Dayton.

Agnes Vernon is being featured in a two-reel subject being filmed by Charles Giblyn, in which a step-mother by very unkindly treatment drives her husband's daughter from home to seek new life in a city where she has acquaintances met while they were spending the summer in the country near her home.

In the city the girl is adopted by a spinster of refinement, and there first learns of true happiness. Supporting Miss Vernon are William Quinn, Evalyn Thatcher and Adele Farrington. The title of the story is "Her Three Mothers."

An early day Western story of the time when rich strikes were not so unusual, is told in the Universal subject being filmed this week. The title is "The Sheriff of Red Rock Gulch," and has to do with a sheriff, adopting a baby son of a gunman who was driven from the community, and the gunman returning twenty years later and depriving his son of all his worldly wealth in a card game.

But the youth's foster father recognizes the old enemy of earlier days and in an effort to force him to return the money and claim won from the boy, a fight is started in which the gunman is killed. The secret of the boy's parentage died with the lad's father. Murdock MacQuarrie is directing the production and appearing in the role of the sheriff supported by Arthur Moon, Edna Payne, Jane Aubrey and Henry Alrich.

Allen Curtis and his band of Jokerites are now figuring out the "Ore Mystery," in which they are aided by Lady Baffles and Detective Duck. This is the second of the series of comedies being made by these players. The cast includes Max Axher, Gail Henry, Lillian Peacock, and William Franey.

The second Joker Company, under the direction of Harry Wulze, is filming "Their Social Smash," wherein the maid who desired to marry for true love instead of becoming the bride of the young millionaire her parents selected for her, makes good by catching her father flirting with a beach beauty and brings him to terms by threatening to expose him to the mother. Dan Russell, Mrs. Playter, Marcia Moore, and Bob Vernon appear in this.

Play on Professional Ethics

Professional ethics are set aside by a young doctor in "Just What the Doctor Ordered," a one-reel Nestor with Billie Rhodes, Harry Rattenbury, Neal Burns and Jack Dillon, being made from an Al Christie scenario by Horace Davey.

When the parents of the girl object to a young physician paying attention to her, the girl is supposed to be accidentally injured. It is unnecessary to state that the young physician, the only one within five miles, is successful in treating his sweetheart and father and mother forgive.

Eddie Lyons, Elsie Greeson and Lee Moran are appearing in "Eddie's Little Love Affair," under the stern direction of Al E. Christie, father of the Nestor comedies. This is a one-reel comedy of college life with Eddie and Lee as professors with a liking for love affairs with their pupils. Miss Greeson is one of the students at the select school for girls.

The first multiple reel subject of the National Film Corporation will be completed by the end of the week and ready for release by September first. This is "Captivating Mary Carstairs," an adaptation from the novel of the same name by the author of "Queed," in which Norma Talmadge is featured.

SPECIAL BATH-HOUSE BUILT BY THOMAS H. INCE FOR MISS BURKE

For scenes taken during the past week, a riot was wanted, and the company went to the Mexican district in Los Angeles where, after numerous futile attempts, a policeman came to the rescue by ordering all the I. W. W.'s and Mexicans to move on. The action that followed was just what was needed. Later a local vaudeville theatre was used for the making of a number of scenes in which the entire audience took part.

Twenty-fourth "Diamond" Episode

Among the new players added to the National stock company the past week was Hazel Buckman, late leading woman with the Kerrigan-Victor Company, and prior to that time with NYMP brands.

"The Diamond from the Sky" company of the American studios at Santa Barbara, spent the past week in Los Angeles making scenes for the twenty-fourth episode of the serial. In this a number of the animals of the Bostock Jungle owned by David Horsley were used, in fact, the mysterious diamond was found in the paw of one of the educated lions.

"Pardoned," is the title of a two-reel production being made under the direction of Thomas Ricketts at the American studios. In this Harold Lockwood appears in the double role, supported by May Allison.

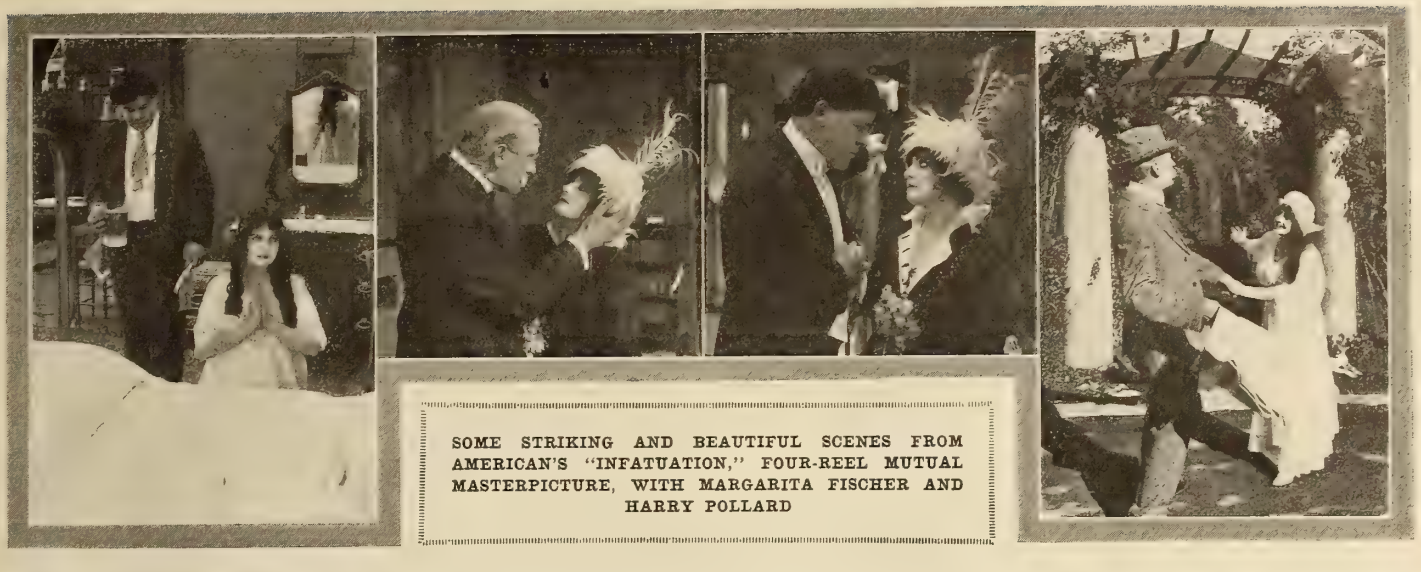
"Every Heart" is a drama for the American "Beauty" brand, featuring Webster Campbell and Neva Gerber, and is being made by Archer McMackin.

Owen Moore, late with the Mack Sennett organization, has been contracted to appear in D. W. Griffith subjects, and Clyde E. Hopkins is a recent addition to the Reliance producing staff. Hopkins entered pictures from the legitimate stage.

The Komic Company is making "Over and Back," which brings out many comedy situations when the stenographer becomes the sweetheart of two. Following this production Fay Tincher will take a two weeks' vacation, and expects to spend the time in New York.

This comedienne has been honored by George McManas, of the International News service, who is the father of the "Newlyweds," "Bringing Up Father," and other cartoon creations. In future drawings by Mr. McManas, Miss Tincher will appear in her familiar black and white bathing suit.

The divorce problem of today serves as a plot for a two-part Reliance subject entitled "The Divorcee," being produced by Director F. A. Kelsey. The story is by Bernard McConville.



"Father," Two-Reel Reliance

Another two-reel Reliance subject of the week is entitled "Father," in which Ralph Lewis is appearing in the title role, supported by Francelia Billington, Chandler House and William Brown. The plot is based on the kidnapping by the father of his son, and the scenario was written by Francis Powers, who is in charge of the production.

The Majestic Kid Company is picturizing a recent magazine story entitled "For Love of Mary Ellen." Messrs. Franklin are in charge of this.

THE CATALINA ISLAND VILLA WHICH BILLIE BURKE WILL OCCUPY DURING HER SOJOURN AT THE NYMP STUDIOS

Director Jack Conway is in charge of filming a two-reel Majestic, "His Guiding Angel," which portrays the change brought about in the life of a notorious bad man by the influence of a woman he idolizes. The cast includes Charles Clarey, Gladys Brockwell, Jack Dillon and Bert Hadley.

"The Family Doctor" shows the advantage the family physician has over patients in the event he is not honest. In this subject the physician hypnotizes the dying man, and induces him to alter the will in the doctor's favor. The cast for this includes Irene Hunt, A. D. Sears, Adoni Fevieri, G. M. Blue, Richard Cummings and William Moody. The subject is being produced by Joseph Belmont.

A pretty love story, with a touch of melodrama, is included in "Her Oath of Vengeance," being made for Majestic release in two reels. It pertains to life in the Russian colony in Los Angeles, where many of the people are employed in canneries. The cast includes Teddy Sampson, Charles West, Wilbert Higby, Frank Bennett, Joseph Heneberry and Eleanor Stone. F. J. Grandin is director.

A company of Reliance players, including Mildred Harris, Paul Willis, Alice Pettus, Bert Hadley and Charles Gorman, are home from Bear Valley, where the exterior scenes for "The Indian Trapper's Vindication" were made, with Dark Cloud playing in the name part. The story portrays life in early Indian days and the unpleasant conditions arising between the Indian and the white people. Ray Myers is directing this subject.

"Yellow Streak" by Vitagraph

Rollin Sturgeon, manager of production of the Vitagraph studio, is this week filming a two-reel subject entitled "The Yellow Streak," from scenario by Rev. Clarence J. Harris. In this the principal parts are played by Ann Schaefer, George Holt and George Conkel.

It is a heart interest story, dealing with everyday conditions of life in the farm section of the Middle West, and will include scenes in the desert country. Here George Holt, as Silas Rummell, a miserly farmer, finds cure for the yellow streak in the heart of the desert while lost in Death Valley.

"A Cripple Creek Cinderella" is a one-reel subject of early day mining life being filmed by Ulysses Davis, with a cast which includes Estella Allen in the name part, supported by Daisy Eloise Smith, Albert Vosburg, William Duncan, George Stanley and Jack Wetherby. A location where excellent scenes showing placer mining was found for this subject, and the company spent several days there.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon, of the Ashland theatre, Kansas City, were this week guests of Myrtle Gonzalez, leading woman of the Vitagraph Company, by spending a few days in Los Angeles. Manager Sheldon has been featuring Miss Gonzalez at his theatre, where she is a favorite, and on their trip West, they brought the popular player some very pretty presents.

Mary Anderson, until recently ingenue at the Eastern Vitagraph studio, is now a member of the Santa Monica staff, having arrived a few days ago.

William T. McCully has been added to the National producing staff and is making comedies with Rena Rogers, Russ Powell and Harry Fisher as principals. Louis Sheer is his assistant. Mr. McCully was formerly with the Keystone Company, and believes in plenty of action, but not slapstick.

Greased Skids for a Ladykiller

"Stepping Stones" is a one-reel National comedy featuring Bill Parsons and Constance Talmadge, being produced by Director Louis Chaudet. In this, Mr. Parsons appears as a stock broker who comes to grief because of his stenographer and is decidedly too popular with the ladies. Many of the scenes are made at a nearby beach. The story is by Anthony W. Caldeway.

Nelson Nichols, of the National mechanical staff, was one of the principals in a public wedding at the annual picnic of Los Angeles grocers here last week, the bride being Miss Mary Holmes.

The scenario for the second National multiple reel feature in which Norma Talmadge and Bruce Mitchell will be featured is entitled "The Leper." In this, scenes around the "Little Church Around the Corner," the famous New York landmark, will be shown, Director Mitchell having secured these pictures while in New York recently, and having taken the views from a private residence across the street, from which point he was immuned from city laws prohibiting taking pictures of this church.

Billie Burke is to be most royally entertained when she comes to the NYMP studios to appear in Thomas H. Ince features. Plans are now being made for the popular actress to reside in one of the attractive bungalows at Catalina Island, from which point she will be transported in a one hundred and twenty-three-foot schooner-rigged yacht to and from the studio each morning.

At the studio a suite of dressing rooms is being specially built. These will be decorated in the actress's favorite colors, and will have every convenience and comfort of a home. In addition to this, Mr. Ince is having built a special private bath house on the sandy beach along Inceville, where Miss Burke may pass her leisure moments.

It has been announced that a number of athletic actors of the NYMP stock have volunteered their services as life guard. Miss Burke is expected to arrive the latter part of August, by which time everything will be in readiness to make her stay a most pleasant one.

Beauty in a Pool Attracts Thief

The entire police force of Los Angeles was pressed into duty in an effort to locate the party who stole a twenty-eight by forty hand-colored photograph of Edith Story showing the actress sitting at the edge of a swimming pool, a scene from the Vitagraph subject "The Island of Regeneration." The picture disappeared from the lobby of the Palace of Pictures during the showing of this picture there.

About twenty Vitagraphers played the part of host Wednesday evening at a dance and luncheon at Sunset Inn, Santa Monica, the guest of honor being Publicity Manager Sam Spedon, who is here from the Eastern office.

Among those present were George Holt, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Vosburgh, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Lederer, Doris Schroeder of the scenario department, Mr. Phile, Assistant director, Myrtle Gonzalez, Mrs. Gonzalez, Director Ulysses Davis, Anne Schaefer, J. C. Jessen of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Mabel Condon of the Dramatic Mirror, and Clark Irvine of the Moving Picture World.

The Ham comedy workers at the Hollywood Kalem studio, staged a thriller when they borrowed a fire net from the local fire department, and Dave Morris made a fifty-foot leap to safety from the sulphur-made flames. The title for this subject has not been selected.

The forty-first episode of the railway series "Hazards of Helen," is now in the making at the Glendale Kalem studio.

No License, No Elevator

Work on the filming of "The Mysteries of the Grand Hotel" series was delayed two days this week because Director James Horne had failed to take out a license to operate a passenger elevator used in a number of scenes. The over-officious inspector learned the Kalem Company had installed an elevator and appeared on the scene when they were ready to begin filming, with notification that inspection was necessary and a license must be secured. The elevator used is of the regulation type operated in modern office buildings.

Ed. Saunders, brother of Jackie Saunders, leading woman of the Balboa Company, has also become identified with this film organization, and has recently been appointed assistant director, working under Henry King.

The Balboa Amusement Producing Company has adopted the policy of sending out to Pathé exchanges two thousand pennants each week which are distributed to exhibitors. Each week there will be a new and different design, the latest one being that of Balboa, the discoverer of the Pacific, saluting the red rooster known the world over as the Pathé trade mark.

Roland Groom, who has been with the Balboa Company for the past two years, serving as assistant to Billie Beckway, chief cameraman, has graduated into a regular crank turner, and is now in charge of the camera making scenes for the Burtram Brackin Company.

An East Indian one reel animal drama, "The Tiger Slayer," from scenario by Emma Bell, is being filmed under the direction of Robert Daly at the Selig zoo. Fritzi Brunette is playing the leading part in this, supported by George Larkin and others.

Another one reel animal subject, "Mutiny in the Jungle," is being filmed by Frank Beal. Anna Luther, Guy Oliver and William Scherer play the principal parts in this, and an uprising by a big tribe of natives forms one of the features of the subject.

Shows City and Country Life

The George Nichols Company is filming a two-reel drama, "The Sculptor's Model," picturing city and country life in America, and in this Vivian Reed and Joe King are featured.

Scenario has been prepared for a five-reel Selig V-L-S-E subject adapted from the Charles Major novel, "Sweet Elysium." This will be staged by Director Colin Campbell in the near future, the actual work being taken up as soon as Mr. Campbell completes his present subject.

The trainers of the Selig zoo are busy with the elephants teaching them to carry the howdah for an East Indian subject from scenario by James Oliver Kirwood, entitled "The Flashlight." This is to be produced by Lloyd Carleton.

General Manager Thomas Persons, of the Selig studios and zoo, is in Chicago on a business trip, and in his absence the Selig interests are under the care of James McKee.

The H. C. Matthews Company, producing at the old Universal studio for the Universal program, this week took up the filming of another three-reel comedy drama fairy tale, which has been given the title "The Princess of Noseyland."

Violet McMillan, who has been with the Universal for the past four months, following being featured in NYMP and Oz productions, has signed with the Balboa, and will take up work there in the near future.

George Fawcett has completed his engagement with the Thomas H. Ince organization, and has been engaged for a five-reel subject for the Universal. The story for this is by George Hall, and entitled, "Tainted Money." Scenario is being prepared by F. McGrew Willis, and the direction will be in charge of Otis Turner.

Contest Winner Signs with U

Lois Wilson, of Atlanta, Ga., one of the sixty-one beauties of the Universal Contest, has been signed by the Universal to play in features, and is expected to arrive at the West Coast studio.

The Universal feature company arrived from Chicago the latter part of last week, where they have been working during an engagement of Madame Pavlowa, filming interior scenes there for "The Little Dumb Girl of Portici." Madame Pavlowa arrived in Los Angeles last Saturday, and Saturday afternoon the first scenes were made here. Because of the large sets used, it has been found necessary by Managing Director Henry McRae to have this company use the old Universal studio in Hollywood.

By the time the company arrived here, one of the mammoth sets, measuring seventy-five feet in width, and one hundred and seventy-five feet in length, was completed and ready for use. This is a very handsome interior and exterior combined, and is perhaps one of the largest to be used in this ten-reel feature.

BEATRICE VAN IN "WHAT'S IN A NAME?" (Beauty release on the Mutual Program)

The Rex Universal Company, producing "The King's Keeper," which features Cleo Madison, has been spending the past ten days at Bear Lake Valley, in a government forest reserve. King of the title being the name of a mammoth tree around which the story is written.

John Copely, formerly technical director of Universal, later with the Fiction Pictures, Inc., has accepted a position as technical director for the Otis Turner Universal special feature company.

Helen Ware is expected to arrive in the next few days to take up work in Universal Broadway features. No announcement has been made as to the subject of this. Scenario is now in preparation by the department.

The Ford automobile factory band of fifty-six members, in charge of Henry Ford, spent last Friday at Universal City. On Saturday a Ford parade was held at the beach resorts in which more than eleven thousand products of the Ford factory took part. Every news weekly man in California was on the job.

Forthcoming NYMP Productions

The Western garb usually worn by William S. Hart has been put away in moth balls for the present, and he is now strutting about the NYMP stages in a "soup and fish" costume make-up, the tails of which have not been trimmed. Mr. Hart is appearing in "Between Men," a story of American life with scenes in the West and New York City. Supporting Mr. Hart in this are House Peters and Enid Markey.

C. Gardner Sullivan, with the collaboration of Mr. Ince, has written "The Golden Claw" as the next vehicle for Miss Bessie Barriscale, who is being directed by Reginald Barker. This is a society drama. "Typsy," Miss Barriscale's Pomeranian purp, has been cast for it.

The interior of a cathedral, so large that it required all the floor space of one of the big NYMP stages (this is 125 feet square), has been built for scenes in the photoplay "Waifs," the vehicle in which William Desmond and Jane Grey are appearing. This is the largest interior set ever built at Inceville, which means a great deal, and it has been fitted with a mammoth pipe organ installed behind the altar.

Scott Sidney, directing this production, is making a feature of the choir boys and the services of the acolytes.

Professor J. E. Nurnberger is now a member of the Ince staff engaged to write incidental music for all Ince productions for the Triangle program. Professor Nurnberger has a number of compositions to his credit, and through many years of experience is familiar with the majority of the successful compositions.

Director Charles Swickhard and company of players, including Orrin Johnston and Rhea Mitchell are spending this week on the Mojave desert securing desert scenes for "Whither Goest Thou?" from scenario by J. G. Hawks and producer Ince. This is Mr. Johnston's second subject for the Triangle program.

New Laws And Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed on all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

PORTLAND, ORE., EXHIBITORS WANT APPEAL POWER FROM CENSOR DECISIONS

A PROPOSED ordinance by the motion picture theatre managers of Portland, Ore., as a substitute for the present censor law was submitted to the Chamber of Commerce together with the old ordinance recently and has been referred to the Civic Bureau of the Chamber, with power to act.

The motion picture men are asking the Chamber to back them in a fight for the restoration of a Board of Appeals from the decisions of the censors, which they claim are becoming more arbitrary since the old Board of Appeals was abolished.

Much publicity has been given the question of censorship recently, the press at first trying to remain neutral, but evidently having been won over to the side of the picture men and their cause. The opinions of both sides were secured, and quoted, but evidently the picture men have the best of the argument so far.

The present board of seven members, from whose decision there is no appeal, is composed of Mrs. E. B. Colwell, secretary, who is paid a salary of one hundred dollars per month; four other women appointed by the mayor to assist Mrs. Colwell, and one exchange manager and one theatre manager.

The plan has been to send single viewers to each exchange or theatre, to view a picture. If they found cause for complaint, the entire seven were then called upon to view the picture and pass judgment. Mrs. Colwell, it is claimed by the picture men, is not broad-minded enough, and dominates the board, particularly the women members. There being five of the women viewers on the board, naturally they are a majority over the two film men. Whether or not Mrs. Colwell dominates the board is a question of dispute, but the fact that she was one of the first volunteer censors in Portland, having worked five years in this capacity without salary, may have some bearing on the question, as the other women viewers and members of the board may, by reason of her length of service and experience, rather look to her to make up their minds when they are in doubt as to a picture's merits.

Mrs. Colwell, on her part, says she does not dominate the board, nor in any way try to force her opinions on the other members when voting on a picture under question, and says she proposes to enforce the law as long as she is secretary of the board, but that at any time it is felt that anyone else would better fill the position, she stands ready and willing to step down in favor of someone else.

During the five months since the censor ordinance became a city ordinance, 2,003 pictures comprising 3,538 reels have been viewed. Out of these 12 pictures have been condemned, and 148 reels have had eliminations made.

The censor people have also asked that the city arrange for one place of viewing pictures, and maintain same, with proper equipment, for the use of censors, claiming that in this way much time could be saved which is now spent going from place to place, and viewing of films under difficulty at times. In other words, the personnel of the present censorship board means business and wants the help and co-operation of the city in every way possible.

OMAHA POLICE COMMISSIONER WAGES WAR ON CROWDED HOUSES—EXHIBITORS RESENT ATTACK

A SPECIAL hearing was given by Superior Judge Foster at Omaha, Neb., this week to arguments in the case of the Empress theatre, charged with violating a city ordinance in permitting the passageways of the theatre to be blocked with people while a show was in progress. Police Commissioner Kugel, in his energetic pushing of the case, has aroused Omaha exhibitors with a threat to introduce an ordinance making it a violation of the law to sell tickets to a show before the theatre is empty. Judge Foster has the case under advisement.

Police Commissioner Kugel appeared in person before the judge and told of visiting the theatre on several occasions and finding people standing in the lobby, which he declares is a passageway. He said the crowd constituted a great menace to life in case of panic.

W. Ledeaux, manager of the Empress, and James Hunter, assistant manager, with their lawyers, explained in detail how the theatre is constructed. The lobby was built unusually large to accommodate the waiting throng. Opening from it into the theatre are three large ten-foot doors, used entirely for entrances. Two roomy exits, one on either side of the main lobby and entirely separated from it, are the way the crowds get out, both from the lower floor and the first and second balconies.

The lobby will accommodate five hundred people easily. When the house is filled, as it is at every exhibition, those waiting a few minutes until the next show begins are allowed to remain in the comfortable lobby. They enter the main doors as the inside crowd passes out through the exits.

Police, at Kugel's instructions, unceremoniously attacked the Empress a week ago, arresting Ledeaux and Hunter on charges of violating the ordinance. The attack was entirely unexpected.

Omaha has recently been in the throes of city legislation against motion picture theatres, but the Empress being the largest and best house, with every precaution for protection against fire or panic, was considered exempt. "We might as well start with the big ones and go on down through the small ones," Kugel declared the day after the arrest.

His threat to introduce and get passed an ordinance requiring theatres of all kinds to empty their houses before they can sell tickets, would work ruin upon the motion picture theatres.

The crowds are constantly coming and going to them and they could not conduct business under the proposed restriction.

The situation in Omaha just at present is such that he could accomplish his purpose if he desired. One local newspaper is waging rabid attacks on theatres, crying for censorship and claiming they are taking the place of the yellow-backed novel of a former generation.

The other newspapers are indifferent, merely running the news of the fights as they come up.

Organized effort on the part of exhibitors, it is believed, would result in the aggressive commissioner ceasing some of his undue prosecutions. Unless some such organization is effected, some of the exhibitors are saying, they will wake up after a while to find themselves tied down by restrictions that will mean ruin.

NO DECISION IN ALBANY SUNDAY OPENING CASE FOR TWO WEEKS

It will be two weeks before Justice Hasbrouck can give his decision in the habeas corpus proceeding brought by LeRoy H. Bender, manager of the Silent Moving Picture theatre at Sheridan avenue and Lark street, Albany, who is fighting for Sunday opening.

Chief of Police Hyatt made a return to the writ in which he denied that Bender had been restrained of his liberty and imprisoned, this being the allegation in Bender's affidavit. This makes an issue that must be tried out in court. The briefs which were to have been filed were not in Justice Hasbrouck's possession when he went away on his vacation and it will be September 1 before the case can come up.

Attorney John J. Finn, of Yonkers, is the attorney for Bender. It was he who led the successful fight in Yonkers recently which resulted as only the Albany case can, and the shows were opened. Finn took the city authorities by surprise in Yonkers, just as he did in Albany.

There can be but one result of the litigation now in progress and that is for the courts to declare that no city has the right to prohibit moving picture shows on Sundays. This is in accordance with the ruling of the Court of Appeals.

Some talk there is now that the case may never go to the Court of Appeals, for the attorneys feel that the decision there would be based on the Yonkers case.

"We do not want to open Sundays this month," said a prominent Albany exhibitor, "but we do want to open when the cold, bleak weather of the fall comes and the people have no other place to go. We are of the opinion that we are keeping men out of saloons by throwing open the picture theatres, so they may go there and enjoy a quiet, silent, if you will, evening of amusement and education."

PITTSBURGH DEPARTMENT STORES SHOWING PICTURES

The members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America are up in arms on account of the showing of motion pictures free in many of the large department stores in Pittsburgh. It is stated that the pictures are shown in the sixth and eighth stories of the stores in question and that this is a direct violation of the law.

None of the theatres in that section are permitted to show pictures when their theatres are on the second story of any building and a number of the owners of theatres so situated were forced out of business some time ago, stated Fred J. Herrington, the newly elected head of the League.

"It is up to the large stores to obey the laws the same as the regular motion picture theatres, and it is likely that this phase of the business will be looked into by the league. Those violating the law will be brought to time for doing it.

"We do not desire to be hard on any one, but it must be taken into consideration that the theatre owners are watched closely and not permitted to do anything that is contrary to the law, and why should the stores be permitted to do what the regular exhibitor is not allowed to do?"

EXHIBITOR IN OHIO TOWN WHO DEMANDED A JURY TRIAL WINS IN SUNDAY OPENING CASE

ASHTABULA, Ohio, motion picture theatre managers have won their fight to remain open on Sundays. When Manager A. A. Lins, of the Airdome, was arrested for the second time on August 8 he demanded a jury trial. Out about 35 minutes, the jury in the central police court on August 13 returned a verdict of not guilty.

When the verdict was announced the crowd that packed the courtroom broke out with prolonged applause and shouts of "Hurrah!" were heard on all sides. Mr. Lins then was surrounded by the enthusiastic crowd and had to shake hands over his victory.

The large crowd was a proof of the intense interest which has centered about the fight of the motion picture men to operate their shows on Sunday.

Only one man of the twelve jurors held out for conviction. The state argued that the law had been violated and the judge so instructed the jury. After being out fifteen minutes the jury asked for further instruction, asking if a jail sentence was obligatory. The judge stated that it could be waived.

The arguments of the defense was that Lins was not guilty of any moral crime; that he had done something which hundreds of other persons are doing and for which they were not being molested. A detailed review of the benefits of motion pictures was given, it being claimed that a city was better off with motion pictures on Sunday, as they provided a form of amusement that is clean and proper, and an especially good amusement for women and children. The jury evidently was won over by this argument.

One interesting fact was brought out—one juror never has seen a motion picture show, although he has been living in Ashtabula for many years. When he said that he thought he could give a conscientious verdict on the testimony and evidence, he was allowed to remain on the jury. He was not the lone member who held out for conviction.

This verdict disposes of the cases pending against three other motion picture managers—Ward Johnson, of the Casto; John Freeman, of the Lyric, and George Smith, of the C-It. It was the second time that Freeman was arrested. He and Lins were fined $25 and costs on their first trial. The theatre-going public of Ashtabula is pleased with the outcome of the Lins case, and the threatened enforcement of blue laws on Sundays in the discard.

SOLONS IN INDIANA TOWNS ACT ON "HYPOCRITES," "NIGGER" AND EASTLAND DISASTER

FRED KELLER, Mayor of South Bend, Ind., forced the La Salle theatre, of South Bend, to cancel a showing of "The Hypocrites." Harry Lerner, manager of the theatre, said that a part of the film was excised, and that the operator asked permission to replace it, but had been refused. While he was busy in the front of the house the clipper part was run in, according to Lerner. The house was closed half a day while Lerner was trying to replace the film.

The city authorities of Bloomington, Ind., have been petitioned by the colored people of that town not to permit the showing of "The Nigger."

E. E. Norman, manager of the Crystal theatre at Columbus, Ind., was permitted to show the pictures of the Eastland disaster at Chicago, by the police of Columbus, who said they were O. K.

The showing of "The Nigger" was stopped by Mayor Braun, of Connersville, Ind., on petition of the colored citizens of that city.

There appears to be a disagreement among those in Logansport who are opposed to the moving picture theatres running their shows on Sunday. It appears to be unanimously agreed that Dr. Charles Nelson will file affidavits to stop them, and he says he will "in due time." Meanwhile, the theatres have been open two Sundays in succession, with those opposed to the theatres being open making threats to stop them.

WANTED TO PASS SPECIAL ORDINANCE TO BAR "NATION" FROM TACOMA; COUNCIL DEFEATS PLAN

SEATTLE'S experience with "The Birth of a Nation" was uneventful, Spokane's developed no small measure of excitement, but Tacoma's promises to be decidedly warm.

The picture, still running in Spokane and calling forth daily protests from colored congregations and prompting "Vox Populi" and "Constant Reader" to send countless letters to the newspapers, is being sought by Manager Charles Heraldn, of the Tacoma theatre in Tacoma.

As soon as it became known that the booking was being considered, Colonel A. E. Joab and others drafted and presented to the city council an ordinance forbidding the exhibition of moving pictures that "tend to excite race prejudice."

The backers of the ordinance admitted that it was intended chiefly to keep "The Birth of a Nation" out of their city.

The members of the city council took none too kindly to the proposal. City Commissioner Owen Woods expressed the opinion of many present at the hearing when he remarked:

"We ought to pass this ordinance, just to sustain Tacoma's reputation as a freak town."

Tacoma already is widely known for an ordinance passed a year or two, forbidding any person to buy a drink for any other person.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By George D. Proctor

ONLY a day more between now and the great annual outing of the New York exhibitors at Brighton Beach. At least that is Hugh Hoffman's warning. This is the time when the unofficial and jolly side of life prevails over the official and box-office view point. Arrangements have all been made for an outing which will begin early in the afternoon and end about twelve hours, or more, later.

The various contests between the photoplayers ought to be a surprise. The routine life of the screen actor includes early rising and many athletic stunts which are foreign to the stage player. So the swimming, running and riding contests really should be pretty good aside from the interest attaching to the personality of the contestants.

A special feature will be the race between the motor driven vehicle (note that the word automobile is avoided) owned and driven by Joe Brandt, general manager of the Universal, and Hank Van Loan, the Universal's boy wonder. Joe will drive his Flivver car, against which Hank will pit a mechanical beetle. Both have been weighted with stones to prevent their flying off the track.

Work of producing "The Fall of a Nation," a sequel to "The Birth of a Nation," will begin within a few days on the Pacific Coast. It will be made by the National Drama Corporation, of which Thomas Dixon is the director general. Mr. Dixon will be placed in film circles as the author of "The Clansman," the book which inspired "The Birth of a Nation."

"The Fall of a Nation" will deal with the invasion of America by foreign powers, a subject fertile in spectacular possibilities.

The present plan is to have five or six directors collaborate on the work of producing the picture. If this multitude of cooks can concoct a whole as good as "The Birth of a Nation" great will be the success thereof.

Which reminds one that Leon J. Rubenstein, of Thanhouser, brings out a snappy little phrase when he advertises Thanhouser and Falstaff comedies as "the mirth of a nation."

Rehearsal for "The Clutch of Gold," the skit which will be the dramatic feature of the coming Screen Club revel, are going on in earnest. This sketch will bring on the stage about sixty well known screen actors. Many more will be seen in the minstrel show in which Joe Farnham will act as interlocutor. The revel will be held in September.

Cohan and Harris have accepted the comedy "Safety First" from the typewriters of Anthony P. Kelly, free lance scenario writer, and Harry Mainhall, scenario writer with the Whartons, and will produce it on Broadway.

Herbert Brenon is after new laurels. He sailed recently for Bermuda to produce some very big Fox features. Annette Kellerman will be starred in one supported by William E. Shay, Herb's favorite leading man. Edward Morrissey goes along with a second company, headed by Jean Southern, to make pictures. Herb has several Fox features all ready for distribution, including "The Hunchback," a new version of "The Two Orphans," and "The Soul of Broadway," with Valeska Suratt.

All sides now agree that the Knickerbocker theatre, Klaw and Erlanger's theatre at Broadway and Thirty-eighth street, will show the productions of the Triangle Film Corporation, beginning in September. Thus do Messrs. Griffith, Ince and Sennett come to their own on our local Main street.

Dame Rumor says that Charlie and Syd Chaplin will soon be seen in a Broadway show, continuing their motion picture work at Eastern studios. Next.

Bert Ennis, manager of sales and publicity of the Eastern Film Corporation of Providence, dropped in during the week looking fit as a fiddle. The Eastern Film Corporation now has quite a large force at work at its Rhode Island studios and will shortly announce releasing affiliations.

Rumors from the coast say that Sam Spedon, Vitagraph advertising manager, is being feted most gloriously. His words hint strongly that Vitagraph will increase its producing activities there.

This week's postcard came from Mary Anderson, leading woman at seventeen, whom the Vitagraph has just sent to the same coast studios.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

Pete Schmidt, Bosworth's boy press agent, is vacationing. His parting shot was an enormous wad of copy.

August Froebel and William H. Goodfellow, of the Artone Film Company, of Detroit, are at the Astor buying features.

Beatriz Michelena, the California Motion Picture Corporation star, made a short trip East.

Joe Gilday, of the Willis Wood theatre, of Kansas City, made a short visit to town.

CHANGES OF THE WEEK

P. S. Lewis goes from the Universal exchanges to the Mutual, his first stop being Philadelphia.

William F. Haddock, "Silent Bill," is directing Gaumont features.

Guy Coombs and Anna Querentia Nilsson leave Kalem, Miss Nilsson going to Fox to play the feminine lead in "Regeneration."

Darwin Karr, leading man, goes from Vitagraph to Essanay.

Lawrence McCloskey, late Lubin scenario editor, is now collaborating with Barry O'Neill, director, on coming World Film features.

Harry Spingler, juvenile and heavy actor, joins the Universal from the Fox forces.

Gladden James, Vitagraph juvenile and clever actor, goes to Universal.

Marshall Farnum, director and elder brother of Bill, the actor, goes to Exclusive Features, Inc., leaving Fox, and taking along Judson Langill as his assistant.

Doubts are now settled about Alan Dwan. He is with Griffith, making Fine Arts Films. Owen Moore is also with Griffith in Fine Arts Films.

Young Miss Gray has arrived at the home of John W. Gray, Vitagraph publicist.

Merritt Crawford, Metro's new publicity man, is a father. It's a girl.

Florence Rockwell, dramatic star, goes with Knickerbocker Star Features.

Joe Jackson, silent comique, who has been doing a tramp bicycle, joins the Keystone forces with a two-year contract.

"'NEATH CALVARY'S SHADOW" FOR RELEASE ON SEPTEMBER 9

A Selig Diamond Special will be released in regular service on Thursday, September 9, entitled, "'Neath Calvary's Shadow," and features two popular stars of the screen, Fritzie Brunette and Wheeler Oakman. W. H. Lippert is author of this Selig Diamond Special of unusual story, action, which possesses a wealth of beautiful scenic backgrounds.

NEW BALBOA MEDIUM GIVES JACKIE SAUNDERS STRONG OPPORTUNITY

Jackie Saunders is appearing in a strong three-reel domestic drama under the direction of Bertram Bracken. Her new vehicle offers Miss Saunders splendid opportunities.

Playing opposite the Balboa girl is Lewis J. Cody, one of the best known actors to be recruited from the legitimate stage recently.

Collins, Edison Director, Holds Unique Record

He Never Acted on the Stage or for the Screen, Yet at the Age of Twenty-three Makes Reputation as Exponent of Best in Future Picture History

TO be, at the age of twenty-three years, spoken of by a leading critic as "an exponent and pioneer of what the best in the future of the motion picture holds," and never to have been an actor on stage or screen is of itself significant of the record and ability of a director. Such is the unique record of John H. Collins, Edison director, who has to his credit the direction of many of the most successful pictures produced by that company.

Starting as a boy at a time when motion pictures were thought an experiment, when no lights but sunshine were known, when painted scenery stood for a world of objects, Director Collins has grown up with the industry and his growth has been as fast as the business.

JOHN COLLINS

His was the role of a man of parts when he first began with Edison, acting as assistant to four directors, watching for the sun, and casting the players, many of whom are now famous in the motion picture world.

During the two years he held that post he had staged more than five thousand sets for what was then the biggest feature productions and which still are easily remembered. It was he who painstakingly gathered together the Edison library embracing every authoritative book and illustration on history, costumes, manners and locations from all corners of the world.

He has designed sets and costumes for every known tribe except the Esquimaux and his productions have always won most favorable commendation because of their faithful accuracy of detail. Some of these are "Frederick the Great," and Schiller's "The Robbers." His first directorship was in conjunction with Director Richard Ridgley, Mr. Collins doing all the battle and sea scenes in "The Southerners" while Director Ridgley was at work in the South. In "The Story of the Willow Pattern," when a stage manager, in turning the whole studio into a lake, in the remarkable realism of the blowing up of the battleship Maine, in the studio, one gets a glimpse of the execution and ability of this quiet man, John Collins.

His first production was "Jim's Vindication" and it easily vindicated his selection for the directorship. That's but a year ago, but in that short time Director Collins has left an impression upon the screen in such plays as "What Could She Do?" "On the Stroke of Twelve;" the prize play, "The Phantom Thief," "The Last of the Hargroves;" Lee Arthur's "Cohen's Luck," and "Greater Than Art."

As a dramatist, Director Collins' "Stoneheart," "Oh, Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight," and "'Twas the Night Before Christmas," for which he won a gold prize, are instinct with fine dramatic sense.

Perhaps one of the most distinctive features of this directors work is his ingenuity in lighting effects which, however, never intrude themselves in a theatrical manner but always serve to strengthen the scene. Strikingly quiet and modest at and about his work, never raising his voice, never hurried, and having a faculty of working with his players more than arbitrary directing, he has every mark of the man who knows his business and knows it well.

PUGILIST JEFFRIES IS TO APPEAR IN QUALITY PICTURES SUBJECT

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Aug. 16.

E. H. Calvert, who directed Francis X. Bushman at the Essanay Chicago studio for a number of months, has been engaged by the Quality Pictures Corporation and will arrive in the near future to take up the production of the third subject featuring Mr. Bushman, the title of which is "Pennington's Choice," an adaptation from the story of the same name by Anita Loos in the "Cavalier Magazine."

This production will consist of five acts, and Mr. Bushman will be supported by Rollin Ferris, Dick Larino, Lester Cuneo, Helen Dunbar and a leading woman to be announced later. This is a lumber camp story, and many of the scenes will be made at Mt. Shasta, California, and a feature of the number will be the fact that James Jeffries, exchampion heavyweight pugilist, will appear as the principal lumberjack. Francis X. Bushman and Mr. Jeffries will stage a real fist fight which promises to be a sensation in films.

It is announced that Quality Pictures will add the second producing company, which may be under the direction of Charles Baumann, now with the company, and featuring Marguerite Snow. No announcement has been made as to the personnel of this company.

McKIM, LEADING MAN FOR MARIE WAINWRIGHT, JOINS LUBIN AS DIRECTOR

Lubin of Philadelphia announces the engagement of Edward McKim, who was identified with various different companies, and whose last play, "The Confession," in five acts, was filmed by him in the record breaking time of twelve days and scored an instantaneous success.

Mr. McKim was born in Pittsburgh, and made his professional entrance on the speaking stage as Philistus in "Damon and Pythias." His success on the speaking stage was such that soon he became leading man for Marie Wainwright and made a tour of the country in Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night."

After being leading man in various plays, especially leading man in "The Man of the Hour," Mr. McKim turned his attention to the direction of photoplays, and succeeded in making an enviable record for himself.

EDWARD McKIM

At Lubin's he makes a specialty of comedies, but not of the slapstick kind.

CUB COMEDY RELEASE DAY CHANGED

A shift has been made in the release day of the Cub Comedies on the Mutual program. Up to and including the release of September 9, the Cub one-reelers have and will be released on Thursdays, but beginning the week of September 13 these David Horsley productions will be released on Fridays. The first release by this arrangement will then be made Friday, September 17, and continued on that day thereafter.

Although new on the Mutual program, the first release having been made August 19, these comedies are already much in demand. Pre-release date exhibitions were given for the benefit of Mutual exhibitors and the Cub warmly welcomed.

George Ovey is featured in all the Cub releases. Ovey is a particularly gifted fellow.

He is an excellent pantomimist with a great range of facial expression.

Summer Heat Fails to Stop Production at Lubin's

Pratt Is Late Comer to Directing Staff—Green, Former Scenario Editor, Is Directing Important Subject—Edgar Mels Heads Publicity Department

Special to Motion Picture News

Philadelphia, August 19.

A FEW weeks' vacation in the Maine woods, a return to "Lubinville," and what a change! It looks like a new place, so many of the old familiar faces have vanished, so many new ones are seen around the grounds. But such is life, and more especially motion picture life.

Change is the order of the day. Like the pictures themselves, their exponents are constantly shifting. At all events Lubin's has taken on new and virile life. Whether voluntarily or involuntarily, many actors, scenario writers and others have taken their departure. Those who remain and those who have been added to the force make this plant one of the strongest in the country.

At the head of the publicity department is Edgar Mels, well known in newspaper and advertising circles. Mr. Mels has some big plans up his sleeve which he is not yet ready to announce. He believes in getting close to the exhibitor, in finding out the latter's needs and catering to them. His ideas in this line are already bearing good fruit.

Steering the helm of the scenario ship is Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman. Not only writing his own inimitable stories, but overseeing all the manuscripts submitted, there is bound to be a valuable cargo of "punch" brought into the Lubin port.

Of the new directors, John, familiarly called "Jack," Pratt, is the leading light. Then there are on the staff of the old directors: Joseph Kaufman, George Terwilliger, Romaine Fielding, Wilbert Melville and Arthur Hotaling.

Clay M. Greene, who formerly did scenarios, is now a full-fledged director. Percy Winter, who used to do various and sundry things, will now devote his energies to directing. Mr. Winter showed how well he can do such stunts by his recent successful efforts in the Lubin Benefit show.

Edward McKim is a new and well-known comedy director of whom big things are expected. Allen Farnham has become director of scenes and sets, an artistic critic as it were.

When it comes to the stars shining in the Lubin firmament, though lots of old friends are twinkling elsewhere, it is good to still see so many special favorites lighting up the screen heavens in the Quaker City. Ethel Clayton is doing big things with the Arizona Fielding Company.

Rosetta Brice has a well-deserved chance in the new war play (as yet unnamed) that Pratt is producing. Then there is clever little Mary Charleson, Eleanor Barry, Florence Williams, Clara Lambert and many others who were not around the other day.

Directors Making World Pictures Become Partners

Drawing Accounts Will Take Place of Salaries—Each Man Will Receive 20 Per Cent. of Profits on Subjects Made Under His Supervision

THE operation of the World Film Corporation on a profit-sharing system, an idea fathered by Lewis J. Selznick, the World's vice-president and general manager, was the chief topic of discussion at a dinner last Wednesday night, attended by members of the board of directors of the corporation, representatives of the World's allied interests and the firm directors who produce the features that are released under the World banner.

Realization that the adoption of such a comprehensive profit-sharing policy by a concern of the importance of World film represents a radical departure from established methods and a movement pregnant with developments of peculiar import, means that the progress of the plan will be watched with interest by the film world generally.

Among those who were present at the dinner were Lewis J. Selznick, Lee Shubert, William A. Brady, Milton C. Work, chairman of the Executive committee, J. E. Brulator, J. E. Rhinock, B. N. Busch, B. L. Heidingsfeld, Samuel Mayer, Jacob Wilk, Henry Bayard, Barry O'Neil, Emile Chautard, Albert Capellani, Maurice Tourneur, E. P. Heath, Frank Crane, Oscar Eagle, Joseph Smiley, M. E. Hoffman and H. C. Drum.

As outlined by Mr. Selznick, the World's plan is substantially as follows: The directors instead of being employed on a salary basis, will be given contracts each entitling the holder to the privilege of a drawing account and creating him a partner in the picture made under his direction to the extent of 20 per cent. of the profits.

With such a reward in sight for the director the prospect of achieving a noticeable economy in film production becomes promising, and the incentive is furnished for each director to exert his utmost skill in the filming of every detail no matter how apparently unimportant.

ARTHUR LUCAS JOINS THE TRIANGLE

Arthur Lucas, Pittsburgh, Pa., district manager of the Mutual Film Company, has resigned from that company and has taken up his new duties with the Triangle Company. For some time it was known that Mr. Lucas contemplated a change, but it was not known that the change would come at this time.

Mr. Lucas has been with the Mutual Company for several years, and he had a host of friends among the users of the Mutual program in this section who wish him luck in his new position. Mr. Brink, who was general auditor with the Mutual Company, has also gone over to the Triangle.

JOYNER PLAYS JUVENILE OR OLD MEN PARTS WITH EQUAL EASE

To be able to interpret convincingly and with equal ease juvenile roles and old men parts is a valuable asset to a photoplayer, and it is because of this asset that Francis Joyner, who is playing the decadent Prince in the great Lubin war play, now being filmed by Jack Pratt, has been so successful on the screen.

Joyner was born in New Orleans in 1887 and began his stage career at the age of seventeen in Chicago with May Hosmer. He began by playing small parts, but his ability to put character into his work, his sincerity and hard study, gained him speedy recognition and at the end of the first season he was playing principal roles.

The following season he joined Willard Mack's repertoire company and to Mack must go considerable of the credit of bringing out the possibilities of the young actor. It was through Mack he learned the valuable lesson that to be a really good actor a man must be versatile. Joyner was with the Mack company for two seasons and then played the juvenile role in "The Futurity Winner" and with Davis Higgins.

During the next few seasons Joyner played in stock companies in Duluth, Indianapolis, St. Paul, Chicago and Brooklyn. He left the Keith stock company in Brooklyn to join the Lubin players, and since then has played under various directors.

MARKS HOME AGAIN IN BUFFALO

Special to Motion Picture News

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 19.

Mitchell H. Mark, who has been at Atlantic City during the summer, is back in Buffalo at his desk in the Palace theatre building.

William Rosenthal, assistant manager of the Palace theatre, has just returned from a vacation in the Adirondacks, happier and much heavier physically.

GEORGE OVEY IS "MAID-OF-ALL-WORK" IN CUB COMEDY

George Ovey steps out of his familiar character of Jerry in the latest Cub Comedy called "Making Matters Worse," which is to be released on the Mutual Program, Thursday, September 2, and dons feminine attire, for only by impersonating a woman he believes he can solve the problem of evading Curlock Bones, the master detective, who is hot on his trail.

GEORGE OVEY

The manner in which Ovey handles the part is another proof of his versatility. He portrays the maid-of-all-work without burlesquing the character or without lending to his effort the least bit of suggestion. In his hands the part becomes one of rich humor and is without doubt one of the best "feminine" characterizations ever done in motion pictures.

Jerry's scheme of evading the law through the impersonation works only as long as he refrains from playing his pranks upon others. He forgets his part, however, strikes up a flirtation with the master's better half, who, indignant, thrashes the homebreaker and exposes him. Curlock Bones, still on the scent, arrives opportunely and escorts the miscreant to a quiet place in jail.

Ovey, as Jerry, is supported by Louis Fitzroy, Janet Sully, Jefferson Osborne, Goldie Colwell and Eva Smith. Milton Fahrney directed.

Daughter of English Lord Is Cast for Lincoln Cycle

Charter Features Actress Is Also an Author, with Several Books to Her Credit, and Proved Herself a Little Patriot at the Front as Well

AFTER an exciting and heroic career in the fields of battle in southern France, Alice Inwood, daughter of Lord Inwood of England, is now in America after a stormy trip aboard the St. Paul out of Liverpool.

She has come to play an important part in the Lincoln pictures, and as such she will become a worthy support to Benjamin Chapin, the eminent Lincoln characterizer.

The artistic strength of the cast chosen by the Charter Features is remarkable.

Miss Inwood has had a rainbow-colored career. The daughter of one of the oldest families of artistocratic Britain, she early found herself drifting towards the arts.

Her books have been among the best of their kind to appear in Europe. For instance, "The Hand at the Window" has recently run into its eighth edition. "The Fatal Thirteen," has just completed its sixth edition, and "The Teeth of a Vampire" is one of the six best sellers across the waters.

Miss Inwood has been in these lands before and she has in addition been known to motion picture lovers through her work with Thomas Ince and in the Reliance, Majestic and other motion picture companies.

Previous to the outbreak of the sullen European conflict, Miss Inwood, scored successes with the Western Feature Film Company of London as Queen Elizabeth. And in the "Battle of Waterloo" she was the one big outstanding figure.

As Ann Hathaway in the "Life of Shakespeare," she made that fine figure of history take on new proportions.

Recently the English and French press devoted laudatory comments on Miss Inwood's courageous and noble service to the wounded soldiers. One of her most original ideas in connection with her aid to the sufferers was her "egg begging campaign." Rushing around from farm to farm in the rural districts she asked for eggs and it is said that one day alone she collected 8,000 eggs.

Miss Inwood carries with her a scar of a wound received while in the trenches. But she is proud of it. For it is but another evidence that a great actress, a great authoress can also be a great patriot.

She has always been a lover of Lincoln and her addition to the cast which is playing the Lincoln Cycle is a striking tribute to the artistic intentions of the Charter Features Corporation.

The Cycle has its first release on September 13, "Old Abe," the first production being all ready for the theatres.

EDISON'S "VANITY FAIR" RELEASE CHANGED TO OCTOBER 6

The unusual character and elaborate pretentiousness of the Edison feature masterpiece, "Vanity Fair," starring Mrs. Fiske, has made necessary a change in the advertised release date. This subject was scheduled as the initial Edison attraction in the newly-organized Kleine-Edison Service, for release September 8.

Owing to the extraordinary nature of the big release and in accordance with the Kleine-Edison policy of allowing an abundance of time for careful editing and laboratory work, "Vanity Fair" will be released October 6 instead of September 8.

In its place the great Kleine feature, "The Money Master," founded on Cleveland Moffett's play, "The Battle," completed some month's ago and recently given its finishing touches, starring Frank Sheridan, supported by Paul McAllister, Fania Marinoff and others, will be released September 8.

"LEAVING OF LAWRENCE," SELIG COMEDY, RELEASED AUGUST 31

"The Leaving of Lawrence," a Selig one reeler, released August 31, is a comedy carrying unusual action and plot. It is also noteworthy because Grace Darmond, the charming young actress who has appeared almost exclusively in the support of Tyrone Power, Harry Mestayer, and Otis Harlan in Selig Red Seal Plays, takes the leading feminine role.

She is supported by John Charles, the Broadway actor who has scored such successes as Captain Bright in Selig's "A Texas Steer," and Dr. Pool, in Selig's "A Millionaire Baby."

The comedy was written and directed by Giles R. Warren. There is a good plot and many funny situations.

TYPICAL MOMENTS FROM SOME RECENT THANHOUSER RELEASES ON THE MUTUAL PROGRAM

METRO PEOPLE WILL BE OUT IN FORCE

In point of representation and enthusiasm at the big carnival and field day at Brighton Beach, Saturday, August 21, the Metro Organization may be counted on to help make the gathering the event of the season in the social affairs of the motion picture industry. Incidentally, they hope to carry off not a few of the honors in the various novel stunts, athletic and otherwise, which are scheduled for the day's program.

A big delegation from the B. A. Rolfe studios, 3 West Sixty-first street, plan to be on hand, and of these many will be entrants in the different contests of strength and skill. Of this number Arthur Caldwell, a camera man, will race against time in the Metro-Rolfe special fourteen cylinder vehicle, which has been constructed for the event. Kid Hogan, of the Metro-Rolfe property department, has issued an open challenge to box three rounds with any contender, and as there are several promising young "White Hopes" from other studios expected at Brighton, a lively bout is assured. Metro will also be represented in most of the other events.

In the big parade President Rowland and Treasurer Joseph Engel with a galaxy of screen favorites will be seen in the Metro car, which will be decorated in white and festooned with Metro roses.

In the car with President Rowland will be Emmy Wehlen, Emily Stevens, Olga Petrova, Francis X. Bushman, Henry Bergman and Hamilton Revelle.

BLANCHE RING WILL APPEAR IN "THE YANKEE GIRL"

Following the announcement involving the acquisition of Blanche Ring, the well known theatrical star, for the screen by Oliver Morosco, it is stated that the vehicle selected for Miss Ring to make her motion picture debut, is "The Yankee Girl."

It was in this play that she scored a big success on Broadway and throughout the country.

In the title character as Jessie Gordon, Miss Ring appeared in "The Yankee Girl" during the latter part of 1901 and played the same part at the Herald Square Theatre, New York, opening in February, 1910. After registering one of the biggest hits of the season at the Herald Square, the star again started a tour of the country in this piece, meeting with popular favor wherever presented.

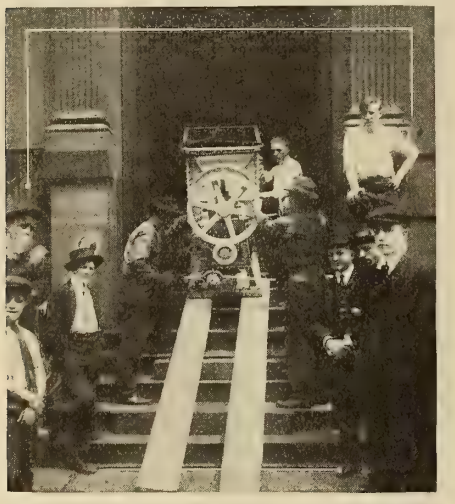
"The Yankee Girl" was one of Miss Ring's biggest successes on the legitimate stage and because of its particular adaptability for the screen experts have agreed that it will be equally popular as a photoplay.

The subject affords the star real opportunities to display the reason for her prominence in the theatrical world.

Miss Ring has received many motion picture offers, particularly during the past year, and the fact that Mr. Morosco has been successful in obtaining her name to a contract to appear on the film, to say nothing of his securing one of her biggest successes as her first screen subject is an important acquisition for the Morosco photoplay forces.

GENERAL WOOD UNCONSCIOUS ACTOR IN KLEINE PICTURE

One of the unconscious actors in George Kleine's feature comedy, "Hello Bill," starring Bickel and Watson, for release through the Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service September 15, is no less a person than Brigadier General Leonard Wood, former Chief of Staff.



Without knowing it, the General got himself handsomely photographed during the making of some scenes on Governor's Island recently.

DOUGH-MIXING MACHINES FOR KLEINE'S "MONEY MASTER"

One of the novel, interest-inciting "touches" in George Kleine's big five-part feature, "The Money Master," was the use of three two-ton dough-mixing machines, rented from the manufacturers, Jaburg Bros. These mighty props required the services of a corps of safe movers to get them into the Fourteenth street studio.

That part of the story for which the mixers were used is also one of strong, human-interest value. Frank Sheridan plays the ruthless, iron-man of business.

He visits a Ghetto bakery in the course of the story. He has no sympathy for the wretches who eke out a precarious livelihood in the East Side basement, maintaining that anyone can succeed if he really wants to succeed.

TWO-TON DOUGH-MIXING MACHINES USED IN KLEINE'S "THE MONEY MASTER"

To prove his theories and to win back his son, an East Side worker, who is estranged from him, the man of millions sends orders to his yacht to sail, spreads the rumor that he is on board for a long cruise, discards his clothes and starts life over as a helper in the Ghetto bakery.

"The Money Master" is founded on Cleveland Moffett's play "The Battle" and is scheduled for release through the Kleine-Edison Feature Film Service on Wednesday, September 8.

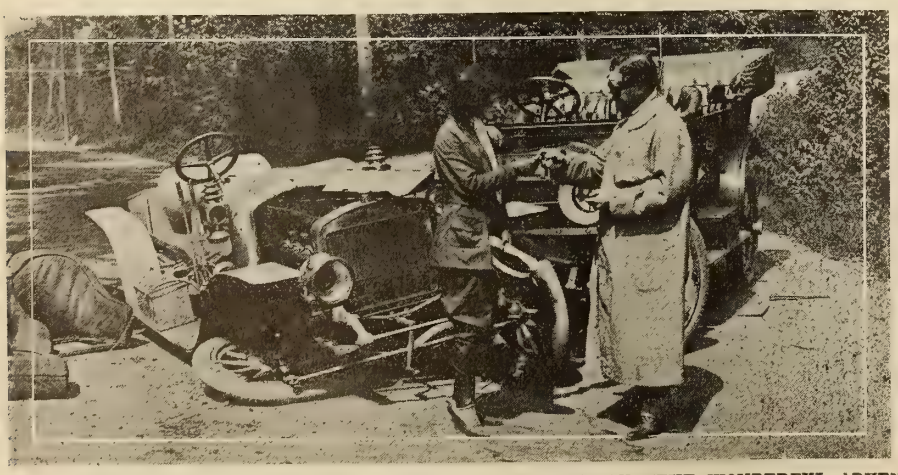
Exhibitors Learn How a Packard and a Smaller Machine Are Bumped Into Each Other, Regardless of Expense, for Accident Scene in "The Wonderful Adventure"

FEW persons outside of those directly interested and connected with the producing end of the motion picture industry, realize to what extent directors go in order to secure actual scenes. It has come to be a mere matter of detail to blow up a bridge, dynamite a big ship, in fact send an engine and train of cars to destruction. The past week, in the William Fox coming release, "The Wonderful Adventure," by Captain Wilbur Lawton, in which William Farnum and Dorothy Green are playing the leading roles, Director Frederick Thomson demolished one automobile and severely smashed a big six passenger Packard.

The "accident" took place on a lonely curve over the hills back of the Fort Lee ferry, in New Jersey. The scene was one in which Miss Green came bouncing along the road in a jaunty racing car, driven by herself.

At the meeting of the roads, her car is supposed to have stalled and she gets out to try and start it.

While she is working at the crank a big Packard carrying Mr. Farnum comes along and, going at high speed, runs into the little car and completely demolishes it. So hard was the impact that the wheels were torn from the little racer and not even the body was left intact.



The company went to Saranac recently and made several thrilling scenes on the lake. Among them was a canoe accident in which William Farnum was thrown into the water.

An amusing incident happened in connection with the destruction of the racing car. Miss Green has a colored chauffeur named Rastus. Mr. Thomson picked Rastus out to act as chauffeur for Mr. Farnum and run the Packard into the racer. In order to make the racing car look flashy, it had been painted in wide gray and yellow stripes. These colors appealed to Rastus, and he became, in a short time, very much attached to it. When the hour came for the smashing, the colored chauffeur began to get morose and uneasy.

He kept eyeing the natty little car and looking with furtive glances at the director. This continued for more than an hour while things were being arranged for the final scene. At last Rastus could stand it no longer, and when some one made a joking remark about the way the car was painted, Rastus blurted out to Mr. Thomson:

"Dat ain't no bad car, dat am a good little car, dat am, and it's too bad to bust it all up, too. She's a fine little car."

The solem remarks of the darkie created an uproar of mirth, but he didn't see any fun in the affair and said so.

RIALTO AND CLIPPER BRANDS ADDED TO MUTUAL PROGRAM

Rialto Star Features and Clipper Star Features are two brand names added to the Mutual's new $8,000,000 program.

The Rialto is the name chosen from the three-reel Broadway star features produced by the Gaumont Company for release on the Mutual Film Corporation's regular program.

This new name has been selected to avoid complications over the Knickerbocker Star Features brand. Rialto occurred to the Mutual chiefs as it is calculated to carry all the atmosphere of Broadway with it.

Clipper Star Features will be the anme for the three-reel releases of the same high quality made by the American Film Manufacturing Company.

The first release under the Rialto brand will be "The Unsuspected Isles," with Fania Marinoff, famous Broadway star, as the lead. This three-reeler will be released on the regular program to Mutual exhibitors September 8, and without extra rental charge. It is an expression of the new Mutual policy of an all-feature program, as announced by President John R. Freuler.

Particular significance is attached to this release under the Rialto brand because of the condensed quality offering. The sponsors of the Rialto brand promise a meaty, virile three-reel feature, every reel and every scene full of dramatic potency.

Next on the list of three reelers will come "Shorty's Ranch," a Broncho release with enough thrill in it to entertain even the most jaded film fan's appetite. It will be released September 15.

Then comes a Clipper, "The Great Question," produced by the American Film Corporation for the new Mutual program. In "The Great Question," Harold Lockwood and Mae Allison are starred. This is the first time such a star as Harold Lockwood has appeared in a three-reel production. He has played in the "Lure of the Mask," by Harold McGrath and other famous Mutual Master-pictures.

DAVIES IN ACCIDENT WITH ARBUCKLE DURING PALLAS PICTURE

Howard Davies, who is following up his success in "The Rugmaker's Daughter," with a fine characterization in Maclyn Arbuckle's first subject for Pallas Pictures, "The Reform Candidate," wrenched his left knee last week in a spirited scene with Mr. Arbuckle.

The knee has been weak since Howard Davies' university days when he threw it out of joint in England in a championship game of football between the elevens of Oxford and Cambridge. He played inside right forward for Cambridge and was known as one of the star players of Great Britain.

He is also a famous cricketer. The injury kept Mr. Davies out for a week, but as Director Lloyd merely postponed his scenes till his return, it worked no hardship upon the finished picture.

Kleine Eastern Managers Hold 2nd Annual Meeting

Branches in Atlanta, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Toronto and Boston Represented with Executive Heads of Studio, Scenario, Auditing, Publicity Departments Present

THE second annual conference of Eastern branch managers and executives was held in the George Kleine studios, New York City, Sunday, August 8. Managers were present from Atlanta, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Toronto and Boston, as well as the executive heads of studio, scenario, auditing and publicity departments.

The day proved a busy one for all concerned. A great deal of business was transacted, and a good deal of fun was sandwiched in between, the latter including a hastily improvised moving picture scenario featuring George Kleine, ably supported by William E. Raynor and W. D. Cooper, managers respectively of the New York and Toronto offices.

There were twelve other supports incidentally of varying degrees of excellence, all determined to avail themselves of their only opportunity to see their ghostly doubles, under the able direction of Louis Myll.

Mr. Kleine called the meeting to order about 11 a. m., and from that time until the adjournment to the studio about 4 p. m. questions of policy were decided, and plans for a busy fall and winter were made. Local conditions in the various territories were discussed with benefit to the different managers and departments affected. Altogether the afternoon proved highly profitable and advantageous.

About five hundred feet of film was made in accordance with the aforementioned scenario. As this document was of a purely private and confidential nature, nothing more can be said of it in these columns.

Later in the day the meeting was adjourned to the Brevoort Hotel, where a typical George Kleine feast was prepared. The dinner broke up about midnight, when fifteen tired but enthusiastic film men found their ways to trolleys, subways and out-of-town flyers.

Those present were: George Kleine; Merle E. Smith, general branch manager; Douglas H. Bergh, traveling representative; William E. Raynor, manager of the New York office; H. A. Bugie, manager of the Philadelphia office; M. F. Gibbons, manager of the Pittsburgh office; W. D. Cooper, manager of the Toronto office; R. D. Marson, manager of the Boston office; Ben F. Simpson, manager of the Atlanta office; John J. Dacey and Foster Moore, traveling out of the New York office; Louis Myll, manager of productions; Frank Phelps, general auditor; J. C. Miller, editor; and O. F. Doud, publicity manager.

SELIG "HERALD" COVER MAY BE USED FOR ADVERTISING

The Selig "Herald," makes a new and striking appearance in the twelfth number, just out. The continuation of the cover page in colors, which is blank on one side, is an innovation.

The cover can readily be torn off and used for lobby displays or framing purposes by exhibitors.

A color insert, this issue in green, is devoted exclusively to Selig Red Seal plays, released through the V-L-S-E program. This insert can also be removed from the booklet for advertising purposes by the exhibitor.

The current semi-monthly "Herald" contains the Selig program up to and including August 31.

The pages of the present issue are filled with snappy readable articles of interest to every theatre manager, and deserves a careful perusal by anyone desirous of keeping informed of the latest Selig plays in advance of their release dates.

"NEAL OF THE NAVY"

(Panama-Pathé—First Chapter)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

WHETHER the serial is the highest expression of the motion picture art is no part of this discussion. Its purpose is served if it interests the public, and does it at the start, and it is on record that many a film fan of today has been made so by becoming interested in the opening chapters of some serial. In these circumstances the finer nuances of art need not bother either the producer or exhibitor, for if he be alive to the effectiveness of advertising he can work wonders with a serial, good or bad.

Seldom has a serial introduced itself so promisingly as has "Neal of the Navy," produced for Pathé by the Balboa Company, and issued under the Panama brand. Not only has there been a careful attention to logic, coherence and the construction of a story that one can believe, but its appearance is most timely, what with the mutterings of war thunder on the horizon, and the talk of army and navy matters which has aroused the whole nation.

The series will feature Lillian Lorraine and William Cortleigh, Jr., but neither of these appear in the first chapter, which is entitled "The Survivors." Instead, they are introduced as children, made homeless by a cataclysm of nature. And right here have the producers of "Neal" shown a disposition to depart from strained artifice to produce a thrill, and to spare no trouble in order to make their big scenes convincing and real.

Neal, the son of a sea captain, and the little daughter of the proprietor of Lost Island, are left homeless by the eruption of Mount Pelee, in Martinique.

Scenes of the actual eruption, taken by Pathé cameramen, are shown. The clouds of steam, smoke and ashes, and the masses of lava rolling down the mountainside are shown in close-up views, to get which some operator must have risked his life.

Survivors throwing themselves into the sea and clambering aboard ship, and later the fire which destroys the ship at sea, and the terror of the twice-stricken passengers, supply thrills which are natural because they are nature. The last touch of realism comes in the last scenes of this chapter, when the children are picked up by a United States cruiser.

The scenes are taken on the deck of a real cruiser, with seamen and their officers going about their duty, and officers in correct uniform and insignia figuring in the story. The only inconsistency is the introduction as a lieutenant-commander of a young officer in the insignia of a junior grade lieutenant, but nobody cares about that.

"We want boys like you in Uncle Sam's navy," is the officer's greeting to Neal, when he learns how the lad had saved his little companion, and from this one can anticipate an adventurous career for the young man in the forthcoming chapters.

"THE STRANGE CASE OF TALMAI LIND"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

PRENATAL influence is made the basis for this unusual story, and gives to it a mystic trend which runs consistently through the film. The drama is so typical of Kathlyn Williams that her many admirers may guess that she had a great deal to do with its construction.

As a matter of fact, she is the author of the scenario as well as the star in the production. Her versatility as an actress is displayed by the way in which she fulfills a dual role. She is seen as Hilda Lind, growing to old age, and later she again rejuvenates to Talmai Lind, Hilda's seventeen-year-old daughter.

On occasions she is apparently playing both these roles simultaneously, and these scenes are most skilfully handled by the director. The rest of the cast, chief among whom is Guy Oliver in the part of Carl Lind, Hilda's husband, supplies good support, while the wild animals of the Selig jungle zoo add considerable interest and excitement to the picture.

A few days before the birth of Talmai, her mother is thrown into the cage of an untrained lioness by the father in a fit of drunken rage when she protests to him against his cruel treatment of the wild beasts.

Miraculously she escapes harm and the lioness later becomes the mother of a cub at the same time that Talmai is born. The effect of the mother's fright just before the birth of Talmai is shown in the daughter, who grows up as a beautiful but strange girl.

She seems to have the qualities of a wild beast, and stranger still she experiences real physical pain when the lioness, whose birth was simultaneous with hers, is abused. This latter fact is discovered by Amos Drew, a young lion tamer who falls in love with Talmai.

When Talmai repulses him he wreaks vengeance by tormenting her lion. A young artist appears on the scene and Talmai, not knowing that he is already engaged, falls desperately in love with him.

One day she passionately declares her love, but as the artist, for the moment won to her, looks into her eyes he sees the smoldering soul of the wild beast and repugnantly casts her aside. The heart-broken Talmai, going to her mother for comfort, learns what had happened just before her birth, and concludes this is what makes her different from other people and feared by the man she loves.

She goes to a mountain peak and below her sees the artist happily talking with his fiancee. At this identical moment Amos Drew back in the animal arena in a drunken rage starts to torment the lioness who is so mysteriously connected with Talmai.

The beast springs at him and he fires his gun. Talmai on the mountain peak screams in agony and falls dead at the feet of the young artist.

"THE WHEELS OF JUSTICE"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon—V-L-S-E—Four Parts)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

"THE Wheels of Justice" follows the career of a heartless sensual woman, who despising her staid elderly husband, tries to hold in thralldom a young man temporarily infatuated with her beauty. The woman is an adventuress of a pronounced type, reminiscent of the heyday of melodrama.

To the woman her husband is a mere machine for turning out money for her luxurious tastes, and at the first indication of retrenchment from him, fosters a deep resentment.

Ralph Brooks meets Rita Reynolds, an adventuress, at a reception and becomes infatuated with the woman, who is also attracted to the young man. They plan an elopement. Mrs. Reynolds schemes to take a large amount of money from the safe in her husband's study, after his departure for a business trip.

The husband unexpectedly returns for some forgotten papers, and discovers evidences of the elopement. He grasps a revolver with the intention of killing his wife. In the struggle she gets the weapon from him and he is shot. A burglar witnesses the tragedy, and the woman conceives the idea of fastening the crime upon him.

Brooks arrives and hears enough to give him an insight into the woman's true character. The burglar manages to make his escape, and Mrs. Reynolds urges an immediate flight. But Brooks changes his mind. The woman noticing the lover's feeling of revulsion, decides in a sudden mood of hate to accuse him of the crime, and succeeds in making a jury believe the young man guilty.

Brooks finally manages to escape from prison and obtains permanent freedom through a confession wrung from the woman.

Brooks' experiences behind prison bars are shown in detail. Various penitentiary social functions, like the assembly of the convicts in the shoe shop, and the well-known dance called the "lock step," are introduced for the benefit of the uninitiated. Indeed, there are so many informing scenes of prison life, that no one, no matter how burning with curiosity, will be obliged to break the law to get an inside view of the State's prison, provided he watches this part of the film with attention.

THE REVOLT IN THE SHOE SHOP

Why, may it be asked, does a mother of a boy convicted and sent to prison for twenty years on the false testimony of an adventuress, visit the unprincipled woman after the trial as a guest, with no other motive? But then some directors are omniscient, and why should any one quarrel with such a profound knowledge of human nature?

The picture on the whole, will interest. The action is swift throughout, and there are many novel scenes.

"THE SLAVEY STUDENT"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THE beauty and histrionic ability of Viola Dana and the pajama atmosphere of the girls' boarding school are the parts of this picture that will be remembered longest. "The Slavey Student" is, withal, a very pleasing subject and one with considerable popular appeal.

Viola Dana plays the slavey student, a girl who is working her way through boarding school. Her brother goes to jail through a bag of burglar's tools being found in his room. The tools were owned by the man in the next room. This man's identity does not come out till the very end of the play when the brother has been released from jail and meets the fellow who caused him all the trouble just as the other fellow is about to wed his sister's chum. The brother breaks up that little romance and everybody is happy.

John Collins gave Miss Dana plenty of footage all the way and she never misuses it. Pat O'Malley plays the brother. Yale Banner is the crook whose exposure is the climax of the picture. Others are Henry Leoni, Mrs. Wallace Erskine and Marie La-Manna as Viola Dana's chum. The pajama parties of the girls will draw attention and many of the close views of Miss Dana are very effective.

"MONSIEUR LECOQ"

(Thanhouser-Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE boy who hid the old "Broadbrim Weekly" behind his geography, who let Sherlock Holmes encroach on the call to supper and who valued Pinkerton above the feeling that he had done his full duty by the wood-box, has never grown up. The old love will often crop up in the most tense of his business hours, and many a fat contract has gone overboard because of a red-backed detective story, which edged in at the wrong moment.

AT THE TAVERN

And those old days are with us again. In his full image, Gaboriau's Lecoq goes stalking across the screen, putting a new thrill of visual action into the famous character and his exploits. Who cares if some of the situations are thin, or if the oldest of stage tricks and devices are resorted to? Who cares if the whole thing is impossible? The old spirit, which confused us when trying to describe the course of the Willamette River, is here, only now we can see with our eyes what we had to imagine back in the nineties.

Paris and the atmosphere of French prisons, taverns and courts, have been admirably reproduced by the Thanhouser people—on Glen Island probably. Before the film has run ten seconds there is trouble in the tavern, shots are fired, two mysterious men bite the sawdust—and Lecoq is on the job. That's the way Gaboriau always did it, you recollect, and that's the way Thanhouser has done it. From that on there is action, mystery and action; the surreptitious passing of cipher notes, the mysterous recognition of the judge, and the stealthy filing of prison bars. The interest is held tense, and one is a boy again, which, according to expert appraisers, is worth all you pay for it.

Nothing more need be said. The population of the United States is 101,100,000, all children, and thousands of hearts are going to skip a beat now and then when they see Lecoq in the flesh, running this mystery to the ground.

William Morris is the ideal Lecoq, and Alphonse Ethier is a splendid French nobleman. Other characters are represented by Florence LaBadie, Reginald Barlow, Julia Blanc and Morgan Jones.

"UNDER SOUTHERN SKIES"

(Broadway Universal Feature—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

IN this production from the Victor studios the director, Lucius Henderson, has gone to rather unusual lengths to secure his "true atmosphere" that would show the "spirit of the times." In fact, the locations are so wonderfully well chosen in showing the "Days of '61" that one could well imagine that the scenes were taken fifty years ago. The detail as to costume, interior settings and exteriors seems to have been given more than the ordinary attention. In addition to this there is good acting on the part of the principals, an interesting story for the plot, and last, but not least, masterly work on the part of the cameraman.

The story opens in 1860 on Major Crofton's plantation in Louisiana. Lelia (Mary Fuller), daughter of Crofton (Charles Ogle), has two suitors for her hand, Burleigh Mavor (Milton Sills) and Steve Daubeney (Paul Panzer).

At a party given in celebration of Lelia's eighteenth birthday, her mother, whom she has been taught to believe dead for the last sixteen years, appears incognito. Lelia is told by her negro mammy that she is a poor strange woman who has wandered accidentally into the midst of the merry throng only to be overcome with her exertion. Lelia not suspecting anything out of the ordinary, conducts her to the porch of the house and ministers to her comfort.

Daubeney, who has overheard the conversation between Mrs.

LELIA'S BIRTHDAY PARTY

Crofton (Clara Byers) and "Mammy" when they met outside the grounds, uses this secret information to secure the Major's consent to his marrying his daughter.

How Lelia finds her mother in time to prevent the culmination of Daubeney's plans, and how she finally marries Mavor, the man of her choice, at the death of Daubeney, is shown in manner so absorbing that the beholder's interest never lags throughout the entire production, so tense are some of the situations as to hold one in suspense.

Special mention might be made of the competent manner in which Miss Fuller and Messrs. Panzer and Sills rendered their parts, also of the fact that Charles Ogle's wig was so palpably false that that fact should have been included in the "attention to detail."

"THE MIGHTY ARM OF MACISTE"

(Itala—Seven Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THERE is—or was—a reason why people went to Europe—they sought novelty, a complete change of scene, people and atmosphere, and they found it. Europe is itself, and it does everything its own way. Its landscapes and the vistas of its city streets are all Europe's—if there are any left, and this distinctiveness extends even to its thrills and its melodramas. If any See-America-First-Nighter doubts this, the new "Maciste" thriller will convince him in the first five hundred feet.

"Maciste" is melodrama in its most florid form, but melodrama unlike anything that was ever produced west of latitude 10:30:26. There is something new in every episode, and to a public always eager for the novel in its pulse-quickeners it should come as the big thing of the season, up to this moment. It is the sort of extravagant thing that anyone will enjoy immensely.

"Maciste" is Ernest Pagano, the mighty giant of "Cabiria," and this picture was written to give him an opportunity to show his extraordinary strength, at the suggestion of D'Annunzio, author of the earlier Itala production. Aside from its melodramatic surprises, the picture is full of the charm of European landscapes, the streets and alleys of Turin, the mountain villas of Umbria, and the police methods which hold the spectator in the grip of Gaboriau and Conan Doyle; and on top of all there is a directness and incision about everything that is unusual in the melodrama of this country.

Josephine, persecuted by her ducal uncle and his hirelings, escapes from her pursuers by dodging into a motion picture show. There she sees "Cabiria," with Maciste bending aside the great iron bars of his prison. She hits upon the plan of securing him as her protector, and arranges to meet him. Such protection as he can give, like throwing great trunks of trees in front of speeding automobiles, hoisting villains up by the hair, lifting heavy tables with his teeth, opening a locked desk by simply ripping the top off, tying a body of men hand and foot and cording them on a push cart, is cheerfully offered.

"The aim has been," says the announcement of the Ital Company, "to present a picture entertaining, and, perhaps, thrilling at times, rather than a classic. It is not hampered by preachment, is little concerned with its moral effect, nor could we claim for the film an artistic triumph. We believe it will amuse, entertain and satisfy the public because of its novelty and ingenuity."

This seems to us like intelligent and effective advertising; it is sincere, and it "makes good" on its every proposition. It is as though a merchant should say: "Do you like this kind of goods? If so, we have it."

"THE RING-TAILED RHINOCEROS"

(V-L-S-E—Lubin—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

RAYMOND HITCHOCK, deprived of the lines which have made him the famous comedian, is Raymond Hitchcock still. In this, his first appearance on the screen, he demonstrates that "business" is a big factor in polite comedy, but he also brings home the fact that the lines are the bigger part. In his best situations one cannot help but wish his words were audible—they look as if they might be good.

He is the Raymond Hitchcock of the Yankee Consul in this picture. It is described as a "preachment for prohibition; in four pellets," and the star has opportunity for the same form of comedy that he did in that success. As a stage "container" he is excellent material for the camera. One criticism, however, would be that the story is allowed to drag in many spots.

The "preachment" is found in an old allegory, in which the ring-tailed rhinoceros is the symbol for the demon of the bottle. Hitchcock is told by his prospective father-in-law that he will not be allowed to marry his daughter (Flora Zabelle) unless he stops his drinking. On the heels of this, the young man dallies with the vine while the guests at a lawn party given to announce his engagement are awaiting him. He doesn't appear until all the guests have departed, and then his reception is a little chilly.

Home in his own rooms, he dreams of an adventure in a fairy kingdom, where the King, in the person of his fiancee's father, sends him out to kill the rhino, in order that the princess may be able to stop weeping. He finds that the beast and the bottle are the same, and for a while is beguiled by it. But the faith of the princess' young brother spurs him on, whereupon he slays the rhino with the bottle from which it sprang. The princess stops weeping, and he clasps her in his arms, awaking to find himself holding the girl's real brother on his knees, and the girl and her parents standing around him. He is reformed, and everything is lovely.

Assisting Mr. Hitchcock and Miss Zabelle in the cast are Raymond Hackett, Herbert Fortier, Ida Waterman, Arthur Matthews, Edward Metcalfe and William Boyd.

"THE MARRIAGE OF KITTY"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS spicy comedy will win success more because of the most attractive personality of its dainty little star, Fannie Ward, than as the result of the actual story presented. The play was composed by two Frenchmen, consequently its plot is of the same nationality and consequently, again, we might say that several of its situations edge somewhat delightfully on the risque.

Hector Turnbull, who made ready the scenario for the screen, has definitely succeeded in establishing a very humorous offering. Despite the fact that as soon as the picture is half way over we are well aware of the coming termination, the lively comedy dispersed by the various characters is sufficiently plentiful to keep the interest from faltering.

Several of the characters, including the male lead and others less important, have been exaggeratedly drawn, partially burlesqued. Jack Dean plays Lord Reginald Belsize. Reggie has a never-to-be-daunted fondness for feminine beauty, a monocle and an empty pocket. He is possessed with the mistaken idea that he is in love with Helen de Semiano, perpetual habitue of the Gaiety theatre. My Lord is to receive a fortune provided he marries a woman not of the theatrical world.

But then Kitty steps in. Kitty being very beautiful, makes herself ugly and marries Reggie, for a slight recompense of $50,000 and the lord's Newport estate. After receiving his money Reggie plans to divorce Kitty and marry Helen, but Kitty springs a great big surprise and turns out to be beautiful, so Reggie is content with his wife and forsakes his fiancee.

Cleo Ridgeley has her familiar role of the adventuress, Helen de Semiano. Tom Forman plays her coniving brother, while Richard Morris and Mrs. Lewis McCord have the other principal roles. George Melford directed the production and has certainly turned out a worthy successor to his many past pictures.

"THE WOMAN NEXT DOOR"

(Kleine—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WOMEN possessed with suspected pasts have long held a prominent place in screen dramas. Such a person is the dominating figure in "The Woman Next Door." But whether it be the structure of Owen Davis' play, upon which the picture is based, or the ingenuity of the scenario writer, the picture's treatment has caused it to appear in a delightfully refreshing light.

We are introduced to the woman before we become acquainted with her past and by this method of development the story is able to create more suspense than would otherwise be the case. Later on in the picture her former life is revealed. She tells herself how, on account of a jealous lover, her married life was ruined and consequently how she was obliged to obtain a divorce. Her innocence being firmly established, she is proposed to by the man next door and gladly accepts.

WHEN THE RIGHT MAN CAME ALONG

Perhaps it is the pathetic figure that Irene Fenwick makes of the title role that gives the picture such an attractive air. At any rate, Miss Fenwick's personality counts largely in the production's favor, as her performance is truly an admirable one. Lawson Butt, appearing as Lake, the heavy, registers well in a disagreeable part, while Ben L. Taggart plays to good advantage as Grayson, Miss Fenwick's opposite. The rest of the cast, including Della Connor, Camille Dalberg, Richie Ling, Albert Andruss and John Nicholson, give consistent performances.

The comedy element in the picture is by no means lacking. There is enough present to furnish relief from the intense moments. Mr. Nicholson especially deserves commendation for his comical characterization of the Mexican commandante.

The photography is good enough for the most critical, being in every instance clear and defining well the figures of the players. The five reels offer some very beautiful exterior scenes while the settings do credit to the even consistency of the remainder of the offering.

RUSSELL APPOINTED HORSLEY AGENT ABROAD

D. W. RUSSELL has been appointed representative in the British Isles for David Horsley and left August 14, accompanied by Mrs. Russell, on the American liner "St. Paul" for London, where he will make his headquarters. Mr. Russell will handle the MinA and all other Horsley pictures known under other brand names as well as the Cub Comedies which Mr. Horsley is now releasing through the Mutual program.

So many inquiries have been received from England for the Horsley product that it was found feasible to establish an agency there. Mr. Russell is particularly fitted to be in charge. He has been associated with Mr. Horsley's interests for several years as Western representative with offices in Chicago, and recently was appointed general sales manager at the Bayonne office.

The office, which will be located at 193 Wardour street, London, W., will be opened the latter part of August.

"THE WOMAN HATER"

(Essanay—Three Parts)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

FILLED with irresistible comedy and with sparkling action which holds the interest intense "The Woman Hater" speeds through three thousand feet of film in a period that seems far less than that actually registered by a time piece.

The story from the pen of H. C. Chatfield-Taylor is a most interesting one, bubbling over with humor that verges on the farcical. Chas. J. Brabin, the director, has spared no pains in selecting pretentious settings suitable for the plot. The scenes on the sailing yacht, the steeplechase, the realistic fall of the heroine from her horse and the two weddings are a few that deserve special mention.

Henry B. Walthall, proves that his masterly portrayal of human emotions, is not limited to those of a more serious nature. His acting in the comic role of "The Woman Hater" is clever to an extreme.

Edna Mayo appears to an unusually good advantage as the captivating girl who deliberately sets her cap for the wealthy woman hater. It is difficult to understand how any mere male can hold out so long against her charming personality. The supporting cast, chief among whom is Bryant Washburn, is also very good.

"The Woman Hater" is kidnapped by his friends and taken aboard a yacht, where a party of young women are concealed. He is not aware of this until the boat is well under way for a long cruise. His friend has made a bet with one of the girls that she cannot make him propose. After a great deal of persistency and some ludicrous adventures both on board the yacht and at a house party during a fox hunt, she is successful and the wedding is arranged for.

At the altar the bridegroom bolts, but is induced to return at a future time when the girl tells him that she does not care to marry him and promises to say "no" to the minister's question. She wishes merely to make it appear to the world that she has not been jilted. She double crosses him and they are married in spite of his protests.

"AN INDEPENDENT WOMAN"

(Reliance—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

CAST as "A middle aged woman" in this piece, "Bobbie" Gould has found it impossible to put on the required age. She is an attractive, sweet young girl all through the picture, and her personality is the strong thing in it. Her part is that of a woman who went west to take up a claim, and make her way independently.

Her money is stolen while she is helping a neighbor, and she has so much other hard luck that she resolves to go back home. She turns down Jim's offer of marriage, but on her way to the station, her heart misgives her, and she returns with a justice of the peace, arriving at Jim's home in time to be held up, in company with the justice and Jim's mother, by robbers who have seen Jim hide a little roll of money.

Jim, who has followed her to the station, returns in time to stop the robbery, and the justice does his work right on the spot. There are a number of striking scenes. Vester Perry, Eleanor Stone and Augustus Carney are also in the cast.

"JERRY'S BUSY DAY"

(Cub Comedy-Mutual—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE second Cub Comedy is even better than the first. The new Horsley organization is in perfect working order, and George Ovey, on whom the comedies are hung is showing a great flash of form. "Jerry's Busy Day" is well named, for the little comedian works with a wild defiance of all union rules, and is funny all the time.

Jerry happens on two bankers, after the bankers have gone swimming, leaving their clothes on the bank. Later he happens on two policemen in a similar situation; then two tramps happen on him. He gives the tramps the money, clothes and business cards of the bankers, telling them to call on him and he will give them jobs "in my bank."

JERRY THE OPEN-HANDED

Then the clothes of the policemen are left for the bankers, and the tramps' outfits for the policemen. An ordinary imagination can realize the mix-up which follows. Jerry, making himself at home in the bankers' mansion receives the tramp, and meantime the real bankers are arrested for impersonating policemen. Jerry gets out of the fix, all right—trust him for that, but not until everybody in sight has been involved.

SEELYE IS ON EXTENDED TOUR OF EASTERN BRANCHES

C. R. SEELYE, assistant general manager of the V-L-S-E, is on an an extended tour of the Eastern branches of the V-L-S-E.

On this trip Mr. Seelye is brushing up the territories preparatory to the fall campaign, which will be even more active than that conducted during the spring and summer.

Before leaving, Mr. Seelye said that while the business being done by the Eastern branches did not leave room for the slightest discontent, greater things were looked forward to in the fall.

He said that the work accomplished by the Big Four branches up to date was really phenomenal, in view of the fact that business had increased every week throughout the summer season.

Mr. Seelye accounts in part for this increase to the standing of the Big Four, and in doing so does not take credit away from any of the V-L-S-E representatives, but merely cites this fact in connection with the newness and consequent incomplete selling organization of the Big Four, and bases his prediction of great things to come in the cool weather on the success that has attended the exhibition of the features already released, and the fact that by September the organization will be complete.

"A SPECIES OF MEXICAN MAN"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

ADVANTAGE of the Mexican situation has been taken by Romaine Fielding to weave a plot around a man of superior ability who not only succeeds in freeing his country, but makes himself President of Mexico.

This gives Fielding, who directs and acts in the picture, a chance to introduce a lot of local color, also an atmosphere of "wars and rumors of wars."

The Man goes through the story without a name. He is shown as brave, gentle, high-minded. Of a commanding presence and superior intellect, he holds all the men under him in thrall.

They fight under tremendous pressure and against overwhelming odds. When the commander is killed "our hero" has to get arms and ammunition from the United States. In a series of impossible adventures he concludes his mission successfully. One of the said adventures is the rescue of a girl and her brother from death.

The girl becomes his sweetheart and later on his wife, which makes her the "First Lady of the Land"—in Mexico.

HE BECOMES PRESIDENT OF MEXICO

Audell Higgins takes the part of Rose. Roscoe Karns is her brother, Vinnie Burns his sweetheart. There is also an assortment of generals, millionaires, spies and college friends.

The photography is excellent, the picture full of thrills.

"EXTRAVAGANCE"

(Gold Seal-Universal—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A SOCIETY melodrama of greatly exaggerated design. Its followers will not be discovered among the audiences of large cities. More probably will it take better effect on the unsophisticated, the inhabitants of smaller municipalities.

The producers seem to have taken for granted that, due to the commonplace subject, they have license to treat it somewhat carelessly. Its development is too sudden, much detail is omitted, which partially accounts for the insincerity of a number of the situations.

The picture shows how the reckless extravagance of a mother led her daughter and her poor husband into all manner of difficulties and misunderstandings for a short time.

In the roles of the husband and wife, Hobart Henley and Cleo Madison render most pleasing performances. Adele Farrington as the mother overacts so that the part at times seems humorous. Charles Giblyn produced the picture.

"UNDER THE FIDDLER'S ELM"

(Lubin—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

A REAL detective story this, with an exciting mystery which is solved by the girl, who puts her wits to work in order to save her sweetheart, unjustly suspected of two serious crimes.

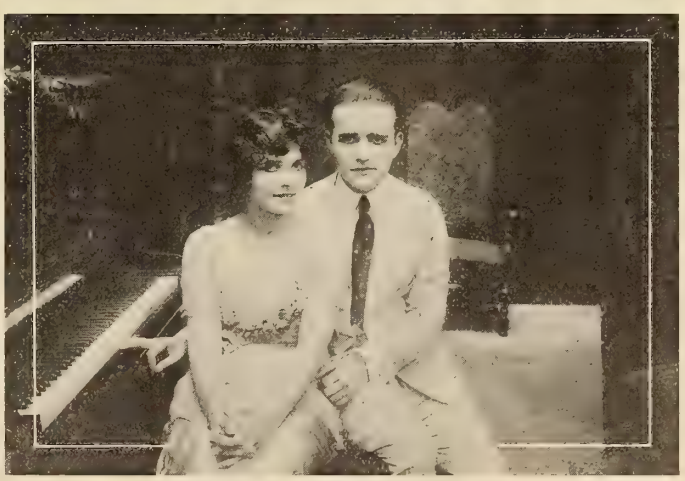
There are all sorts of thrilling moments in the picture, which, by the way, was adapted from Elliot Balastier's story in the "All-Story Cavalier" by Harry Chandlee.

Justina Huff, who takes the part of the girl, Rosalie Fletcher, is the only woman in the cast. Edgar Jones is director of the film, also playing Jim Chadwick, the man almost proved guilty by strong circumstantial evidence. Louis Mortelle is the false friend, who not only blows up the ship, but also steals the

"YES, THE SHIP HAS BLOWN UP!"

$25,000 and puts the crimes on poor, innocent Jim. Rosalie, with the slender clues of a box of rabbits, a strange noise and a streak of mud on a rock, finds that Beldon has stolen the money by means of a trained snake. All these happenings add to the interest of this offering, as does the fact that Jim makes a lot of money on an invention which gains him fame and the hand of the girl.

"The Fiddler's Elm" is the name of the tree under which the money had to be placed by demand of the blackmailer.



"THE TIGRESS"

(Vitagraph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

STORIES of criminals will be forever popular with a certain class of the motion picture public, and so "The Tigress," Vitagraph's latest offering of that kind, will no doubt receive a warm reception by those persons.

While the picture has nothing to distinguish it from others of the same variety, its plot carries enough suspense, furnished mainly by the peculiar character of the principal feminine lead, to interest the spectator in an average way at all times.

Julia Swayne Gordon appears as Nelga Petrona, a woman who leads a double life. She is in reality the leader of a band of criminals, but to her adopted son and to all outside her band she is a polished society woman. The young man is in reality the son of a judge from whom he was stolen while yet a baby by his foster mother. He is in love with the judge's adopted daughter.

The story culminates with the revealing of the true character of Nelga by a detective, the establishment of the boy's real parents and the death of his adopted mother.

Others in the cast are Garry McGarry, Zena Keefe, Leo Delaney, Harry English and George Stevens.

"A MESSAGE THROUGH FLAMES"

(Thanhouser—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THERE are tears in this story of a blind girl, whose sweet and patient nature wins all hearts. The simplicity of the life of the asylum, depicted in the opening scenes, rises to thrilling melodrama at the end. Mignon Anderson deserves great praise for her work in the role of the blind girl—a most difficult one at all times, and only once does she get "out of her part."

The nervous tension and constant straining to sense the presence and location of objects, characteristic of those deprived of sight, are admirably represented, and even in the close-ups Miss Anderson's depiction is convincing.

The blind girl is adopted from the asylum by the mother of a young telegraph operator at a country station. She quickly learns the Morse code and the office detail, and assists her foster-brother in his work. While hanging an oil-lamp from the ceiling he falls and is stunned, and the lamp sets fire to the station.

The blind girl drags the unconscious man to safety, then answers the call of the wire in time to receive warning of mixed orders. She gropes her way to the switch and sends the freight onto a siding just in time to prevent a head-on collision with the limited train.

Miss Anderson is ably supported by Carey L. Hastings and Bert Delaney, the former as the foster-mother, and the latter the young operator.

"DRAWING THE LINE"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THE theme for this two-reel drama is taken from a verse by the late John Joaquin Miller, famous poet of the Sierras, which read as follows:

In men who men condemn as ill,
I find so much of goodness still;
In men whom men pronounce divine,
I see so much of sin and blot;
I hesitate to draw the line
Between the two—when God has not.

Bill "condemned as ill," is the owner of an underworld resort. Fred, "whom men pronounce divine," takes funds belonging to Edith, an orphan, living in his home town, and becomes an habitue of Billy's joint in the city.

Both Bill and Fred back at home had been suitors for the hand of Edith, but due to Fred's influence, Bill had been cast aside because of the fact that his father was a thief.

Striving to get funds to meet Fred's insistent demands, Edith has become blind. Billy learns the true state of affairs, supplies the money for an operation to restore Edith's sight, and forcibly takes Fred in hand and makes a man of him, in order that he may return to Edith who is ignorant of his former wrong doing.

A FORCIBLE REFORMATION

Fred and Edith are made happy through Bill's sacrifice and the latter goes back to his life in the underworld. Vivian Rich, Jack Richardson and Walter Spencer play the principal roles.

"PROHIBITION" IS SOLD FOR IOWA, WISCONSIN AND INDIANA

THE exclusive distribution rights on "Prohibition," a six-reel photo drama, now causing considerable comment throughout the country in trade circles have been disposed of for the States of Indiana, Wisconsin and Iowa, to the W. H. Bell Feature Film Corporation, Chicago, announces that this strong feature of timely interest to the general public will be handled along its usual high class lines as inaugurated with "The Christian" of which it is the Illinois rights holders.

"HOUSE OF THOUSAND CANDLES" IS IN FIVE REELS

OWING to a typographical error it was stated in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, issue of August 21, that the Selig release of August 23 through the V-L-S-E, entitled "The House of a Thousand Candles" was six reels in length. This is manifestly an error, the correct length being five thousand feet.

A TYPICAL SCENE FROM F. O. NIELSEN'S DRAMA OF NATIONAL DEFENSE, "GUARDING OLD GLORY"

BEHIND THE BARRICADES

"THE LITTLE DUTCH GIRL"

(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS is an adaptation from Ouida's "Bebee," and was produced by Emil Chautard at the Peerless studio. The name part offers to Vivian Martin just the sort of role in which she is at her best. At first she is the light-hearted and gay young girl, reared with an absolute ignorance of the intricacies of life. One can easily imagine how delightful Miss Martin is in these stages of the picture. But later her blythe innocence gives place to unwelcome realization, brought about by disgrace, and later comes death. In these pathetic phases of the drama Miss Martin is equally good.

While the strength of the original offering is largely retained in the visualized version, it would appear to better advantage if slightly trimmed. Four reels would be about the right length. The subtitles ought to be extensively edited, some should be eliminated and others replaced. This perhaps is applicable only in the case of the print exhibited for review.

The story describes vividly the lives of two persons of practically totally different worlds. Lionel, the artist, a sensual man of the world, who is for a long time unable to find the correct model for his painting. He at last meets Bebee who is exactly suited to pose for the picture. He gains her confidence and betrays it and as a result Bebee dies.

This perhaps is by no means an original story, yet it is so constructed as to fearlessly bring out strong and gripping situations.

John Bowers is cast as Lionel, the artist, while Chester Barnett appears as Bebee's true lover. The atmosphere is convincing while the photography leaves little room for criticism.

"THE BANK"

(Essanay—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

AND here's another of those Charlie Chaplin comedies. It's a sure cure for all species of gloom and we sincerely hope that some of the calamity howlers who have been directing their attacks against slapstick comedies will have the good fortune to see it.

Here Charlie is janitor in a bank. He keeps his coat, bucket and mop in the safe deposit vault. Charlie isn't particularly fond of honest labor and usually makes the other janitor do it all. The other janitor is a clever comedian himself, and in all probability he'll be heard from again in the future.

Instead of working Charlie dreams—dreams that the president's stenographer loves him after he has saved the whole bank from the hands of robbers. But he awakes greatly chagrined, to discover himself kissing his mop.

Chaplin's inimitable funny business need not be gone into in detail. It is too well known. There's just one hint we'd like to give Chaplin or whoever directed the picture, that is to play the scenes closer to the camera. Facial expressions such as Chaplin's are too rare to be played at such a great distance from the machine.

"THE MYSTERY OF THE TAPESTRY ROOM"

(Big U-Universal—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A SURE sign of a good detective story is the concealment of the culprit long enough to mystify and thoroughly interest the spectator and then at the propitious moment uncover his guilt. "The Mystery of the Tapestry Room" follows this plan of action in that the criminal is not revealed or not even suspected until two reels have elapsed. Others are made to appear as guilty, but for a time the spectator never bothers his head about the real murderer.

Besides this undisputed merit of the picture the plans and traps arranged by the detective are exceedingly interesting to watch, while the final apprehension of the murderer caps the story with a tense climax that does justice to the rest of the offering.

The story was arranged by George Edwards Hall and produced by Murdock MacQuarrie. He himself appears as the old detective, while Frank MacQuarrie as the butler, Frank Newling as the heir and Kingsley Benedict as the heavy complete the cast of principals.

The picture opens with a murder. A figure in black slides back a panel in the wall and disappears. There are two persons that would benefit by the deed. The next heir and the butler who receives the fortune in case of the entire family's death. But it develops that the culprit is the butler's son, who is a heavy gambler.

"DORA"

(Biograph-General—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

TENNYSON'S beautiful idyl is here presented in an idyllic way. There is not much action, as it is understood in this day, nor does a picturized poem need much in order to make it an acceptable entertainment. What is lacking in this respect is fully recompensed by the beautiful settings, the atmosphere of pastoral England, and the superb photography which one expects in a Biograph production.

Furthermore, the piece is well cast, and the characters are convincing. It runs smoothly, if a trifle slowly, and the spectator is taken into the picture and made to feel its story. The plot is simple; Dora, left an orphan, is adopted by her uncle, who plans to wed her to his own son.

But both Dora and William are already in love, and not with one another. In order to foretsall his father, William marries the girl of his choice and is driven from home. Later the farmer finds Dora has aided the couple, and she is also driven out. Then William dies, and the two girls live with each other. Through William's little son, the stony heart of the old man is softened, and he takes the widow and Dora back into his home.

Isabel Rea is a charming Dora, and Gretchen Hartman is no less pleasing as Mary. The other characters are Jack Drumeir, Jack Mulhall, Franklin Ritchie and Zoe Bech. The picture was produced by Travers Vale.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"Twice Won." (Biograph. Mon., Aug. 23.)—An entertaining story of a love which reached its goal in a roundabout way. A young lawyer meets a girl at a mask ball, and she refuses to give him her name, or show her face. The following summer, in the country, the man meets with an accident, and is carried to a farmhouse, where a beautiful girl ministers to him.

He falls hopelessly in love with her, but gets no encouragement. In the winter, according to agreement, he attends the mask ball, to meet the "Woman in Black" again, and tells her he loves another. She then removes her mask and stands before him as the girl of the farmhouse. Augusta Anderson is a beautiful Mildred, and Charles Perley's work as the lawyer is also excellent. Others in the cast are Kate Bruce and Gus Pixley.

"Dora." (Biograph. Three reels. Wed., Aug. 25.)—Reviewed elsewhere in this issue.

"Mister Paganini." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., Aug. 24.)—This is a stirring picture, well played, and produced by Wray Physioc with careful attention to details. The blind violinist, a favorite in Willow Creek, overhears a plot to jump a claim He rides all night, performing prodigies of endurance, and nearly reaches his goal when he gives out. He is found by a girl, in the morning, lying exhausted in the shallow part of a stream, but is revived and tells his story. The rascals are thwarted. The cast includes Jack Drumeir, Joseph McDermott, Mary Malatesta, Ivan Christy and Frank Bates.

"His Birthday Gift." (Biograph. Thurs., Aug. 26.)—Augusta Anderson has another charming part in this story of a bachelor who learned to choose between two types of woman He is engaged to an idle, selfish girl, who realizes as his birthday approaches that he would value something made by her own hands. Unable to do anything useful, she purchases a scarf and engages a needleworker to embroider his initials on it.

The scarf is lost and the man finds it, notes the address and returns it to the needleworker. It finds its way to his fiancee, who presents it as her own work. Immediately the young man perceives the difference between the two characters, breaks the engagement, and later weds the seamstress. Frank Perley and Mrs. Wright complete the cast.

"The Sheriff's Baby." (Biograph. Fri., Aug. 27.)—This picture is a reissue, No. 12 in the Biograph series. It is the story of three outlaws, pursued by a posse, who find a baby in the desert, where its guardians have perished from thirst. They take it with them, and although attacked by Indians, refuse to abandon it. One outlaw is killed, and another dies from thirst. When the third is overtaken the sheriff is amazed to find his own baby in the man's arms. When he hears the story he refuses to make the outlaw prisoner. This picture was directed by D. W. Griffith.

"The Need of Money." (Biograph. Sat., Aug. 28.)—A story which will have a wide appeal. It is that of a rich man's petted daughter, who thinks only of finery. He gives her a $20 note, promising more when some of his tenants shall have paid their rent. The girl spills perfume on the note, and pins it to the curtain to dry, but it blows away and is found by a laborer, whose mother is very ill. He gives it to the doctor, and it finds its way back to the rich man, and then to his daughter. Recognizing the perfume, she has it traced, and the girl and her father enter the laborer's cottage just as the mother dies.

"Matilda's Fling." (Edison. Sat., Aug. 28.)—An attractive bit of photography, and some good acting dress up the story of a farmer's wife (Jessie Stevens) whose lifetime ambition is to see the Statue of Liberty. Her chance comes when her miserly husband is killed in a runaway accident, leaving her a comfortable fortune.

On her visit to New York she rescues and reforms a lad of the streets, whose introduction to her consists in an attempt to snatch her purse. Scenes showing New York streets and buildings are touches of real life in the metropolis, the best of them being the interior of the Pennsylvania station, which testifies to conscientious work on the part of Director Loomis.

"On the Wrong Track." (Edison. Sat., Aug. 21.)—This is a "safety first" drama produced in co-operation with a Public Safety Bureau. Its biggest lesson is the evils of wrong methods of getting on and off moving trains. N. W. Bolen, Johnnie Walker and Doris Hill are the players.

"The Market Price of Love." (Essanay. Mon., Aug. 16.)—The absorbing story of a young woman who weds a millionaire of advanced age, and realizes too late that all his wealth and the shower of gifts cannot replace the love she sacrificed to become a wealthy bride.

In her husband's absence she dreams that she had married her sweetheart, and they are supremely happy in the possession of each other and a baby, when she is awakened by her husband, who returns intoxicated, and throws an expensive jewel into her lap. She throws the gem to the floor and buries her face, sobbing in grief. The cast is composed of Frank Dayton, Arthur Clippinger and Ann Kirk.

"Legrand's Revenge," (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Aug. 17.)—Another in the series of Henry C. Rowland's exciting stories of the Paris underworld. Dominica Medune is commissioned by the police to attend the Von Hertzfeld house party, as a reporter, and aid in the capture of the notorious Gaston Legrand, who, it is known, will attempt to steal valuable jewels.

Dominica, still exhibiting a scar on her face, souvenir of a former encounter with Legrand, eagerly accepts. At the party, Legrand recognizes her, and attempts to drown her in a fountain, but is foiled. He then attempts to steal the jewels, which he has found by raising a secret panel, but the alarm is given, and he flees without them. Nell Craig, Ernest Maupain and Sydney Ainsworth head the cast.

"Dreamy Dud Sees Charlie Chaplin." (Essanay. Split reel. Wed., Aug. 18.)—Another Carlson cartoon, in which Dud and his dog mounr their lack of a dime to go to the picture show, when a dime rolls out of the theatre before which they are standing Inside Dud sees Chaplin fighting with a donkey and a policeman. The policeman is kicked into a lake, and Dud wakes up to find his father shaking him. On the same reel is five hundred feet of scenic pictures.

"Tale of a Tire." (Essanay. Thurs., Aug. 19.)—A snappy western comedy, full of action and laughs. Hubby defending a girl from two flirts, becomes interested in the girl, and forgets about wifey, left alone in the automobile with a flat tire. The flirts appear, and begin to fix the tire, but in their argument as to who shall do the honors, the tire falls off and rolls down hill.

There is a screamingly funny chase of miles in which the tire rolls through streets, down embankments, across ditches, with the two men after it. In the meantime the auto has been fixed, and wifey, driving it alone, runs over the two tire-pursuers and finally catches up with hubby. Bud Jamison, Margie Rieger, Jack and Harry Pollard and Peggy Blevine compose the cast.

"Broncho Billy Steps In." (Essanay. Fri., Aug. 13.)—A pretty schoolteacher, imported to educate the cowboys, is the subject of general admiration, and she finds her chief protector in "Broncho Billy," the sheriff, who sends one too enthusiastic admirer across the county line. Through the discovery of a torn letter, the boys discover that the teacher's mother mourns because lack of money prevents her visiting her daughter, and they quietly make up a little purse.

The mother arrives just in time to walk in on a wedding scene, in which the teacher is becoming Broncho's wife. G. M. Anderson, Marguerite Clayton and Lee Willard head the cast.

"Does the Woman Forget?" (Essanay. Mon., Aug. 23.)—The story of a young society man, wearied of his regular life, who takes up his abode in the factory district, and wins the love of Janie Dixon, a factory girl, away from her sweetheart. Later he tires of the girl, and goes back to his former life, and Janie and her sweetheart read of his marriage. The sweetheart goes to the man's home to kill him, but is prevented by Janie, who marries him.

"Hearts and Roses." (Essanay. Three reels. Tues., Aug. 24.)—A story of great heart interest, excellently produced and acted. Ruth Willard accepts the proposal of John Baxter, a shallow youth, scorning the real affection of Dr. Norton. Ruth's father dies, leaving her in poverty, and Baxter jilts her. She then marries Norton, but accords him little affection.
